

INTERNATIONAL ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF INDIAN LITERATURE

Vol. I Part 1 (SANSKRIT, PALI, PRAKRIT AND APABHRAMSA)

GANGA RAM GARG

The bottom half of the page is occupied by five thick, solid black horizontal bars stacked vertically, completely obscuring any text or graphics that might have been there.

International Encyclopaedia of Indian Literature

Vol. I : Part 1 (A—M)

Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit & Apabhramśa

GANGĀ RĀM GARG M.A. Ph.D

Foreword by

Juan Miguel de Mora, Ph.D

Vice-President,

International Association of Sanskrit Studies

MITTAL PUBLICATIONS
DELHI-110035 (INDIA)

FOREWORD

The Sanskrit language was born, in its most archaic form intertwined with the roots of one of the greatest cultures of which the human race can pride itself : the Indian culture. With Sanskrit, thanks to the existence of Śākalya, Āpiśali, Senaka, Śaunaka and others, it was demonstrated that in India there was a scientific conception of grammar, lexicography and philology at a time when many of those that today are great nations were scarcely at the dawn of civilization.

Pāṇini, to whom we owe the above information, appears four or five centuries before the Christian era and reveals himself to be the father of linguistics and the author of a grammar as yet unsurpassed, much less equalled, by any human culture. With Pāṇini, Sanskrit—which he calls bhāṣā, spoken language, but which is not necessarily opposed to the Vedic chandas, as Renou rightly observes—becomes classical and opens up the magnificent way to be trod by the poets of the kavya, among whom Kalidasa, Bhavabhūti and Daṇḍin are but three of the most outstanding names.

The Sanskrit language, perhaps more than any other, lends itself to the study of all the possible aspects of its philology. From the etymological origin of its name (saṃskāra, according to the Nirukta—I, 12—, “adequate grammatical construction”), we are in the presence of a language established with the desire for perfection. And curiously as well as fortunately, that quality is also evident in the alphabet most frequently used to write it, devanāgarī, which, unlike the Latin, has precisely one sign for each sound.

Thanks to that quality, the Sanskrit language allows one to submerge oneself with delight both in the analysis of compounds, and of compounds of compounds, as well as in the study of the Vedic aorist in the Vetūlapañcaviṃśatikā (Jambhaladatta version) or of the remarkable use Bhavabhūti made of the daṇḍaka metre in his “Mālatīmādhava”. The possibilities for a philologist interested in the structure of the language are infinite.

But this must not lead us to forget the contents for the continent. It was in Sanskrit—in its archaic form—that the marvellous first stanza of Rg Veda hymn 71 (maṇḍala X) and all of hymn X. 125 were written, containing concepts on the word that are a landmark in the history of humanity. And it was also in that language, in its classical version, that Āryabhaṭa wrote towards 406 A. D. about astronomical and mathematical

Preface to the First Edition

The Encyclopedia of Indian Literature is a work of reference and is designed to acquaint the reader with creative writers and good summaries of their outstanding works written in Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa. Keeping this in view, there are exhaustive articles on Vedas, Brāhmaṇas, Āraṇyakas, Upanishads, Vedāṅgas, Smṛitis, Purāṇas, Upapurāṇas, Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata, Tīpīṭakas, Siddhānta and similar other works. In the case of Sanskrit literature, generally histories of literature bring their detailed accounts only up to about the 12th century and round it off with the mention of a few stray writings of the later centuries, but in this Encyclopedia, creative Sanskrit literature, which has come to my knowledge, has been traced through the centuries up to A.D. 1981. Sanskrit literature, apart from literary works, comprises works and treatises on religion, philosophy, grammar, poetics, dramaturgy, prosody, lexicography, tantra, yoga, polity, erotics, agriculture, architecture, astronomy, mathematics, chemistry, Āyurveda, etc. and all these works have also been dealt with, but it has always been kept in mind that it is an Encyclopedia of Literature.

Also, during the last 200 years or so, a good deal of scholarly work has been done on this literature in Europe, America, Japan, Australia, Mongolia, Thailand, India, etc. and such information about those scholars is also packed in its pages; the number of such scholars being well over 1,000. Thus creative works, their authors, and scholars have been arranged in an alphabetical order so that one may locate them conveniently. A few scholars, though strictly belonging to the realm of Ancient Indian History, Culture & Archaeology, have been dealt with as they have contributed a good deal to the discovery of the above literature.

The entire literature of Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa and the scholarly work done thereon, is like an ocean and to pick out material for a handy volume of Encyclopedia, is a colossal and uphill task: the first is the selection of important writers and scholars to be included and the second concerns the selection of chief works. In this task of selection, no two persons will agree and as it is, it is quite possible that some writers or scholars might have been left out. I take this opportunity of clarifying that sources of one's knowledge are limited and in case my attention is drawn to any omissions, I shall certainly take steps for

Preface to the Second Edition

The first edition, published in early 1982, had a good response, resulting in the second edition exactly after 5 years, though the work was out-of-print for more than 18 months from now. There are several orders pending with the Publishers, awaiting a new edition. In the revised edition, articles on some 600 Indian and foreign Indologists have either been revised or added. About a hundred missing entries, particularly in the case of Sanskrit and Apabhraṃśa literatures, have been added. Articles on creative Sanskrit poets and writers have been brought up-to-date. I had addressed some 500 letters to scholars the world over for sending their biodata and in the light of their response, the articles have been revised or added. The works, which proved helpful to me for the present edition are : Comparative Indian Literature (2 vols., Macmillan, 1984, 1985), Bharatiya Sahitya Kosa ed. by Nagendra, An Encyclopaedia of South Indian Culture (Bagchi), German Indologists (Max Mueller Bhavan, New Delhi ; 1981), Kashi-ki Panditya-parampara by Baladeva Upadhyaya, annual surveys of literatures issued by the Sahitya Akademi, New Delhi, articles in several magazines, etc. An Author-Index (with Surnames First) has been added for the convenience of foreign and other readers. The volume of the work grew in size and as such the whole matter has been incorporated in two parts.

In the case of modern American and Canadian Indologists, I am grateful to Professor Ernest Bender of University of Pennsylvania, who as Co-ordinator of American Oriental Society, issued a circular letter to its members to send their bio-data. I am thankful to Professor Carlos Alberto da Fonseca, Professor of Sanskrit Language and Literature at the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil, who, as President of the Latin-American Association of Sanskritists sent articles on Indologists of Latin American countries. Professor Juan Miguel de Mora of Indological Research Institute, National Autonomous University of Mexico, has been kind enough to write a Foreword to the revised edition ; his Foreword in itself is a scholarly and penetrating study of Sanskrit language and literature. I am indeed grateful to him.

Ours is an age of science and we must make the Sanskrit literature relevant to the present age. There is a good deal of scientific and technical literature available in many Universities of India, which has not been classified and published so far. Indian and foreign scholars may please study Sanskrit literature from this angle as well.

their rectification in the revised edition; for the present I request that omission of names is not to be taken as a reflection on their competence or quality of their works. Moreover, literature of some 200 generations has been dealt with in this volume and if there are any unintentional omissions in the case of literature of one (the present) generation, it may please be taken in a sportive spirit.

It has taken me almost two decades to compile the above work and during this course of time, my style of compiling might have varied but I have tried to bring consistency and uniformity as much as possible in the entire work, though the readers might legitimately detect inconsistencies here and there.

In the compilation of such a work, which is the first of its kind on such a scale, no one can claim originality; instead there is a patient and hard work of compilation for years. I have made full and extensive use of the works I have considered as standard. It is not possible to mention all the material I have made use of, but certain leading works, to which I am particularly indebted, repeatedly come to my mind. These are : History of Indian Literature (3 Vols.) by M. Winternitz, History and Culture of the Indian People (Vols. I to XI), published by the Bharatiya Vidya Bhawan, A.B. Keith's Classical Sanskrit Literature and his Sanskrit Drama, published by the Oxford, M. Krishnamachariar's History of Classical Sanskrit Literature, History of Sanskrit Literature by C.V. Vaidya, Varadachari's History of Sanskrit Literature, History of Sanskrit Literature by S.K. Dasgupta and S.K. De, History of Pali Literature by B.C. Law, Wilhelm Geiger's Pali Literature and Language, J.C. Jain's Prakrit Sāhitya kā Itihāsa, Harivansh Kochhar's Apabhraṃśa Sāhitya, S.C. Banerji's A Companion to Sanskrit Literature and A Companion to Middle Indo-Aryan Literature, Encyclopedia of Literature, ed. by Joseph T. Shipley, V. Raghavan's articles in Contemporary Indian Literature and Indian Literature Since Independence, both published by the Sahitya Akademi, S.B. Warnekar's History of Modern Sanskrit Literature (in Marathi), Review of Indologica! Research in Last 75 Years, ed. by P.J. Chinmulgund and V.V. Mirashi, V. Raghavan's Sanskrit and Allied Indological Studies in Europe and his Sanskrit and Allied Studies in U.S. (1974), J.W. de Jong's A Brief History of Buddhist Studies in Europe and America, Dr. Krishna Lal's Saṃskṛta Śodhaprakriyā evam Vaidika Adhyayana (in Hindi), Sanskrit Studies Outside India (Weimar, 1979) and my own book: Concise Oxford Companion to Hindi Literature, published by the Oxford (1963). Apart from these, I have made use of numerous editions of works, dictionaries, encyclopaedias, literary journals, catalogues and other relevant material scattered here and there. I express my gratitude to all the authors and publishers of these works, particularly when at times I have taken verbatim material from them.

During my long association of 30 years with Gurukula Kangri Vishwavidyalaya, Haridwar, where I have acted in various capacities as Senior Lecturer, Registrar and Vice-Chancellor, I have been enlightened by my erstwhile senior colleagues: Acharya Priya Vrat, an eminent Vedic scholar, Shri G.B.K. Hooja, I.A.S. (Retd.), Vice-Chancellor and Shri Som Nath Marwaha (ex-Treasurer), Advocate, Supreme Court. Dr Krishna Lal, Reader in Sanskrit, University of Delhi, has gone through a good portion of the material and has offered suggestions which have made the work more useful. Advice on some modern writers has been given by Dr G.K. Bhat, Director, Post-graduate & Research Department, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. Dr R.K. Sharma, Deputy Educational Adviser and Director, Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan, has provided me with material on modern foreign Indologists. I take this opportunity of conveying my heart-felt thanks to all these eminent scholars. I am also indebted to the staff of Gurukula Kangri Library, Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, Sahitya Akademi Library, Max Müller Bhavan Library, Madras University Library, National Library, Calcutta and other Libraries, which I have frequently visited. For expressing their opinions, I am thankful to Dr Satyavrata Siddhāntalankar (Visitor, Gurukula Kangri Vishwavidyalaya), Dr Satya Vrat Shastri, Head of the Sanskrit Department and Dean, Faculty of Arts, University of Delhi, Dr R.K. Sharma and Prof. N.P. Unni, Head of the Sanskrit Department, University of Kerala, Trivandrum.

I also pay respects to my revered grandparents (Seth Lakkhi Ram and Mata Mahakari) and to my parents (Seth Munshi Ram and Mata Chalati Devi) of Kohand, Karnal, Haryana, from whom I have inherited the quality of hard and patient work for years. My second son, Surya Prakash Vidyalankar, M.A., Ph.D. (Shambhu Dayal Post-graduate College, Ghaziabad), a scholar of Sanskrit, Pali and Apabhramśa and his wife, Dr Bina Garg (V.M.L. Post-graduate College, Ghaziabad), a scholar of Hindi and Prakrit, have assisted me in numerous ways. My eldest son, Dr Ved Prakash, and his wife, Indu Garg, M.A., my son-in-law, Subhash Mittal, M.Sc. and my daughter, Usha Mittal, M.A. are instrumental in getting the press copy prepared at a short notice. My son, Dr Satya Prakash, his wife Neeharika, M.A., and the Arya Vanaprastha Ashram, Jwalapur, Hardwar, have provided me with sufficient comforts to give final touches to this work.

I take this opportunity of thanking Shri Naurang Rai and his worthy sons: Shri Krishan Mittal, Ashok and Arvind, who have spared no pains in getting this work expeditiously done by Press, which also deserves thanks for co-operation. The Daystar Publications, New Delhi deserve thanks for promoting publicity of this book.

Despite all precautions on the part of proof readers, for which I thank them, there have been some proof mistakes, some howlers; this is sincerely regretted. I must, however, make one thing clear that I am conscious of the lapses and shortcomings associated with such a project, particularly when it is an untrodden path, and I take upon myself full responsibility for them.

GANGA RAM GARG

List of Abbreviations

acc. = accession, acceded.

b. = born.

c. = circa, about.

comm. = commentary, commented.

d. = died.

De, HSL = S.K. De, History of Sanskrit Literature.

ed. = edition, edited.

fl. = flourished.

HCIP = History and Culture of the Indian People (Vols. I—XI), Bharatiya Vidya Bhawan, Bombay.

HOS = Harvard Oriental Series.

JAOS = Journal of American Oriental Society.

Keith, HSL = A.B. Keith, History of Sanskrit Literature.

Krishnamachariar, HCSL = M. Krishnamachariar, History of Classical Sanskrit Literature.

q.v. = quod vide, which see.

r. = ruled.

SBE = Sacred Books of the East.

tr. = translation, translated.

Varadachari, HSL = Varadachari, History of Sanskrit Literature.

Winternitz, HIL = M. Winternitz, History of Indian Literature (Vols. I—III).

Diacritical Marks

ṛi = ऋ

ṛh = ॠ

ṛ = ॡ

ch = च

ñ = ण

ṭ = ट

ḍ = ड

ṇ = ण

ś = श; in some modern proper names, sh = श, e.g., Sharmā.

sh = ष

jñ = ज्ञ

ḥ = ह

ū = उ, as in पउम

Note : Names of foreign scholars are given by their surnames, while those of Indian scholars are given by their Christian names, excepting those, who are known by their surnames.

Introduction

When we speak of Indian literature, it is not the literature written only in Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa, but also in the modern Indian languages, such as Tamil, Telugu, Marathi, Bengali, Urdu, Panjabi, Hindi, etc. For the present, and in this volume, we are confining ourselves only to the literatures of Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa.

Ordinarily, the language in which Vedas, Brāhmaṇas, and Upanishads are written is called Sanskrit, though scholars would prefer to call it Old Indo-Aryan. Through the natural process of evolution, the Old Indo-Aryan passed on to a stage, which is called Middle Indo-Aryan, comprising Pali, the various regional Prakrits and local dialects, called Apabhraṃśa. A further stage of evolution of the language is represented by the New Indo-Aryan languages of the different parts of India, such as Marathi, Bengali, Hindi, etc., but, as indicated above, in this volume, we are concerned with the literatures of Old Indo-Aryan and Middle Indo-Aryan languages.

Vedas:

The Vedas are the oldest works in Sanskrit, perhaps the oldest books available in any library of the world. Whether the Indo-Aryans are the original inhabitants of India, or they came from Egypt and Babylonia (see Prān Nāth. Albright), or from Europe (see Tilak) or, according to Dayānanda, from Tibet, it is a fact that the Vedas are the earliest records which the Indo-Aryans have left behind. It is difficult, if not impossible, to determine the age of these ancient works; while some would assign them to 6,000 B.C. or even earlier, others would bring them down to about 1,200 B.C. (see Altekar Tilak, Max Muller). According to strict orthodox Hindu opinion, however, the Vedas are apauruṣeya, which means that they were revealed to certain sages by Brahma Himself and are not the creations of man.

The Vedas are four in number : Rigveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda and Atharvaveda, revealed respectively to the sages Agni, Vāyu, Āditya, and Aṅgiras. The Vedas are collections or compilations of hymns, prayers, benedictions, sacrificial formulae, litanies, etc. (See Dayānanda Śāstrī). There are four Saṃhitās belonging to the four Vedas, though on the basis of locality and differences of tradition, there arose within each Veda schools or Śākhās, at one time numerous. The works were transmitted from teacher to pupil, a tradition still widely continued despite the existence of manuscripts and printed books. The total number of mantras in all the four Vedas or Vedic Saṁhitās is taken to be 20,389, though this number varies slightly according to diverging recensions of the Vedas.

Of the four Vedas or the Saṁhitās, the Rigveda is the oldest and is the most important. Of the 21 recensions of the Rigveda, that were known at one time, only one, namely the Śākala recension, consisting of 1,017 hymns (sūktas) of 10,552 mantras, has come down to us apparently complete. The second Veda is Yajurveda, which is a ritual Veda, and consists of 1975 mantras. Of the 101 schools of the Adhvaryu-veda or Yajurveda mentioned in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali, the Saṁhitās of only four (Kaṭhaka, Kapishthala, Maitrāyaṇī and Taittirīya) of the Kṛishṇa (Black or Unarranged) and one (Vājasaneyī) of the Śukla (White, or well-arranged) Yajurveda are known. The third Veda, Sāmaveda is the song book of the priests and comprises 1875 mantras, most of them taken from the Rigveda. Of the traditional 1,000 recensions of this Veda, only three have come down to us, the best-known of the three being that of the Kaushīya. The fourth and the last Veda, which is practically unknown in Southern India, is Atharvaveda. Of the nine recensions supposed to have existed, only two—the Paippalāda (or Kashmirian) and the Śaunakīya have come down to us, and it is the latter that is usually meant when the Atharvaveda is mentioned. The Atharvaveda consists of 20 books, containing in all 731 hymns comprising 5,987 mantras. This Veda consists principally of prayers, formulae and charms for protection against evil spirits, diseases, snakes and other noxious creatures.

The Vedas are the fountain-head of Indian literature and the most ingenious devices were made to guard the texts. The language of the Vedas is literary; metrical skill of a high order and command of language mark the diction of hymns, which is on the whole, simple and natural. [See articles on : Sāyana, Max Müller, Roth, Dayānanda, Kapāli Śāstrī; Renou : Bibliographie Vedique; Dandekar : Vedic Bibliography; Vishwabandhu Shāstrī : Vaidika-padānu-krama-kośa (A Vedic Concordance); Macdonell & Keith : Vedic Index of Names and Subjects; Bloomfield : The Vedic Concordance; Ghate : Lectures on the Rigveda; Max Müller : A History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature; Bergaigne : Vedic Religion; Bloomfield : Religion of the Veda; Macdonell : Vedic Religion and Vedic Mythology; Agastya : The Sacrifice in the Rigveda (1976); Bhagavaddatta : Vaidika Vanmaya kā Itihāsa; Bhārgava : India in the Vedic Age (1956); Patañjali : A Critical Study of the Rigveda (1963); Pillai, S.K. : Vedic History (1959); Poudar : Sacrifice in the Rigveda (1953); Prahlād Kumar : Rigvedālankārah (1977); Purāṇi : Studies in Vedic Interpretation (1963); Raghunandan Śarmā : Vaidika Sampatti (1959); Rām Murti Sharmā : History of Vedic Literature; Rāmaśankara Bhaṭṭāchārya : Purāṇagata Veda-vishayaka Sāmagrī kā Samikshātmaka Adhyayana (1965); Rele : Vedic Gods as Figures of Biology (1931); Renou : Vedic India and Destiny of Veda in India (1965); Sarat Chandra Dāsa : Rigvedic India (1921); Swāmī, V. : Complete Alphabetical Index of all Words in the Rigveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda and Atharvaveda; Shende : The Religion and Philosophy of the Atharvaveda; Venkaṭasubbiah : Contribution to the Interpretation of the Rigveda; Vraj Bihārī Chaube : Treatment of Nature in the Rigveda; Ganesh Datt Sharma : Rigveda meṁ Dārśnika Tattva; Wallis : Cosmology of the Rigveda; Kunhan Rāja : Poet Philosophers in the Rigveda and Quintessence of the Rigveda; Weber : History of Indian Literature; Yajan Veer : The Language of the Atharvaveda; Yūdhishtṛa Mīmāṃsaka : Vedic-svara-mīmāṃsā; Winternitz : History of Indian Literature (Vol. I)].

Brāhmaṇas

Next to the Vedas, come Brāhmaṇas or commentaries in prose on the Vedas, which are the explanations or utterances of learned priests upon any point of ritual and upon the science of Yajña, for it was the belief that if religious ceremonies were performed correctly in every detail, the sacrificer would gain control over the gods, who must reward him with religious merit and success in worldly endeavour. The Brāhmaṇas also contain cosmogonic myths, legends and narratives (Ākhyānas, Purāṇas and Itihāsa) in explanation of Vidhis (rites) and all these together are called Arthavādu. There are Brāhmaṇas attached to each of the Vedas, and they are essentially more or less uniform in their contents, for all that is found in the Brāhmaṇas, that is not directly concerned with ritual, is, strictly speaking, irrelevant and unnecessary from the viewpoint of their authors. The Brāhmaṇas are indispensable and are highly interesting for the science of religion and the history of the Yajña and priesthood. Regarding their age, scholars have agreed to place the old and genuine Brāhmaṇas to the pre-Buddhist period. The principal Brāhmaṇas are—of the Rigveda: Aitareya-brāhmaṇa and Kaushītaki or Śāṅkhāyana; of the Black Yajurveda: Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa; of the White Yajurveda: Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa (the Brāhmaṇa of the Hundred Paths; so called because it consists of 100 chapters and is the most important of all); of the Sāmaveda: Tāṇḍyu-mahābrāhmaṇa, Shaṭvīmāsa-brāhmaṇa, and Jaiminīya-brāhmaṇa; of the Atharvaveda: Gopatha-brāhmaṇa, the only Brāhmaṇa attached to it. These are the principal Brāhmaṇas, but there are other Brāhmaṇas, some available and some lost; for their names and contents, see article on Brāhmaṇa. [Jogirāja Basu: Culture and Civilization as Revealed in the Brāhmaṇas (1969) and India of the Age of the Brāhmaṇas; Devasthali: Religion and Mythology of the Brāhmaṇas; Thite: Sacrifice in the Brāhmaṇa Texts (1975)].

Āraṇyakas :

The Āraṇyakas come next and are the forest-texts, so called, because of their secret character, they could be learnt in the forest. The Āraṇyakas are the concluding portions of the Brāhmaṇas but they deal with the mysticism and symbolism of the yajña. Partly ritualistic and partly speculative, they form a transition from the Brāhmaṇas to the Upanishads. The Āraṇyakas rendered important service, when they stressed the efficacy of the inner or mental yajña as distinguished from the outer or formal yajña and thus they helped to bridge the gulf between Karma-mārga, which was the role concern of the Brāhmaṇas, and the Jñāna mārga, which the Upanishads advocated. The Āraṇyakas, five in number, are : Aitareya-āraṇyaka, Śāṅkhāyana or Kaushītaki-āraṇyaka, Taittirīya-āraṇyaka, Bṛihadāraṇyaka and Talavakāra-āraṇyaka, all attached to the Brāhmaṇas of the first three Vedas (see Āraṇyaka); there is no Āraṇyaka attached to the Gopatha-brāhmaṇa of the Atharvaveda. [Kevalānanda: Aitareya-brāhmaṇāraṇyaka-kōśa].

Upanishads :

Going one more step towards Jñāna-mārga or speculation, the Upanishads, which on account of their mysterious character, were only communicated within a narrow circle of privileged persons, took, however, various forms. Even the old Upanishads have much heterogeneous matter, e.g., metaphysical exposition, description of sacrificial rites, love-charms, spells for the cures of diseases and destruction of foes. The number of Upanishads runs over 200, but the principal 14 Upanishads are: Īśa (Īśā), Kena, Kaṭha, Āitareya, Taittirīya, Muṇḍaka, Māṇḍūkya, Chhāndogya, Praśna, Bṛihadāraṇyaka, Kaushītakī, Śvetāśvatara, Maitrāyaṇīya and Mahānārāyaṇa. The principal contents of the Upanishads, at any rate of the more important among them, are philosophical speculations. The philosophers of the Upanishads are actively engaged in the earliest enquiry into the ultimate truth that lies behind the world of creation. This has been expressed in the well-known words “Tat tvam asi” or “That thou art”, where ‘Tat’, meaning ‘That’, stands for Brahman, and through it the universe, and “tvam” meaning “thou” for Ātman or the individual self. The Upanishads are conjecturally dated between 800 and 200 B.C. [Jacob: A Concordance of the Principal Upanishads; Shambhu Shastri Sadhale: Upanishad-vākya-mahākośa (A Concordance of Upanishads) amounting to more than 200; Dharmakosha Mandal: Upanishat-kānda; Vishva Bandhu: Grammatical Word-Indexes to the Principal Vedic and Upanishadic Texts; Deussen: Philosophy of the Upanishads; Keith: The Religion and Philosophy of the Vedas and Upanishads; Rādhākṛishṇan: The Philosophy of the Upanishads; Gough: The Philosophy of the Upanishads].

Vedāṅga :

There are works, called Vedāṅga, which, though not forming part of the Vedic literature, have the closest associations with it. They are for proper understanding, recitation and sacrificial use of the Vedic texts; they fall into the following six groups:—

1. Śikshā (Instruction in Recitation) : To ensure faithful transmission, padapāṭhas (word recitations) were instituted at an early date and taught orally with the Samhitās. In the padapāṭhas, the words of the Samhitās are recited one by one, each being followed by a short pause, so that the phonetic combinations that occur between words in continuous utterance (a normal method of recitation) are separated. A further safeguard against error in transmission existed in the kramapāṭha, in which words are recited in pairs (ab, bc, cd, etc.). These exercises, with other still more elaborate combinations, are still practised. To discuss the phonetic relationship between the padapāṭha and the Samhitā, and to give rules for the conversion of the padapāṭha into the Samhitā, *Prātiśākhya*s were composed. In addition, there are smaller texts to deal with particular difficulties of pronunciation encountered in different regions. (Amar Nāth Shāstrī:— Vaidika Svāra Smikshā, 1964).

2. Kalpa (Ritual) : Kalpasūtra is a general term, denoting the manuals on religious practice which emerged within the different Vedic schools. The śrauta-sūtras, based on Śruti, were devised to guide the priests, each according to his own school, in his function at the sacrifice (which was so complex that as many as 17 priests might be involved, thus giving rise to many points of difference). The grihya-sūtras, based on Smṛiti, were related to the householder's domestic rites—e.g., birth ceremonies, name giving, investiture with sacred cord, and marriage, as well as the five daily sacrifices (pañcha-mahāyajñas) and certain offerings (pākayajña). [Rām Gopāl : India of Vedic Kalpasūtra; Danḍekar : Śrauta-kośa; Chitrābhaṇu Sen : A Dictionary of Vedic Rituals, Apte, V.M. : Social and Religious Life in the Grihyasūtras (1939); Kashikar: A Survey of Śrauta-sūtras; Rājendranātha Sharmā: Culture and Civilization as Revealed in the Śrautasūtras (1977)].

3. Chhandas (Metrics) : The Vedic metres, as different from those of Classical Sanskrit, are dealt with in the last three chapters of the Ṛik Prātisākhya, and those of the Sāmaveda are also discussed in the Nidāna-sūtras. A Vedāṅga by tradition is Chhandahsūtra of Piṅgala (which exists in two recensions, ascribed to Ṛig-and Yajurvedas); but this is in fact, a late work and treats other metres as well as Vedic. [Arnold : Vedic Metre in Its Historical Development].

4. Vyākaraṇa (Grammar) : The Sūtras of Pāṇini are considered the foremost Vedāṅga. While recording full many features of Vedic, the Aṣṭādhyāyī is devoted chiefly to the post-Vedic language, testifying to a long grammatical tradition outside the Vedic schools. [Macdonell : Vedic Grammar; Vāsudev Sharaṇ Agarwal : India as Known to Pāṇini; Rām Gopāl : Vaidika Vyākaraṇa (2 Vols. 1967, 1969); Whitney : Sanskrit Grammar].

5. Nirukta (Etymology) : Yāska's Nirukta of the same era as Pāṇini's work, and the only extant etymological Vedāṅga, reveals the existence of word-lists, nighaṇṭus, traditionally three-fold, consisting of synonyms, obscure words and names of gods. Possibly owing to a broken exegetical tradition, even at that period these words were not clearly understood; Yāska comments on one such list, quoting 16 forerunners, and giving many illustrations, chiefly from the Ṛigveda. [see Chandramāṇi; Chhajjurāma Shāstri; Mantrini Prāsād : The Language of the Nirukta (1975); Lakshmaṇ Sarūp : Eng. tr. of Nirukta].

6. Jyotiṣa (Astronomy) : Its aim was to determine the auspicious time of yajña; two recensions of a brief, and possibly post-Vedic metrical work Vedāṅga-jyotiṣa survive, attached to the Ṛig-and Yajurvedas. They deal with the position of the Sun and Moon at the Solstices, and with that of the new and full Moon with regard to the constellations. See Piṅgree, Neugebauer.

Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata :

The Epics, Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata, constitute a large bulk of Sanskrit literature. The nucleus of the works is very ancient, as they used to be sung from place to place till at last the stories were written down. The Rāmāyaṇa, divided into seven Books, is composed by the sage Vālmiki and is available in three recensions, consisting of some 24,000 Ślokas. It presents the appearance of being the work of an individual genius and deals with the story of the birth of Rāma and his brothers, their marriage, exile of Rāma, who is accompanied to the forest by his wife Sītā and brother, Lakshmaṇa; Sītā's abduction by Rāvaṇa, king of Lankā, rescue of Sītā by Rāma after killing Rāvaṇa, Rāma's coronation and subsequent banishment of Sītā for pleasing the subjects, delivery of two twin sons by Sītā in exile, vain bid to bring about rapprochement between Rāma and Sītā; Sita's disappearance under the earth and Rāma's ascent to heaven; some scholars are of the view that Books I and VII of the Rāmāyaṇa are later interpolations. The Rāmāyaṇa is considered as the Ādikāvya or the first poem. The Mahābhārata, the second great epic, traditionally ascribed to Vyāsa, consists of 18 Parvans and a supplement, called Harivamśa and comprises over 1,00,000 Ślokas. The five Pāṇḍavas, of whom the eldest Yudhisṭhira ruling monarch, loses his Kingdom as a result of a rash wager at a game of dice with Duryodhana, the eldest of the cousins called Kauravas. The Pāṇḍavas are insulted, and have to go to exile along with Draupadī. After the period of exile, during which the Kauravas try in vain to persecute or even kill them, they demand their rightful kingdom which is, however, denied. A grim battle, lasting 18 days, ensues. Through the help of Kṛishṇa (see Gītā, Mahābhārata); the Pāṇḍavas come out victorious in the righteous war. They perform the Aśvamedha sacrifice, and their rule is firmly established. In course of time, they proceed towards heaven. Around the nucleus of this story there have gathered diverse matters in the shape of ancient heroic poetry, particularly the stories of Śakuntalā, Sāvitrī, Nala and Damayanti, Brāhmaṇical myths and legends, fables, parables and moral narratives. About the Mahābhārata, it is said that in the fields of Dharma (religion and ethics), Artha (material sciences), Kāma (pleasures of life) and Moksha (spiritual emancipation), whatever is taught in this epic may be found elsewhere, but whatever is not found in it, will not be found anywhere. It is the Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata, and the Purāṇas, on which the literature of Indian languages is chiefly based. [Bhatt, G.H. : Pāda Index of Vālmiki Rāmāyaṇa; Rai: Mahābhārata-kośa, Valmiki Rāmāyaṇa-kośa; Sorensen, S: Index to the Proper Names in the Mahābhārata; Pusalker: Studies in the Epics and the Purāṇas of India; Hopkins : Epic Mythology; Sukthankar : On the Meaning of Mahābhārata and Critical Studies in the Mahābhārata; Banerji, S.C. : Smṛiti Material in the Mahābhārata and Indian Society in the Mahābhārata; Chandra : The Date of Kurukshetra War; Vaidya, C.V. : Epic India : The Mahābhārata—A Criticism; Rao : The Age of Mahābhārata War; Roy, S.B. : Date of Mahābhārata Battle (1976); Satya Vrat Shāstri : The Rāmāyaṇa—A Linguistic Study (1964); Thadani : The Mysteries of the Mahābhārata; Vaidya, C.V. : The Riddle of the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata : A Criticism; Shachchidānanda Sahai : Rāmāyaṇa in Laos].

Purāṇas :

The Purāṇas or histories traditionally attributed to Vyāsa, are divided into two broad classes : Mahāpurāṇa (major works) and Upapurāṇas (minor works). The term purāṇa in itself means “ancient” and by tradition, these works are said to deal with the five topics, Pañchalakṣhaṇa : Sarga (creation of the world), Prati-sarga (its destruction and renewal), Vamśa (genealogies of gods and sages), Manvantara (the great ages of mankind) and Vamśamūcharita ((histories of dynasties), but invariably they deal with many more topics or with entirely different matters. The number of Mahāpurāṇas and Upapurāṇas is 18 each; the Mahāpurāṇas or Purāṇas are: Brahma or Ādi, Padma, Vishnu, Vāyu or Śiva, Bhāgavata (or Devī Bhāgavata), Nārada, Mārkaṇḍeya, Agni, Bhaviṣya, Brahmavaivarta, Linga, Varāha, Skanda, Vāmana, Kūrma, Matsya, Garuḍa and Brahmāṇḍa; the Garuḍa, Agni and Nārada are encyclopaedias of literature, containing the abstracts of all the great works in Arts and Science in Sanskrit literature. These deal, in addition to the Purāṇic material with medicine, grammar, dramaturgy, music and astrology. The Padma, Skanda, and Bhaviṣya discuss tīrthas and vratas; the Brahmāṇḍa and Vāyu are historical; the Linga, Vāmana and Mārkaṇḍeya are sectarian works; the Varāha, Kūrma and Matsya are spoken in part, by Varāha, Kūrma and Matsya incarnations; Brahma, Bhāgavata and Brahmavaivarta deal mainly with Kṛṣṇa legend. The Purāṇas are almost entirely written in epic couplets and in much the same easy, flowing style as the epic poems. to which, however, they are generally greatly inferior poetically. The 18 principal Purāṇas are said to consist of 4,00,000 couplets. In Northern India, the Bhāgavata is held in high esteem.

There is no uniformity in the list of the Upapurāṇas (q.v.), which are more sectarian in character, comparatively late in origin and are of composite nature, with little of historical value. [Hazra : Studies in Upapurāṇas]. Besides these, there is a large number of so-called sthalu-purāṇas, chronicles recounting the history and merits of some holy place or shrine at which their recitation usually forms an important part of the daily service.

The Purāṇas are a sort of encyclopaedia, affording us far greater insight into all aspects and phases of Hinduism. From the historical point of view, genealogies of Solar and Lunar Races, as also the dynasties of the Śiśunāgas, Nandas, Mauryas, Guptas and others are very important.

The Purāṇas in general were very popular, the reason of their popularity being mainly two-fold. In the first place, these gave the Śūdras and womenfolk, who were debarred from Vedic study and observance of Vedic rites, the liberty to read and hear the Purāṇas as also to perform Vratas and other Purāṇic rites. Secondly, these contained beautiful anecdotes written in simple language that appealed to the heart of common man. The age of the Purāṇas is difficult to determine but they appear to have been composed in the period between the 5th cent. B.C. and the 6th cent. A.D. Though the authorship of the Purāṇic works is attributed to the legendary Vyāsa, these are not unified works written by particular authors at particular periods; these assumed the present forms through centuries. [Hazra : Studies in Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs; Yashpāl Tandon : Purāṇa-vishaya-samanukra-manikā : A Concordance of Purāṇa Contents; Dīkshitar : Purāṇa Index; Akshayakumārī Devī : Biographical Dictionary of Purāṇic Personages; Mani : Purāṇic Encyclopaedia; Siddheshwar Shastri Chit Rao : Prāchīna Chāritra-kośa; Ali : The Geography of the Purāṇas (1966); Awasthi : Skanda-Purāṇa (4 Pts., 1976 ff.) and on Garuḍa-purāṇa (1968, in Hindi); Gyāni : Agni Purāṇa—A Critical Study (1964); Kantawala : Cultural History from the Matsya Purāṇa (1964); Mankad : Purāṇic Chronology (1951); Pargiter : The Purāṇa Text of Dynasties of Kali Age (1913) and Ancient Indian Historical Tradition (1922); Patil : Cultural History from the Vāyu Purāṇa (1946); Pradhan : Chronology of Ancient India (1927); Pusalker : Studies in the Epics and the Purāṇas of India (1955); Rādhā Kumud Mookerji : Hindu Civilization; Rukmani : A Critical Study of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa; Vāsudva Sharan Agrawal : Vāmana-purāṇa : A Study, Matsya-purāṇa : A Study; Sharmā, R.P. : Purāṇika-kośa; Vinapani Pāndey : Harivaṃśa-purāṇa kā Sāṃskritika Vivechana (1960); Wilson : Vishṇu Purāṇa : A System of Hindu Mythology and Tradition].

Smritis or Dharmaśāstras :

Quite a number of works in Sanskrit have been written on civil and religious laws, rules of conduct and practice, penance and polity, such works being classed as Smritis or Dharmaśāstras. There are over twenty versified works belonging to the old Smṛiti. Based on these were the Smṛiti digests, of which several schools are distinguished according to variations in local customs and differences of interpretation.

The oldest and the best-known Smṛiti is the Manu-smṛiti; the present Manu-smṛiti is the metrical abridgement by the sage Bhrigu, of a bigger and more exhaustive lost treatise on Dharmaśāstra, called the Mānva-dharma-śāstra, which in its turn, was based also on the lost dharmaśūtras of the Vedic school of Manu. The Smritis of Yājñavalkya and Parāśara (between 200 and 400 A.D.) are also regarded as authoritative in certain respects. Some portions of the Mahābhārata deal with several topics of the Dharmaśāstras and are therefore included among the Smritis.

The period of the Smṛiti in the Dharmaśāstra literature was followed by the period of scholasticism. Several exhaustive commentaries were written on the Smṛitis. Medhāthithi (9th cent. A.D.) wrote a huge comm. on the Manu-smṛiti, and Vijñāneśvara (11th cent.) wrote an important comm. the Mitāksharā, on the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti. Besides such exegetical works, independent treatises on the whole Dharmaśāstras or on certain topics continued to be produced even up to the recent times. Today, in India, particular works on Hindu Law are regarded as authoritative in different parts of the country; the Mitāksharā in Bombay; the Smṛiti-chandrikā of Devaṇṇa Bhaṭṭa (12th cent.) in Madras; the Dayabhāga of Jīmūtavāhana (11th cent.) in Bengal.

The Smṛitis have played a very important role in Hindu Law during the last over two thousand years. Although the Vedas are regarded as the ultimate source of Dharma, in practice, it is the Smṛitis to which Hindus all over India turn for the real exposition of religious duties and usages. [Kāpe : History of Dharmaśāstras; Rājendra Nāth Sharmā : Ancient India According to Manu (1980)].

Indian Philosophy :

Broadly speaking, Indian philosophical system falls into two categories : orthodox (āstika), those systems that accept the absolute authority of the Veda; and heterodox (nāstika), those that do not recognise that authority.

As a matter of fact, germs of philosophy existed in the Vedas. The Vedic writings were supposed to consist of two great divisions—the Karmakāṇḍa or practical ceremonial (exoteric) part, consisting of Samhitās and Brāhmaṇas (including the ritual portion of the Āraṇyakas), and the Jñāna-kāṇḍa or speculative (esoteric part), consisting of the Upanishads and speculative parts of the Vedas, Brāhmaṇas and the Āraṇyakas. These two divisions are also called respectively, the Pūrva (former) and Uttara (latter) kāṇḍas. Thus there arose the two systems: Pūrva-Mīmāṃsā and Uttara-Mīmāṃsā, the latter, usually called the Vedānta philosophy.

Countering the mystic and intuitive methods of the Upanishads, heretic schools developed their independent systems of logic. There are the heterodox schools of the Buddhists, the Jainas and of the materialist, Chārvāka, which developed their own treatises.

The rise of the heterodox systems helped to bring about and develop a critical point of view and led to the great movement of philosophy, which refuted the heterodox ideas and produced the six systems of thought. The six different orthodox philosophical systems are : Pūrva Mīmāṃsā, Vedānta, Nyāya, Vaiśeshika, Sāṅkhya and Yoga. Every system of philosophy has its own body of Sūtras whose authorship is traditionally ascribed to an individual teacher. Jaimini is the author of the Pūrva-Mīmāṃsā-sūtras, Bādarāyaṇa of the Uttara-Mīmāṃsā-sūtras, Kapila of the Sāṅkhya-sūtras, Patañjali of the Yoga-sūtras, Kaṇāda of the Vaiśeshika-sūtras and Gautama of the Nyāya-sūtras. The Sūtras were elaborately commented upon; these comments in their turn, were commented with a view to making them more intelligible, and compendiums came to be composed. Thus, there is a large number of philosophical works in Sanskrit.

The philosophical systems in India represent an age of remarkable speculative originality, but they dealt with abstract metaphysical problems. They had nothing in them through which they could reach the common man. There was need of a rational philosophical synthesis, presented on the theistic background. A typical example of a great effort in this direction is represented by the Bhagavadgītā, which remains the most popular religious and philosophical treatise in India. [Das Gupta : History of Indian Philosophy; Belvalkar (with Rāṇade): History of Indian Philosophy; Potter: Encyclopaedia of Indian Philosophies; Rādhākrishṇan : Indian Philosophy (2 Vols.); Sinha, J. : History of Indian Philosophy; Vidyābhūṣaṇa, S.C. : History of Indian Logic].

Tantras :

There are also many works on Tantra, dealing partly with philosophy and partly with magic performances and mystic rites. They deal with mystical charms and spells, diagrams, initiation, etc. There are both Brāhmaṇical and Buddhist Tantras. The early Tantras appear to have originated about the 5th or 6th cent. A.D., but later than Purāṇas, though Tantric influence is visible in several of the later Purāṇas. The Tantra literature consists of the Āgamas of the Śaiva, the Saṃhita of the Vaishṇava and the 'Tantra' proper of the Śākta, the worshippers of the female energy. See Tantra Literature. [Woodroffe: Introduction to Tantra-śāstra].

CLASSICAL SANSKRIT LITERATURE

What is known as Classical Sanskrit literature, originated about the 4th century B.C. The most outstanding figure in Classical Sanskrit literature is Kālidāsa. In the pre-Kālidāsa period, prose, poetry and drama were cultivated, but early works of these classes appear to have been lost. Of the pre-Kālidāsa works, we have the dramas of Aśvaghosha and Bhāsa and two poetical works: Buddha-charita (on the life of the Buddha, which was translated into Chinese c. A.D. 420) and Saundarānanda of the former, who is placed by tradition as early as the time of Kanishka, whose reign began in A.D. 78.

Mahākāvya (Epics) :

Of the six generally recognized Mahākāvya by the Indian rhetoricians, the first two: Raghuvamśa (on the dynasty of Raghu, in which was born Rāma) and Kumārasambhava (on the marriage of Pārvatī and Śiva for the birth of the warrior god, Kumāra, to fight against the demon Tāraka) are by the celebrated Kālidāsa. The third Mahākāvya is Kirātārjunīya (describing the combat between Arjuna and the god Śiva, the latter in the garb of a Kirāta), composed by Bhāravi, the fourth Śiśupāla-vadha (on the slaying of Chedi king Śiśupāla by Kṛṣṇa), composed by Māgha, the fifth Bhaṭṭi's Rāvaṇa-vadha (based on the Rāmāyaṇa) or popularly called Bhaṭṭi-kāvya and the sixth Naishadhīya or Naishadha-charita (treating of the marriage of Nala and Damayanti), ascribed to Śrī-Harsha.

In addition to the above six Mahākāvya, there are self-styled Mahākāvya; these are: the seventh Nalodaya (on the well-known story of Nala), the eighth Jānakī-harana (on the abduction of Sītā by Rāvaṇa) by the Ceylonese king-poet, Kumāradāsa (8th century), the ninth Rāghava-pāṇḍaviya (each verse applying equally to the stories of the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata at the same time) by Dhanañjaya and the tenth Vikramāṅkadeva-charita (dealing with the Chālukyas of Kalyāṇa, particularly with the history of king Vikramāditya VI), composed by the poet, Bilhaṇa.

There may also be mentioned here Kalhana's Rājataranginī (River of Kings; c. A.D.

1150), a chronicle of the kings of Kashmir.

Under the general term kāvya, Indian critics include certain kinds of prose works, written in highly rhetorical language. Worthy of mention are: Daṇḍin's Daśakumāra-charita (The Adventures of the Ten Princes; 6th cent.), the Vāsavadattā (on the love-story of prince Kandarpaketu and princess Vāsavadattā) by Subandhu (early 7th cent.) and especially the Kādambarī (on the romance of Chandrāpiḍa and Kādambarī) and Harsha-charita (on the history of King Harsha), both of Bāṇa, of about the same time, or slightly later.

The Buddhists also employed the medium of kāvya. With the legends of the Buddha and tales illustrative of the Karma theory as their theme, came the Buddhist works : Kumāralāta's Kalpnamāṇḍitikā or Sūtrālaṅkāra, Avadāna-sataka, the Divyāvadāna, and the Jātakamālā, the last by Ārya Śūra of the 4th cent. A.D.

The Jaina writers also composed some Mahākāvyas, though in poetic distinction some at least are inferior to the major Mahākāvyas mentioned above. The Harivamśa (the Jaina version of the Mahābhārata) and Ādipurāṇa of Jinasena and his pupil, Guṇabhadra (9th cent. A.D.) come foremost in this class. The Yaśodhara-charita (on the legend of king Yaśodhara) of Vādirāja and Māṇikyasūri, Dharmāśramābhyudaya (on the life of Dharmanātha, the 15th Tirthaṅkara) of Harichandra, Padmānandakāvya (otherwise known as Śrī-Jitendra-charita) of Amarachandra (middle 13th cent.) are others of the numerous works of this class.

Dramas :

Sanskrit drama proper begins with Bhāsa, author of over a dozen plays, of which the most noted are : Svapna-vāsvadattā (on Udayana legend), his best-known drama, Pratijñā-yaugandharāyaṇa (again on Udayana legend), and Pratimānājaka, the last named deriving its theme from the Rāmāyaṇa. Bhāsa's date is uncertain, but he lived before Kālidāsa and as such has been dated variously in 2nd or 3rd cent. A.D. and in 5th or 4th cent. B.C. Bhāsa shows a firm mastery of dramatic technique but it is Kālidāsa's three plays, Śakuntalā, Vikramorvaśīya, and Mālavikāgnimitra, that the dramatic kāvya reaches its height. Śakuntalā, relating the story of love of king Dushyanta for a hermit girl of high birth was the earliest Sanskrit drama to have elicited praise from the German poet, Goethe and is superior in some respects to Vikramorvaśīya, the latter treating of Purūravā's passion for the celestial nymph, Urvastī; the Mālavikāgnimitra, which appears to be the first play of Kālidāsa, is a tale of courtly intrigue.

So far Kālidāsa's successors are concerned, the most important are Bhavabhūti (fl. A.D. 700-730), the author of three plays : Mahāvīra-charita (based on the Rāmāyaṇa), Uttararāma-charita (on the latter portion of the Rāma-story) and Mālatī-mādhava (on the love-story of young student Mādhava and Mālatī), who surpasses Kālidāsa in depicting sentiments, particularly the Karuṇa; and Harsha, to whom have been ascribed the Ratanāvalī (a model play, noted for its careful observance of the rules of dramaturgy and with a clear delineation of Śṛiṅgāra Rasa), the Nāgānanda (on a new theme of a Buddhist story of sacrifice and the favourite of the Kerala theatre) and the Priyadarśikā (on the romance and subsequent marriage of Priyadarśikā and the king of Vatsa). The other outstanding dramatic works are: Mṛichchhakaṭika (a ten-act drama on the love-story of the Brāhmaṇa Chārudatta with a rich courtesan, Vasantasenā) by Śudraka, the Veṇī-samhāra (based on an episode of the Mahābhārata) by Bhaṭṭanārāyaṇa (8th cent.), the Mudrārākshasa (a political drama, in which Chanakya wins over Rākshasa, the minister of Nandas to the side of Chandragupta) by Viśākhadatta and the Prabodha-chandrodaya (an allegorical drama, devoted to the defence of the Advaita form of the Viṣṇu doctrine) by Kṛishṇa Miśra (11th cent.).

There is also Jayadeva's Gītagovinda (12th cent.), called Uparīpaka, which was so original, so beautiful and so successful that it gave rise to numberless imitations. [Keith : Sanskrit Drama; Satya Pāl Naraṅg : Kālidāsa Bibliography (1976); Schuyler: A Bibliography of the Sanskrit Drama; Sharmā, H.D. : Padma-purāṇa and Kālidāsa; Shekhar : Sanskrit Drama, Its Origin and Decline; see Bhagawat Sharaṇ Upādhyāya].

Lyrical, Descriptive and Didactic Poetry :

Kālidāsa's Meghadūta (Cloud Messenger) and Bhartṛihari's three Śatakas on Śṛiṅgāra, Vairāgya and Nīti are excellent examples of this type. Religious lyrics inspired by sectarian fervour include the independent productions : Ānanda-laharī (Wavelet of Bliss), a hymn of 163 stanzas in praise of the goddess Pārvatī, composed by Śaṅkarāchārya and the Sūrya-śatāka (Century of Stanzas in praise of the Sun), ascribed to Mayūra, the contemporary (and according to a tradition, the father-in-law) of Bāṇa (early 7th century).

The particular branch of didactic poetry in which India is especially rich, however, is that of moral maxims or subhāshitas, in single stanzas or couplets, and forming the chief means of expression of Nīti-śāstra (ethical science).

Anthologies :

The Anthologies play an important part in extending our knowledge of Sanskrit literature. The noteworthy anthologies are: Kavīndra-vachana-samuchchaya or Subhāshita-ratnaśoṭa by Vidyākara (12th cent.), Subhāshitāvalis by Vallabhadeva (12th cent.) and by Śrīvara (15th cent.), Saduktikarnāmrīta by Śrīdharadāsa (early 13th cent.), Sūktimuktāvalī by Jalhana (13th cent.), Śāṅgadadhara-paddhati by Śāṅgadadhara (14th cent.) and Subhāshita-ratnabhāṇḍāgāra.

Fables and Narratives :

For popular instruction, ethical stanzas were early added to existing fables and popular stories. A collection of this kind was translated into Pahlavī (Middle Persian) in 6th century, but neither the translation nor the original is extant. A Syriac translation exists, however, made from the Pahlavī in the same century. The Sanskrit original, which probably consisted of 14 chapters, was later recast, the result being the Pañchatantra (Five Chapters or Five Headings of Wisdom), of which several recensions exist. Ascribed by some scholars to Viṣṇuśarma, it consists of five books, viz., separation of friends, acquisition of friends, peace and war, loss of what is acquired, and rash action. A popular but late summary of this in four books, the Hitopadeśa (Good Counsel) has been shown to have been composed by one Nārāyaṇa; this is considered the Bengal version of the Pañchatantra. J. Hertel records over 200 versions of the work known to exist in more than 50 languages (three-fourths of the languages being non-Indian), spreading over the region from Java to Iceland.

Other popular collections of stories and fairy tales are the Śuka-saptati (Seventy Stories Related by the Parrot), when a parrot by relating 70 stories saves the chastity of its master's newly-wed wife, and the Vetālapañchaviṃśati (Twenty-five Stories of the Vetāla), existing in four recensions, which must be earlier than the 11th century, since it was used by two 11th century authors: Somadeva, who composed the Kathā-saritsāgara (Ocean of Streams of Story), a collection of tales in some 22,000 couplets, and Kshemendra, author or a smaller compiler of tales, the Bṛihat-kathā-maṇjarī; the Kathā-saritsāgara is the source of many tales in the Thousand and One Nights (see Alsдорף).

Sanskrit Literature from 13th to 18th Century :

The literature after the 12th century is represented by many historical kāvyas, notably on the kings of Vijaynagar, and Tanjore; the Śivabhārata on Śivāji, Keśava's Rājārāma-charita on Śivāji's son; message poems on the model of Kālidāsa's Meghadūta, and dramas composed by Venkaṭanātha Vedānta Deśika (the author of the Mahākāvya, Yūdavābhyudaya), Yaśaḥpāla, Vāidichandra, Nallādīkshita, Gokulanātha, and others in favour of several schools of philosophy in imitation of Prabodha-chandrodaya.

The striking careers of eminent persons in the field of literature and philosophy were also used for writing poems and dramas; of such works based on biography may be mentioned the works of Harihara (15th cent.), Varadāchārya, etc. Among later prose works is the Gadyakarnāmaṛita by Vidyāchakravartin (13th cent.).

Classical literature in South India was dominated by Nilakanṭha Dīkshita (17th cent.), who wrote two Mahākāvya: Śivalīlārnava (detailing the 64 līlās of god Hālasyanātha, by which name Śiva is worshipped at Madurā) and Gaṅgāvatarana (on the descent of the celestial Gaṅgā) and several minor poems.

To some extent, the vernaculars influenced writing in Sanskrit. In South India, many lives of saints and glorifications of local shrines were written in Sanskrit on the basis of Tamil works. In the field of Telugu literature, there are some Sanskrit translations of Telugu poems.

Classical literature did not stop under the Mohammedan or the British domination. Several Persian translations were produced of Hindu epics, Upanishads (see Dārā Shukoh) and scientific works. Sanskrit poets were patronised by Imperial Courts (see Jagannātha); Persian-Sanskrit Dictionaries and Persian Readers in Sanskrit were compiled; a few works from the Persian were also translated into Sanskrit. The similar impact of Christianity through the missionary settlements produced a few translations from the Bible. [Keith: History of Sanskrit Literature; Kṛishṇa Chaitanya: A New History of Sanskrit Literature; Kṛishṇamachārīar: History of Classical Sanskrit Literature; Kunhan Rājā: Survey of Sanskrit Literature; Kunjunni Rājā: Contribution of Kerala to Sanskrit Literature; Das Gupta & De: A History of Sanskrit Literature; Winternitz: History of Indian Literature (Vol. III)].

It is interesting to note that Sanskrit literature was not limited to the confines of India. This literature and the culture it enshrined, spread to remote lands in the Far East, e.g., Cambodia, Malaya, Sumatra, Borneo, Java, Bali and the Phillipine Islands. Such nearer neighbours of India as Tibet, Nepal and Burma were deeply influenced by this literature. In some of the above places, treatises were composed in Sanskrit and Sanskrit inscriptions were freely written. Even China and Japan betray the influence of Sanskrit literature. Persia and Arabia in the Middle East show their early acquaintance with Sanskrit literature. That this literature was cultivated in Central Asia is amply borne out by the finds of manuscripts of important works in that region. From very early times, the West has been acquainted with this literature through translations. The Greeks and Romans were probably the earliest European people to influence or to be influenced by this literature, particularly in the field of astronomy. Of the Pañchatantra, as Hertel has pointed out, there are well over 200 editions in 50 languages, three-fourth of which are non-Indian. [Rāmachandran, T.N.: The Golden Age of Hindu Javanese Art; Gonda: Sanskrit in Indonesia; Rajendralal Mitra : Sanskrit Buddhist Literature in Nepal; Tavadia: Indo-Iranian Studies (2 Vols.); Coedes: Inscriptions du Cambodge (7 Vols.); Bagchi, P.C.: India and China and India and Central Asia; see articles on Barth, Tucci, Majumdar, Nihar Ranjan Ray, Das, S.C., R.C., etc.].

TECHNICAL LITERATURE

• Rhetorics (Alaṅkāra-śūtra), etc. :

There are numerous treatises on the theory of literary compositions; the Nāṭya-śāstra of Bharata is possibly of as early as the 4th cent. A.D. Not much later is Daṇḍin's Kāvyādarśa, which has exercised great influence on subsequent writers. Other important works are the Kāvyamīmāṃsā by Rājaśekhara, Dhvanyāloka by Ānandavardhana (fl. 9th cent.); Kavyālaṅkāra by Rudrata (9th cent.), the Daśarūpaka by Dhanañjaya (10th cent.), the Sarasvatī-kunṭhābharaṇa, a treatise in five chapters on poetics generally (11th cent.), the Kāvya-prakāśa (12th cent.) by Mammata, and Sāhitya-darpaṇa (c. 1450) by Viśvanātha. The last important work on this subject is Jagannātha's Rusagaṅgādhara (17th cent.). [Kane: History of Sanskrit Poetics; Ādya Raṅgāchārya: Introduction to Bharata's Nāṭya-śāstra; Kṛishṇa Chaitanya: Sanskrit Poetics; Rāmakrishna Kavi: Bharatakośa; Raṅgachārya].

Grammar (Vyākaraṇa) :

The Sūtras of Pāṇini, who lived in c. 5th cent. B.C. are known as the Ashṭādhyāyī and are considered the foremost Vedāṅga. While recording fully many features of Vedic, the Ashṭādhyāyī is devoted chiefly to the post-Vedic language, testifying to a long grammatical tradition outside the Vedic schools.

Perhaps, the earliest of Pāṇini's predecessor was Śākaṭāyana (also mentioned by Yāska, who is also supposed to have preceded Pāṇini), as the only grammarian, who held with the etymologists that all nouns are derived from verbal roots.

When the language underwent change after Pāṇini, there arose need for supplements and emendations to his work. Among these Uṛtikas, that of Kātyāyana alone (c. 400 B.C.) has come down to us, which is intended to supplement and correct the Sūtras or to give them greater precision.

Patañjali : Kātyāyana was followed by Patañjali, author of the Vyākaraṇa Mahābhāṣya. Patañjali (c. 150 B.C.) is the greatest commentator on Pāṇini; his Mahābhāṣya is aptly called the "Great Commentary". Written in a language, simple and vigorous, and consisting of dialogues that impart to it an absorbing interest, it has been held in high esteem through the ages. The Mahābhāṣya is, however, not a continuous commentary on Pāṇini's grammar, but a recollection of the critical comments (kārikās) of 1,713 of Pāṇini's 4,000 rules. [Shrīdhara Shāstri Pāṭhak : Word Index to Vyākaraṇa Mahābhāṣya; Baij Nāth Puri. India in the Age of Patañjali; Kielhorn: A Grammar of the Sanskrit Language; Whitney: Oriental and Linguistic Studies; Wilson: Introduction to the Grammar of the Sanskrit Language].

In the 5th cent. A.D., Chandragomin, a Buddhist, wrote Chāndra-vyākaraṇa, mostly utilizing the Pāṇinian material and method. For the originality of approach to the subject of Sanskrit grammar, mention must be made of Bhartṛhari (7th cent.), a great philosopher and grammarian, whose Vākyapadīya made a notable contribution to philosophical enquiry into the nature of language.

Kāśikā (7th cent.) is the earliest extant commentary on the entire text of the Aṣṭā-dhyāyī; it itself has two commentaries: Nyāsa by Jinendrabuddhi and Padamañjarī by Haradatta. The next work of importance is Kaiyaṭa's Pradīpa (c.1000) on the Mahābhāṣya.

Various recastings of the Aṣṭā-dhyāyī sought to simplify it; the latest work in this regard is Siddhānta-kaumudī of Bhaṭṭojī Dīkshita (c. 1600 A.D.). This is still the most popular among students of Sanskrit grammar. On the Siddhānta-kaumudī Nāgeśa (c. 1700) wrote a critical commentary, as also Udyota, commentary on Kaiyaṭa's Pradīpa. He is the last luminary of Pāṇinian school. [Whitney: Sanskrit grammar; Palsule: Concordance of Sanskrit Dhātupāṭha; Bhaṭṭārkar, R.G. : Sanskrit and the Prakrit Languages; Yudhishtira Mīmāṃsaka: Saṃskṛita Vyākaraṇa-śāstra kā Itihāsa].

Prosody :

Apart from what is mentioned under Chhandus, one of the Vedāṅgas, among later treatises, the most important is the Mṛita-saṁjivinī, a commentary on Piṅgala's Chhandahsūtras, by Halāyudha (fl. 10th cent.); other important works are : Chhandonusāsana (12th cent.) by Hemachandra and Chhandosañjarī (13th-15th Cent.).

Lexicography :

The great dictionary is the Amara-kośa by Amarasimha, who probably lived early in the 6th cent. A.D. The other important works in this field are: [Abhidhāna-ratnamālā by Halayudha (fl. 10th cent.)], Lajjayanī, Abhidhāna-chintāmaṇi by Hemachandra (12th cent.), Anekārtha-kośa, Anekārtha-śabdakośa, the lexical works of Purushottama deva; Vācha-patya and Śabda-kalpadruma [Apte, V.S.: Practical Sanskrit-English Dictionary; Monier-William: Sanskrit-English Dictionary; Sanskrit-Wörterbuch; Buck : Dictionary of Selected Synonyms in the Principal Indo-European Languages, Cappelle: A Sanskrit-English Dictionary, Ghatage. An Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Sanskrit on Historical Principles; Mayrhofer: A Concise Etymological Sanskrit Dictionary; Suryakanta: A Practical Vedic Dictionary (1981)].

Medicine (Āyurveda) and Chemistry :

From the mention of the "three humours" (wind, bile, phlegm) in a Vārttika to Pāṇini, some kind of humoral pathology seems, however, to have been prevalent among Indian physicians several centuries before the Christian Era. The oldest existing medical work is thought to be the Charaka-saṃhitā, a bulky encyclopaedia in *śloka*s mixed with prose sections; it consists of eight parts. Of equal authority, but somewhat later is the Suśruta-saṃhitā (mainly on surgery), which Suśruta is said to have received from Divanantari. There have been supplementary treatises as well to these Saṃhitās.

Other treatises of lesser importance are those of attributed to Vāgbhaṭa (q.v.). All later treatises were chiefly based on these works.

Apart from some chemical preparations prescribed by Charaka and Suśruta, chemistry texts properly so called begin with Rasa-ratnākara, attributed to Nāgārjuna, whom several traditions describe as an alchemist [Ray, P.C. : History of Chemistry in Ancient and Mediaeval India (Calcutta, 1956); Atriḍeva : Saṁskṛita Sāhitya meṁ Āyurveda; Satya Prakash: Founders of Science in Ancient India (1965); Seal : The Positive Sciences of the Ancient Hindus (reprint, 1958); Dattā, B. : Extraordinary Scientific Knowledge in Vedic Works].

Astronomy, Mathematics and Astrology :

Early Indian astronomical knowledge is summed up in Lagadha's Jyotiṣa-vedāṅga or Vedāṅga-jyotiṣa, which is available in two recensions. A more scientific approach is marked by the appearance of the five original Siddhāntas, which are partly extant in revised redactions and in quotations. These five are : Vāsiṣṭha, Paitāmaha, Romaka (i.e., Roman), Pauliṣa and Sūrya or Saura. Of these Siddhāntas, two : Romaka and Pauliṣa bear non-Indian names and suggest Western influence. Based on these are the works of the most distinguished astronomers : Āryabhaṭa (b. A.D. 476), Varāhamihira (probably 505-587), Brahmagupta, who compiled his Brāhma-sphuṭa-siddhānta in c. 628, Bhaṭṭotpala (10th cent.), distinguished as the commentator of Varāhamihira, and Bhāskarāchārya (fl. 1114), who finished his course of astronomy, the Siddhānta-siromani in 1150. Some scholars are of the view that between Vedāṅga-jyotiṣa (c. 900 B.C.) and the works of Āryabhaṭa (5th cent. A.D.), the development in mathematical astronomy is found in Jaina canonical texts like, Sūrya-prajñapti, Chandra-prajñapti (4th cent. B.C. ?), etc.

The beginnings of Mathematics are unknown, but the sacrificial formulas of the Yajurveda bear witness to the use of high numbers among special names (up to arbuda = 100,000,000).

Mathematics, other than ritual geometry, was mostly linked with astronomy, and from the 1st century A.D., astronomical treatises generally included Mathematics. (However, the manuals of Mahāvīrāchārya, 9th cent. and others were for calculations only. The Bakhshali Manuscript from Kashmir [c. 12th cent.] is a collection of arithmetical problems and solutions). Bhāskarāchārya's Siddhānta-siromani has two chapters : Līlāvatī and Bījagaṇita on Mathematics.

The astronomical treatises also contain astrology, though Bhṛigu-saṁhitā is exclusively on astrology. [Bentley : Historical View of Hindu Astronomy; Neugebauer : A History of Ancient Mathematical Astronomy; Dixit, S.B. : History of Indian Astronomy (in Marathi and in Hindi); article on Pingree; Datta : Extraordinary Scientific Knowledge in Vedic Works (1963); Sen : A Bibliography of Sanskrit Works in Astronomy and Mathematics (1966)].

Music (Saṅgīta) :

The art of music has been practised in India from very early times. The extant theoretic treatises on music are, however, quite modern productions. The most highly esteemed works are : Saṅgīta-ratnākara (Jewel Mine of Music) by Śārṅgadeva, Saṅgīta-makaranda; Saṅgīta-darpaṇa by Dāmodaradeva, Saṅgīta-pārijāta and Saṅgīta-rāja. [Rāghavan: Encyclopaedia of Technical Terms in Music, Dance and Drama].

Apart from the works on technical and scientific subjects mentioned above, there are works on polity and statecraft (Arthaśāstra, etc.), on erotics (Kāma-sūtras by Vātsyāyana, Rati-rahasya by Kukkoḥa, Kāmasamūha by Ananta, etc.), on pornography (Kuṭṭanimāta, etc.), on botany (Upavana-vinoda; Vṛikshāyurveda by Sureśvara), on architecture (Mānasāra, Vāstuvidyā, etc.), on sculpture (Śilpa-ratna, Śilpa-śāstra, Pratimā-lakṣhaṇa), on agriculture (Kṛṣhiparāśara), on horses (Aśva-śāstra), on elephants (Gaja-śāstra), on hunting (Śyainika-śāstra by Rudradeva), encyclopaedias: Mānasollāsa; Pāṇḍava-digvijaya by Rāmakavi, Bhuvana-pradipikā by Rāmakṛṣṇa Śāstrī, Toḍarānanda, etc.) and even on the art of thieving (Shaṇamukha-kalpa), etc. [Achārya : Encyclopaedia of Hindu Architecture; De : Ancient Indian Erotics and Erotic Literature; Percy Brown : Indian Architecture (2 Vols.); Rādhā Kṛṣṇa Choudhary : Kauṭilya's Political Ideas and Institutions].

The Indo-European contact has been of equal significance in the two contexts. The discovery of Sanskrit by the West had been the most significant event in the European thought since the Renaissance. So far as India is concerned, this discovery of Sanskrit had a two-fold effect : on the one hand, Indians who received a modern education woke into a new realization of the values of their cultural heritage and the work of the Western orientalist produced a cultural and literary revival in India; on the other, the impact of Western modes of thought and ways of life led to a process of change in the traditional institutions and learning. Consequently, Sanskrit literature entered a new phase with the rise of modern European influence.

Sanskrit literature has always moved with the times, though traditional types of works have also been composed and are continued to the present day. In the beginning of the 19th century, there had been Sanskrit histories on the British conquest of India : Āngreja-chandrikā (1801), Itihāsa-tamomani (1813), as also panegyrics in honour of the British rulers; writing of histories of India in Sanskrit has continued up to the present day; some histories are : Jarmanī-kāvya (Leipzig, 1913) by Śyāmkumara Tagore; Bhāratānu-varnana by T. Gaṇapati Shāstrī, Bhārata-saṅgraha by KāvyaKaṇṭham Gaṇapati Śāstrī, Āṅgla-sāmrajya by Rājārāja Varmā, Bhāratetivṛitta-sāra by Lakshminātha Śāstrī, Bhāratīyam Itivṛittam by Rāmavatāra Śarmā, Āṅgla-Jarmanī-yuddhavarṇana (account of the First World War 1914-18), Kṛāntivīranām-adbhutakathā (dealing with the heroes of 1857 freedom struggle), Kṛānti-yuddha (1957) by Vāsudeva Shāstrī Bagewadikar, Bhāratasya-saṃskṛitiko-nidhi by Ramjī Upādhyāya, Susamhata-bhāratam (1965) by Pullēla Rāmachandrudu, Bhāratāyana (1968; history of India up to king Harshavardhana) and Bhāratīya-congressetihāsa (1964) by Dinesh Prasād Pāṇḍey, Kāśmīretihāsa (a history of Kashmir, 1969) by Hanumatprasāda Śāstrī, Bhāratetihāsa (Vol. I, 1970) by Indra Vidyāvāchaspati.

Those who wrote in the traditional style are : Achyutarāya Modak (fl. early 19th cent.), author of some 30 works, Mudumbai Venkatarāma Narasimāchārya (1842-1928), author of 114 works, Keralavarma Valiya Koil Tampurān (1845-1915), called 'Kerala Kālidāsa', who composed 37 works, Bhaṭṭa Śrī Nārāyaṇa Śāstrī (1860-1911), author of 92 dramas, Medhaśrī Nārāyaṇa Śāstrī (1882-1932), author of 108 works, which included 24 plays, Kunnikuṭṭan Tampurān (1865-1913), called 'Kerala Vyāsa', who, apart from translating the whole of the Mahābhārata into Malayalam in a short period, wrote Sanskrit dramas, stotras, lyrics and biography of Śaṅkarāchārya, Madhusūdana Śarmā, author of 108 works, Śrī Upanishad Brahmendra Sarasvatī, who wrote Sanskrit comms., on the 108 Upanishads, Annadācharaṇa, Kāvyaṇṭham Gaṇapati Śāstrī and Mathurānātha, equally prolific and the poetess Trivenī (1817-83), the foremost among women contributors.

On realization of the glorious heritage of their country, poems in glorification of Bhārata Mātā and other patriotic poems were composed and printed in almost every Sanskrit journal and their number is quite large; some longer poems are by M.K. Tātāchārya, S.T.G. Varadāchāri, Kapāli Śāstrī, M.V. Subrahmaṇya Iyer, Rāma Rāi, etc.

One of the favourite themes of the Sanskrit poets and writers, is works on the lives and activities of political leaders. Bālgāṅgādhar Tilak is the subject of many works: Tilaka-yaśorṇava in 12,000 verses by M.S. Aṇey, Tilaka-charitra a prose biography by Chitale, a biography by Vāsudeva Śāstrī Bagewadikar, a biography by K.S. Nāgarājan, Śrī Lokamānya-charitram (1970) by V. Sūryanārāyaṇa Śāstrī, and Śrī Lokmānya-smṛiti, a drama by S.B. Velankar. Biographies of C.F. Andrews, Madan Mohan Mālaṇya, Rājendra Prasād (Rājendra-prasasti by Viśvukānta Jhā), Vallabhabhai Patel and S. Rādhākṛishṇan were written by Bhikshārāma, K.S. Nāgarājan, Somayājī, etc.

Mahātmā Gāndhī, his ideas and his Satyāgraha movement are, however, the subjects of many works: Satyāgraha-gītā (Paris, 1932) and Uttara-satyāgraha-gītā (1949) by Kshamā Rao, Bhārata-pārīṭa, an epic on Gāndhījī by Bhagavadāchārya, Śrī Gāndhī-charitam (1930) by C. S. Deva Śāstrī, Suvarṇa-bindu (1951) by B. Ch. Chhābrā, Gāndhī-sūkti-muktāvalī (1957) by C.D. Deshmukh, Gāndhī-gītā by A.V. Kāpe, Satyāgraha-nīti-kāvya by Satyadeva Vasishṭha, Satyāgraha-kathā by Pāṇḍuraṅga Śāstrī, Gāndhī-sūtras by D.S. Śarmā, Śrīmad-Gāndhī-charitam by Sādhu Śaraṇa Miśra, Gāndhī-gaurava (1969) by Rāmachandra Shukla, Śrī Gāndhī-gaurvam-kāvya by Sivagovinda Tripāthī. On Gāndhī's assassination, several elegies and longer poems were composed: Śoka-śloka-śataka (1953) by Badarīnātha Jhā, Mahātmā-nirvāṇa (1954) by K.R. Nair, Bhārata-bhāgya-viparyaya by K.S. Kṛishṇamūrti Śāstrī, Mahātmā-vijaya by K.L.V. Śāstrī, poems by Sudhākara and by others.

Mahātmā Gāndhī's autobiography was tr. into Sanskrit under the title Satyasodhana (1965) by H. Nāgappā Śāstrī.

Subhāsh Chandra Bose, Jawāharlāl N. and Indirā Gāndhī are the subjects of many works: on Subhāsh are : Subhāsha-charitam, a poem in 16 cantos by Chhatre, Subhāsha-gauravam (1968) by D.C. Datta, a special poem by Lakshminārāyaṇa Shanbhogue, Subhāsha-charita (in prose) by Premaśāṅkara Miśra (1967 ff.); on Nehru are : Śrī Nehru-charitam by Brahmānanda Sukla, Javāhara-digvijaya by Śyāmavarṇa Divedī, Javāhara-chintan (1966) by S.B. Velankara, Nehru-charitam by Viśṇu Mitra, Jawāhar-taraṅgiṇī by Warṇekar, and Madhubālā on Nehru in Sanskrit Literature (1974); on Indirā Gāndhī are: Indirā-vijaya-prasasti-śataka (1971-72), a eulogy by Hazarilāla Śāstrī, Indirā Gāndhī Charitam by Satya Vrat Śāstrī, Indirā-vijaya by N.A. Venkaṭaratnam, Indirā-vaibhava by Vighneśvara Śarmā and Indirā Charitam by Viśṇu Mitra. Vinoba Bhave's mission is the subject of Bhūdāna-yajña-gāthā by Gaṇapati Śāṅkara Śukla, while Ramesh Chandra Shukla has composed a poem on Lāl Bahādur Śāstrī.

Apart from works on individual leaders, there are works: Rāshṭra-sabhāputi-gaurava (1938), describing all the Congress Presidents, written by Lakshminārāyaṇa Shanbhogue and Bhāratiya-desabhakta-charitam (1952) by K.S. Nāgarājan on Indian patriots. There are also some national and patriotic poems and dramas by Mathurānātha, Prabhu Datta Śāstrī, Rāmākṛishṇa Bhaṭṭ, Viśveśvara, Vidyābhūṣaṇa, etc.

On Heroes of the Past :

There are also biographical accounts of the heroes of the past; some taking the form of the Mahākāvya: Paraśurama-charita by R.S. Venkaṭarāma Śāstrī; on Prithvīrāja and Rāṇā Pratāp by Śrīpāda Śāstrī Hasurkar, Mūlaśaṅkara Māṇikalāla Yājñika; on Rāṇā Pratāp: Virupratāpa-nāṭaka (1937) by Mathurāprasāda Dikshita, a drama on a story of Mewār: Amara-maigala (1939) by Pañchānan Tarkaratna, a novel, Chhatrasāla-vijaya by Jagadrāma Śāstrī; on Sikh gurus: by Kṛishṇā Kaur, Śrīpāda Śāstrī Hasurkar, Satya Vrat Shāstrī; on Śivājī by Ambikādatta Vyāsa, Umā Śaṅkara Tripāṭhi, Mūlaśaṅkara, Māṇikalāla Yājñika, Rāmākṛishṇa Bhaṭṭa, Warṇekar; on Ahalyābāi by Sakhārām Shāstrī; there are works on historical accounts of dynasties as Chālukya-charita by Rāmanātha Nanda and Sāhu-charita (1939) by V.A. Latkar Śāstrī of a recent ruler of Kolhāpur, Jayapura-vaiḥbhava by Mathurānātha, Jayapura rāja-varṇasāvalī (1938) by Rāmanātha Nanda, Raṇavīra-vijaya by Viśveśvara, etc.

On Saints and Reformers etc. :

Accounts of saints, reformers and scholars have also been dealt with frequently in prose and verse; of Buddha : Buddha-charitrāmṛita (1922) by Alamelamma, Siddhārtha-charitam by Virendra Bhaṭṭāchārya, of Āṇḍāl (1947) by K.S. Nāgarājan, of Vālmiki by Kāśī Kṛishṇamāchārya, of her scholar-father by Kshamā Rāo, prose biographies of Vallabhāchārya and Rāmadāsa by Śrīpāda Śāstrī Hasurkar, of Nṛisimhabhārati Svāmī by Rājavallabha Śāstrī, of five leading Mahāmahopādyaṃyas (1928) by Nārāyaṇa Śāstrī Khiste and of the two Carnatic musician-saints, Tyāgarāja and Muttusvāmī Dikshitar by Sundareśa Śarmā and Rāghavan.

Of the new religious leaders and reformers, Dayānanda Sarasvatī is the subject of several poems and Mahākāvya: Dayānanda-digvijaya (1910) by Akhilānanda Śarmā, Dayānanda-prābhava by Vāmanāchārya, Dvānanda-digvijaya (1938) by Medhāvrata, Āryodaya-kāvya (1952) by Gangāprasāda Upādhyaya, Mum-charitam by Dillipadatta Śāstrī, Dayānanda Charitrāmṛitam by Vidyānidhi; works on Rāmākṛishṇa Paramahansa : a prose biography (1937) by Pañchapageśa Śāstrī, Rāmākṛishṇāmṛita by Ottur Unni Nambutirippād, Rāmākṛishṇa-sahasra-nāma-stotra (1950) by Rāmākṛishṇa Bhaṭṭa; on Vivekānanda: Vivekānanda-charita (1947) by K.S. Nāgarājan, Vivekānanda-vijaya by Warṇekar; on Ramana Maharshi's teachings: Ramana-gītā by KāvyaKaṇṭham Gaṇapati Śāstrī, on Nārāyaṇa Guru, a religious leader of Kerala: Śrī-Nārāyaṇa-vijaya (1971), a Mahākāvya in 21 cantos by Balarāma Panikkar, Śrīguru-gītā (1977) on the life of Vāgbhaṭānanda and a Mahākāvya on Nṛisimhabhārati Svāmī of Śrīṅgeri (1936) by Rājavallabha Śāstrī.

There are works on Jesus Christ; e.g. Yīśu-charitam by Śrī Nīlakaṇṭha Śāstrī, Kṛishṇa-Bhāgavatam by Devassia, on Mohammed: Yīśuddha-Nabī-charitam by K.S. Nīlakaṇṭha Unni and Girigītā (based on the Sermon on the Mount) by K.P. Urmese.

In the early 20th century, reacting against the new movements in the social, religious and philosophical fields, the orthodox Hindus wrote many dissertations against sea-travel, post-puberty marriage, etc., the prominent being Abdhi-nau-yānamīmāṃsā (1903) by Kāśī Śeshavenkatachala Śāstrī, Vivāha-samaya-mīmāṃsā-Abdhiyāna-vimarsāu (1913) by N.S. Anantakṛishṇa Śāstrī, Ritumati-vivāha-vidhi nishledha-pramāṇān, Vayo-nirṇaya by P. Gaṇapati Śāstrī but there were others, who welcomed the reforms; Bāla-vivāha-chandrodaya (1905) by Ayodhyāprasāda advocates re-marriage of child-widows. Two outstanding works of this class are : Mānavadharma-sāra by Bhagwān Dās and Viśveśvara-smṛiti by viśveśvaranātha Reu.

Spirit of Tolerance :

There have been some attempts of writing philosophical treatises from a new angle: such attempts are by Kali Raṅgāchārya's Mata-traya-saṅgraha on the three schools of Vedānta, LakshmiPuram Śrīnivāsāchārya's Darśanodaya, Brahmamuni's Vedānta-darśana, Subba Rao's two works, KāvyaKaṇṭham Gaṇapati's Shail-darśana, Kapāli Śāstrī's works, Rāmavatāra Śarma's Paramārtha-darśana-bhāṣya, Jwālā Prasad's Tattvadarśana, M.V. Upādhyāya's Īśvarasvarūpa, Pūrṇānanda's Pūrnajyoti (1929), Āgamānanda's Dharma (1955), Sampūrṇānanda's Chidvilāsa, Satya Prakash Singh's Śrīarvinda-darśanam (1975), etc.

Sanskrit Journals :

The Sanskrit Journals are to a great extent responsible in infusing a new life into Sanskrit. Apart from publishing minor poems, short stories, serial longer stories and novels, one-act plays, essays, literary criticism, travel accounts, scientific articles and works on science, these journals in their editorials have freely discussed contemporary social and religious problems.

Literary Criticism, Literary Histories, etc. :

On the model of Western canons of criticism, critical articles in the form of long prose essays began to appear in Sanskrit journals, but a few attempts have been made to write monographs in Sanskrit proper. Some noteworthy works are: Raghuvamśa-vimarśa (1908) and Megha-sandēśa-vimarśa (1915), both by R. Kṛishṇamāchārya and Sandēśadvaya-sarasvādīni by A.V. Gopālāchārya, which is a detailed comparative study of the Megha-sandēśa and Haṁsa-sandēśa.

Among the works on linguistics and histories of Sanskrit literature, the noted ones are: Laghupāṇiniya by Rājarāja Varmā, Bhāṣhāśāstra-praveśinī by R.S. Venkaṭarāma Śāstrī, Bhāṣhāśāstra-saṅgraha by S.T.G. Varadachariar, a history of Sanskrit poets by Mallādi Sūrya-nārāyaṇa Śāstrī, Saṁskṛita-sāhityetiḥāsa (2 Vols.) by Hansrāj Agarwal, Saṁskṛita-sāhitya-vimarśa (Meerut, 1957) by Dvijendranātha Śāstrī, monographs in Sanskrit on Indra, Atri, Yajña, etc. by Madhusūdana Śarmā and Sanskrit commentaries on all the four Vedas by Maheśvarānanda.

Poems :

On the model of the Western minor poems, there have been composed a good number of minor poems, which have appeared in Sanskrit magazines or in separate collections. Such poems are either adaptations from English (from Shakespeare, Wordsworth, Shelley, Browning, etc.) or are original; the original poems are on every conceivable topic: nature, seasons, love, contemporary problems or are permeated with devotional fervour or national feeling, etc.

Slightly longer poems of the older khaṇḍa-kāvya type have also been composed. The important contributions in this field, who have adapted from English are by Rāmachandrāchārya, Mahāliṅga Śāstrī, etc. Of the original contributors in Sanskrit, some are: Paññanāḍu Gaṇapati Śāstrī, Gaṅgādhara, Haricharaṇa Bhaṭṭāchārya, Jātīndranātha Bhaṭṭāchārya, Rāmachandra Kavi, Rāma Śāstrī, Ravi Varmā, Pramathanātha Tarkabhūṣaṇa, Haridāsa Siddhānta-vāgīśa, Medhāvratā, Mathurānātha, K.S. Kṛishṇamūrti Śāstrī, Chhābrā, D.M. Kulkarni, Nāgeśa Sharmā, Kāśī Kṛishṇamāchārya, Kapisthalaṃ Kṛishṇamāchārya, Durgādatta Śāstrī, Amīr Chandra Shāstrī. Kṛishṇa Lāl, Kṛishṇarāma, Jhālā, Vāgishwar Vidyālaṅkāra, B.R. Śāstrī, Gurusvāmī Sastrigal, Kālīpāda Tarkāchārya, Ottur Unni Nambūtrippad, Ogeti Parīkshit Śarmā, Revāprasād Dvivedī and the celebrated poet, Warṇekar.

Light Verses, Satires, Farces, etc. :

Using the form of the Meghadūta, some humorous poems or parodies were written; some are: Kokiladūta (message through a kokila) by Sahasrabuddhe, Kākadūta (crow as a messenger) by Rājagopāla Iyengar, Śunakadūta (message through a dog) by K.V. Kṛishṇamūrti Śāstrī, Megha-vilāpa (1970) by Dīpak Ghosh, Megha-prati-sandēśa by M. Rāma Śāstrī. Even the onion and broomstick are the subjects of śatakas: Palāṇḍu-śataka by Kṛishṇarāma and Marjanī-śataka by Anantalwar; there are poems also on bug, mosquito, tea (Chāha-gīta by Sahasrabuddhe), coffee (Kāphi-shoḍaśikā) by Swāmīnātha Ātreya, satirical skits by Viśvanātha Mīśra, light poems on stomach, fast of the monkeys (see D.T. Tātāchārya), etc.

Satires have also been written: Chhajjurāma has satirized Dayānanda in his Dayānandashṭaka, Punnasseri Nīlakaṇṭha Śarmā in his Sāttvika-svapna has a hit on the early political agitators, Dīkshita Vatava in his Kalpita-kali-vṛttāntādarśa-purāṇa satirizes those, who had taken to fashionable modern habits, Arjuna Wādekar in his Kaṇṭakāñjali satirizes every topic of Independent India: politics, education, society, etc., while Jhālā's Sushmā (1955) is a short collection of satires.

Farces have also been written; some are: Mahishamaṅgala-bhāṇa by Mahishamaṅgala Nambūdrī, Kaundinya-prahasana, Śṛiṅgāra-nārādīya and Markaṭa-mardālikā (1951) by Mahāliṅga Śāstrī, as also farces by Khot, Birendrakumāra Bhaṭṭāchārya, K.L.V. Śāstrī, Sundarēśa Śarmā, D.T. Tātāchārya, H.H. Trivedī, Vighneśvara Śarmā, etc.

Dramas :

Besides Bhaṭṭa Śrī Nārāyaṇa Śāstrī, who wrote 92 plays and Medhaśrī Nārāyaṇa Śāstrī, the author of 108 works, which included 24 plays, the other dramatists, who wrote on traditional themes are: Jaggu Vakulabhūṣaṇa, the author of Prasanna-kaśyapiya (1951), in which Dushyanta and Śakuntalā, along with young Bharata, pay a visit to Kaṇva's Āśrama, J.T. Parikh, who has also written a drama on the same theme, C. Venkataramanayya, the author of an allegorical drama, Mahāliṅga Śāstrī, the author of several plays, e.g., Prati-rājasūyam (on Duryodhana's Rājasūya) and Kaliprādurbhāva, Sundarēśa Śarmā (Prema-vijaya), Nārāyaṇa Śukla (Vainayakam in 7 Acts on the story of Gaṇeśa), Durgādatta Shāstrī, author of Vatsala (1978), etc.

The dramatists, who wrote on themes, other than traditional, are: Kṛishṇan Tampy, whose three plays are of contemporary and social interest and are expressive of new trends in theme and form, Sundararāja Āchārya (Snushā-vijaya, on the triumph of daughter-in-law), Mathurā Prasad Dīkshita (Vīrapratāpa Nāṭaka, 1937), Mūlaśaṅkara Māṇikālā Yājñika (author of three historical plays on Rāṇā Pratāp, Śivājī and Pṛithvīrāj Chauhān), Sudarśana Pathi (Simhala-vijaya), Pañchānan Tarkaratna (Amaramaṅgala, 1939; on a story of Mewār), Vijayananda (Premamohini-Raṇadhīra), Haridāsa Siddhānta-Vāgīśa (Virāja-sarajinī; Vaṅgīya-pratāpa), Kshamā Rāo (Bālavīdhavā, Katudvaipūka), Mahāvratā (Prakṛiti-saundarya), Mahidhara Venkaṭarāma Śāstrī (Prakṛiti-saurabha, a nine-Act play with contemporary setting), Pisharoti (author of three plays), Raghavan (Anārakalī), Punnesseri Nilakaṇṭha Śarmā (Gairvāṇi-vijaya), Prabhudatta Śāstrī (Samskrīta-vāg-vijaya), Surendra Mohana Pañchatīrtha (Vāṇika-sutā, Kaṇchana-mālā). Vanamālā Bhavalkar, Śivaprasāda Bharadvāja, Gurumūrti (Bhāratiyam-sāmdṛikyam, 1970-71), Romā Choudhry (Deśadīpa, 1970), etc.

Apart from these original contributions, several plays have been translated into Sanskrit from other languages, details of which have been given under 'Adaptations and Translations from Other Languages'.

Among the shorter plays are one-act plays, prahasanas, radio plays and dramatic dialogues, on a variety of themes, all of contemporary and social interest. The prominent dramatists are: Thampi, Kshamā Rāo, S.K. Rāmanātha Śāstrī, K.L.V. Śāstrī, Y. Mahalinga Śāstrī, Jiva Nyāyatīrtha, Khot, K.R. Nair, Rāghavan, Sundaresa Śarmā, Tiruveṅkaṭachārya, S.B. Velankar, etc. [Ushā Satyavrat: Sanskrit Dramas of 20th Century (1971)].

Novels :

This class has been enriched by way of translations and adaptations from Bengali (especially the works of Bankim Chandra Chatterji) from English (mainly based on Shakespeare's works), from Tamil and from other languages (see Translations and Adaptations from Other Languages), but there are also writers, who have contributed original novels; some contributors are: Chintāmani Mādhava Gole, Śrīnivāsa Śāstrī, Rājammā, Kāvyaakaṇṭham Gaṇapati Śāstrī, Gopāla Śāstrī, Rājagopāla Chakravartī, Vijayānanda, Vīdhushekhara Bhaṭṭāchārya, Haridāsa Siddhānta-vāgīśa, Kapisthāsa, Kṛishnamāchārya, R. Kṛishnamāchārya, Indranātha Vandyopādhyāya, Medhāvratā, Chāmbara Śāstrī, Narasimhāchārya, Jaggu Vakulabhūshaṇa, Jagadrāma Śāstrī, Rāmji Upādhyaya, Parikhi, Upendranātha Sena, Lakshmaṇa Shāstrī Telang, etc ; see also On Heroes of the Past.

Short Stories :

There have been good attempts of re-telling of Purāṇic episodes and presentation of numerous fables and popular tales in simple and easy prose: Śvetarṇyam Nārāyaṇa Yajvan's Gadya-kāvya (containing prose stories), P. Śivarāma Śāstrī's Charita-ratnāvalī (2 Pts. on subjects from classical works and epics and purāṇas Viśvāmītra (Trivandrum, 1936) by N. Nilakaṇṭha Pillai, Parasurāma-charita (Tiruvayyaru, 1934) by Venkaṭarāma Śāstrī, Samskrīta-gadyavalī by P.V. Kāṇṇa, Kathā-ratnākara (1910) by M.K. Tirunārāyaṇa Iyengar, Arjuna and other accounts (Bangalore, 1953) by M. Rāmakṛishṇa Bhat; similarly there have been abridged presentation of versions of the works of Kālidāsa, Bhāsa, Bhavabhūti, Bāṇa, Subandhu, etc. by many distinguished writers, such as R.V. Kṛishṇamachariar, V.V. Mirashi, V. Anantāchārya, Y. Mahalinga Śāstrī, K.L.V. Śāstrī, Kailāsanātha, Śivarāma Śāstrī, S. Sūryanārāyaṇa

Śāstrī, etc., but there are quite a good number of modern short stories published in Sanskrit journals as also in separate collections. Aesop's Fables as also Tolstoy's stories have been translated into Sanskrit. Some important Sanskrit short story writers are: Kshamā Rāo, Kṛishṇalāl, Vamśigopala Śāstrī, etc.

Gadya-kāvya & Autobiographies :

In these fields, there have not been many works, but some important writers, who have written Gadya-kāvya are: Chandana Muni, Parikhi, Śvetaraṇyam Nārāyaṇa Yajvan, while Durgānanda Svāmī and Maṅgaladeva Shāstrī have published their autobiographies.

Essays :

Following the article in the periodical, the essay, as a form, was also separately developed. The growth of this form was also helped by the need for fresh prose texts for different school and college classes. The noteworthy writers in this field are: Hansraj Agarwal, Śrutikānta Śarmā, Maṅgaladeva Shāstrī, Ramesh Chandra Shukla, etc.

Travelogues :

Travel accounts have been published from time to time in Sanskrit journals, but there have been attempts in book-form as well; of these some works are: Setu-yātrā-varṇana by T. Gaṇapati Śāstrī, Tribilvadala-champū (1937, on all-India tour) by V.S. Rāmāswāmī Śāstrī, Uttarākhaṇḍa-yātrū by S.P. Bhaṭṭāchārya, Thaideśa-vilāsam and Śarmaṇja Deśaḥ Sutarām Vibhāti, both by Satya Vrat Shāstrī.

Science :

The Sanskrit journals have published from time to time accounts of scientific achievements in the field of Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Astronomy, Botany, Āyurveda, etc. Prominent works written during this period are: Kshetra-tattva-dīpikās (1823 and 1828); Pañcha-bhūta-padārtha (1859; Chemistry of the five elements accepted in Hindu Chemistry) by Viṭṭhala Śāstrī, Pratyaksha-sārira (1919, on Anatomy), Siddhānta-nidāna (1922; on Pathology), both by Gaṇanātha Sen, Anugraha-mīmāṇsā (1938; on Germ theory) by K.S. Nair, Siddha-vaidya (a work on Tamil Āyurvedic School) by Naṭarāja Śāstrī. There are works on Indus Valley Civilization: Sindhu-sabhyatā by Kedāranātha Shāstrī and on Psychology: Prāchīna Bhāratiya Manovijñāna (1972) by Dinesh Chandra Shāstrī.

Translations and Adaptations from other Languages :

Sanskrit has always kept relations with the literatures of other languages and has imbibed the best from them by rendering them into Sanskrit. The chief works tr. from Tāmil are: Tirukkural by Appā Vājpeyin (1927), Śaṅkar Subrahmanya Śāstrī and by Śrīrāma Desikan; Vaishṇavite canonical hymns of the Alvars (1930) by T. Narasimha Iyengar, by P.B. An aṅgārāchārias (1947 ff.), and by Venkaṭaramaṇāchārya, Kamban's Rāmāyaṇa by

S. Nilakaṇṭha Śāstrī, Śilapaddikāram by C. Nārāyaṇa Nair (1955), verses of the Tamil poetess Avvai by Mahāliṅga Śāstrī, tr. of the novel, Menakā by D.T. Tātāchārya; from Telugu: the famous Sataka-poems and other poems by S.T.G. Varadāchāriar and G.V. Sitapati; the romance Kalāpūrnodaya by Mallikārjuna Rāo and by S. Sūryanārāyaṇa Śāstrī, the Manu-charita by Dīkshitulu, S. Sūryanārāyaṇa Śāstrī by Seshā Śarmā, and by Yajñānārāyaṇa Dīkshīt; from Malayalam: works of the three Malayalam poets, Ullor Parameśvara Aiyer, Vallathol Nārāyaṇa Menon and Kumaran Asan by Ramana Nambootiri, some Malayalam works by Gopāla Pillai, a philosophical poem by N.D. Kṛishṇan Unni, a Malayalam drama, Sandhyā by Śrīkṛishṇa Śarmā; from Kannada: Iṇṇandara-vāṇi by K.T. Pāṇḍuraṅgi; from Marathi: Jñāneśvarī by Sakharāma Śāstrī Bhāgavata, the novel Balidāna by Latkar Śāstrī, two short plays by Mādhava Deshpāṇḍe, Kekāvali of Moropant by Sakurikar; from Bengali: Meghanādavadha by Nityagopāla Vidyāvinod (1954), the shorter prose works of Tagore by Phaṭikalāla Dās, Kapāla-kunḍalī of Bankim by Haricharaṇa Bhaṭṭāchārya (1926), as also Bankim's other novels by Śrīśaila Tātāchārya and by others, Gītāñjalī of Tagore by N. Gopāla Pillai; from Hindi: Bihārīdāsa's Satasai by Mathurānātha, and by Premanārāyaṇa Dvivedī (1970), Tulasīdāsa's Rāmacharitamānasa by Tiruvenkaṭāchārya, Jayaśāṅkara Prasāda's Kāmāyanī by Bhagavaddatta Shāstrī (1960-61), rendering from Kabīr by Tambe; from Urdu: Ghālib's poems by Kālānātha Śāstrī, and by Pushpa: a few poetic productions of Aurobindo by Kapāli Śāstrī under the title, Kavitāñjalī (1946); from Pali: Milindapañha by Vidhushekhara Bhaṭṭāchārya; Rubaiyāt of Omar Khayyam by Haricharaṇa Bhaṭṭāchārya, by Giridhara Śarmā, Rājagopāla Iyengar, Kṛishṇa Nair (1945) and by Sadāśiva Dange, of Alibābū and the Forty Thieves by G.K. Modaka (1934), of Alladin and the Wonderful Lamp, of Gulistān by R.V. Gokhale (1935) and by Rāmaswāmī, select hymns of Avesta by Khabardar; of 5 chapters of the Korān by Gunde Rao Harkare (1945) and of Arabian Nights by Lakshmana Shāstrī Telang (1967); from Russian: Tolstoy's stories by Bhagīratha Prasāda Tripāṭhī (1970) and by K.V. Subrahmaṇya Śāstrī; from German: Goethe's Faust by S.N. Tadpatrikar, Lessing's Emilia Galotti by Shāma Śāstrī; from English: Goldsmith's Deserted Village by Appā Sarmā (Dharwar, 1915), A Mid Summer Night's Dream by R. Kṛishṇamāchārya and by Gunde Rao Harkare (who also tr. some Acts of Euclid), Hamlet by Sukhamoy Mukherjee (1971), all the plays of Shakespeare by Ananta Sharmā Tripāṭhī, Comedy of Errors by Śrīśaila Dīkshitar, Othello by Rājārāja Varmā, some English works under Laghukāvya-māla by Rāmachandrāchārya, Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare by M. Venkaṭaramanāchārya, Tempest by Keśava Śarmā (1967), also of As You Like It, of Snaw's Apple Cart (1970) and Tennyson's The Cup by C. Venkataramanayya; some philosophical works were also rendered into Sanskrit: Berkeley's Principles of Human Knowledge, Locke's Essay Concerning Human Understanding, Bacon's Novum Organum (see Viṭṭhala); some works on modern and Western Philosophy (Nīti-śāstra by Viśvaśvara Siddhānta Śiromaṇi), were also written.

Perhaps it would be desirable to close this survey of Sanskrit literature by mentioning the latest poetical works so that a reader could have an idea that even after the full development of the literatures in regional languages, Mahākāvya and poems are still being composed. Of the Mahākāvya, the latest works are of a well-known Malayalam poet, K.N. Ezhuttachan's historical Mahākāvya, Keralodaya (1977), of P.C. Devassia's Kṛīṣṭu Bhāgavatam, a Mahākāvya in 32 cantos on the life of Christ, P.K. Nārāyaṇa Pillai's Viśvabhānu (1979) in 21 cantos on the life and works of Vivekānanda, Ramesh Chandra Śukla's Śrīkṛishṇa-charita (1979) on the life and exploits of Kṛishṇa, following mainly the version in the Bhāgavata, Rasik Vihārī

Joshi's Mohabhaigū in 8 cantos and Satya Vrat Shāstrī's Mahākāvya on Indirā Gāndhī and his Thāi-Deśa-vilāsam (1979). Other poems are Śāradādevī-charita-saṅgraha in 9 cantos by Devakī Menon, published by the Rāmakṛishna Maṭh, Madras (1978), Nalodanta (1977) by Gurusvāmī Sastrigal, Karuṇākāṭūksha-laharī, a devotional poem by Rasik Vihārī Joshi and the devotional poems, permeated with Kṛishṇa-bhakti by Ottur Unni Nambutirippād.

Sanskrit—A Prospective View :

Sanskrit, being the language of the Vedas, is perhaps the oldest language of the world. Buddhism and Jainism, which started with using the popular languages, could not by-pass Sanskrit to which they had eventually to come. Creative literature in Sanskrit continues to the present day: epics, poems, dramas, short stories, novels are still being written in the style of yore. Sanskrit thus is a language, which is remarkable for its antiquity as also for its continuity. Moreover, being the mother of the most of the Indian languages, it is still the strongest bond of the country's unity.

All that written above is true and it is equally true that critics like T.S. Eliot define the purpose of a drama in terms identical with what Bharata and Ānandavardhana enunciated, but to get Sanskrit a 'living status', something more has to be done. We should not content ourselves and feel elated what Goethe, Schopenhauer, William Jones or Max Müller have said about Sanskrit literature. About the sad plight of Sanskrit and its greatness, many works have been written, e.g., by R.V. Kṛishṇamāchārya, Punnasseri Nīlakaṇṭha Śarma, K.R. Nair, Prabhudatta Śāstrī, Rājarāja Varmā, etc., but there must be an improvement in its status. Apart from the rich classical Sanskrit Literature, the Vedas, Brāhmanas, Āraṇyakas, Upanishads, Purāṇas, Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata, Smṛitis, works on Philosophy, Āyurveda, Astronomy, etc. have been written in Sanskrit to which scholars of the succeeding generations will turn again and again. Besides this, there is a great amount of literature in Sanskrit, which can be termed 'scientific and technical'. Recently two works of the celebrated sage Bhāradvāja: Aṁśubodhini (on Physics) and Bṛihad-vimāna-śāstra on aeroplanes and flights from one planet to another (see Brahmamuni) have been discovered and there are still more works of this sage to be discovered. Moreover, an eminent savant, Dayānanda Sarasvatī, is of the view that the Vedas possess not only spiritual knowledge but also the fundamental principles of all social and natural sciences. If the Sanskrit literature is also studied from this angle. Sanskrit can claim its utility in the modern age.

PALI LITERATURE

Pali, the leading language of the Middle Indo-Aryan language group, is mainly the language of the Buddhist Literature, both canonical and non-canonical. The canonical literature comprises Tipiṭaka, the three baskets, which are named: Vinaya-piṭaka, Sutta-piṭaka and Abhidhamma-piṭaka. The Vinaya-piṭaka 'basket of the discipline of the Order', consisting of four parts: Pāṭimokkha, Sutta-vibhanga, Khandhaka, and Parivāra, contains all that refers to the monastic community (saṅgha): the rules of the discipline of the Order, precepts for the daily life of the monks and nuns, and so on. The second Piṭaka, Sutta-piṭaka, comprises five Nikāyas or "collections": the first four collections are the speeches and dialogues of Buddha or of his first disciples, while the fifth collection, Khuddaka-nikāya comprises 15 texts, among which are included the celebrated texts: Dhammapada (main teachings of Buddhism in an attractive style), Theragāthā (an expression in lyric form the inner experiences of the monks and containing super descriptions of Nature), Therīgāthā (one of the finest lyrics of Indian literature, embodying the personal joys and sorrows of the nuns), Jātaka (stories about the supposed previous births of the Buddha) and Apadāna (biographies of 550 men and 40 women of monastic Order).

The third canon, the Abhidhamma-piṭaka, consisting of seven works, treats of the same subjects as in the Sutta-piṭaka, but are treated in a more scholastic way. [Anesaki: Concordance of Pali Texts with Their Chinese Version; Frauwallner: The Earliest Vinaya and the Beginning of Buddhist Literature; Bode: Pali Literature of Burma (1909), Law: History of Pali Literature; Malalasekara: Pali Literature of Ceylon; Winternitz: History of Indian Literature (Vol. II)].

The non-canonical works in Pali may be classified under several categories as under:—

Works Preceding the Famous Commentators :

Among these works, the three are original and the others expository: three original are: Netti-pakarana ('Book of Guidance'), ascribed to Mahākachchāna, a treatise on the textual and exegetical methodology; its relation to Pali canon is like of Yāska's Nirukta to the Vedas, Peṭakopadesa, which declares that the main subject to be dealt with are the four noble truths which form the bedrock of Buddhism, and Milindapañha, on the questions of king Milinda and the answers given by Thera Nāgasena about certain difficult matters of Buddhism. As regards expository works, the Jātakatṭha-vaiṇāṇā is a widely-known work and is studied by all students of Pali Literature and contains 547 Jātakas or tales of former lives of Bodhisattva. This work is of immense value, not only as regards literature, but for the history of Indian civilization, reflecting as it does Indian life from the 3rd cent. B.C. to the 7th cent. A.D.

The Famous Commentators :

Of the three famous commentators, Buddhagatta, Buddhaghosha and Dhammapāla, Buddhagatta is reputed to be the author of a few works as Vinaya-vinichchaya, which summarises the Vinaya-piṭaka; the second commentator, Buddhaghosha, in addition to his commentaries on several works of the Tipiṭaka, has produced a masterpiece in his Visuddhimagga (q.v.). All his commentaries embody the older commentaries that were current in Ceylon, as also traditional interpretations accumulated among the monks during the preceding centuries. The third famous commentator is Dhammapāla, who wrote commentaries on Vimāna-vatthu, Theragāthā and Therīgāthā, and on several other texts.

Besides the above eminent commentators, there are several other less-known commentators, such as Upasena and Mahānāma.

Historical Works :

The chief historical works are: Dipavaṁsa (a chronicle of the Island of Ceylon, which gives an account of the introduction of Buddhism), Mahāvaṁsa (a coherent, refined and enlarged version of Dipavaṁsa) and Chūlavāṁsa (a supplement to the Mahāvaṁsa). While containing many fables and myths, they throw a flood of light on the history of Buddhism. The other historical works are: Dāṭhā-vam̐sa (on the tooth-relic and history of Ceylon), Sāsana-vam̐sa (on the history of Buddhism in India up to the third Buddhist Council, in Ceylon and other lands as also the history of Buddhism in Burma), Mahābodhī-vam̐sa (describing the Bo-tree of Anurādhapura), Gandha-vam̐sa (dealing mainly with the history of Pali books written in Burma and Ceylon), Chhakesa-dhātu-vam̐sa (describing topes built on the hair-relic of the Buddha), Hattha-vam̐galla-vihāra-vam̐sa (on the mansions built for the performance of religious rites), Buddhaghosupatti (containing some biographical accounts of the renowned commentator), Suddhamma-sangaha (on history of Buddhism), Sandesa-kathā, etc.

Poetical Works :

The noteworthy poetical works are: Buddharakkhita's Jinālaṅkāra (on the life of Buddha), Kassapa's Anāgata-vam̐sa, Jina-charita by Vanaratna (on the biography of Buddha, betraying the influence of Buddha-charita), Telakaṭṭha-gāthā (it is said that the author was thrown into a large pan of hot oil as punishment for his alleged illicit sexual connection with a queen), Pajjamadhu (on Buddha's graceful appearance and knowledge), Rasavāhinī (consisting of 103 stories relating to Jambudvīpa and Ceylon) and Samanta-kūṭṭavaṇṇanā, both by Vedeha, Saddhammopāyana (on descriptions of principal topics connected with Buddhism) and Pañcha-gati-dīpana (on the result of good and bad deeds).

Compendiums :

Of the Compendiums, mention may be made of Sachcha-saṅkhepa (having truth as its subject-matter, as also discussing destruction of attachment and delusion, etc.), Abhidhamma-sangaha (dealing inter-alia with the constituents of mind, the two-fold objects, memory, dream and other conditions of Chetaṇā), Nāmarūpa-parichchheda (a summary of Abhidhamma-piṭaka), Nāmarūpa-samāsa (dealing with Chitta and Chetasika-kathā), Sutta-sangaha (containing valuable information about the religious works of the Buddhists within a brief compass), Paritta or Mahāparitta (widely used by the populace in Burma and Ceylon for rites relating to exorcism), Khuddaka-sikkhā and Mūla-sikkhā (both written nearly 900-920 years after the demise of the Buddha, and are compendiums relating to Vinaya).

Works of Technical Nature :

Works on technical sciences are scanty and almost all of them are on the models of similar works in Sanskrit. Thus Pali grammar is represented by Kachchāyana and works of his school, by Moggallāna and works of his school and by the Saddanīti of Aggavarṇsa (11th cent.); metrics by Vuttodaya and Chhandovichiti; rhetorics by Subodhālaṅkāra of Saṅgharakkhita and lexicography by Abhidhāna-ppadīpikā of Moggallāna and Ekakkhara-koṣa by Saddhammakitti Thera [Rhys-Davids: Critical Pali-English Dictionary; Malalasekara: Dictionary of Pali Proper Names; Childers: Dictionary of Pali Language; Clough: A Compendious Pali Grammar; Duroiselle: A Practical Grammar of the Pali Language; Geiger: Pali Literature and Language; Law: History of Pali Literature; Dharmarakshita: Pali Vyākaraṇa; Waldschmidt: Introduction to Pali; Warder: Introduction to Pali and Pali Metre].

Besides the above literary works, there is a rich epigraphical literature in Pali.

PRAKRIT LITERATURE

Prakrit, the second important language of the Middle-Indo-Aryan group, had several dialects: Śaurasenī (of the region around Mathurā, in the present Uttar Pradesh, which in olden times, was known as Central or Madhyadeśa), Māgadhī (around Magadha, i.e., modern Bihar), Māhārāshṭrī (region around Mahārāshtra). According to historical chronological classifications, old Prakrit is called Pālī, middle Prakrit is in its three dialects mentioned above and late Prakrit is Apabhraṃśa, in its various forms: Vrāchata or Vrāchaḍa, Nāgara and Upanāgara. One dialect of Māgadhī Prakrit is called Ardhamāgadhi which, having been used mostly by the Jainas, was called Jaina Prakrit by Jacobi. A peculiar dialect, showing considerable divergence from the above is Paisāchī, the language of the Bṛihatkatha.

Prakrit works may also be divided into two broad classes: canonical and non-canonical. The canonical literature comprises the religious works of the two sects of the Jainas—Śvetāmbara and Digambara. The works of the Svetāmbara sect are known as Siddhānta (q.v.) or Āgamas and consist of 12 Āṅgas, 12 Upāṅgas, 10 Pañnas, 6 Chheyaśuttas, 4 Mūlasuttas, Nandisuttas and Anuyogadāra. The names and the number of works, comprised in the above classes, are not uniform every where, their number varying from 45 to 50. The canon was fixed, in its present form by the 6th cent. A.D., although some portions may date from the 3rd cent. B.C. The principal topics, discussed in these works, are the analysis of the main tenets of Jainism, monastic rules, the way of life of the Jaina ascetics, the conduct of ordinary Jainas, their activities, re-birth, dogmatics, philosophy, cosmology, gnomic sayings, folktales, encyclopaedic enumerations and legends about Jaina devotees. Diversification has been attempted by introducing story stories and legends. In the narrative portion, there are some new creations and borrowings from the Rāmāyana and the Mahābhārata. As regards the literary value of the canonical works, it varies greatly and some of the older texts, such as the Āyāoga, Sāvaga-ḍaṅga and Uttarajjhavāna-sutta, sometimes reach a high poetic standard, while others, such as Aṇuttaravāivadaśao consist of little more than a series of stereotyped accounts of devotees, who starved themselves to death.

The earliest commentaries on this canon, the upattis (Skt. Nayakṣ), charyas and bhāṣyas, are noted for the wealth of ancient historical and semi-historical traditions and the mass of folk-tales they contain. Two notable writers, who wrote commentaries are Bhadrabāhu (300 B.C.) and Jinabhadra Kṣhamaśarmāna (A.D. 609). Many of the Prakrit folk-tales are incorporated in the later Sanskrit commentaries of Haribhadra (8th cent.) and of others.

So far the religious literature of the Digambaras is concerned, it consists of Prathamānuyoga (containing 10-Purāṇic stories), Karāṇānuyoga (dealing with cosmogony and cosmology), Dravyānuyoga (philosophical works, including those of Kundakunda) and Churanānuyoga (on religious rites). The above classes are also designated as Chaturveda or the Four Vedas. One of the earliest Digambara authors is Kundakunda (perhaps 1st cent. A.D.), whose works include Samaya-sāra, Pravachana-sāra, etc. Later, Digambara philosophical writings include the Yoga-sāra, and Paramatma-prakāśa by Jeindu (6th to 10th cent.). [Jagdish Chandra Jain: Life in Ancient India As Depicted in the Jaina Canons (1947). Tank: Dictionary of Jaina Biography].

It is not definitely known when the non-canonical works began to be composed. In the Paṭṭāvalis and Theravālis, we get some information about the teachers and prominent personages of the different Jaina sects. Literary tradition records a work, entitled Bṛhatkathā (1st to 4th cent. A.D.), attributed to one Guṇāḍhya (Prasad : Studies in Guṇāḍhya) and stated to have been written in Paisāchī Prakrit, which is irretrievably lost. There are, however, three Sanskrit versions of it available today (see Bṛhatkathā).

The non-canonical works in Prakrit can be broadly divided into the following categories:—

Narrative :

Among such poetical works, the well-known are: Paūma-chariya (or Padma-charita) by Vimala Sūri (1st cent. of Christian Era) on the Rāmāyana story from the Jaina viewpoint, Setubandha (or Rāvaṇa-vaha or Dahamula-vaha) by Pravarasena (fl. before 7th cent.) on the Rāmāyana story, Gauḍavaho by Vākpatirāja (A.D. 725), a eulogy of king Yaśovarman of Kanauj, Śīlāchārya's Chauppaṇa-mahāpurīṣa-chariya (869), on the 54 eminent Jaina personages (see Bhojaka, Bruhm), Mahāvīra-charita by Guṇachandragani (1082) on the life of Mahāvīra, Kumārapāla-charita by Hemachandra (12th cent.), giving an account of king Kumārapāla, Supāsanāha-chariya (1142) by Lakshmanagani on the life of the seventh Tīrthaṅkara, Sumatinātha-charitra by Somaprabha (12th cent.) on the biography of the 5th Tīrthaṅkara, as also Kumārapāla-pratibodha (on conversion of king Kumārapāla to Jainism), Taraṅgalolū (a shorter version of Taraṅgavatī by Pādalipta Sūri written before 5th cent. but is lost) on the story of a female Jaina ascetic, Surasundarī-chariya by Dhaneśvara (11th cent.), Harivaṁśapurāṇa by Jinasena, a Jaina adaptation of the Mahābhārata in 66 cantos, composed in A.D. 738, and Samarācchha-kahā by Haribhadra (8th cent.; a champū). The latest poetical works are Kaṁsavaho and Ushāniruddha by Rāmapāṇivāda (fl. middle 18th cent.).

Lyrical :

To the lyrical literature, the contribution of the Jainas is commendable. Of the religious lyrics, the most celebrated is the Uvasaggahara-stotra (300 B.C.), the earliest Jaina hymn in Prakrit, which eulogises Pārśvanātha. Other noteworthy poems of this class are: Ajīya-Sānti-thaya by Nandishepa (10th cent.) in honour of 2nd Tīrthaṅkara, Ajita, Bhayaḥara-stotra by Mānatuṅga (fl. earlier than 1000) in honour of Jina Pārśvanātha, Rishabhā-pañcāśikā by Dhanapāla (10th cent.) in honour of Rishabhā, the 1st Tīrthaṅkara, Jaya-tihuvana-stotra by Abhayadeva (11th cent.; the author is said to have been cured of a certain malady by composing this hymn), Ullāsikkama-thava by Jinavallabha (early 12th cent.) in honour of Ajita and Sānti, the second and the sixteenth Tīrthaṅkaras respectively, Isiṁaṇḍala by Dharmaghoṣa on ancient Jaina preceptors, Mahāvīra-stava (12th or 13th cent.) and Shāḍbhāṣikā-nirmīta-pārśvajina-stavana by Dharmavardhana (c. 13th cent.), in which six languages: Sanskrit, Māhārāṣṭrī, Māgadhī, Śaurasenī, Paisāchī and Apabhraṁśa have been used.

Didactic :

Of the didactic poems, mention should be made of Uvaesa-mālū (= Upadeśa-mālā) by Dharmadāsa Gapi (perhaps a contemporary of Mahāvīra) on teaching Jainism and giving advice to the Jaina monks and the laity, Kumārapāla-pratibodha (1185) by Somaprabha on initiation of king Kumārapāla to Jainism by Hemachandra, Kathākośa by Śrīchandra (12th cent.), Bhavavairāgya-śataka (12th-13th cent.), an anthology, which preaches that Jainism is the sole means of the cessation of worldly sufferings, Silovaesamālā by Jayakīrti (fl. before 1337) and Gāthāsūhasrī (1630) by Samayasundara.

Anthologies :

Of Prakrit anthologies, the noted ones are: Vajjālagga by Jayavallabha (11th-12th cent.) on various matters, and curiously enough the predominant sentiment is erotic, and Prākṛita-śūkta-ratnamālā by Puran Chānd, compiled in 1919. But the most celebrated Prakrit anthology is Sattasai or Gāthā-saptaśatī, which was compiled by the Sātavāhana king Hāla (fl. A.D. 100-300) of Pratiśṭhānpur in Deccan.

*Kathanakas :

Among the several Kathānakas, or short stories, mention may be made of: Kālakāchārya-kathānaka (10th cent.) by an anonymous author, Kathākośa (11th cent.) also by, an anonymous author, Kumārapāla-charita (12th cent.) Kathāmahodadhi (1488) by Somachandra and Kathā-ratnākara (17th cent.) by Hemavijayagaṇi.

Drama :

Though the humbler characters of Aśvaghosha, Bhāsa and Kālidāsa speak Prakrit, the only noteworthy drama in Prakrit is Karpūra-mañjarī (9th or 10th cent.) by Rājaśekhara, in which the king speaks in Prakrit.

Grammar, Lexicography, Metrics and Rhetorics :

Apart from Bharata's Nāṭya-śāstra and Kṛṣṇadiśvara's Sankshipta-sūtra (12th or 13th cent.), which discuss Prakrit grammar in portions thereof, there is Prākṛita-lakshana, wholly devoted to Prakrit grammar and which is ascribed to Pānini, the celebrated author of Ashṭādhyāyī. Other noted works on Prakrit grammar are: Prākṛita-prakāśa by Vararuchi, Prākṛita-lakshana by Chaṇḍa, Siddha-hema-chandra-śabdūnuśāsana by Hemachandra (12th cent.), Prākṛita-vyākaraṇa, Prākṛita-sarvasva by Mārkaṇḍeya Kavindra, Prākṛita-kalpataru by Rāma Tarkavāgīśa and Shat-bhūshā-chandrikā by Lakshmidhara. [Mehendale: Historical Grammar of Inscriptional Prakrits; Jhā, M.: Mūgadhī and Its Formation (Calcutta, 1967); Katre: Prakrit Languages and Their Contribution to Indian Culture; Pischel: Comparative Grammar of the Prakrit Languages; Sukumar Sen: A Comparative Grammar of Middle Indo-Aryan (1951); Woolner: Introduction to Prakrit].

The noted Prakrit lexicons are: Paiyalachchi-nāmamālā by Dhanapāla (10th cent.) and Deśi-nāmamālā by Hemachandra (12th cent.) and Abhidhūna-rājendra [Ardha-māgadhi Dictionary; Seth : Paia-sadda-mahaṇṇavo].

The chief work on Prakrit metrics is : Prākṛita-piṅgala, ascribed to Piṅgala by some, while a work on poetics, attributed to Hari is lost; there is the Alanikāra-dappana of an unknown author

Geography, Cosmogony and Astronomy :

The Jainas have also written some works on the above topics, the chief ones being : Jambudvīpa-prajñapti, Sūrya-prajñapti, Chandra-prajñapti (see Uvaṅga) and Tiloyapaṇṇatti. [Bhaṭṭācārya : A Comprehensive Study of the Indian Science Thought from the Jaina Standpoint; Jaina, G.R. : Cosmology : Old and New (Gwalior, 1942)].

Philosophy and Ethics :

Apart from the works of Kundaknnda (fl. early centuries of Christian Era) and of Devendra Sūri (fl. 13th cent.) the chief works are : Trivarnīchāra, Kattigeyānupekkha, Darśana-sūtra, Davva-saṅgaha, Pañcha-saṅgraha, Jīva-viyāra, Bhava-bhāvanā, and two polemic works : Kupaksha-kaushika-sahasrakiraṇa and Adh. Ātma-Parikshā. [Jagdish Chandra Jaina : Prākṛita-sāhitya-kū Itihāsa; Jhaveri, H.L. : First Principles of Jaina Philosophy; Narendra Nāth : Historical Outlines of Jaina Philosophy; Tatia : Studies in Jaina Philosophy (1951); Upādhye, A.N. : Prakrit Language and Literature (1975); Winternitz : History of Indian Literature (Vol. II)].

Inscriptions :

There is a large number of epigraphs in Prakrit; of the inscriptions of Aśoka, the most noteworthy are those of Shābbazgarh, Mansehra, Girnar, Kālasi and Orissa, while among the post-Aśokan inscriptions, the chief ones are of king Khāravela at the gate of Hāthigumphā cave on Udayagiri hill near Cuttack, in the Jogimara Cave of Ramgarh hill and the Nasik inscription.

APABHRAṂŚA LITERATURE

The Jainas, in order to propagate Jainism, composed their own versions of the Rāmāyana and the Mahābhārata; the works based on the Rāmāyana are : Paṇḍita-chariṭ by Svayambhu (8th-9th cent.), Paṇḍita-purāna by Raidhu (probably 16th cent.), while on the Mahābhārata story are based : Harivamśa-purāna by Svayambhū, and by Dhavala (10th-11th cent.), Pandava-purāna by Yaśahkīrti; the Mahāpurāna by Pushpadanta (10th cent.) deals with both the Rama and the Kṛṣṇa legends.

The biographical and narrative poetical works of the Jainas are : Jasaharu-chariṭ, Nāyakumāra-chariṭ, both by Pushpadanta, Kanakāmara's Karakanda-chariṭ (11th cent.), Sudāmsana-churiṭ by Nayanandī Muni (1043), Nemināhu-chariṭ by Haribhadra and Lakshmaṇadeva, Neminātha-chaupai by Vinayachandra Sūri, Bhavisyatta-kahā by Dhanapāla (10th cent.), Karṇākosa by Śrīchandra, etc.

The Jaina authors composed some spiritual and mystic works, such as Paramātma-prakāśa, Yoga-sūtra, Sravakūchāra-dohaka, Dohā-pāhuḍa, all by Joindu (6th cent.), while on the didactic poetry, their chief works are : Upadeśa-rasāyana-rasa, Kāla-svarūpa-kulaka and Chachchari, all by Jinadatta Sūri, Saṅjama-mañjarī by Mahesara Sūri, Vairāgya-sāra by Suprabhācārya, etc. Some dohās have been composed in Apabhraṁśa, notably Dohā-pāhuḍa by Joindu, Dohasūtra by Yogichandra Muni and Dohā-kośa by Saraha or Sarahapā.

The lyrical poem, the only secular work of the Rāsa type is represented by Abdur Rehman's Samneha-rāsaka or Sandeśa-rāsaka.

There is exclusively no grammar for Apabhraṃśa, but Hemachandra's Śabdānuśāsana treats of Apabhraṃśa grammar as well. [Tagare: Historical Grammar of Apabhraṃśa; Harivansh Kochhar : Apabhraṃśa Sāhitya-kā Itihāsa; Winternitz : History of Indian Literature (Vol. II)].

While Apabhraṃśa represents the last stage of Prakrit, Vidyāpati's Kirtilatā and Kīrtipatākā are renowned works in Avahatṭa, the latest stage of Apabhraṃśa and the immediate predecessor of the New Indo-Aryan Languages.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF SCHOLARS

During the last 200 years or so, a great amount of critical work has been done by foreign and Indian scholars. How the Western scholars came to discover India's rich literary heritage, is a saga of romance. There is no need to go into its origin, but the name of Charles Wilkins stands apart, who, after taking instructions from the Paṇḍits in Benaras published in 1785 an English translation of the Bhagavadgītā. Four years later was published by Sir William Jones, the English translation of Kālidāsa's Śakuntalā; it was the German version of this translation, which awakened in the highest degree the enthusiasm of men like Herder and Goethe. To the Schelegal brothers also, the Indian literature had a special appeal. The role played by Franz Bopp, the founder of Comparative Philology, was that of a sober investigator. Prince Dārā Shukoh in the 17th century had translated the Upanishads into Persian, which were further rendered into Latin by the French scholar, Anquetil d'Peron, under the title 'Oupnek'hat' (Paris, 1801-1802). This translation elicited the highest praise from German philosophers, especially from Schopenhauer, who declared Upanishads to be "the production of highest human wisdom". The contributions made by the eminent Indologists : Chezy and Burnouf in inspiring European scholars to the study of Indian literature are tremendous. Two famous pupils of Burnouf were Rudolph Roth and Max Müller. Roth, along with Otto Bohtlingk, compiled the largest Sanskrit Dictionary, Sanskrit Worterbuch, while Max Müller's monumental works are the publication of the Sacred Books of the East (50 Vols.) and of the Rigveda, with Sāyaṇa Bhāṣya. In the years 1891, 1896 and 1903, appeared Catalogus Catalogorum, which contains an alphabetical list of all Sanskrit works and authors, based on the investigations of all the available catalogues of manuscripts, at which Aufrecht worked for over forty years (see Rāghavan : New Catalogus Catalogorum). Among the early pioneers, the contributions of Weber and Bühler are outstanding. The investigation of Buddhist literature has been greatly furthered by the Pali Text Society founded in the year 1882 by T.W. Rhys-Davids. Weber opened up for research another great branch of literature, the writings of the Jainas, with his great treatise on the sacred writings of the Jainas. The three Volumes of Winternitz's History of Indian Literature make a valuable record of what has been achieved in the field of Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa literatures. Since the publication of this history, further critical work has been done up to the year 1981. Surely, in a handy volume of this Encyclopedia, it is possible to give details only of important contributions. Some important works for further study have been suggested in the 'Preface' and in the 'Introduction', but for a detailed study, one is advised to go through the relevant articles.

Works on Religion, Mythology and Culture, except a few, could not be covered earlier in the 'Introduction' and as such, by way of suggestive reading, some are given below :—

- Barth : The Religions of India.
 Basham : Concise Encyclopaedia of Living Faiths.
 : Sources of Indian Tradition.
 : The Wonder that was India.
 Bergaine : Vedic Religion.
 Bhandarkar, R.G. : Vaishnavism, Śaivism and Minor Religious Systems.
 Bhargava P.L. : India in the Vedic Age.
 : Cultural Heritage of India.
 Dandekar : Vedic Religion and Mythology.
 Farquhar : Outline of the Religious Literature of India.
 : Modern Religious Movements in India
 Hirālāl Jain : Bhāratiya Saṃskṛti meṃ Jaina Dharma kā Yogadāna.
 : History and Culture of the Indian People (Vols. I—XI).
 Hopkins : The Religions of India.
 : Epic Mythology.
 Macdonell : Vedic Mythology.
 Malalasekara : Encyclopaedia of Buddhism.
 Monier-Williams : Religious Thought and Life in India.
 Poussin : See article on him.
 Rādhā Kumud Mookerjī : Hindu Civilization.
 Raychaudhuri : Materials for the Study of the Early History of the Vaiṣṇava Sect.
 Renou : Religions of Ancient India.
 : Civilization of Ancient India.
 Rhys-Davids, T.W. : History and Literature of Buddhism.
 Rhys-Davids, A.F. : Outline of Buddhism: A Historical Sketch.
 Robinson : The Buddhist Religion—A Historical Introduction.
 Saletore : Ancient History and Culture.
 Sangharakshita Bhikṣu : A Survey of Buddhism.
 Sukumār Dutt : Buddhist Monks and Monasteries of India.
 Thomas, E.J. : History of Buddhist Thought.
 Upādhyāya, K.N. : Early Buddhism and the Bhagavadgītā.
 Uttam Kamal Jain : Jaina Sects and Schools.
 Schubring : The Doctrine of the Jains.
 Sen, A. : Schools and Sects in Jaina Literature.
 Shaba : Jainism in North India.
 Slater : World Religions and World Community.
 Stevenson : The Heart of Jainism.
 Velankar : Jinaratna-kośa.
 Wales : The Making of Greater India.
 Walters : The Essence of Buddhism.
 Warder : Indian Buddhism (1970).

Warren: Buddhism in Translations.

: The Life of the Buddha.

Wayman: The Buddhist Tantras: Light on Indo-Tibetan Esoterism.

Weber: History of Jain Literature.

Weiner: Ajanta—Its Place in Buddhist Art.

Welbon: The Buddhist Nirvāṇa and the Western Interpretation.

Wheeler, J.T.: India of the Vedic Age.

Wheeler, Mortimer: Indus Civilization.

Wilkins: Hindu Mythology : Vedic and Purāṇic.

: Modern Hinduism.

Williams, R.: Jaina Yoga.

Wilson: Religious Sects of the Hindus.

: Religions of India.

: Hindu Mythology.

Winternitz: Jainas in the History of Indian Literature.

Woodroffe: Introduction to Tantra Śāstra.

Yamada Ryujo: Bibliographical Survey of Buddhist Sanskrit Texts (in Japanese).

Younger, Paul: The Indian Religious Tradition.

Zurcher: The Buddhist Conquest of China.

A

AALTO, PENTTI (1917-). A Finnish Indologist, whose publications cover a wide range in Indo-European and Altaic linguistics and Philology. From the Indological point of view, the most important are his studies and editions of the Mongolian trs. of Buddhist texts such as the Pañcharakshā, Survarna-prabha-sūtra, Subhāṣitaratna-nidhi and Āṭvā-kāvadānu. Aalto has also written papers on such topics as the consumption of alcohol in ancient India, the connections between the Finnish and Aryan mythology, the conditional in the Buddhist Sanskrit, etc., and a number of reviews.

ABDUR REHMĀN (fl. 12th cent.). A Muslim Apabhramśa poet, who was well-versed in Sanskrit, Prakrit and Apabhramśa. He is the author of Samneha-rasaka or Sandeśa-rāsaka (q.v.), the only secular Apabhramśa work of the Rāsa type.

ABEGG, ERNEST (1876-1966). A Swiss Indologist, who was interested in religion, philosophy, psychology and linguistics. He studied Sanskrit at Zuerich University and continued his Sanskrit studies in Leipzig under E. Windisch (q.v.). In 1919 he qualified as Professor at Zuerich University and his thesis was Der Pretakalpa des Garuḍa Purāṇa (Berlin, 1921); the work is based on the 'Uttarākhaṇḍa' of the Garuḍa Purāṇa and on Naunidhidhara's Sarodhara, both dealing with funeral rites, the worship of the dead and beliefs concerning the Beyond. During the course of his University career, Abegg lectured on a number of linguistic subjects—on Sanskrit, Prakrit, Pali, Avesta and Pehlevi, as well as on psychology of language and typology of languages. His Der Messiasglaube in Indien und Iran (1928; 2nd ed. Berlin 1956) discusses the last incarnation of Viṣṇu, Kalki, the Buddhist conception of Maitreya, and the Zoroastrian doctrines concerning Saoshyant. The treatise is based on original sources in Sanskrit, Pali, Saka-Khotanese, Tibetan, Chinese, Zend, and Pehlevi. In 1945 he published Indische Psychologie (tr. into Spanish: Buenos Aires, 1960); its five chapters deal with 1. Vedas and Upanishads.

2. Vedānta, 3. Sāṅkhya, 4. Philosophy of Nature, Materialism, and Jainism, and 5. Buddhism. Abegg was co-editor of the Swiss journal "Asiatische Studien"; its 1954 Volume was dedicated to Abegg on the occasion of his 70th birthday; it contains a bibliography of his works.

ABHAYACHANDRĀCHĀRYA (fl. perhaps 14th cent.). A Sanskrit writer on grammar, whose Prakriyā-saṅgraha is the best of the recasts of Śākaṭyāyana-śabdānuśāsana (q.v.). Modelled on works like Prakriyā-kaumudī (q.v.), it omits a large number of original sūtras unnecessary in a work for beginners and amplifies a few others.

ABHAYADEVA (d. 1082). A Prakrit poet and author of Jaya-tihayana-stotra (q.v.) as also of several other works, most of which are comms. on Jaina canonical texts. Son of Śreṣṭhīn Dhana and Dhanadevī, pupil of Jineśvara and Buddhīśāgara, he was successor of Jinachandra, predecessor of Jivavallabha and was known as Navangi-commentator.

ABHAYADEVA (fl. 1221). A Jaina Sanskrit poet, who earned the title of 'Vādīśrīṃha' from the king of Kuśī. He is the author of Jayanta-vijaya (q.v.), a 19-canto poem or the life of Jayanta, composed in A.D. 1221.

A Vedic scholar, who was also Āchārya of Gurukula Kangri, Haridwar. His chief works in Hindi are: Vaidika-vinaya (a Vedic anthology, 3 pts., 1931 ff.) and Brāhmaṇa kī Gau (a study of Vedic mantras).

ABHAYANANDI (fl. c. 1250). A Sanskrit grammarian and author of a comm. on the Jainendra-vyākaraṇa (q.v.).

ABHIDHAMMA-KATHĀ. A Pali prose work by Bhaddāra, a pupil of Siddhattha Thera. Extracted from Atthasālinī (q.v.), it serves as a guide to Buddhist metaphysics for beginners, its date is uncertain.

ABHIDHAMMA-MĀTIKĀ. A summary of the Abhidhamma-piṭaka (q.v.).

ABHIDHAMMA-MŪLAṬĪKĀ. See Ānanda.

ABHIDHAMMA-PIṬAKA. The third and the last canon of the Buddhist literature in Pali, forming a part of Tiṭṭhaka (q.v.).

Composed chiefly in catechistic form, the subjects are the same as in the Sutta-piṭaka, but are treated in a more scholastic way. The subject-matter is chiefly derived from the Sutta-piṭaka in which are found the beginnings of the Abhidhamma and Vinaya-piṭaka. The Abhidhamma may be said to be merely the extension of the mātikās or lists mentioned in the Vinaya. It comprises the following seven works, known as Sattapakarana, in the traditional order :

(i) Dhamma-saṅganī, a handbook, dealing briefly with psychological ethics and is intended for the advanced monk; it was particularly popular in Ceylon through centuries.

(ii) The Vibhaṅga deals with the categories and formulas introduced in the Dhamma-saṅganī with some new terms and new definitions : it is divided into 18 chapters, each having three portions.

(iii) The Dhātukathā is a discourse on the Elements, written in 14 chapters and is a sort of supplement to the Dhamma-saṅganī.

(iv) The Puggala-pannatti deals with the description of human individuals and classifies individuals like monks and others according to their ethical qualities.

(v) The Kathā-vatthu or the Vijñānapada deals with the subjects of discourse ; it consists of 23 sections each of which contains 8 to 12 questions and answers, in which views against the Buddha and Buddhism are first presented but are confuted and rejected. It is ascribed to Moggalliputta Tissa, President of the Third Council and throws valuable light on the development of Buddhist dogmatics during the later centuries.

(vi) The Yamaka is so called because all the questions are presented and explained in two ways ; psychological, ethical and eschatological matters are frequently discussed. The contents are similar to that of Dhātu-kathā.

(vii) The Paṭṭhāna deals with the investigation of the 24 kinds of relationship which are assumed between the corporeal and sychical phenomena, e.g., relationship of subject and object, the ruler and the ruled, with the sole exception of Nirvāṇa that is absolute. There is nothing which is not related to something else in one of the 24 ways.

All these books are later in date containing a more elaborate and classified exposition of the Dhamma than given in the Nikāyas. 'There is hardly any originality or profundity in the Abhidhamma books. There is no trace of any scientific reasoning or research in the definitions and classifications; mere dogmatism appears to have formed their basis'. —HCIP, II, 407. There are several comms. on this work. For date of the Abhidhamma, see Tipiṭaka.

ABHIDHAMMA-SAṄGAHA. A Pali manual, same as Abhidhammattha-saṅgaha, which, according to Ceylonese tradition, was written in the 1st cent. B.C., but Winternitz places the work in the 12th cent. A.D. Attributed to Anuruddha (c. 1100), it is an epitome of the Abhidhamma (q.v.). Its subject-matter being very much alike that of the Visuddhi-magga (q.v.), it deals, inter alia, with psychology and ethic from the Buddhist point of view. Written at Polanaruwa Vihāra, according to Burmese tradition, there are several comms. on it.

ABHIDHAMMA-VIBHĀVANĪ. Same as Abhidhammattha-vibhavanī (q.v.).

ABHIDHAMMATTHA-KATHĀ. A Pali comm. by Anuruddha (fl. c. 1100) on Abhidhamma-piṭaka (q.v.).

ABHIDHAMMATTHA-SAṄGAHA. See Abhidhamma-saṅgaha.

ABHIDHAMMĀVATĀRA. A Pali comm. in prose and verse, by Buddhadatta (q.v.) on the Abhidhamma-piṭaka (q.v.); it also gives a summary of the comms. on the Abhidhamma. It expounds the Abhidhamma with the four-fold division of the compound, viz., mind, mental properties, material qualities and nibbāna and appears to be better than that of Buddhaghosha in terms of five divisions. Buddhadatta obviously profited by the labours of his great predecessor; there are comms. on this work also.

ABHIDHAMMATTHA-VIBHĀVANĪ. A comm. in Pali by Sumaṅgala Sāmi (q.v.) of Ceylon on the Abhidhamma-piṭaka (q.v.).

ABHIDHĀNA-CHINTĀMAṆĪ. A Sanskrit lexicon by Hemachandra (q.v.), dealing with synonyms. Consisting of nearly 1542 stanzas, divided into six Kāṇḍas or sections, it contains an introduction and deals with different word-types. Of its sections, the first one is devoted to Jaina gods and religious terms, the second to Hindu and Buddhist gods and terms, the third to human beings in their various relations, the fourth to animals, the fifth to residents of the underworld and the sixth to abstract notions, adjectives and indeclinables; the author himself wrote a comm. on this work. In addition, he gives much information on various aspects, partly from his ownself, and partly from others. As a supplement to Abhidhāna-chintāmaṇi, Hemachandra wrote also the Nighaṇṭuśeṣa, a botanical dictionary in 396 ślokas.

ABHIDHĀNA-PRADĪPIKĀ. A celebrated Pali lexicon compiled by Mogallāna of Ceylon (fl. end of 12th cent.), who is to be distinguished from the grammarian of the same name. Largely modelled on the Sanskrit Amarakośa (q.v.), it is divided into three parts which deal with synonyms, homonyms and indeclinables respectively; Ferner has provided a complete index to it. There are a few comms. on the work, including one by Paṇḍāsāmi Thera.

ABHIDHĀNA-RĀJENDRA. See Vijayarājendra Sūri.

ABHIDHĀNA-RATNAMĀLĀ. A Sanskrit lexicon by Halāyudha (fl. 10th cent., q.v.), who has followed the authority of Amara-datta, Vararuchi Bhāguri and Vopālita. The arrangement of this work is almost like that of the Amarakośa (q.v.). The synonymous portion extends over four kāṇḍas called

Svarga, Bhūmi, Patala and Samanya, and is followed by the Ankathakānda, the fifth and the last which form the homonymous portion including the indeclinables ABHIDHARMAKOSĪ A Sanskrit philosophical work by Visubandhu (q.v.), which mentions tenets of the Sarvastivādin and other schools of Hinayāna Buddhism. Its last chapter deals with the Buddhist doctrine of soul, i.e., denial of a permanent soul. In its 600 memorial karikas (verses), with the author's own comm., the work deals with the entire field of ontology, psychology, cosmology, ethics and the doctrine of salvation. The original Sanskrit work is no longer extant, only the Abhidharmaśāstra by Yaśomitra is known to us. The Chinese and Tibetan versions of the original are, however, available, the earliest Chinese tr. being by Paramārtha (c. 550-560). A second Chinese tr. (c. 1500) by Hsueh Tsang wherein are mentioned the debates between the Vaibhishikas and the Sautrantikas.

ABHIDHĀRI RĪTĪ MĒTRIKĀ A Sanskrit work on the grammatical-theoretical question of Abhidhā and Itikāpa, written by Mukulabhatta (q.v.) in 15 Kārikas with Vṛtti.

ABHINĪVA SĀKUNTALA See Śakuntala

ABHINĪVAŚĪTĀKṬHA CHINTĀMANI See Mānasollasa

ABHINANDA (fl. 9th cent.) A Sanskrit poet who refers to Rajasekhara as a contemporary and is quoted by Abhinavagupta in his Locana. His father, Javantabhatta in his Viśvaśāntī (q.v.) refers to Sankaravarman as the ruling prince of Kashmir, thus establishing Abhinanda's connections with Kashmir. Abhinanda's Kadambai-kathasāra (q.v.) is an epitome of Bāṇ's Kadambai (q.v.) in an epic form. In the Introduction to this work, he mentions that his ancestors hailed from Gauḍadeśa. This suggests his identification with another poet of whom we know only from anthologies where he is styled Gauḍa Abhinanda, this identification is, however, not certain.

ABHINANDA (fl. early 9th cent.) A Sanskrit poet, son of Satyananda and author of the Rama charita (q.v.) a long epic relating the story of the Ramayana in 36 canto. The date of this author is sought to be fixed on the strength of the reference he makes in his epic to Haravarsha Yuvaraja, son of Vikramaditya, probably identical with Dharmapala of Bengal.

ABHINANDA A Sanskrit poet, also styled Gauḍa and author of an epitome of the Yogasūtras (q.v.) in 48 cantos, divided into 6 prakaraṇas. His identity with the first Abhinanda is also not yet definitely proved. Keith tacitly accepts this identity while De expresses doubt.

ABHINAVĀBHĪRATĪ-CHĪMĪ See Abhinavabhāratī

ABHINAVĀBHĪRATĪ A Sanskrit comm. by Abhinavagupta (q.v.) on the Nāṭyasastra (q.v.) of Bharata, which is considered as a highly authoritative exposition of Bharata's work. The comments on part of Chap. VII and the whole of Chap. VIII and Chaps. XXXIII-XXXIV of Bharata's text are missing, there are also short gaps.

ABHINAVĀCHARUKIRĪTĪ PANDITĀ-CHĀRYA (fl. 18th cent.) A Sanskrit author of Prameya ratnamlankara, a famous philosophical work.

ABHINAVĀCHULLA-NIRUTTI A celebrated Pali work of the Kachchayana school of grammar by Sīri Saddhammalankara, which contains exceptions to the rules formulated by Kachchayana.

ABHINAVAGUPTA (fl. 990-1020). A great Sanskrit writer of Kashmir, celebrated in poetics, dramaturgy and Kashmirian Śaiva philosophy. According to the author himself, he was son of Chukhala and grand-son of Varāhagupta and elder brother of Maṇorathagupta. His teachers were Bhaṭṭenduraja, Utpala (paramaguru), Bhaṭṭa Tauta and Lakshmaṇagupta (in Śaiva philosophy) and his literary activity extended from 990 to 1020, since his Bhaurava-stotra was composed in 993 and his Pratyabhijñā-vimarśinī in 1015. His Kāvya-loka-lochana (popularly known as Lochana; q.v.) and Abhinava-bhaṭṭī (q.v.) are famous comms. on Dhvanyaloka (q.v.) and Nāṭya-śāstra (q.v.) respectively. In the Lochana, he refers to a comm. by himself on Bhaṭṭa Tauta's Kavya-kautuka. At least 41 works of Abhinavagupta are known; of his poetic philosophical works, the following have been published hitherto: Tantrāloka, Paramaratha-sara (a work on Kashmir Śaivism; q.v.), Tantra-sara, Malinī-vijayavartika, Parātrīṃśikā-vijīṭa, Bodha-panchadaśika, Tantra-vaṇa-dhānikā and Īśvara-pratyabhijñā vimarśinī (a comm. on Pratyabhijñā-śāstra; q.v.); also published is Bhagavadgītārtha-saṅgraha. Raghavan thinks that he is the author also of Paryanta-pañcāśikā and Rahasva-panchadaśikā. In his Parātrīṃśikā-vivaraṇa he gives names of his family members. His interpretation, called Abhivṛkti-vada, of Bharata's well-known dictum on Rasa, was very popular and had profound influence on later writers.

ABHINAVAKĀLIDĀSA (fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit Champū writer whose real name is not known; there were a number of poets who held this title. His pupil, Kavikuñjara in his Rājaśekhara-charita, mentions him as a poet of the court of South Indian king Rājaśekhara, whose capital was Vidyānagar. Rājaśekhara's contemporary being Rājendra Chola (1004-1016 or 1016-1064), the poet flourished in the 11th century. Abhinava-kālidāsa is the author of the Bhāgavata-champū and Abhinavabhārata-champū, treating of the stories of the Bhāgavata and Mahābhārata respectively.

ABHINAYA-DARPAṆA. A Sanskrit work on histrionic art, attributed to Nandikeśvara (q.v.), dealing mainly with gestures and postures used in drama and dance. It was perhaps compiled later than Bharata's Nāṭya-śāstra, (q.v.).

ABHIRĀJA RĀJENDRA MIGHI. A Sanskrit writer, whose Pramadvara (1984) is a Nāṭikā in four Acts. The theme is based on the Mahābhārata episode of Puru-Pramadvara. He is a Lecturer in Sanskrit, University of Allahabad.

ABHIRĀMA KĀMĀKSHI (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poetess, who was wife of Rājanātha I. Her Abhinava-rāmābhyaśaya, in 24 cantos, narrates the story of Rāma in exquisite verse.

ABHISĀMAYĪLĀṆKĀRĀ-KĀRIKĀ. A Sanskrit work, attributed to Maitreyanātha (q.v.) and written in memorial verses. It deals with the Buddhist doctrine of the Path towards moral perfection and the attainment of the state of a Buddhist Mahāyānist saint; it was r. into Chinese between A.D. 261 and 316.

ABHISĀRIKĀ-VĀṆCHITAKA (Abhisārikā-bandhitaka). A Sanskrit drama by Viśakhadatta (q.v.), quoted by Abhinavagupta and Bhoja.

Based on the well-known Udayana-Vāsavadattī legend (see Svapna-vāsavadattī), it describes how Padmāvatī, who was charged with the murder of Udayana's son through Vāsavadatta, takes the role of a huntress, attracts the attention of the king (Udayana), regains her lost love and proves her innocence. By a clever impersonation of a huntress, Padmāvatī in the role of an abhisārikā, justifies the title of the play.

ABHISHEKA-NĀṬAKA. A Sanskrit drama in six acts by Bhāsa (q.v.), based on the Rāmāyana and belonging to the Nāṭaka type of plays.

It takes up the story at the point of slaying of Vālin and ends with the ordeal of Sitā and the coronation (abhisheka) of Rāma. The noteworthy feature of this drama is the sympathetic characterisation of Vālin and Rāvaṇa; minor changes have been made in the original story. Incidentally, there is no reference to the second banishment of Sitā.

ABHYAÑKAR, KĀSHINĀTH VĀSUDEVA. A Sanskrit scholar of Mahārāshṭra whose chief works are ed. of the Dasaveyāliya (Ahmedabad, 1932), one of the Jaina Mūlasūttas (q.v.), with its long and important Nirukti from original MS material), ed. of the Vimśativimśatika of Haribhadra (Poona, 1932, with excellent notes; a work mostly of dogmatic and polemic nature), ed. of Vyakaraṇa-Mahābhāṣya (the one ed. by Kielhorn), of Paribhāṣhā-saṅgraha, of Mahābhāṣhya-dīpikā and of Vakya-padiya of Śrī Bhartṛhari (1965).

ABHYAÑKAR, VĀSUDEVA SHĀSTRĪ A Sanskrit scholar of Mahārāshṭra whose chief works are the ed. of Paribhāṣhendukṣhura (with the Eng. tr. of Kielhorn), ed. of Apadeva's Mīmāṃsā-nyāya-prakāśa, ed. of Madhusūdana Sarasvatī's Siddhānta-bindu, of Patañjali's Yoga-sūtra, of Śrībhāṣhya of Rāmānuja, and of Sarva-darśana-saṅgraha by Sāyaṇa-Mādhava. He is author also of Advaitāmoda (Poona, 1918).

ACHAN, P. ANUJAN. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Puruṣurāma Legend and its Significance.

ĀCHĀRĀDARŚA. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Śrīdatta Upādhyāya (q.v.). A manual of the daily duties of the followers of the white Yajurveda, the topics discussed are : Āchamana, Dantadhūvana, Snana, Samdhya, Japa, Brahma- yajña, Tarpaṇa, daily worship of deities, Vaiśvadeva, Atithisatkāra, etc.

ĀCHĀRADAŚĀḤ. See Āyāradasāo.

ĀCHĀRĀṄGA-SŪTRA. See Āyārāṅga-sutta.

ĀCHĀRA-VṚITTI. A Prakrit comm. by Vasunandin (q.v.) on the Mūlāchāra (q.v.).

ĀCHĀRYA, PRASANNA KUMAR. A modern scholar whose chief works are Hindu Architecture in India and Abroad (Oxford, 1946), Indian Architecture according to Manasara Śilpa-śāstras (1927), Dictionary of Hindu Architecture, and Encyclopedia of Hindu Architecture (1927).

ACHYUTĀNANDA SARASVATĪ (fl. 1888). A Vedic scholar, who was born at Khushab in Sargodha district (now in Pakistan). He came into contact with Gurudutt Vidyārthi (q.v.). Sarasvatī has published four Śatakas, based on the four Vedas; these were published from Lahore.

ACHYUTA PUDUVAL, PANDITARĀJA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Māṭṭi-paridevanam (1961) in 100 verses forms a lament by Mother India on the deterioration of moral principles in her children.

ACHYUTARĀYA MODAK (fl. early 19th cent.). A prolific Sanskrit writer, who was a pupil of Nārāyaṇaśāstrin and was probably a son of Nārāyaṇa. Achyutarāya made varied contributions to poetry, poetics, religion and Advaita philosophy; nearly thirty works of his are known. His chief works are : Sāhitya-sāra (a comprehensive work in 12 Chaps. on poetics; 1831), a comm. on Bhumini-vilasa (q.v.), a comm. on Kṛishna-līlāmṛita (embracing the story of Kṛishṇa) and probably Bhāgīrathī-champū (1815).

ADBHUTA-RĀMĀYAṆA. A Sanskrit

Rāmāyaṇa, also called Abdhutottara-rāmāyaṇa, which is attributed to Vālmīki (q.v.). It describes, in 27 cantos, as a sequel to the Rāmāyaṇa, the earlier part of the story and the real nature of Sītā : she is represented as having killed a Rāvaṇa with 100 heads, whom Rāma could not defeat.

ADBHUTA-SĀGARA. A Sanskrit work by Vallālasena (q.v.), discussing various signs portending good or evil, and prescribing rites for averting the evil. The rites include worship of deities, feeding of Brāhmaṇas and making gifts of cows, gold, etc. to them. The work was completed by Lakshmaṇasena.

ADELUNG, FRIEDRICH. A German Indologist, whose chief work, Versuch einer Literatur der Sanskrit-sprache (1830) is a study on the literature of Sanskrit language and is also a bibliography of over 350 Sanskrit books.

ĀḌHAYARĀJA. A Sanskrit author of a prose Kāvya, mentioned in an introductory verse (18) of the Harsha-charita (q.v.).

ADHYĀTMA-MATA-PARĪKSHĀ. Same as Adhyātma-parīkshā (q.v.).

ADHYĀTMA-PARĪKSHĀ. A Prakrit poem by Yaśovijaya (1608-88 ; q.v.) in 184 verses, which deals with the controversy between the Digambara and Śvetāmbara sects, though it belongs to the latter. There is a Sanskrit comm. by the author himself, called Jñāna-hindu-prakaraṇa ; there is also a comm. on it called Bālabodha.

ADHYĀTMA-RĀMĀYAṆA. A Sanskrit Rāmāyaṇa in which Rāma is the Supreme Ātman. It consists of about 4000 verses, a 1 is attributed to the sage Vyāsa (q.v.). Considered as a part of the Brahmaṇḍa-purāṇa (q.v.), it prescribes Vedāntic monism (Advaita) and Rāma-bhakti as paths to salvation. Like the Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, it is divided into seven books having the same titles. Though epic in its external form, it is a manual of devotion and is Tāntric in character; like Tantras, it is in the form of a dialogue between Śiva and Umā. According to this work, Rāma is essentially the god Viṣṇu, Sītā abducted by Rāvaṇa is only an illusion and the real Sītā, who is Lakshmi and Prakṛiti, emerges after the fire ordeal at the end of the book.

ADIKARAM, E.W. A modern writer, whose chief work is Early History of Buddhism in Ceylon (1946).

ĀDINĀTHA-CHARITA. A Prākṛit poem (1103) by Vardhamāna, describing the life of Rishabha, the first Jaina Tīrthaṅkara. It consists of 11,000 Gāthās and contains many Apabhraṃśa verses.

ĀDI-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa, Jinasena and Mahāpurāṇa.

ADVAITA-MAKARANDA. A Sanskrit work on Vedānta philosophy by Lakshmīdhara (q.v.).

ADVAITĀNANDA (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit writer on Vedānta philosophy and author of Brahma-vidyābharana, a prose comm. on Śaṅkarācārya's Bhūṣhya on the Vedānta-sūtra.

ADVAITA-SIDDHI. A Sanskrit work on Vedānta philosophy, by Madhusūdana Sarasvatī (q.v.), which, after vigorously refuting the antagonistic views, vindicates non-dualism. Considered as the best contribution to Advaita literature, it was written in reply to Nyāya-mṛta of Vyāsarūya (q.v.).

ADVAITENDRA YATI (fl. 1780). A Sanskrit author of Dharma-naukā; he belonged to a place near Ahmednagar.

ĀDYAPRASĀD MISHRA (1922-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are two studies on Śāṅkhya Darśana (both in Hindi), Develop- ment and Place of Bhakti in Śāṅkara Vedānta, Kālidāsa-sāhityam (collection of material concerning Kālidāsa), ed. of Bopadeva's Muktāphala with Hemādri's comm., Kaivalya-dīpikā, with Introduction and notes and ed. of Sāṅkhya-tattva-kaumudī, with long Introduction and notes.

ĀDYA RAṆGĀCHĀRYA. A modern scholar, whose chief works are Drama in Sanskrit Literature and Introduction to Bharata's Nāṭya Śāstra.

ĀGAMA. Same as Siddhānta (q.v.).

ĀGAMĀNANDA, SVĀMĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, associated with Rāmakrishṇa Maṭh, Kaladi, whose chief work Dharma (Kaladi, 1955) examines the concept of Dharma in relation to politics and economics.

AGARWAL, M.M. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Philosophy of Nimbārka (Agra, 1976-77).

AGASTI-MĪTĀ. A Sanskrit work, attributed to the sage Agastya, which deals with the origin, characteristics, qualities and mode of testing jewels like pearls, diamonds, emeralds, etc.; its date is unknown.

AGASTYA (fl. c. 1300). A Sanskrit poet and rhetorician of the court of Pratāparudradeva of Warangal (r. 1290-1322). He is reputed to be the author of several works, among which are the Pratāparudra-yaśobhūṣaṇa (q.v.), Kṛishṇa-charita (a prose romance on the life of Kṛishṇa, based on the Bhāgavata), Bāla-bhārata (summarising the whole story of the Mahābhārata in 20 cantos, beginning with the origin of Kuru line from the Moon) and Nala-kīrti-kaumudī (a poem on Nala's story, available only in 2 cantos). His Pratāparudra-kalyāṇa, dealing in five acts on the accession to the throne of king Pratāparudradeva is included in his own Pratāparudra-yaśobhūṣaṇa, a work of rhetorics. He was a poet of great erudition and his learning earned him the name of 'Vidyānātha', by which he is also known.

AGEHĀNANDA BHĀRATI. A modern writer on India, whose chief works are The Ochre Robe (London, 1961), The Tāntric Tradition (1965) and Functional Analysis of Indian Thought and the Social Margins.

AGGAPAṆḌITA. Same as Aggavaṁsa (q.v.); some scholars regard him another person credited with the authorship of the Lokuppatti.

AGGAVANSA (fl. 1154). A Burmese Pali scholar (also called Aggapaṇḍita), who is the author of a noted Pali grammar, Sadda-nti (q.v.). Tutor of king Narapati-sithu of Pagan (1167-1202), he was a native of India according to the Gandha-vansa (q.v.).

AGNI-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa

AGRAWAL, D.P. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : The Copper Bronze in India and with Sheelā Kusumgar Prehistoric Chronology and Radiocarbon Dating in India.

AGULĀR, H. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is The Sacrifice in the Rig-veda (1976).

AHIRBUDHNYA-SAMHITĀ. A Kashmirian Tantric Sanskrit work, which probably originated soon after the 4th cent. A.D. One of the earlier Samhitas of the Vishūite Pañcharatra sect, the work is in the form of a conversation between Ahirbudhnya, i.e., Śiva and Nārada and deals largely with occultism, and partly with philosophical matters.

AHOBILA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Sanḡita-pārijāta (q.v.), an important work on music, which was tr. into Persian by Dinānātha in 1724.

AIHOLE INSCRIPTION. A Sanskrit inscription

tion of Pulakeśin II. dated A.D. 634, which is a landmark in the history of Sanskrit literature. Its importance lies in the fact that it is the only definite means of determining the lower terminus of the date of Kālidāsa as well as of Bhāravi both of whom are mentioned in it.

AINDRA-VYĀKARAṆA. A Sanskrit grammatical work, believed to have been written under instructions of the great pre-Pāṇini grammarian Indra.

AITAREYA-ĪRANYAKA. See Āraṇyaka.

AITAREYA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

AITAREYA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

AIYANGAR, S. KRISHNASWAMI. A modern scholar, whose chief works are Ancient Indian Economic Thought (Banaras, 1939), Studies in Gupta History, Historical Inscriptions of South India (with R. Sewell, 1932) ed. of Parama-saṃhitā and Śrī Rāmānujācharya.

AIYAR, K.A.S. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who has pub. Eng. tr. of some parts of Vākya-pāṇini with notes.

AJĀṬA-PRATYAKṢI SIDDHI. A Sanskrit work on Kashmirian Śaiva philosophy, written by Utpala.

AJAYAPĀLA (fl. 12th cent.). A Buddhist Sanskrit lexicographer and author of the Nānārtha saṅgraha, available only in MSS. The work contains about 1730 words mostly found in the Śaṅkara-kośa, arranged after initial letters. The author is quoted in Gaṇaratnamahodadhī (A.D. 1140) by Sarvaṇanda, by Keśavaśvamin and others.

AJIT COOMAR MOOKERJEE. A modern scholar, who has pub. Tantric Magic (1976-77).

AJITA-ŚĀNTI-LAGHU-STAVANA. Same as Ullāsi-kkama-thaya (q.v.).

AJITA-ŚĀNTI-STAVA (Ajiya-sānti-thaya). A Prakrit poem in 37-40 verses by Nandishena (fl. probably 10th cent.), which extols Ajita and Śānti, the 2nd and 16th Tirthankaras together, because both are said to have spent the rainy season in the caves of the Śatru-ṅjaya mountain. The hymn, composed in various rare and artificial metres, is recited by special singers at the confession festivals. Besides the Avachari comm. by Nandishena himself, there are other comms. too on this work.

AJITA-ŚĀNTI-STAVA (Ajiya-sānti-thaya). A Jaina Prakrit stotra by Vīraganin (fl. 12-13th cent.), glorifying Śānti, the 16th Tirthankara.

AJIYA-SĀNTI-THAYA. See Ajita-sānti-stava.

AKALAṆKA (Akalaṇkadeva; fl. 7th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit logician of South India, whose works are Rājavārttika (a comm. on Umāśvamin's Tattvārthādhigama-sūtra), Ashtasatī (a comm. on Samantabhadra's Āptamīmāṃsā), Nvāya-viniścaya, Āgāhyastraya and Svarūpa-sambhodhana (the last three on logic). A treatise on expiatory rites, Pravāśchittanītha (or Pravāśchittavidhi) is also ascribed to him. His views are opposed by Kumārila (q.v.), whilst Vidyānanda and Prabhāchandra defend Akalaṇka against Kumārila.

AKHANḌĀNANDA SARASVATĪ (1911-). A Sanskrit scholar of Kāśī, who established many trusts for the propagation of Sanatan Dharma. He has written some 30 works, mainly relating to Upanishads, Yoga, Bhāgavata and Bhagavadgītā, etc. He is an eminent exponent of the Bhāgavata-purāṇa.

AKHILĀNANDA ŚARMĀ. A Sanskrit poet, whose chief work Dayānanda-digvijaya (pub. with Hindi tr. : Allahābad, 1910), describes the life and mission of Svāmī Dayānanda Sarasvatī.

AKLUJKAR, ASHOK. A Sanskrit writer, who is now teaching in British Columbia, Canada and also wrote a short story : Tato Jayam Udirayet (1961). It is a long satire on the controversies over a student choosing his major in the under-graduate class. The author satirizes contemporary student life, society, etc. He has also written essays, which have been published in "Sanskṛita Pratibha" as also some humorous pieces. His Appā Śāstrī Sāhitya-Samīkshā appraises the special aspects of Appā Śāstrī Rāshivāḍekar (q.v.) as a writer. He has also pub a study on Vākyapadīya.

AKSHAPĀDA. (fl. c. 150). A Sanskrit writer, to whom is ascribed the true Nyāya philosophy ; sometimes identified with Gotama or Gautama (q.v.).

AKSHAYAKUMĀRI DEVI. A modern writer, who, in her Biographical Dictionary of Purāṇic Personages deals under 22 sections with Vedic and Purāṇic deities.

ALAHAKOON, H. A modern scholar, whose chief work is : The Later Maurvas (232 B.C. to 180 B.C., 1980).

ALAKA. Same as Alaṭa (q.v.)

ALAMELAMMA (fl. 1st half of 20th cent.). A Sanskrit poetess of Mysore, whose Buddha-charitrāmṛita (1922) gives an account of the Buddha.

ALAṆKĀRA-KAUSTUBHA. A celebrated Sanskrit work on poetics by Kavikarnapūra (q.v.). Composed in 10 chapters (kīraṇas) : Kāvya-lakṣhaṇa, Śabdārtha, Dhvani, Guṇibhūta-vyangya, Rasa-bhāva-tadbheda, Guṇa, Śabdā-lāṅkāra, Arthālāṅkāra, Rīti, and Dosha, most of the illustrative verses are in praise of Kṛishṇa, and the subject-matter follows the Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.) in treatment.

ALAṆKĀRA-KAUSTUBHA. Name of several Sanskrit works, written by Kalyāṇa Subrahmanya and Viśveśvara.

ALAṆKĀRA-RATNĀKARA. See Śobhākara.

ALAṆKĀRA-SAṆGRAHA. Same as Jayadeva's Chandraloka (q.v.).

ALAṆKĀRA-SĀRA-SAṆGRAHA. A celebrated Sanskrit work on poetics by Udbhata (q.v.), also called Kāvya-lāṅkāra-sāra-saṅgraha or Kāvya-lāṅkāra-saṅgraha. It defines 41 Alaṅkāras in about 79 verses and illustrates them in about a hundred stanzas, taken from his own Kumārasambhava. Divided into six chapters, the work was commented upon by Pratīharendurāja about the middle of the 10th century. The work, though closely follows Bhāmaha (q.v.) in the treatment of Alaṅkāras, expresses certain independent views, which threw Bhāmaha into long oblivion. See Udbhata.

ALAṆKĀRA-SARVASVA. A Sanskrit work, composed about A.D. 1125 by Ruyyaka (q.v.), which consists of three parts, viz., Sūtra, Vṛitti and Udaharaṇa. While some scholars are of the view that the first two parts were written by Ruyyaka, others regard that the Sūtra portion was written by Ruyyaka and the Vṛitti by Maṅkhaka or Mankhuka. The work is important for its acute analysis of the scope and nature of individual poetic figures; two new figures, viz., Vikalpa and Vichitra are mentioned in it. The work displays a remarkable degree of insight and independence of judgement; its author is a staunch advocate of the Dhvani school and briefly summarises the views of Bhāmaha, Udbhata, Vāmana, Rudraṭa, Vakroktijīvita, Vyaktiviveka, and Dhvanikāra on the essence of poetry.

ALAṆKĀRA-SARVASVA. A Sanskrit work, not yet printed, by an unknown author, dealing with the general topics of the Alaṅkara-śāstra.

ALAṆKĀRA-SARVASVA. A Sanskrit work by one Keśavamīśra.

ALAṬA. A Kashmirian Sanskrit writer, who is also called Alaka or Allaṭa. Son of Rājanaka Jayānaka, he was the author of a small portion of Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.) after the figure of speech called parikūra (Ullāsa X), left incomplete by Mammaṭa, and of Vishamapaddhyota, a comm. on Ratnākara's Hara-vijaya (q.v.); his date is not certain.

ALBASTER, HENRY (d. 1884). A scholar, who tr. into English several Siamese texts; his popular work is The Wheel of Law: Buddhism (London, 1871).

ALBRIGHT, WILLIAM F. A modern distinguished Middle East archaeologist and foremost authority on Biblical archaeology, with whom Dumont (q.v.) had collaborated from the Vedic side. Albright is the joint author of a paper 'A parallel between Indic and Babylonian Sacrificial Ritual', with reference to the Aśvamedha. Albright worked on the Hittite also, where again Dumont collaborated with reference to the Indo-Āryan names of kings in the tablets discovered in Anatolia. (Vide—Appendix, Indo-Aryan Names from Mittani, Nuzu, and Syro-Palestinian documents in Analecta Orientalia 26, Rome, 1948). According to Albright, the names of kings in the tablets, are Sanskritic and not Iranian and the date of these, as well as those of some Vedic gods in these tablets, was late 18th cent. B.C.

ALI, S.M. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Geography of the Purāṇas (New Delhi, ALIKHANOVA, Y.M. A modern Russian Indologist, at present in Moscow University; she has tr. into Russian the most important work of poetics, Dhvanyāloka with a detailed introduction (1974). She has also tr. and pub. an anthology of Indian lyrics (Amaru, Hāla, Bhartṛihari) along with V.V. Vertogradova (1978). She has also written a general essay on Ancient Indian Theatre (1975).

ALLADIN AND THE WONDERFUL LAMP. A popular tale of Middle-East origin, of which Sanskrit version was pub. in the Sahjidayā (IV), Śrīraṅgam.

ALLAHABAD STONE PILLAR INSCRIPTION. A Sanskrit inscription, which is Harishena's panegyric of the Gupta king Samudragupta. Consisting of eight verses, a long prose passage and a concluding verse, it testifies to the fact that Kāvya, in a fairly developed form, existed in that remote age.

ALLAN, JOHN. A scholar, whose chief works are : Catalogue of the Coins of Ancient India and Catalogue of the Coins of the Gupta Dynasty and of Śaśāṅka King of Gauda (both ALLARĀJA. (fl. early 14th cent.). Son of , , mīra, the Chihamāna king and author in Sanskrit of Rasaratna-pradīpikā, a small treatise on poetics intended for beginners.

ALLAṬA. Same as Alaṭa (q.v.).

ALLCHIN, F.R. A scholar, whose chief work is : A Source Book of Indian Archaeology (written in collaboration with Dalip K. Chakrabarti; vol. 1, : vols. 2 and 3 in preparation).

ALLEN, W.S. An English Indologist, whose chief works are Phonetics in Ancient India (on the phonetic observations of the ancient Indian Sanskrit grammarians ; Oxford, 1953) and a catalogue of coins (1936).

ALLOPANISHAD (Alla Upanishad) A Sanskrit work by a Hindu courtier (fl. 16th cent.) of Emperor Akbar, which was an apocryphal chapter of the Ātharvaveda. Beginning with salutation to Ganeśa and the invocation of the mystic 'Om', it states that he who sustains all things and is the bestower of blessings is Allāh, and he is identical with Mitra, Varuṇa and Indra. Akbar is described as a messenger of God and a prophet rasul, but not il-rasul.

ALMODA VIŚVEŚVARA A Sanskrit and Prakrit dramatist, son of Lakshmidhara of Pāṇḍe family, and author of three dramas : Navamalika (on the amours of Vijayasena and Navamalikā of Avanti), Rukma-paṇmayam and Śṛṅgāra-mañjarī (the last one in Prakrit). his date is uncertain

ĀLOKA A famous Sanskrit conim by Pakshadhara Mista on Gangeśa's Tattva-chintāmaṇi (q.v.)

ALSDORF, LUDWIG (1904-78) A celebrated German Indologist, who was a student of Schubring and Lueders. An authority on Jainism, he took an interest in many other subjects as well. He travelled extensively in India and promoted better understanding of modern India and her problems

In 1928, Alsdorf obtained his doctorate for a thesis (written in German) dealing with a Jaina Apabhraṃśa text; the subject was : The Kumārapāla-pratibodha. A Contribution to the knowledge of Apabhraṃśa and the narrative literature of the Jains. From October 1930 to May 1932, Alsdorf was Reader for German and French at Allahabad University. He continued his Sanskrit studies with a pandit and in 1935 published his thesis (in German) on the subject: Harivaṃśa-purāṇa.

A passage from the Apabhraṃśa World History Tisatthimahāpurisa-guṇāṅkāra. In the course of his studies on this text, Alsdorf discovered that the Vasudevahiṇḍi, which belongs to the Harivaṃśa section of Jaina mythology, is a new version of the lost Bṛīhatkathā of Guṇāḍhya. He continued to work on Apabhraṃśa texts and brought out an essay on R. Pischel's (in German) Materials for understanding Apabhraṃśa. His Apabhraṃśa Studien was published in 1937.

From 1941-45, Alsdorf worked in the Foreign Office in the Special Indian Department, which had been set up after the arrival of Subhash Chandra Bose. He also lectured on Indian geography and history at Berlin University.

In 1940 Alsdorf brought out a book Indien, which dealt with the history of British India and the Indian freedom movement. In 1942, he published a monograph on the cultural relations between India and Germany; Indien und Ceylon (1943) is a concise geography of these two countries.

After the end of the War, Alsdorf was a Visiting Professor at Muenster. In 1950, he was appointed Professor of Indology at Humburg University, from which post he retired in 1972. He, however, continued teaching till his death. He became Editor-in-Chief of the Critical Pali Dictionary. He brought out a book India, Geography and Culture. From 1951-59, he worked on a manuscript on the Vedic god Varuṇa, which had been written by his teacher Lueders. This manuscript had been damaged during the War, but Alsdorf succeeded in reconstituting the text and publishing it in two volumes.

Alsdorf published several papers on the Vasudevahiṇḍi but he did not bring out the whole text.

He also tr. with Notes the Panchatantra. His other works are : Vorderindien : Bhārat, Pākistān, Ceylon (1955), Beitrage zur Geschi- chte von Vegetarismus und Rinderverehrung in Indien (1961) and Asoka's Separatedikite von Dhauhi und Jaugada (1962). Among his papers are 'The Pratyayas, a contribution to Mathematics', 'Two new proofs towards the Indian origin of Thousand and One Nights', on the historicity of the Buddhist Councils, a critical study of some parts of the Mahāvastu and on the necessity of revising older editions of Pali texts. A number of Alsdorf's papers were republished in Kleine Schriften by the Glaserapp Foundation (vol. 10) in 1974, which also contains a complete bibliography of his works which shows his wide range of interests: Vedic exegesis, Jaina and Buddhist studies, Asokan inscriptions, Jātakas, Middle Indic philology, history of literature, culture, and art, modern India, and travel accounts. He also wrote on the cow worship (1961) and on Pali poetry.

Alsdorf, having travelled in India about twelve times, visited Sri Lanka in 1978. An insect bite turned infectious and caused his death in March 1979, shortly after his return to Germany.

ALTANGEREI — A modern Mongolian scholar who was for the most part engaged in translating into Mongolian the commentaries on the Kāvyaśāstra as written in the Prakrit language by Monier-william. He wrote also some articles on the Kāvyaśāstra and its Mongolian commentaries.

ALTEKAR, A. S. — A modern scholar whose chief works are Fluctuation in Ancient India (1944), A New History of the Indian People (1946) and important articles on coins and Puranic studies. Altekar gives the dates for the Dasarajña (1900 B.C.), Gṛtsmaṭi (2700 B.C.), Atri (2600 B.C.), Chitraratha (2000 B.C.), Śrinjaya, Sahadeva (2000-1800 B.C.), Visvāmitra (2300 B.C.) etc. and assigns the hymnal activity of the Vedic period to 2700-1800 B.C., the Brahmana period to 1600-1000 B.C. and the Upanishads to 1200-600 B.C. while the Mahābhārata War is placed in c. 1400 B.C.

ALTUCHOV, N. — A modern Indologist of Uruguay (South America) who has pub. Elemental Grammar of Sanskrit which is probably the first grammar pub. in S. America and is one of a very few ed. in Spanish. He has also written various articles concerning Indian culture which have been pub. in Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

ALWIS, JAMES D. (1823-78) — A Sinhalese scholar, who tr. Book 6 of Kachchayan's Pali grammar into English under the title An Introduction to Kachchayan's Grammar of the Pali Language (Colombo-London 1863) as also tr. into English Hatthavanaggala-vihāravamsa with notes. He compiled also Descriptive Catalogue of Sanskrit, Pali and Sinhalese Literary Works of Ceylon (Vol. I, Colombo 1870).

AMALANANDA — A Sanskrit writer on philosophy and author of Kalpavṛkṣa, a commentary on the Bhāmati (q.v.). His time is uncertain.

AMALDHARI SINGH — A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are Kālidāsa (a critical study) and a Hindi tr. of Patanjala Yoga-sūtra.

AMALACHARI, A. — A Sanskrit poem in 30 chapters on the Mūrtimukha Sūtra (q.v.) by a Jaina poet.

Decribed in melodious vers. the life of Amara and the poem was composed at Patna in Samvat 1722 (1194) and read in the temple of Śaivism in praise of Purnapada Varaha in Saur and Mahanandi.

AMAR, NATH, PANDEY (1937-) — A Sanskrit scholar, who in his Sanskṛita Kāvī samikṣā (1977) has given short sketches of Sanskrit poets from Valmiki to Śrīharsha.

AMAR NATH SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Vedic scholar, whose chief work in Hindi is Uaidika Svara Samikshā (1964).

AMAR SINGH. A scholar, whose chief work is : The Heart of Buddhist Philosophy : Diñnāga and Dharmakīrti (1984).

AMARA (Amarasimha). A Sanskrit lexicographer and the author of the celebrated Nāmalinganūtāsana, usually called the Amarakośa (q.v.). Tradition makes him one of the 'nine gems' at the court of king Vikramāditya, whose identity has not yet been established by scholars. He is known as a poet and was certainly a Buddhist who knew the Mahāyāna and used Kālidāsa. His time is uncertain but he probably flourished before the 8th cent. A.D. In the lexicographical work, Amara was preceded by Vyādi, Dhanvantari, Vararuchi, Kātya or Kātyayana, and Vāchaspati, among authors, and by the Trikūṇḍa, the Utpalini and the Mūlā as is known from the Amarakośa's commentators, Kshirasvāmin and Sarvananda, but his greatness lies in the fact that his work threw into oblivion all its predecessors.

AMARACHANDRA (fl. middle 13th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit poet, who was a resident of the town of Vagata near Anhilvid; he was also called Amara. A pupil of Jinadatta Sūri, he flourished under Viśaladeva of Gujarāt, by whom he was greatly honoured. Among his works, the best known is Bṛilabhārata (q.v.), an epitome of the Mahābhārata; he wrote treatises on poetics : Kāvyaikalpalatā (in collaboration with Arisimha ; q.v.) and Kaviśikshā; on metrics : Chhandoratnāvalī and Muktāvalī; and on technical subjects : Kalākalāpa; and the poem Padmānanda-mahākāvya, otherwise known as Śrī-Jitendra-charita (1241), which, though intended to give the lives of all the 23 Jinas, describes in 17 cantos only the life of Rishabha, the first Jina in an ornate style. He also wrote a gloss on Kāvyaikalpalatā, entitled Kaviśikshāvṛitti.

AMARAKIRTIGANI (fl. 1190). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet and author of Chhakkam-movaesa (Shaṣṭakarmopadeśa), a poem (A.D. 1190) in 14 cantos, dealing with the six-fold duties (worship of god, attendance on the teacher, study of sacred texts, self-restraint, austerity and charity) of a householder with illustrative stories. The poet mentions several other works written by him, viz., Nemināha-chariu, Mahāvīra-chariu, Jasahara-chariu, Dhamma-charina-tippana, Suhāsiyaraṇa-naihi, Dhammovaesa-chūḍāmaṇi and Jhaṇapau. Fifth in succession from Amitagati (q.v.), the poet belonged to the Mathura-saṅgha.

AMARAKOŚA. A celebrated standard Sanskrit lexicon by Amara (q.v.), arranged in three books, viz., Svaradī-kāṇḍa, Bhūmyadī-kāṇḍa and Samanya-kāṇḍa. The work is synonymicon, and its last part contains an appendix on homonyms (as in the Vedic Nighaṇṭus), indeclinables and genders. The lexicon enjoyed wide popularity as is revealed by the frequency it is quoted by comms. and by very large number of comms. that have been composed on it. The oldest extant, and at the time the most important, comm. is the Udghāṭana, composed by Kshirasvāmin (11th cent.) who quotes Rājaśekhara and Bhoja and is quoted by Vardhamana and in the Gaṇaratna-mahodadhi. The other important commentators are Sarvananda Vandyaghaṭiya of Bengal who composed the comm. called Tikāsarvasva in 1159, Subhūti (or Subhūti-chandra), whose Kāmadhenu is extant only in its Tibetan version, but is often quoted by Bengal commentators, and Bṛihaspati Rāyamukutaṃaṇi (or simply Rāyamukuta) who wrote his Padachandrikā in A.D. 1431. There were commentators in later centuries too. Thus to the 17th century belong Nārāyaṇa-śarman (1619), Ramanātha Vidyāvāchaspati (1633), and Mathureśa Vidyālaṅkāra (1666), while still later are Mahādeva, Maheśvara and others.

AMARASIMHA. Same as Amara (q.v.).

AMARENDRA GADGIL. A Sanskrit scholar, who has pub. Ukti-viśeṣa (Bombay, 1976-77), an anthology of Subhāshitas culled from diverse sources, with a Marathi gloss.

AMARU (Amaruka; fl. 7th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of the Amaru-śataka, a centum of verses named after him. As the Śataka is quoted by Vāmana (A.D. 800) and Ānandavardhana (A.D. 850), the poet must have flourished before 800. He is identified with the grammarian Bhartṛhari, and with Bhartṛhari, the half brother of one Vikramaditya; this identification, however, lacks confirmation. The legend goes that the soul of Śaṅkarāchārya entered into the dead body of king Amaru and it was then he composed his poem.

AMARUKA. Same as Amaru (q.v.).

AMARU-ŚATAKA. A centum of Sanskrit verses named after Amaru (q.v.)

The Śataka is found in four different versions having only 51 verses in common, the number of verses varying from 96 to 115. The poet has dealt with various aspects of love, particularly depicting the relation of lovers. The Śataka has been expounded as illustrating types of heroines or some figures of speech. Jñānānanda has expounded this Śataka as conveying erotical as well as philosophical significance, but Amaru does not seem to have concerned himself much with either.

AMBADEVA (fl. 1314). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, whose Samara Rāsu describes the munificence of Samara Simha, son of Saṅghapati Desala. The poet describes the Śatruñjaya Tirtha in a charming style.

AMBAṬṬHA-SUTTA. The third Sutta of the Dīgha-nikāya (q.v.).

AMBIKĀDATTA VYĀSA (1859-1901). A Sanskrit writer of Jaipur, whose chief work is Śivarāja-vijaya, a historical prose narrative on the life of Sivājī. His minor poems are: Ratnāshṭaka, Prastāra-dīpikā, Gaṇeśa-śataka and Śiva-vivāha.

AMBROSE, KAY. A modern scholar, whose chief work is : Classical Dances and Costumes of India (1980).

AMIR CHANDRA SHĀSIRI. A modern poet, whose Gīti-kādambarī (1969) includes some long traditional poems; he is also the author of Rasa-siddhānta (tr.).

AMITAGATI. A Sanskrit poet, who was a Digambara Jaina ascetic and pupil of Mādha-vasena. He is the author of the Subhāshita-ratna-sandoha 'Collection of Jewels of Happy Sayings' (A.D. 994, q.v.), a poem dealing with Jaina ethics. His other work is Dharma-parikṣa (A.D. 1014) which contains instructions to establish the superiority of Jainism over orthodox Hinduism; the assault on Brahmanism is supported with much legend and matter. He claims to have been honoured by Bhoja, Muṇja and Sindhula, and composed a compendium of Jaina philosophy called Pañcha-saṅgraha.

AMMALĀCHĀRYA. See Varadāchārya.

AMMER, KARL. A modern German Indologist, who has pub. primarily in the field of general linguistics. He taught Sanskrit at the University of Halle.

AMOGHAVARSHA (r. between 814 and 878). A Rāshtrakūṭa king of Karnaṭaka, who was a great patron of art and literature. He is the author in Sanskrit of Prasāntara-mālikā, a work on Jaina ethics and in Kannada Kavirāja- mārga on rhetorics. See Mahāvira, Śākaṭāyana and Jinasena.

AMOGHAVṚTTI. See Śākaṭāyana.

AMRITABHĀRATĪ. A Sanskrit writer belonging to the Sārasvata school of grammar, a pupil of Amalasarasvatī and author of Subodhikā, a comm. written in 1497. See Sārasvata-vyākaraṇa.

AMRITACHANDRA (fl. 9th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit writer, who expounded Kuncikunda's works and also wrote the Tattvārthasūtra, Purushārtha-siddhyupāya, etc.

AMṚTAMANTHANA. A Sanskrit play, composed by the god Brahmā himself as is mentioned in the Nāṭya-sāstra (q.v.).

AMŚUBODHINI-ŚĀSTRA A Sanskrit treatise on Physics, ascribed to sage Bhāradvāja and other ancient sages.

ANĀGATA-ĪAMSA A Pali kāvya in 142 verses, composed by Kassapa (q.v.), perhaps of the 11th cent. A.D. It is a continuation of the Buddha-vamsa (q.v.) as it gives a detailed account of the future Buddha Maitreya and his contemporary Chakravartin Śaṅkha. The manuscripts of this work are dissimilar in form and content. One version of the work, written partly in prose and partly in verse, is composed in the form of a dialogue between the Buddha and Sāriputta and deals with the decadence and eventual extinction of Buddhism, the Buddhist literature, the glory and influence of Buddhism, etc. Another version, entirely in prose, describes the ten future Buddhas of whom Maitreya is one. A third manuscript, in verse alone, gives an account of the future Buddha Maitreya and his contemporary Chakravartin Śaṅkha. This future Buddha would be born in a rich Brāhmaṇa family but would later on renounce the world. Having obtained the highest knowledge, he would then set in motion the wheel of law.

ĀNANDA. A Buddhist Pali writer of Ceylon, who hailed from the mainland of India like Buddhadatta (q.v.). He is the author of the Mūlaṭīkā or Abhidhamma-mūlaṭīkā, the oldest comm. on the Aṭṭhakathās of Abhidhamma. He seems to be a contemporary of Buddhaghosha (fl. early 5th cent. A.D.), for he wrote his comm. at the instance of Buddhāmitta who was instrumental in persuading Buddhaghosha to compose his Papañcha-sūdanī (q.v.).

ĀNANDA. See Mahānandī.

ĀNANDA. See Madhavānala-kāmakandalu-kathā.

ĀNANDĀ-ĀNANDA-STOTRA See Mahānandī.

ĀNANDABODHA (fl. later than Sāyaṇa?). A Vedic scholar and author of Kāṇva-Veda-Mantra-Bhāṣya (or Kāṇva-Veda-Mantra-Bhāṣya Saṅgraha), a comm. on the Kāṇva version of Vājasaneyi samhitā of Yajurveda.

ĀNANDACHANDRA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who ed. and pub. the Lāṭyāyana-śrautasūtra.

ĀNANDAGIRI (fl. 9th cent.) A pupil of Śaṅkarācārya and author of Sanskrit works: Śaṅkara-vijaya, Nyāya-nirṇaya and Iarka sangraha (qq.v.); he is also called Ānanda-jñāna.

ĀNANDAJÑĀNA See Ānandagiri.

ĀNANDALAHARĪ. A Sanskrit poem in about 104 verses, attributed to Śaṅkarācārya (q.v.). It is in praise of Tripurasundarī and is mixed with mystical doctrine.

ĀNANDARĀYA MAKHĪ. A Sanskrit poet.

who was Chief Minister of Tanjore rulers Shāhji (1684-1710) and Śarabhoji (1711-1720). A famous scholar, he was known by the name of 'Vedakavi'. He wrote two dramas : Vidyā-pariṇayana and Jīvānandana, both in 7 Acts; the first advocates salvation through devotion to Śiva and in the second the Ayurvedic elements have been represented through dramatic characters.

ĀNANDATĪRTHA. See Madhvāchārya.

ĀNANDAVARDHANA (fl. 855). A Sanskrit poet and rhetorician, who was patronised by king Avantivarman of Kashmir (A.D. 855-84). Son of one Nonopādhyāya, he composed the Devī-śataka (q.v.) on Pārvatī, which is melodious, notwithstanding the abundant use of the Śabdālankāras in it. He is the author of the celebrated and epoch-making Dhvanyāloka (q.v.); the Prakrit poem Vishambāna-līlā (or Ānandakathā) and the Sanskrit poem Arjuna-charita (or Tridaśānanda) are also ascribed to him by his commentators. He himself refers to his work, entitled Dharmottamā, a comm. on the Pramāṇa-viniścaya of Dharmakīrti. Yet another work is Tattvāloka, which discusses the relation between Śāstranaya and Kavyanaya. Ānandavardhana, for the first time, succeeded in establishing that Dhvani or suggested sense is the soul of poetry.

ĀNANDAVARDHANA - CHAMPŪ. See Kavikarṇapūra.

ANANGAHARSHA MĀTRARĀJA A Sanskrit dramatist, who was a Kalachuri king and was son of Narendravardhana; he was perhaps a ruler of Chedi country with its capital at Māhishmatī. He is often referred to as Māyurāja and must have fl. before the close of the 8th cent. A.D., as Dāmodaragupta in his Kuṣṭhanimata laments his death; verses of Māyurāja are quoted in the Sūkti-muktā-valī (q.v.). From Abhinavagupta's references, it is known that the dramatist composed two plays—the Udāta-rāghava (q.v.), based on the Rāmāyaṇa, and the Tūpasa-vatsarāja (q.v.), dealing with the story of Udayana, Vāsavadattā and Padmāvatī.

ANANT KṚSHṆA SHĀSTRĪ. A modern scholar, who has ed. the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa of Ṛigveda, along with the comm. Sukhāpradā of Shadguruśiṣya (3 Vols., 1942-55); he has written also several articles on Prahlāda-charita as presented in the Purāṇas.

ANANTA. A Sanskrit author of Kāmasamūha (A.D. 1457), which discusses almost all aspects of love.

ANANTA. (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, patronised by Pratāpasimha of Jaipur, and author of Pratāpa-kalpadruma, an Āyurvedic work.

ANANTA BHATṬA (fl. c. 1500). A Sanskrit author of Bhārata-champū in 12 chapters. Also called Ananta Kavi, he belonged to a place near Kānchi in Tamil Nadu. The poet shows his partiality for exhibiting his poetic talent rather than for narrating the episodes. There are about seven major commentaries on this work. He also authored Pañchopāśana-saṅgraha or Kathāṃṛita-nidhi, which summarises the original Pañchatantra into a regular narrative.

ANANTABHAṬṬA. (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who at the instance of Sangrāmasimha, compiled Sadāchāra-rahasya, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

ANANTA BHATṬA. See Anantāchārya.

ANANTA CHARAṆA ŚUKLA. A Sanskrit scholar, who has pub. The Concept of Imitation in Greek and Indian Aesthetics (Calcutta,

ANANTĀCHĀRYA (fl. 1625). A Sanskrit scholar, whose Bhāvārtha-dīpikā (or Veda-dīpa) is a comm. on Chaps. 21-40 of the Kāṇva saṁhitā of Yajurveda. He also wrote comms. on Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa (Kāṇva recension), Vājasaneyi-prātiśākhya, and Bhāshikā-sūtra. Vidhāna-pārijāta, Kāṇva-Kaṇṭhābharāṇa and Kātyāyanasmārta-Mantrārtha-dīpikā are also ascribed to him. He lived at Kashi.

ANANTĀCHĀRYA, V. (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who was Sanskrit Paṇḍita at Pachayappā's College, Madras. His Vāṇakathā-sangraha contains summaries of the plays of Kālidāsa and Bhavabhūti and three other plays.

ANANTADEVA. A Sanskrit author of Smṛitikaustubha, a Dharmaśāstra digest, written under the patronage of Bāz Bahādur (1638-78) of Almorā.

ANANTA KAVI. See Ananta Bhaṭṭa.

ANANTAKRISHṆA ŚĀSTRĪ, N. (fl. early 20th cent.). An Advaitic scholar, who was attached for the greater part of his life to the Calcutta University, was most active and productive, and in addition to editing Advaitic works, himself wrote a number of didactic works criticising the position of the followers of Rāmanuja and Madhva (qq.v.).

ANANTA KRISHṆA ŚĀSTRĪ, N.S., MAHĀ-MAHOPĀDHYĀYA. A Sanskrit writer, who also wrote Advaitadīpikā (1922; giving the main tenets of Advaita Vedānta) and Bhagavadgītā Bhāratiya Darśanāni (1944; dealing with the accommodation of the different philosophical systems in the Bhagavadgītā). He also authored Vivāha-samayamīmāṃsā-abdhi-yāna-vimarśau (1913), on the subjects of the age of marriage and sea-travel.

ANANTALWAR. A modern Sanskrit poet, who was later Pontiff at the Melkote Śrivaishṇava Math. He has composed a poem called Marjanī on the noble role of the broomstick and in a whole satuka again, expatiates on the glory of the broomstick.

ANANTANĀRĀYAṆA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, a grandson of Appayya Dikshita (q.v.) and author of a devotional work Gīta-śankara on the model of Gīta-govinda (q.v.) of Jayadeva; Gīta-śankara provides an excellent theme for a dance-drama.

ANANTANĀRĀYAṆA. A Sanskrit court-poet of Sarphojī, king of Tanjore (r. 1711-28) and author of Rāghava-charita (also known as Sangraha-rāmāyaṇa), describing the story of Rāma in 12 cantos; the poem is ascribed to king Sarphojī, but in the colophon to the 2nd canto in one of the manuscripts, it is written that the poem was actually composed by Pañcharatna and the work was put in the name of poet's patron. Anantanārāyaṇa, a court-poet of king Sarphojī was called Pañcharatna.

ANANTA NĀRĀYAṆA ŚĀSTRĪ, P.S. A modern Sanskrit writer, who is the author of Bāla Rāmāyaṇa in prose.

ANANTARĀMA (fl. 18th cent.) A Sanskrit author of Sahānumaraṇa-viveka, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

ANANTA SHARMĀ TRIPĀTHĪ A modern Sanskrit writer, who has made a sustained effort in rendering all the plays of Shakespeare into Sanskrit.

ANARGHA-RĀGHAVA. A Sanskrit drama in 7 Acts by Murārī (q.v.), which is based on the Rāmāyaṇa story but with substantial changes.

Sage Viśvāmitra arrives to take Rama and Lakṣmaṇa to subdue the Rākshasas who have been troubling his hermitage and Daśaratha reluctantly agrees. In the forest, Rāma kills the demoness Tāḍakā, overcoming his initial hesitation in slaying a female. Viśvāmitra then suggests a visit to Janaka and Mithilā after a description of both; Janaka's daughter Sītā is now ripe for marriage and Rāvaṇa seeks her hand. Janaka accompanied by Śatananda, receives Rāma, but hesitates to put Rāma to the severe test involved in bending Śiva's bow. Rāvaṇa's envoy arrives to demand Sītā's hand, but indignantly declines the request that his master should bend the bow. Rāma is allowed to make the trial and report comes that Rāma has wonderfully broken the bow. He is promised Sītā's hand and other sons of Daśaratha are also married with Sītā's sisters. Rāvaṇa's minister Mālyavānt laments the failure of his scheme to win Sītā and thinks of another move: Rāvaṇa's sister, Śūrpaṇakhā is asked to assume the disguise of Mantharā. Daśaratha resolves to transfer his kingdom to Rāma, but Mantharā (Śūrpaṇakhā in disguise) bears a fatal message from Kaikeyī, bidding Daśaratha grant the two boons of the banishment of Rāma and the coronation of Bharata. A conversation between Jambavanta and an ascetic Śravaṇa reports the advent and doings of Rāma in the forest. Śravaṇa goes to Sugrīva to bespeak a kindly welcome for wayfarers. Jāmbavanta overhears a dialogue between Rāvaṇa, disguised as a juggler, and Lakshmaṇa. The vulture Jaṭāyu then reports the appearance of Rāvaṇa and Mārīcha in the forest. Jāmbavanta goes to warn Sugrīva of the danger, while Jaṭāyu sees Sītā being carried away by Rāvaṇa and pursues him. Rāma and Lakshmaṇa then appear wandering in grief in vain search. They hear a cry and see the friendly chief, Guha, being assailed by the headless Kabandha. Lakshmaṇa rescues him, but in doing so, knocks off the tree, on which is suspended the skeleton of Duṇḍubhi, much to the annoyance of Vālin, who appears, and after a lengthy conversation challenges Rāma to battle. Lakshmaṇa and Guha describe the fight and death of Vālin. Voices from behind the scenes report the coronation of Sugrīva, his determination to aid Rāma in the recovery of Sītā, Rāma's departure for battle and death of Kumbhakarna and Meghanāda. Then Rāvaṇa goes for the battle and the struggle is described by two Vidyādhara. The last Act shows the departure from Laṅkā by Kubera's car of Rāma, Sītā, Lakshmaṇa, Vibhīṣaṇa and Sugrīva. They travel by the celestial regions and go to Ayodhyā, where the priest Vasishtha waits with Rāma's brothers to crown Rāma as king.

According to Keith, the play bears ample testimony to the linguistic abilities of its author, though as a drama its defects are too obvious.

ANDERSON, DINES (1861-1940). A Danish scholar, whose chief works are Pali Reader (1901) and Pali Glossary (1907); he also translated selected legends from Rasavāhini (q.v.) and with Helmer Smith (1882-1956) ed. Sutta-nipāta (q.v.). He worked also on the Critical Pali-English Dictionary. See Smith, Helmer.

ANDERSON, G. A Swedish Indologist, whose chief work is Hinduistisk litteratur. Jivasthikatanana ur Kulārṇava Tantra (1971), a study on Kulārṇava-tantra (q.v.).

ĀNDHRAPŪRṆA (fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Yatirāja-vaiḥbhava treats of the life of Rāmānujācārya (q.v.).

ANEKĀRTHA-KOŚA. A Sanskrit lexicon by Maṅkha with his own comm.; it uses the lexical works of Amara, Śāśvata, Halāyudha and Dhanvantari.

ANEKĀRTHA-ŚABDAKOŚA. See Medini-kośa.

ANEKĀRTHA-SAMUCHCHAYA. A lexicon by Śāśvata (q.v.), which contains homonyms arranged in a special order and then indeclinables.

ANEKĀRTHA-SAṆGRAHA. A Sanskrit lexicon by Hemachandra (q.v.), dealing with synonyms. Consisting of nearly 1829 stanzas, it is divided into six Kāṇḍas, which are arranged after the number of syllables, and in a two-fold alphabetical order after the final and initial letters, with a supplementary Kāṇḍa on the indeclinables.

ANEKĀRTHA-TILAKA. See Mahipa.

ANESAKI, M. (1873-1949) A Japanese scholar, whose chief work is Concordance of Pali Texts with their Chinese Version.

ANCEY, M. S. (1830-1968). A well-known freedom fighter, a student of Bālgangādhara Tilak and a modern Sanskrit poet, whose Sanskrit epic, Tilaka-yāśorṇava in 41 cantos and 12,000 flowing Anuṣṭubh verses (1969-70) is a very long account of Tilak, the tense activities of his times and the stalwarts who were his contemporaries: the account is historically valuable for the exact dates given for all the incidents and the numerous photographs of those times, which Ancey's publishers in Poona, after the author's death, added to the publication.

ĀṄGA. Jaina canonical works in Prakrit, which form the first part of the Siddhānta; for detailed information, see Siddhānta. Traditionally, their number is 12, which are in the following order:—

(i) Āyāraṅga-sūtra (Āchāraṅga-sūtra). The first Āṅga, which in its two lengthy sections deals with the way of life (āyāra, Sansk. āchāra) of a monk. While the first section consists mainly of exhortations and warnings, e.g., the warning against any kind of killing or injury of living creature, the second one described as 'Chulās' i.e. 'appendices' describes dry rules for begging and wandering, the daily life of the monks and nuns as also materials for a biography of Mahāvīra.

(ii) Sūyagaḍaṅga (Sūtrakṛitāṅga). The explicit purpose of the second Āṅga, consisting of two books, is to keep young monks away from the heretical doctrine of other teachers, to warn them of all dangers and temptations, to confirm them in their faith and thus lead them to the highest goal.

(iii) Thūṇaṅga (Sthūṇaṅga). This third Āṅga discusses various religious matters in the numerical order from 1 to 10; some short parables also occur.

(iv) Samavāyaṅga. The fourth Āṅga is a sort of continuation of the third Āṅga; the matter of the first two-thirds being arranged in numerical groups. The numbers, however, do not cease at 10, but run far beyond 100 and as far as a million. The work begins with an enumeration of the twelve Āṅgas and a table of contents of the fourteen Puvvas.

(v) Bhagavatī-viyāha-punnatti (Bhagavatī-vyākhyā-prajñapti). This fifth Āṅga, briefly called Bhagavatī, is partly in catechistic form (Mahāvīra replying to the questions of his principal disciple Goyama Indabhūti) and partly in the form of dialogue-legends and deals with Jaina dogmatics. The work gives a vivid picture of the life and work of Mahāvīra, his relationship to his disciples and contemporaries, as also an account of the predecessors of Mahāvīra and of pious ascetics, who attained great divinity.

(vi) Nāyā-dhammakahāo (Jñātādharmakathāḥ). This sixth Āṅga means 'Examples and religious narratives'. Consisting of two parts, Book I has 21 chapters, each of which describes an independent narrative, while Book II is more allied to the seventh and ninth Āṅgas; the story of goddess Kālī occurs here. The Digambara Jainas have given the title, Jñātṛi-dharma-kathāṅga to the sixth Āṅga of the Śvetāmbaras, viz., Nāyā-dhammakahāo.

(vii) Uvāsagadasāo (Upāsakadaśāḥ). This seventh Āṅga, consisting of ten chapters, prescribes the duties of the lay adherents; there are also legends of ten pious householders, most of them wealthy merchants, who were eventually converted to Jainism. The legends are told after a stereotyped pattern in the most monotonous manner.

(viii) Antagaḍaḍasāo (Antakṛiddasāh). This eighth Āṅga deals with the pious ascetics; originally it consisted of 10 chapters but is now divided into eight sections. There are several comms. on it, including one by Abhayadeva Suri.

(ix) Anuttaravavaiyadusāo (Anuttaraupapātīkadasāh). This ninth Āṅga, consisting of ten chapters, deals with pious ascetics, who have attained the highest regions of heaven. It is now divided into three sections with 33 lessons; there are several comms. on it. This Āṅga embodies the Kṛishṇa legend in a corrupted Jain version, related so as to suit Jain requirements; here Kṛishṇa is made into a pious Jain.

(x) Pañhā-vāgarāṇām (Praśna-vyākaraṇām). This tenth Āṅga, which is in the form of questions and explanations, deals in its ten sections with the five great vows and the five corresponding virtues.

(xi) Vivaga-suyam (Vipāka-śrutam). This eleventh Āṅga describes legends on the consequences of good and evil deeds. Goyama Indabhuṭi, the oldest pupil of Mahāvīra, sees various unhappy people, and at his request Mahāvīra explains by what actions in a former birth the person has deserved such misfortune.

(xii) Dīḥhivāya (Dṛishtivāda). This twelfth Āṅga, a doctrine of the various views, has five divisions and deals with: (i) Parikammam (16 preparations for the right comprehension of Sūtras), (ii) Suttāl (88 Sūtras in which the heretical doctrines are confuted), (iii) Puvvage (the 14 Puvvas), (iv) Anuyoga (legends of Tirthaṅkaras and other great men) and Chūliyā (Addenda).

The existence of twelve Uvaṅgas (q.v.) or Upāṅgas is additional evidence of the fact that twelve Āṅgas once existed.

ĀṄGABĀHYA. General designation of the fourteen works outside the Āṅgas (q.v.), according to Digambaras. The first four such works in Prakrit are: Sāmāyika, Chaturvimśati-stava, Vandana and Pratikramaṇa, corresponding to the four sections of the second Mūla-sutta (q.v.). Besides these, the only texts to be found among the Angabāhyas which also occur in the Canon of the Śvētāmbaras, are the Desaveyāliya, Uttarajjhayaṇa and Vavahāra (qq.v.).

ĀṄGARĀṄGA A Sanskrit work on erotics by Kalyāṇamalla of the 16th century.

ANGIRAS. One of the twenty traditional Sanskrit writers of original Smṛiti, whose date is uncertain. An Angiras-smṛiti and a Bṛihad-angiras-smṛiti exist; references are found to a Madhyama-angiras.

ĀṄGIRAS-GRIHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra)

ĀṄGLA-JARMANĪ-YUDDHA-VARṆANA. A history of the First World War (1914-18) in Sanskrit, written by Tirumala Bukkapattana. Śrinivāśchārya, who flourished in the 1st quarter of 20th cent. A.D.

ANGREJA-CHANDRIKĀ. A Sanskrit work by Vināyaka Bhaṭṭa (1801), which deals with the British Dominion in India.

ĀṄGUTTARA-NIKĀYA. See Sutta-piṭaka.

ANIMA SEN GUPTA. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Critical Study of the Philosophy of Rāmānuja.

ANIRUDDHA BHATṬA (fl. 12th cent.). One of the early Smṛiti writers of Bengal, who is the author in Sanskrit of the Smṛiti digests called Hāralatā and Pitṛidayitā (also called Karmopadeśini-paddhati (qq.v.). A Chāturmāsya-paddhati is also attributed to him; Vallasena, king of Bengal, mentions him as his preceptor. Aniruddha was a resident of Vihārapaṭaka on the Gaṅgā, and was a Dharmādhyaksha.

ANJANEYA ŚARMĀ. A modern Sanskrit poet of Tirupati, who has published in a short Suprabhāta on Venkateśvara.

ANNADĀCHARAṆA TARKACHŪḌĀMAṆĪ (b. 1862). A Sanskrit writer of Bengal, who later became Professor of Mīmāṃsā, Sāṅkhya and Yoga in the Benaras Hindu University. Besides several works on different Śāstras and on poetics, his poems are Rāmābhyudaya and Mahāprasthāna (both Mahākāvya). His stray verses and poems have appeared in the Journals Vidodaya and Samskṛita-Chandrikā; one of his poems is a lament on the bygone glories of India.

ANNAMBHAṬṬA (fl. latter part of the 17th cent.). An Āndhra Sanskrit scholar and author of the celebrated Tarka-saṅgraha (q.v.) and its comm. called Dipikā; he wrote also Mitāksharā (a comm. on the Aṣṭādhyāyī; q.v.), as well as Uddiyotana (a comm. on Kaīyaṇa's Pradīpa).

ANNAṆGARACHĀRIAS, P.B. A modern writer of Kañchi, who tr. the Vaishnavite canonical hymns of the Tamil Ālvars into Sanskrit (Conjeevaram, 1947, 1951, 1953, 1954).

ANNAYĀCHĀRYA (fl. 11th cent.?). A Sanskrit writer, whose Rāmānuja-vijaya deals with the life of Rāmānujāchārya (q.v.).

ANNAYĀRYA (fl. early 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Tattvagunādarśa sets forth the comparative merits of Śaivism and Vaishnavism in the form of a conversation between Jaya and Vijaya.

ANQUETIL-DUPERRON. See Perron.

ANTAGAḌADASĀO. See Āṅga.

ANTAKṚIDDĀŚĀḤ. See Antagaḍadasāo.

ANTARAKATHĀ-SAṆGRAHA. A collection of Sanskrit narratives by Rājaśekhara; it contains a version of the Judgement of Solomon.

ANUBHĀSHYA. A Sanskrit comm. by Vallabhāchārya (q.v.) on the Brahma-sūtras (q.v.) of Badarāyaṇa; it propounds the Suddhadvaita system or pure monism. According to this work, Bhakti is both the means and the end; it is given by God and it comes by His grace. The teacher on earth is regarded as divine and receives divine honours.

ANUBHŪTISVARŪPĀCHĀRYA (fl. c. 1250). A Sanskrit grammarian and the traditional founder of the Sarasvata school. His Sārasvata-prakriyā contains only 700 Sūtras as against some 4000 Sūtras of Pāṇini. See Sārasvata-vyākaraṇa.

ANUGĪTĀ. A part of the Sanskrit Mahābhārata (Book XIV. 16-51), which describes the spiritual instructions given by Kṛiṣṇa to Arjuna at the end of the Mahābhārata war. It also contains the legends of Utaṅka, the preservation of the foetus of Uttarā from the Brahmāstra hurled by Aśvatthāman and an account of the Aśvamedha yajña by Yudhishthira.

ANUKRAMANIS. 'Indices' of Ṛishis, metres, deities and hymns, which, closely connected with the Vedāṅga literature, give the contents of the Vedic Samhitās with regard to different items; Śaunaka and Kātyāyana composed such Anukramanīs. Bṛihaddevatā and Rigvidhāna, ascribed to Śaunaka, deal with legends and the magic powers respectively and these are related to the Rigveda. Anukramanīs are also attached to the Sāmaveda and the Black and White Yajurveda. See Vedāṅga.

ANUMĀNA-DĪDHITI. The most celebrated Sanskrit work of Raghunātha Śiromaṇi, which is an authoritative comm. on the Anumāna-khaṇḍa of Tattva-chintāmaṇi (q.v.) of Gaṅgeśa; it is part of the author's Tattva-chintāmaṇi-dīdhiti.

ANU-NYĀSA. A Sanskrit grammar of the Bengal school of Pāṇini. See Indu.

ANUPAPĀTIKA. See Uvavāiya.

ANURUDDHA. A Buddhist writer and author of the Pali work, Abhidhammamattā-saṅgaha or Abhidhamma-saṅgaha (q.v.). He was born in Tamil country, lived in Tanjore and finally settled in the Mūlasomavihāra of Ceylon in about 1100. Paramattha-vinichchaya and Nama-rūpa-Parichchheda are two other philosophical works attributed to Anuruddha.

ANUTTARAUPAPĀTIKADAŚĀH. See Anuttarovavāiyadasāo.

ANUTTAROVAVĀIYADASĀO. See Aṅga.

ANUVAYA-RAYANA-PAIU (Anuvratī-ratna-pradīpa.) See Lakkhana.

ANUVRATA-RATNA-PRADĪPA. See Lakkhana.

ANUYOGADĀRA (Anuyogadvāra). Sometimes counted among the Pañṇas (q.v.), but it is usually mentioned either before or after the Mūla-sutta (q.v.) as an independent text standing outside the group. It is an encyclopaedic Prakrit work dealing with everything a Jaina monk should know; it is in the form of questions and answers in prose interspersed with verses. While some profane branches of knowledge are also discussed, it contains an enumeration of 'false tradition', which according to this work begins with Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata. There are several comms. including one by Maladhara Hemachandra.

ANUYOGADVĀRA. See Anuyogadvāra.

ANYOKTI-MUKTĀLATĀ-ŚATAKA. A Sanskrit work, consisting of 103 detached verses, in varied metres, by Śambhu (q.v.), the verses being allegorical and devoted to description of natural objects, feminine grace, etc.

APADĀNA. A part of the Khuddaka-nikāya. See Sutta-piṭaka.

ĀPADEVA (early 17th cent.). Author of the Mīmāṃsā-nyāya-prakāśa (q.v.), popularly called Āpadevī, a guide-book for the Purva-mīmāṃsā philosophy. From Smṛiti-kaustubha, written by his son, Anantadeva, it is learnt that he came of a learned Mārāṭhā Brāhmaṇa family.

APARĀDITYA. Same as Aparārka (q.v.).

APARĀRKA (fl. probably first half of 12th cent.). Author of a huge Sanskrit comm. : Aparārka-yājñavalkya-dharma-śāstra-nibandha (popularly known as Aparārka; q.v.) on the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti (q.v.). Also called Aparāditya, the author appears from his work to have been a Śilahāra king born in the family of Jimutavāhana of the Vidyādhara race.

APARĀRKA. An authoritative Sanskrit commentary by Aparārka (q.v.) or Aparāditya, its full title being Aparārka-yājñavalkya-dharma-śāstra-nibandha. Though a comm. on the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti, it is a sort of digest, because it cites numerous passages from different Smṛiti works, and discusses different views, finally giving its own conclusions. The work was probably composed after 1126.

APAROKSHĀNUBHŪTI. A Sanskrit metrical composition by Śankarācārya (q.v.), in which he lays down his philosophical views.

ĀPASTAMBA. One of the twenty traditional Sanskrit writers of original Smṛiti and author of a Gṛihya-sūtra, a Dharmasūtra, a Śrautasūtra, a Śulvasūtra, Āpastamba-mantra-pāṭha and Piṭṛmedha-sūtra; the Āpastamba-dharma-sūtra is assigned by P.V. Kane to some period between 600-300 B.C. The Āpastamba school is supposed to have originated in South India.

ĀPASTAMBA-DHARMASŪTRA. See Dharma-sūtra.

ĀPASTAMBA-GṚIHYASŪTRA. See Gṛihya-sūtra.

ĀPASTAMBA-ŚRAUTASŪTRA. See Śrautasūtra.

ĀPASTAMBA-ŚULVASŪTRA. See Śulvasūtra.

ĀPIŚ ALI. An ancient Sanskrit grammarian, mentioned in Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī (IV. 3.98).

APOHA-SIDDHI. A Sanskrit tract on Nyāya by Ratnakīrti (q.v.), according to which, words denote neither the positive objects nor negative ones. The essence of meaning consists in the simultaneous cognition of the positive and negative sides. All determinate objects have a positive nature which excludes others.

APPĀ DIKSHITA. A Sanskrit writer, a favourite of king Shāhji of Tanjore (r. 1687-1711) and author of Śṛṅgāra-māñjarī-sāhajiya (a drama describing the life and history of king Shāhji), Madana-bhūṣaṇa-bhāṇa (a drama of bhāṇa type) and Gaurī-mayūra-champū.

APPA RAO, P.Ś.R. A scholar, who in collaboration with P. Sri Rama Sastri wrote A Monograph on Bharata's Nāṭya Śāstra (Indian Dramatology: tr. from the Telugu original into English; 1967).

APPARĀYA. A Sanskrit author of a comm. on the Amarakośa. (q.v.); he flourished at the court of Singabhūpāla (c. 1400).

APPĀ ŚARMĀ (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, whose chief work is Sanskrit tr. of the Deserted Village (Dharwar, 1915).

APPĀŚĀSTRĪ RĀSHIVĀḌEKAR (1873-1913). A Sanskrit writer of Rāshivāḍe in Kolhapur, whose writings appeared in the Sanskrit journal Saṁskṛita-chandrikā, of which he later became the editor. He bore the titles Vidyāvāchaspati and Vidyālaṅkāra. His chief works are : Svadeśīya-kathā (a critical review of the British rule), Lāvanyamayī (a Sanskrit adaptation of Bankim Chandra's Bengali romance of that name), Kṛishṇakāntasya-nirvāṇa, Indirā (adapted from Bengali), easy comms. on some plays, Sanskrit tr. of "Alladin and Wonderful Lamp", Durvṛttadhikkṛti (1907), Pracham-bhugola-vijñānam and a work on ancient Indian astronomy. Appaśāstrī was also a pioneer in developing the form called Letters as some of his letters published show.

APPĀ VĀJPEYIN (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Sunīti-kusumamālā (Kumbhakoṇam, 1927) is the tr. of the celebrated Tamil classic, Tirukkural, and is accompanied by the author's Sanskrit gloss.

APPAN, M.P. A modern Malayalam poet, who has rendered his select Malayalam poems into Sanskrit (Trivandrum, 1976-77).

APPAYYA DIKSHITA. (1554-1626). A famous philosopher, who has contributed a good deal to the study of poetics. His chief Sanskrit works are : Kuvalayānanda (q.v.), Chitra-mīmāṃsā, Vṛtti-vārtika (all on poetics), Lakṣaṇa-ratnāvalī (on dramaturgy) and Prākṛitamāṇidīpa (a comm. on Vararuchi's grammar). His views on poetics were subjected to a severe scrutiny by Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja (q.v.) and thus a number of intricate and finer aspects of Sanskrit rhetorics came to be well-defined in this age. He is the author also of more than a hundred works on Advaita philosophy and Śaiva siddhānta, the important being : Śivārkaṇḍī-dīpikā (a comm. on Śrīkaṇṭha's comm. on Brahma-sūtras), Chaturmata-sārasaṅgraha (summary of the doctrines of Maṇḍiśa, Rāmānuja, Śaṅkara and Śrīkaṇṭha) and Vedānta-kalpataru-parimāla (q.v.). He attempted to build up a synthesis between Vedantic monism, Śaivism and the Siddhānta or Āgama schools. His synthetic doctrine known as the Ratna-traya-parikṣhā, seeks to establish the identity of Śaṅkara-Pārvaṭī and Śaṅkara-Narayaṇa concepts. He lived under the patronage of the Nāyakas of Vellore. Also called Appa or Apya, he is to be distinguished from Appayya, a son of his brother and author of Alankara-tilaka.

APPAYYA DIKSHITA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Edayattumaṅgalam, who, in his Vinātā-bhujana, defends the Śaivite tenets.

APTE, VĀMAN SHIVARĀM. A modern scholar, whose chief works are Practical Sanskrit-English Dictionary, Students English-Sanskrit Dictionary and Students Sanskrit Dictionary.

APTE, VĀMAN TRIYAMBAK. A Sanskrit poet, whose Śrīgurudeva Kathāṃṛitam (1971) deals with the life-history of R.D. Ranade, the scholar-philosopher.

APTE, VINĀYAKA MAHĀDEVA. A modern Indian scholar, whose chief works are Marathi tr. of Rīgveda, Social and Religious Life in the Gṛīhyasūtras (1939), All about Vrata in the Rīgveda, Non-Rīgvedic Mantras Rubricated in the Āśvalāyana Gṛīhyasūtras : Sources and Interpretation, and Rīgvedic Mantras in Their Ritual Setting in the Gṛīhyasūtras (with special reference to the Āśvalāyana-gṛīhyasūtras), and articles on Puranic studies.

ĀRĀDHANA-ŚĀRA. A Prakrit metrical work by Devasenāchārya (q.v.) on the essence of worship.

ĀRĀNYAKA (Forest-texts). The concluding portions of or as appendices to the Brāhmanas (q.v.), written in Sanskrit. They are so called—it is generally supposed—because their contents are of so secret and uncanny character that they spelt danger to the uninitiated and had, therefore, to be learnt in the forest and not in the village. They deal neither with the performance, nor the explanation but with the mysticism and symbolism of the yajña, and priestly philosophy. Meditation, rather than performance, is the spirit of their teachings and they naturally substitute a simpler ceremony for the complicated one of the Brāhmanas. The Āraṇyakas themselves form a transition to the Upanishads, the oldest of which are either included in or appended to the Āraṇyakas, but it is often difficult to draw a line of demarcation between them. Indeed, the Āraṇyakas and Upanishads by themselves and not the system of philosophy based on them, were originally called “Vedānta”, for the reason that they stand at the end of Veda, and being the most obtruse and mystical of the Śruti works, they were naturally taught to the pupil towards the end of his apprenticeship period and also because they formed the end of the daily Vedic-recital.

The Āraṇyakas rendered important service when they stressed the efficacy of the inner or mental yajña as distinguished from the outer or formal yajña and thus they helped to bridge the gulch between karma-mārga, which was the sole concern of the Brāhmanas, and the jñāna-mārga, which the Upanishads advocated.

Given below are all the Āraṇyakas—five in all—in their chronological order :—

(i) Aitareya-āraṇyaka. Appended to the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa of the Rigveda, it consists of 5 Books which are treated as separate Āraṇyakas. •Āraṇyaka I deals with the Soma yajña from the ritual point of view; II is intermixed with theosophical speculation on Prāṇa and Puruṣa, and is Upanishadic in character, its last four chapters constituting the Aitareya-upanishad; III gives allegorical and mystical meanings of the Samhitā, Pada and Krama Pāṭhas (texts) and then vowels, semi-vowels, etc. ; IV gives the few Mahā-nāmni verses to be recited on the fifth day of the Mahāvratā ceremony, while V gives further details about the Nishkevalya sāstra recited at midday in the Mahāvratā. Thus these are clearly of the nature of appendices to the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa. Books I-III are attributed to Aitareya Mahidāsa himself, the author of the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa; IV to Āśvalāyana, while V to Śaunaka, teacher of Āśvalāyana, both being Sūtra-authors.

(ii) Śāṅkhāyana or Kaushītaki-āraṇyaka. The concluding portion of the Kaushītaki-brāhmaṇa of the Rigveda, which agrees very closely with the Aitareya-āraṇyaka in its contents. It consists of 15 Chapters : Chaps. III to VI constitute the Kaushītaki-upanishad (VI mentions Uśinara, Matsya, Kāśī, Videha and Kuru-Panchāla), while XIII borrows chiefly from the Bṛihadāraṇyaka. The work is by a pupil of Śāṅkhāyana or even of his descendant. According to Weber, Kaushītaki-āraṇyaka was once separately available.

(iii) Taittirīya-āraṇyaka. A continuation of the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa and attached to the Black Yajurveda, it consists of 10 Prapāṭhakas or Chapters, commonly called Arāṇas, which are named from the words with which they begin. Chaps. I to VI are of a liturgical character : I and III deal with the manner of preparing certain sacred sacrificial fires, II to preparations to the study of scripture, while IV, V and VI with purificatory sacrifice and offerings to the Manes; VII to IX constitute the Taittirīya-upanishad and X, a very late addition to the Āraṇyaka, is called Mahānārāyaṇa-upanishad.

(iv) Bṛihadāraṇyaka. It is the 14th Book of the Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa, attached to the White Yajurveda. It is in name only an Āraṇyaka, the last six Chaps. of which constitute the celebrated Upanishad of that name. It is available in two recensions : Mādhyandina and Kāṇva. There is one more Āraṇyaka attached to the Yajurveda, called Maitrāyaṇīya, but this Āraṇyaka is popularly known as Upanishad of that name.

(v) Talavakāra-āraṇyaka. For the Sāmaveda, the only Āraṇyakas are the Āraṇyaka-like section of the Chhāndogya-upanishad, which belongs probably to the Tūṇḍya-mahā-brāhmaṇa and the Jaiminīya-upanishad brāhmaṇa, which is nothing but an Āraṇyaka of the Jaiminīya or Talavakāra school of the Sāmaveda and comprises the well-known Kena (or Talavakāra) Upanishad.

ARBMAN, I. A Swedish Indologist, whose chief work is Rudra (Uppsala, 1922). He sees in Rudra, a primitive popular deity, the prototype of Śiva.

ĀRCHA-JYOTISHA. A Sanskrit work, which is a summary of the astronomical knowledge of the Aryans upto about 2nd cent. A.D.

ARDHAMĀGADHĪ DICTIONARY. See Ratnachandra.

ARISIMHA (fl. 13th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and son of Lavaṇasimha, who had the appellation Thakkura. Amarachandra (q.v.), who was Arisimha's friend and co-worker in literature, got 'Siddhasarasvatī' charm from him. They jointly composed Kavikalpalatā sūtras, with a comm., which is a practical book of advice to poets. Arisimha composed Kavitarahasya and Sukṛitasāṅkirtana (q.v.), the latter a paucyric in praise of Vastupāla, a minister of the Vāghela princes of Gujarāt. See Someśvaradatta, Udayaprabha Sūri, Bāalachandra Sūri.

ARJUNA-RĀVAṆĪYA. Same as Rāvaṇārjunīya (q.v.).

ARJUNA WĀDKAR. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Kaṇṭakāñjali is a series of verses of satire on every topic of Independent India: politics, education, society, etc.

ARKA SOMAYĀJI, D A modern Sanskrit poet of Tirupati, who has published some Kāvya in Sanskrit. His Śrīmat Sītārāmāñjaneyam (1984) is an enlarged version of his Prasanna-Āñjaneya; in the process of revision, the author has added some 300 verses, describing the sea, the mountain, the seasons, etc. In 15 cantos, it deals mainly with the story of Sundara-kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa. It contains echoes from the Meghadūta and Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa.

ARMAND, JORGE. A modern scholar, whose chief work is : Archaeological Excavations in Durladi Nala (An early Palaeolithic Pebble-Tool Workshop in Central India; 1983).

ARNOLD, EDWIN (1832-1904). An English poet, who composed The Light of Asia on Gautama Buddha.

ARNOLD, E.V. An English Indologist, whose chief works are Vedic Metre in its Historical Development (1905; a comprehensive treatise on R̥gvedic metres) and Literary Epochs in the R̥gveda (on the chronological groups in R̥gveda on the basis of linguistic criteria).

ĀRSHEYA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

ARTHASAṆGRAHA. A famous Sanskrit work on Mimāṃsā philosophy, by Laupākshi Bhāskara (q.v.).

ARTHAŚĀSTRA. One of the earliest extant Sanskrit treatises on politics and statecraft, composed by Kauṭilya (q.v.) or Chanakya, who is reported to have been the Prime Minister of Chandragupta Maurya (4th cent. B.C.). The work holds a place in India as The Prince by Machiavelli has in Europe. Though the earliest extant work of this class, it contains references to a large number of treatises of no less than five schools and of thirteen individual writers, which were considered as authoritative in his days. Many of these are also mentioned in the Mahābhārata, which deals with the subject under the name 'Rājadharmā'. The Arthaśāstra, however, surpassed all the previous works and came to be regarded as the standard work on the subject.

The work is divided into 15 adhikaraṇas with 180 prakaraṇas; by another device, perhaps a later one, it is divided into adhyāyas, separated from one another by the insertion of verses summarising the subject of each adhyāya. Its aim is stated to be that of laying down means for the acquisition and maintenance of dominion over the earth. The various topics discussed Adhikaraṇa-wise are: (1) the education and discipline of princes; the qualification of ministers and ministerial officers; the different kinds of spies; measures of a king's personal safety; the daily duties of a king; (2) the superintendents of different departments and the departments themselves; the administration and fortification of towns, industrial establishments, regulation of prostitution, etc.; (3) civil law; (4) repression of evil-doers and criminal law; (5) methods to remove state-enemies including an undesirable minister and filling the treasury of the king; salaries of government servants; (6) seven elements of politics, inter-state relations; (7) six political expedients; (8) vices of the kings, and calamities, such as floods, fire, etc. to the State; (9) and (10) military campaigns; (11) dissension among hostile aristocracies; (12) means by which a weak king may win wars; (13) capture of fortified cities; (14) recipes for preparing powders and mixtures to produce illusive appearances, spread diseases, cause murder, blindness or madness; (15) description of the plan of the work; 32 methodological principles used in the discussion.

The form of the work is said to be a combination of Sūtra and Bhāṣya (comm.). The term sūtra probably applies to the headings of the prakaraṇas, and the rest is a comm. on it with a certain mixture of verses. Its language is correct Sanskrit and its style, though generally simple, is enigmatic at places. The presence of many obscure and technical terms renders the work at times difficult to understand.

Some scholars are of the opinion that it is not a work of Kautilya, but rather of a school which followed his views. As a matter of fact, ever since its publication in the year A.D. 1909, there has been a prolonged controversy as regards its authenticity and date, which does not seem to have been finally settled even now.

ARTOLA, GEORGE T. A modern Indologist, whose chief studies are : Panchatantra Manuscripts from South India (Madras, 1957) and Ten Tales from the Tantrapākhyāna (Madras, 1965); he worked also on the Kanika Nīti in the Mahābhārata.

ARUN BHATṬĀCHĀRJEE. A scholar, whose chief work is : Greater India.

ARUNAGIRI NĀTHA I. A Sanskrit poet and dramatist, patronised by Paruḥhadevarāya or Devarāya II of the Vijayanagara (1422-48). He was son of Rājanātha I and Abhirām-āmbikā; his maternal grandfather Abhirāma was a scholar in Śrikanṭhāgama and was known as Ḍiṇḍima-prabhu (Ḍiṇḍima I). Arunagiri Nātha's fame was always proclaimed by beat of ḍiṇḍima and he was therefore called Ḍiṇḍima-kavi-sārvabhauma (Ḍiṇḍima II); he vanquished Kavimalla in disputation. His Somavalli-yogānanda, a Prahasana, ridicules in humorous vein the amorous overtures of an ascetic to a fallen married woman.

ARUNAGIRI NĀTHA II (Kumāra Ḍiṇḍima or Ḍiṇḍima IV). A Sanskrit dramatist, who was son of Rājanātha II. Patronised by Viranarasimha of Vijayanagara (r. 1505-9) and Kṛishṇadeva Rāya (r. 1509-29), he was versed in many languages and bore the title Ḍiṇḍima-kavi-sārvabhauma and Kavirājārāja. He is the author of the Virabhadra-vijaya (q.v.), a Ḍima, enacted at the festival of Rājanātha at Bhūpatirāyapuram.

ĀRUR BHATṬATIRI (fl. 1830). A Sanskrit poet, who was patronised by king Rāma Varma of Cochin. Also called Vandārūbhṭṭa, he is the author of Uttara-natshadha, describing the later life of Nala; the work replaces in a measure the lost portion of Śriharsha's Naishadha-charita (q.v.) and must be regarded as a sequel to it.

ARVIND SHARMĀ. A modern scholar, who is the author of Spokes of the Wheel (on Buddhism), Textual Studies in Hinduism and Religious Ferment in Modern India (with Hal W French).

ĀRYABHATA. (b. A.D. 476). An Indian astronomer and mathematician, who was probably born at Kusumapura or Pāṭaliputra. His extant works in Sanskrit are : Āryabhaṭīya (q.v.), Daśagītikā-sūtra and Āryaśhaṭa; he appears to have written also the Sūrya-siddhānta-prakāśa a comm. on the Sūrya-siddhānta. Āryabhata was the first to treat Mathematics in relation to astronomy and to hold that the earth was a sphere and rotated on its axis, and that the eclipses were caused by the shadow of the earth falling on the moon. He also taught that the daily rotation of the heavens was a mere appearance due to the axial rotation of the earth. In the solution of quadratic equations and the application of algebra to geometry and astronomy, he anticipated some of the discoveries of modern algebra. He also arrived at a remarkably accurate value of π , viz. 3.1416 and used letters of the alphabet to indicate numerals. His mathematical system is based on the decimal place-value system, unknown to other ancient peoples, but which is now in use throughout the civilised world. With the doubtful exception of the Bakhshali manuscript which is referred by some to c. A.D. 200, the earliest use of the system occurs in the Āryabhaṭīya, and it is found in all later mathematical works. The importance of this system for the development of Science in general and of Mathematics in particular, cannot be exaggerated. Thus Āryabhaṭa deservedly occupies a very high place among Indian astronomers and has had many followers and commentators.

ĀRYABHAṬA II (fl. c. A.D. 950). A Sanskrit writer on Mathematics and astronomy and author of the Ārya-siddhānta (q.v.; also called Āryabhaṭa-siddhānta or Mahasiddhānta); he was known to Alberuni.

ĀRYABHAṬĪY4. A Sanskrit work by Āryabhaṭa (q.v.), written in verse couplets, which gives the rules of Mathematics as known in the author's time. Most of this work deals with astronomy and spherical trigonometry, the remainder consisting of 33 rules in arithmetic, algebra and plane trigonometry, including quadratic equations, the sums of powers of the first n natural numbers and a table of sines. The work was pub. in Sanskrit at Leiden in 1874 (French tr. 1879).

ĀRYA DEVA (fl. c. A.D. 250). A Buddhist Sanskrit poet, also called Deva. He was known as Kānadeva (the one-eyed Deva) and Nilanetra (the blue-eyed one). From Hsien Tsang and I-tsing it is learnt that he was a pupil of Nāgārjuna (q.v.), who appointed him as his successor. Ārya Deva's biography was tr. into Chinese by Kumaraśīva

(c. A.D. 405). Besides Chaturṣatikā (q.v.), which displays author's good power of irony, the Hastavāla-prakarana or Muṣṭi-prakarana is attributed to him. Two short treatises, ascribed to Ārya Deva, are tr. in the Chinese Tripiṭaka. The work, called Chittaviśuddhi-prakarana is sometimes attributed to him.

ĀRYA MUNI (b. c. 185 :). A Vedic scholar, who also composed Divyananda Mahākāvya (in Hindi; 1924). His Upanishad Bhāṣya, a comm. on the ten principal Upanishads, refutes the doctrine of non-dualism. His other works are : Vaidika Kāla kā Itihāsa (1925), a comm. on the six schools of Hindu philosophy, Hindi tr. of Sāṅkhya-pravachana-sūtra, and jointly with Śivaśaṅkara Kāvya-tīrtha, a comm. on the Rigveda (only on the portion, on which Dayānanda Sarasvatī did not comment).

ĀRYĀ-SAPTAŚATI. A Sanskrit collection by Govardhana (fl. 12th cent. A.D.) of 700 stanzas in the Āryā metre, the verses being on various subjects, erotic in character. Govardhana seems to have used Hāla's Sattasai, a Prakrit poem, for his model. The stanzas are arranged in an alphabetical order and the verses depicted lack the variety of Hāla's poem. The poet refers to Lakshmaṇasena in his poem as a master of arts. There are comms. on it by Gokulachandra, by Ananta, son of Tryambaka, by Gaṅgārāma and one anonymous.

ĀRYĀ-SAPTAŚATĪ. A Sanskrit work by Viśveśvara, composed on the model of Govardhana's work.

ĀRYĀSHṬAŚAT4. A Sanskrit work by Āryabhaṭa on astronomy. Its 108 verses in Āryā metre are divided into Gaṇita (33 stanzas on mathematics), Kālakriyā (25 stanzas on measurement of time) and Gola (50 stanzas on the sphere).

ĀRYĀ-SIDDHĀNTA. A Sanskrit work on astronomy, by Āryabhata II, also called Āryabhaṭa-siddhānta or Mahāsiddhānta. Assigned to c. 950, in its numerical notation it differs entirely from Āryabhaṭa; it consists of 18 chapters.

ĀRYA ŚRUTAKĪRTI (fl. 1123). A Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Pañchavastu, a recast of the Jainendra-vyākaraṇa (q.v.) for beginners.

ĀRYA ŚŪRA (fl. 3rd or 4th cent. A.D.). A Sanskrit writer and author of the Sanskrit rendering of Jātaka tales in the form of Jātakamālā. The Chinese traveller I-tsing mentions the Jātakamālā, and frescoes of Ajanta bear out the existence of the text at that time. The stories are in the form of fables, anecdotes, and tales in prose interspersed with verse. Nearly all of the tales are extant in the Pali Jātaka book, and twelve of them are also found in the Pali Chariyāpiṭaka (q.v.). The tales describe the life of Buddha in his former births and also illustrate the pāramitās, the various perfections, ascribed to the Buddha to be. The Jātakamālā was rendered into Chinese in A.D. 434 and Ārya Śūra, therefore, probably lived in the 3rd or 4th cent. A.D. His prose and verse alike are careful and polished, and, though he is not averse to the use of fairly long compounds, especially in prose, he employs them naturally and is seldom obscure.

ĀRYA-VIDHĀNA. See Viśveśvaranātha Reu.

ĀRYENDRA ŚARMĀ. See Śarmā, Āryendra.

ĀRYODAYA-KĀVYA. See Gangāprasāda Upādhyāya.

ĀŚĀDHARA (d. 1240). A Jaina Sanskrit poet of Mālwā, and author of more than twenty works, the Sāgara-dharmāmṛita and Anāgāra-dharmāmṛita being the most famous. He wandered from place to place due to fear of harassment by the Muslim raiders, and makes mention of five kings of his time: Vindhya-varmā, Subhaṭa-varmā, Arjuna-varmā, Devapāla and Jaitugideva. He was reputed as 'Kali-Kālidāsa' due to his poetic attainments.

ASAGA (fl. c. 853). A Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of the Vardhamāna-charita (also called Mahāvīra-charita or Sanmitra-charita), an epic in 18 cantos dealing with the life of Mahāvīra. According to the Praśasti occurring at the end of a MS. of this work, Asaga composed eight works, including the present one, at Dharala in Choladeśa in c. 853.

ASAHAAYA (fl. between 600 and 700). A Sanskrit commentator on the Nārada-smṛiti (q.v.), from quotations elsewhere, it would appear that he commented on the works of Gautama and Manu. The commentator has been quoted by Medhātithi.

ASAṅGA (fl. 4th cent.). A Buddhist Sanskrit poet-philosopher and a pupil of Maitreya. He appears to have been born in a Brahmana family in Purushapura (Peshawar) and was originally a follower of the Sarvāstivāda school. The Vijñānavāda school is represented by Asaṅga's Yogācārabhūmi-sāstra and the Mahāyāna-sūtrālaṅkāra in verse, with comment. Apart from these, he wrote ten other works which are available in Chinese and Tibetan translations, e.g., Bodhisattva-bhūmi.

ĀSCHARYA-CHŪḌĀMAṆI. See Chūḍāmaṇi.

ASHTĀDHYĀYĪ. The earliest extant and the most authoritative Sanskrit grammar by Pāṇini (q.v.), dealing with the then spoken language, which was more akin to the prose of the Brāhmaṇas than to the Classical Sanskrit Literature and this explains the absence in later literature of many forms and expressions explained by the great grammarian.

Comprising of some 4,000 Sūtras, divided into ashṭa adhyāyas (eight chapters), each of which further sub-divided into four sections called Pādas, it also contains Vārtika-sūtra (supplementary rules) by Kātyāyana (q.v.). The work is aimed chiefly to describe the bhāṣā, or the current medium of expression. The Vedic usages are marked out by such terms as chhandasi, nigame or mantra. Eminent Western scholars consider Pāṇini's grammatical system as the most scientific in the world. The work mentions a few earlier grammarians, e.g., Śākatāyana, Śaunaka, Aṣṭakī, Sākalya, Senaka, Sphoṭayana, which indicates the existence of a long tradition of grammatical studies before the days of Pāṇini.

ĀSHṬAMI-MAHOTSAVA-CHAMPŪ. A Sanskrit poem by Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa (q.v.), which gives a detailed and interesting account of the annual festival of the Śiva temple at Vaikom in Kerala.

ASHTAMŪRTI (fl. c. 16th cent.) A Sanskrit scholar, who commented in his Āmoda on Bāṇabhaṭṭa's Kādambarī; the work is in verse.

ASHṬĀṅGA-HRIDĀYA-SAMHITĀ. A Sanskrit medical work on Ayurveda, by Vāgbhata II (q.v.), though some scholars are of the view that one Vāgbhata wrote both this work and the Ashṭāṅga-saṅgraha (q.v.). Dealing with the usual eight topics of Ayurveda and like Ashṭāṅga-saṅgraha, divided into six sections (sthānas), the Sūtra-sthāna of this work is regarded even better than that of Charaka and Suśruta (qq.v.). It also deals with surgery and was quoted in an Arabic work in A.D. 888. It was tr. into the Tibetan language.

ASHṬĀṅGA-SANĠRAHA. A Sanskrit work on Ayurveda, by Vāgbhata I (q.v.), though some scholars think that this and the 1st tāṅga-hṛidāya-samhitā (q.v.) were written by one Vāgbhata. In prose and verse, it deals with the eight topics of Ayurveda. Its six sections are: Sūtrasthāna (40 chapters), Śārīra-sthāna (12), Nidāna-sthāna (16), Chikitsā-sthāna (40), Kalpa-sthāna (8) and Uttara-sthāna (50 chapters). Following and even reproducing portions of the Suśruta-samhitā, (q.v.), it quotes verses from the Yoga-śataka, which is a little anterior to I-tsing (7th cent. A.D.). The work probably was written during 7th and 10th centuries. There is also a Tibetan version of it.

ASHṬASĀHASRIKĪ PRAJÑĀPĀRAMITĪ. Perhaps the earliest of the Sanskrit writings known as Prajñāpāramitās (q.v.). In its 32 chapters, it contains dialogues between the Buddha and his disciples Subhūti, Śāriputra and Purna Maṭṭrayaṇ-putra, and often the lord of gods, and sometimes a Bodhisattva joins them. Its contents have been expanded into larger works and condensed to form shorter ones.

ASHṬĀVIMŚATI-TATTVA. See Smṛiti-tattva.

ASIM KUMĀR CHATTERJEE. A modern scholar, whose chief work is A Comprehensive History of Jainism, upto 1000 A.D.

ASSALĀYANA-SŪTRA. Sūtra No 93 of the Majjhima Nikāya (q.v.).

ĀSURI ANANTĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit writer, whose Champūrāghava (1808) in Champū is on the story of Rāma.

ĀŚVA-CHIKITSĀ. A Sanskrit work on horse-lore, attributed to Nakula and assigned to a period before A.D. 1000. See Āśva-śāstra.

ĀŚVAGHOṢHA. A famous Buddhist Sanskrit poet and dramatist, believed to be a contemporary of king Kanishka (A.D. 78-106) or according to Chinese tradition, his preceptor.

Son of Suvarṇākṣhī and a resident of Śāketa, he was a Brāhmaṇa by caste but embraced Buddhism. He had the titles Bhikṣhu, Āchārya Bhadanta, Mahākavi and Mahāvādin; it is said that he proved his worth by making the horses listen to his lectures, leaving aside the fodder and thus was called Āśvaghoṣa. One of the founders of the Mahāyāna sect, his chief works are: Samudrārānanda, Buddha-charita (Mahākāvya), Śāriputra-prakarana (drama) (qq.v.). Fragments of two other dramas discovered with Śāriputra-prakarana at Turfan in Central Asia, are also ascribed to him on the ground that all three of them are contained in the same manuscript and that in a general way they have the appearance of Āśvaghoṣa's works. The titles of these two dramas are missing and the full stories are not available. One of them seems to be an allegory, for it introduces such figures as Buddhi (Wisdom), Kīrti (Fame) and Dhṛiti (Firmness). The other drama seems to be more interesting and humorous. The figures comprise the hero Somadatta, a hetaera, a Vidāshaka, a rogue (duṣṭa), a prince, Śāriputra and Maudgalyāyana. The very scanty material offered by these two dramas does not permit any conclusions about them. On the whole, the Sanskrit of these fragments contains very few errors; among the Prakrits used are three varieties, somewhat like old Magadhī, old Ardha-Māgadhī and old Śaurasenī. To the poet and philosopher, are also ascribed the Mahāyāna-śraddhotpada (discussing the early Mahāyāna views), the Vaṇa-sāchi (attacking the caste system), and the Gaṇḍistotraṭṭhā (proving author's metrical skill and his comprehension of the power of music).

Āśvaghoṣa's style belongs to that variety which later on came to be styled as Vaidarbhī: it is simple in diction and clear in meaning, in spite of the author using certain words which later became obsolete in their peculiar nuances. His language fairly agrees with standard Sanskrit though a few irregularities are found. He is the earliest Buddhist poet and philosopher to use Sanskrit.

ĀŚVALĀYANA (fl. 4th cent. B.C. or earlier). Supposed to be a pupil of Śaunaka (q.v.), he is the author of the Āśvalāyana-grihyasūtra and Āśvalāyana-śrauta-sūtra (qq.v.).

ĀŚVALĀYANA-GRĪHYASŪTRA. See Vedānga (Kalpasūtra).

ĀŚVALĀYANA ŚRAUTASŪTRA. See Vedānga (Kalpasūtra).

ASVA-ŚĀSTRA. A Sanskrit work on horse-lore, ascribed to Nakula, traditionally one of the five Pāṇavas; also called Śālhotra, in which case it is attributed to Bhoja or even to the sage Śālhotra. Appearing to be a compilation, it deals with: "praise of horses, eulogy of Raivata and others, the recitation of whose names is considered to ward off evils to horses, winged horses of old and the gradual loss of their wings, good and bad signs of horses, auspicious neigh of horses, various kinds of smell on the bodies of horses indicating good or evil, gaits of horses, nature of horses, types of horses depending on the lands in which they are born, determination of the age of horses, complexion, training, rules about riding horses, etc." Its date is uncertain.

ASVAṬI TIRUNAL (1756-94). Yuvarāja of Travancore, whose Vañchīśastana in Sanskrit prose is a eulogy of Kārtika Tirunal Rāmavarmā Mahārāja of Travancore. In this work, poetic exaggeration is mellowed by fact.

ĀŚVA-VAIDYAKA. A huge Sanskrit treatise by Jayadatta Sūri (q.v.), dealing with horse-diseases and their respective treatment.

ĀŚVINĪ MAHĀRAJĀ. Same as Rāmavarmavāñchi Yuvarāja (q.v.).

ATHARVAVLDA. See Veda.

ATHARVAVEDA PRĀTISĀKHYA. See Prātiśakhya.

ATKINS, SAMUEL D. A modern American Indologist, who wrote a dissertation on Pushan in the Rigveda, with an appendix of the Pūṣaṇ-hymns with Eng. translation. He has discussed also meanings of rare Vedic words and some Sūktas in the Journal of the American Oriental Society. He has prepared an Index of the Visarga in the Vedic texts with a view to studying its behaviour.

ĀTMBODHA A Sanskrit philosophical poem in 67 stanzas by Śāṅkaracharya (q.v.).

ĀTMĀNANDA (c. 1150-1250). A Sanskrit scholar, who commented on some portions of the Rigveda. He interprets the Rigveda hymn (I. 164) from the point of view of the Advaita school of Vedānta.

ĀTMAVIBHĪKĀ A Sanskrit work also called Bauddhadhūrtika, by Udayana (q.v.), which assails the Buddhists who developed an important school of thought which influenced the Nyaya philosophy.

ĀTREYA ŚRĪNIVĀSA (18th cent.) A Sanskrit poet, who is known for his Kuchāśatakam.

ĀTRI One of the twenty traditional writers of original Smṛiti, an Ātrīya-dharmasastra exists. Besides, there are several works styled Ātri-smṛiti or Ātri-samhita. Two works called Vṛiddhātreyā-samhita and Laghu-ātrīya also known. Ātri is mentioned in the Manu-smṛiti.

ĀTRIDEVA VIDYĀLANKAR. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are Saṁskṛita Sahitya-men Ājurveda and Hindu of Charaka-saṁhitā, of Ashtāṅga-saṅgraha and of Ashtāṅga-hṛdaya.

ATTANAGALU-VIHĀRA-VAMSA. A Pali chronicle in prose and verse, composed in the 2nd half of 13th century. It describes the history of the temple of Attanagalla, giving an account of the life of king Sīri-saṅghabodhi and his queen.

ATTHAKATHĀ. Generic designation of commentaries in Pali. Sanskrit Artha-kathā.

ATTHASĀLINĪ A Pali comm. by Buddhaghosha (q.v.) on Dhammasaṅgani (q.v.), included in the Paramattha-kathā (q.v.). Besides explaining technical terms of Buddhist psychology, the Atthasālinī contains some historical and geographical information. The introduction gives the contents of the Abhidhamma texts and discusses various textual problems. It exhibits more freshness and originality in treatment, though it is less scholastic in style as compared to Vissuddhimagga (q.v.). Kosambi, however, expresses doubt about Buddhaghosha's authorship of this work.

ATTHAVIBHĪKĀ Same as Abhidhamma-vibhāṅga (q.v.).

ATUL CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI. A Sanskrit scholar of Calcutta, who has traced the Krishna story in Sanskrit literature (1976-77).

ATULIA (fl. 11th cent.) A Sanskrit poet and author of the Mushikavamsa (q.v.), a historical poem, describing in 15 cantos, the kings of Mūshika, i.e., of South Travancore.

ĀTURAPRĪTĪKHYĀNA. See Āura-Pachchakkhana.

AUBOYTER, J. See Haertel, H.

AUCHITYA-VICHĀRA-CHARCHĀ. A unique Sanskrit work on poetics by Kshemendra (q.v.), which contains Kārikās with his own Vṛitti, and illustrations taken from various works. The work develops the concept that Auchitya (appropriateness or propriety) is the essence of Rasa. Propriety is the life of all poetical compositions because Guṇa, Alaṅkāra, and Rasa, used improperly, not only do not beautify the poem, but lose their own beauty also. Profuse with illustrations, it incorporates the author's criticism of what he considers to be defects.

AUFRECHT, THEODOR (1821-1907). A brilliant German Sanskritist, who was the author of several catalogues of Sanskrit manuscripts, the most important of these being Catalogus Catalogorum.

Born in Leschnitz, Upper Silesia, Aufrecht went to Berlin to study classical philology and Oriental languages. He concluded his studies with a thesis: Accents of Sanskrit Compounds, for which he obtained the doctor's degree in 1847. In 1850, he was appointed a Lecturer in Berlin and together with his friend A. Kuhn he issued 'Journal for Comparative Linguistics'.

In 1852, Aufrecht migrated to Oxford to assist Max Mueller in the publication of the Rigveda with Sāyaṇa's commentary. Aufrecht published the text Rigveda in Roman Characters in 1861-63; he was the first to get the credit of publication of full Rigveda, of course, the text being in Roman script. He catalogued the Sanskrit manuscripts in the Bodleian Library in Oxford (2 vols. 1859-64) as also the Sanskrit manuscripts in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge. He published critical editions of a grammatical work Ujvaladatta's Unādisūtras (Bonn 1859) and a lexicographical one, Halāyudha's Abhidāna śatnamālā (1861). After working as Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology in the University of Edinburgh, he came to Bonn as Professor of Sanskrit and lectured till 1889. While in Bonn, he published the 2nd ed. of the Rigveda and the Āitareya-brāhmaṇa of Rigveda with extracts from Sāyaṇa's comm., glossary, index of verses from Rigveda and notes (1879). He wrote many papers, chiefly on Indian literary history.

It was after his retirement that he began working on the Catalogus Catalogorum (3 vols, 1891, 1896 and 1903), in which all the manuscripts known up to that time (exclusive of Buddhist and Jaina ones) were mentioned, as also names of all the known works of authors of Indian literature. Aufrecht made use of European catalogues and the catalogues of Sanskrit works in India, combining them into a general index of all Sanskrit works and their authors. This catalogue is a mine of information on the whole of Sanskrit literature listed in alphabetical order together with the commentaries and their authors. The "Catalogus Catalogorum Institute" in Madras took up work on this catalogue in 1935. In addition, Aufrecht compiled catalogues of the Sanskrit manuscripts in the Libraries in Florence and Leipzig. His last catalogue of the Royal Library, Muenchen, appeared posthumously in 1909.

On Vedic religion, Aufrecht was of the view that worship of the oldest R̥gvedic gods : Savitṛ, Varuṇa, Dyauh and Vishnu seemed to be superseded by the worship of newer gods. Along with Weber, he started translating Atharvaveda into German, but the project remained incomplete.

For the general public, Aufrecht wrote one book : Blueten aus Hindostan (Flower from Hindustan; Bonn, 1873). It contains his trs. of Indian poems as well as a few of his own poems.

AUNG, SHWE ZAN (fl. early 20th cent.). An Indologist, whose chief work is A Study in Visuddhimagga-gaṇṭhi (1910-12).

ĀURA-PACHCHAKKHĀṆA. See Paiṇṇa.

AUROBINDO (1872-1950). A celebrated Yogi and Sanskrit scholar, whose Hymns to Sacred Fire (Pondicherry, 1952) is a tr. with notes of Agni-sūktas of the Rigveda; Vedic Glossary is a dictionary of meanings of Vedic padas made by Aurobindo, and prepared by A.B. Purāṇī. His Secret of the Veda and On the Veda (Pondicherry, Reprint 1964) give spiritual interpretation to some of the Vedic sūktas; he believes that the Vedic deities are representative only of the spiritual elements. He wrote also Essays on the Gītā and on Bankim, Tilak and Dayānanda.

AVADĀNA. Name of a class of Buddhist works in Sanskrit, which are stories of the past lives of Bodhisattva. The important works, belonging to this class of literature, are : Āvadana-śataka, Divyāvadāna, Mahāvastu and Lalitā-vastava (qq.).

AVADĀNA-KALPA-LATĀ. A Sanskrit work in Kāvya style by Kshemendra (q.v.). Belonging to Avadāna (q.v.) literature, it consists of 48 chapters. Its 108th tale was added by Kshemendra's son Somendra. The work is also called Bodhisattvāvadāna-kalpa-latā.

AVADĀNA-SATAKA. Probably the oldest Sanskrit Avadāna which is a collection of 100 (śataka) tales of heroic deeds. Of Buddhist origin, each 'avadāna' refers to the story of the past and draws a moral out of it, they are intended to prove that the life of a person is shaped by the nature of his deeds in the previous births. The author of this collection is not known; the stories, however, must be pretty old (1st or 2nd cent. A.D.) since the work is reported to have been rendered into Chinese in the middle of the 3rd cent. A.D. The tales are arranged into ten decades, each dealing with a certain subject. The first four decades deal with stories of pious deeds by which one can become a Buddha; the fifth with soul in torments; the sixth with men and animals reborn as gods; the last four with deeds necessary for becoming an Arhat. 'There is nothing artistic in the arrangement of the tales, their principal purpose being edification and not mere amusement.' —HCIP, II, 268.

AVALOKA. A Sanskrit comm. by Dhanika (q.v.) on Daśarūpaka (q.v.), which is extremely helpful in understanding the original work.

AVALOKITEŚVARA-GUṆA-KĀRAṆḌAVYŪHA. See Kāraṇḍa-vyūha.

AVALON, ARTHUR. See Woodroffe, Sir John.

AVANINDRA KUMĀR. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is : Archaic Words in Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī (1981).

AVANTA. See Vīracarita.

ĀVANTISUNDARĪ-KATHĀ. A fragmentary Sanskrit prose work, which is believed by some scholars to be the lost Purvapīthikā of the Daśakumāra-charita (q.v.) of Daṇḍin.

ĀVANTISUNDARĪ-KATHĀŚĪRA. Same as Āvantisundarī-kathā (q.v.).

ĀVASSAYA. See Mūlasutta.

ĀVĀŚYAKA. See Āvassaya.

EVERY, JOHN. An American Indologist, whose chief work is A Contribution to the History of Verb-Inflection in Sanskrit (1875).

AVIMĀṆĀKA. A Sanskrit drama in six Acts by Bhāsa (q.v.), based on some folklore.

Vishvasena, son of the king of Sauvīra, becomes a member of a sheep-killer class for a year, along with his family by the curse of Dīrghatapas. While thus residing incognito in the town of his maternal uncle, king Kuntibhoja, he kills the demon Avī, and becomes famous by the name of Avi-māraka. Once, he saves Kuntibhoja's daughter Kurangī from the clutches of an infuriated elephant; knowing this, Kuntibhoja wants to marry her to Avi-māraka, but he cannot do so, as Avimāraka is of a low caste. But Kurangī and Avimāraka meet, grow in mutual amour, and the love reaches a climax. Through Dhātri's contrivance, Avimāraka once enters Kurangī's chamber. Coming out and finding it difficult to meet his beloved frequently, he resolves to die by throwing himself down from a hill. At this time, a Vidyādhara comes and gives him a ring by the power of which he can secretly enjoy the companionship of Kurangī every night with a bulloon of his as his comrade. Kuntibhoja, on finding him there, becomes perplexed and thinks of marrying her to Jayavairman, another nephew of his on the sister's side. Then Nārada appears and reveals the identity of Avimāraka who is not in fact the son of the Sauvira king, but the son of Agni by Sudarśanā, the wife of the king of Kāśī, who gave him over on his birth to Suchetana, his sister and wife of the Sauvira king. The couple is married publicly with celebrations.

AWASTHI, AVADH BIHARĪ LAL. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Studies in Skanda-purāna (4 Pt., 1976 ff.) and a study in Hindi of Garuda-purana (1968).

ĀYĀRADĪSĀO. See Chheya-sutta

ĀYĀRANGA-SŪTTA. See Anga

ĀYĀRANGA-SŪTTA. A work in Prakrit prose and verse, believed to be the work of Sudharmasvāmin, the fifth Gaṇadhara. Consisting of 24 sections (one of which is supposed to have been lost long ago), it contains rules and regulations for a Jain saint. There are many comments on this work.

ĀYIP CĀN A modern scholar whose chief work is Origin and Early History of Śaivism in South India.

AYODHYĀ PRASĀDA, B.A. (1888-1965). A Sanskrit scholar, who was born at the village Amua in the Gaya district of Bihar. He was influenced by Svāmi Dayānanda Sarasvati and represented Arya Samaj in the World Religious Conference held in 1933 in America. His chief works are : Gems of Vedic Wisdom (1933; Eng. tr. of some inspiring hymns of the Vedas) and an exposition of 'Om'.

AYODHYĀPRASĀDA BHARGĀVA. A modern Sanskrit author of Būlavivāha-chandrodaya (Allahabad, 1905), advocating remarriage of child widows.

ĀYURVEDA-DĪPIKĀ. A Sanskrit comm. by Chakrapāṇidatta on the Charaka-saṃhitā (q.v.).

ĀYURVEDA-PRAKĪŚĀ. A Sanskrit Āyurvedic treatise, also called Rasa-mādhava, by Mādhava Upādhyāya. Consisting of six Chaps., it is regarded as an authoritative work on Āyurvedic Rasa.

ĀYURVEDA-SŪTRA. An Āyurvedic Sanskrit work in 16 chapters by Yogānandanatha (q.v.), written probably in the 16th century. The work seeks to connect Āyurveda with Patanjali's Yoga system and shows how different kinds of food increase the Sattva, Rajas and Tamas qualities and also how Yogic practices like fasting influence the conditions of the body.

AYYANNA DIKSHITA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Vyasa-tātparya-nirṇaya, a philosophical work, which discusses the interpretation of Brahmasūtras by different teachers and points out the tenability of Śāṅkara-bhāṣya.

B

BABBITT, J. A foreign Indologist, who has ed. the Dhammapada (1936).

BACHHOFER, LUDWIG. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is Early Indian Sculpture (2 Vols., Paris, 1929). He has defended the view that Kanishka is the founder of 'Saka era' in A.D. 78.

BĀDARĀYAṆA. Traditionally identified with Vyāsa (q.v.), he is the author of Brahma-sūtra (q.v.): also called Vedānta-sūtra, Uttara-mīmāṃsā or Śārīraka-mīmāṃsā. He has been variously dated between A.D. 450 and 500 B.C.

BADARĪNĀTHA JHĀ. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief work, Śoka-śloka-sataka (Darbhanga, 1953) depicts the gloom cast over the country owing to the tragic end of Mahātmā Gāndhī.

BADARĪNĀTHA ŚUKLA. Modern Sanskrit scholar, who was former Vice-Chancellor of Sampūrnanand Sanskrit Vishwavidyalaya, Varanasi. He has written or edited several works, which are on Navyanyāya, Vedānta, etc. His works are : Ārambhavāda, Tṛṣṇabhāshā, Vedāntasāra, Śāstravārtā-samuccaya, Vyāpti Pañchaka, Navya-nyāya-praveśa, a Hindi translation of Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa and several essays on Veda, grammar, literature, etc.

BADRĪ PRASĀDA PANCHOLĪ (1938-). A Sanskrit scholar of Rajasthan, whose chief works are : The Conception of Cow in Rīgveda (1976; in Hindi) and ed. of Fateh Singh Commemoration Volume. He has also edited Special Numbers of 'Savitā' or 'Veda Savitā' and has written some 300 articles on Veda, Culture, Philology and Criticism. He has also written dramas in Hindi.

BAGCHI, PRABODHA CHANDRA An Indian scholar, whose chief works are a newer ed. of Dohakośa (Calcutta, 1939), Kaṭi Gyaṇ Nirṇaya (1934, in English), Pre-Aryan & Pre-Vedic India (tr., Calcutta University, 1929), Studies in Tantra (1939), India and China (Calcutta, 1944), India & Central Asia (1955), Le Canon bouddhique en Chine (Paris, 1927), Charyāgītikośa (a study on the Charyāgītis of Buddhist Siddhas; 1956), She-Kia Feng-Che (Eng. tr. of an important Chinese account on India), ed. of Viśva-Bharati Annals (Vols. I-VII), ed. of Sino-Indian Studies (Vols. I-V, pts. 1 & 2), and important papers on tantra as also on spread of Indian culture in Central Asia and China.

BĀHUBALI-CHARITA. See Dhanapāla.

BAIJ NĀTH PURI (1916-). A modern scholar, whose chief work in English deals with India in the Age of Patañjali.

BAILEY, D.R. SCHAKLETON. An English Indologist, who called North-western Prakrit as Gāndhārī and who considered this language of great importance for the history of Buddhism in Central Asia. He made editions and translations of Śatapathaśāntaka (Cambridge, 1951) and of Mātṛicheṭa's stotras.

BAILEY, H.W. (fl. early 20th cent.) An English Indologist, who has ed. and tr. the fragments of Sanskrit Buddhist texts of Central Asia found by Stein and others; he has thus ed. four volumes of Khotanese texts including linguistic characteristics of the Kharoṣṭhī Dhammapadam, ed. by Sylvain Lévi.

BAKHSHĀLĪ MANUSCRIPT. A Sanskrit manuscript, discovered in 1831 in the village Bakhshālī near Peshawar, and is lodged in Bodleian Library, Oxford. It has been dated as between the 3rd and 4th cent. A.D. or as late as the 12th cent. A.D. A work on mathematics, it deals with rules for arithmetical, algebraic and geometrical operations.

BAKKER, H.T. A modern Indologist of Netherlands, who is at present engaged on the study of Ayodhyā as a place of pilgrimage.

BAKTAY, ERVIN (). A Hungarian Indologist, whose travel and other books created interest among his countrymen about India's life and culture. He tr. Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra into Hungarian (Budapest, 1947) and is the author of Rāmājana és Mahābhārata (Budapest, 1960) and "Indian Legends and Sagas" (Budapest, 1963). His chief work, however, is India művészete (Budapest, 1958), which was also tr. into German (1963).

* BĀLABHADRA (fl. 10th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, a resident of Kanauj and author of several independent works on all the branches of Jyotisha as also of comms. on several works including the Yogasūtra of Patañjali.

BĀLABHĀRATA. A Sanskrit drama, based on the Mahābhārata story, by Rājaśekhara (q.v.); also called Prachanda-pāṇḍava. Available at present only in two Acts, it describes Draupadi's Svayamvara, ill-treatment meted out to her and the departure of the Pāṇḍavas to the forest. Composed for Mahipāla of Kanauj, the drama has not been successful on the stage and also possesses no poetic merits.

BĀLABHĪRATA. An epitome in Sanskrit of the Mahābhārata, composed by Amara-chandra (q.v.). It narrates the story, in the order of the Parvas and is therefore a poetic epitome of it. According to Kṛṣṇamachārī, the 'poetry is of a high order and placed by the side of the Raghuvamśa, it may not be possible to discern disparity in literary merit'.

BĀLACHANDRA SŪRĪ (fl. 13th cent.) A Jaina Sanskrit poet, who was the pupil of Haribhadra Sūri of Chandragachchha; he composed the Vasanta-vilāsa (q.v.), a poem of 14 cantos, describing the story of Vastupāla's ministry. The first canto of the Vasanta-vilāsa gives an account of the early life of the poet.

BĀLACHARITA. A Sanskrit drama in five Acts by Bhāsa (q.v.), which deals with the exploits of Kṛṣṇa from his birth until he kills Kāṁsa and re-establishes Ugrasena at Mathurā. The incidents in Kṛṣṇa's life mentioned here are not found in the Bhāgavata, Vishnu-purāṇa and Harivaṁśa. Kṛṣṇa is mentioned as the seventh child of Vasudeva; Rādhā, who figures in later works as the consort of Kṛṣṇa, is not mentioned and the erotic element that prevails in later works on Kṛṣṇa and his sports is also absent. The drama has peculiarities of technique also: Bhāsa shows on the stage the fight between Arishṭa and Kṛishṇa as also the death of Kaṁṣa; Act III has a scene showing the Halliśaka dance.

BALADEVA UPĀDHYĀYA (1899-). An eminent Sanskrit scholar, who was born at Sonbarsa in Balia district of Uttar Pradesh. He was Professor and Head of the Department of Sanskrit, Benares Hindu Vishwa-vidyalaya and later as Head of the Department of Purāṇetiḥāsa, Varanaseya Sanskrit Vishwa-vidyalaya, Kāśī. His chief works are : ed. of Nāṭyaśāstra (in the Kashi Sanskrit Series), ed. of Prākṛita-vyākaraṇa (both jointly with Baṭuk Nath Sharma), ed. of Bhāmaha's Kāvyaalaṅkāra, Bhāgavata Sampradāya, Bharatīya Dharma aur Darśana, Bhāratīya Darśana, Śaṅkarāchārya, Sanskrit Sūhitya kā Itihāsa (2 Pts.), Vaidika Vaiṇmāya kā Itihāsa, Purāṇa Vimarśa, Bauddha Darśana Mīmāṃsā, Vaiṣṇav Sampradāyon kā Sūhitya tathā Siddhānta, Bharatīya Vaiṇmāya men Śrī Rādhā, Arya Saṁskṛiti, Kāśī kī Pāṇḍityaparamparā (all in Hindi), etc. He has won several honours and awards.

BALADI VA VIDYĀBHŪṢAṆA (fl. c. 1764). A Sanskrit writer of Orissa, a disciple of Damodaradasa and a follower of Chaitanya. His works are : Sahitya-kaumudī (a comm. on the karikas of Kāvya-prakāsa, calling them the Bharata-sūtras), Kāvya-kaustubha, Padavali and a comm. on Utkalika-vallari. He gives his own illustrations in praise of Kṛishṇa and adds a chapter covering topics not referred to in the Bharata-sūtras. His Govinda-bhāṣya (q.v.) a comm. on the Brahma-sūtras, Siddhānta-ratna and Pranava-ratnāvalī deal with Chaitanya Vaiṣṇavism. He exercised considerable influence on Bengal Vaiṣṇavism. See Govinda-bhāṣya.

BĀLAKA (fl. before 1100). A Sanskrit writer on Smṛiti from East Bengal. He wrote on several branches of Dharmaśāstras, such as Vyavahāra and Prāyaścitta. He is known only from frequent references in work, of Jimūtavāhana, Raghunandana, and Śulapāṇi (qq.v.). According to Kane, Bālarūpa may be identical with Bālaka.

BĀLAKRĪDĀ. The earliest Sanskrit comm. by Viśvarūpa, on the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti (q.v.); the comm. is lucid and free from prolixity.

BĀLAKRISHNAN, V. A Sanskrit scholar, who has, along with R. Lilādevī, pub. a comm. (in Malayalam) on the Rigveda (vol. I, Trivandrum, 1976-77); the text of the Rigveda has been pub. in Malayalam script.

BĀI 4-MANORAMĪ. A Sanskrit abridgement of Bhattoji's comm., Praudha-manoramā, written on his own Siddhanta-kaumudī (q.v.); some scholars believe that it was written by Vasudeva Dikshita of Tanjore.

BĪI 1-MANORAMĪ. A Sanskrit comm. by Anantadeva on Siddhanta-kaumudī (q.v.).

BĀLAMBHAIṬṬA (1730-1820). A South Indian Sanskrit writer, who was son of Vaidyanatha and Lakshmi. Also called Bālākṛishna Payagunḍa, according to some, he was the same as Vaidyanatha Payagunḍa. He is the author of Bālabhāṭṭi, a celebrated comm. on the Mitākshara (q.v.), Sabdakaustubha, Abdaratna and Sābdendusekhara (the last three are comm. on grammatical works); some scholars think that the author of grammatical works was a different person.

BĀLAMBHAIṬṬA A modern scholar of Tanjore and author of Bālabodhinī and Bālārāj-janī, small grammatical works in Sanskrit.

BĀLA VIBHATṬĪ. A famous Sanskrit comm. by Bālabhāṭṭa (q.v.) on Vijñāneśvara's Mitāksharā (q.v.).

BĀLA-PRABODHANA. A famous grammatical work in Pali of the Kachchāyana school.

BĀLARĀMA-BHARATA. See Bālarāma Varmā.

BALARĀMA PAÑCHĀNANA. A Sanskrit grammarian and author of Prabodha-prakāśa; Dhātu-prakāśa is also attributed to him. Probably a Brāhmana, nothing is known about his time and place.

BALARĀMA PANIKKAR. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Śrī Nārāyaṇa-vijaya (1971), a Mahākāvya, deals with the life and achievements of Nārāyaṇa guru, a religious leader of Kerala.

BĀLARĀMA VARMA (1724-98). Mahārāja of Travancore (1753-98), a poet of distinction and author in Sanskrit of Bālarāma-bharata, which is based on the contemporary theatrical tradition of Kerala and expounds the details of Bharata's Nāṭyaśāstra as also refers to the details of Abhinaya as in vogue in Kerala. Known by the names of Dharmarāja and Vikramāditya, he patronised many poets, and was the author of several dramatic pieces in Malayalam, called Kathakalis. He is also called simply Rāmavarmā.

BĀLARĀMA-YAṆA. A Sanskrit drama (c. 900) by Rājaśekhara (q.v.) in 10 Acts. The prologue goes to the length of an Act, while each Act goes almost to the dimensions of a Nāṭika. Based on the entire Rāmāyaṇa story, some variations have been made in the construction of the plot: Rāvaṇa has been represented as Rāma's rival for the hand of Sītā and his love and longing for her are more prominent than his ferocity.

In Act I Rāvaṇa declines to test himself by drawing Śiva's bow and departs, menacing evil to any husband of Sītā; in Act II he seeks the aid of Paraśurāma, but is insulted instead. In Act III the marriage of Sītā is enacted before him to distract his amorous sorrow, but the attempt fails. In Act IV the duel of Rāma and Paraśurāma is disposed of, but in Act V another ludicrous effort is made to amuse Rāvaṇa; dolls with parrots in their mouths are presented to him as Sītā and his foster sister; distracted, he demands his beloved from nature, the seasons, the streams, and the birds, as does Purūravas in the Vikramorvaśīya. The arrival of wounded Śurpaṇakhā, his sister, who has suffered severely from her attack on Rāma, brings him to a condition of more manly rage. A tedious Act then carries matters down to the death of the sorrowing Daśaratha. In Act VII the problem of inducing the ocean to accept the burden of the bridge is solved; the severed head of Sītā seems to be flung on the shore, but it speaks and reveals the fraud; in Act VIII Rāvaṇa sends out Kumbhakarna, but sees him even helpless before Rāma. In Act IX India himself describes the last desperate duel of Rāma and Rāvaṇa. In Act X the party of Rāma makes the usual aerial tour of India, including the world of the moon; the Act ends with Rāma's coronation.

The play, with an embryo act (Garbhāṅka) in the third Act, is not rated very high.

BĀLA ŚĀSTRĪ (1839-82). A celebrated Sanskrit scholar, who was born in Varanasi. He was christened Viśvanātha, but as he became proficient in learning as a 'Bāla' (child), he became popular by the name of 'Bāla'. At the age of 5, he started studying Kṛishṇa Yajurveda and just when he was 8-year old, he recited 'Bālakhilya Sūktas', which are described very difficult for recitation even for scholars. For studies in grammar, he went to Gwalior, where at the age of 16 he was married. He returned to Varanasi for higher studies. At the age of 25, Bāla Śāstrī was appointed as a Professor of Sāṅkhya at the Government Sanskrit College, Kāśī, when Griffith was its Principal. He was highly honoured by the Raja of Mandī (Himachal Pradesh) and Raja of Kāśī. At Bāṇa is the author of two prose works, the Harsha-charita and the Kādambarī (qq.v.); one other work is ascribed to him, viz., the Chandī-śataka (q.v.) or Devī-śataka. On the strength of a literary reference by a commentator of the Nalachampū, Bāṇa has also been credited with another work called Mukutaśataka, a drama; this is now lost and its exact nature is not ascertainable. Yet another work, Pārvatī-pariṇaya is ascribed to him, though it is really the work of Abhinava Bāṇa named Vāmana Bhaṭṭa Bāṇa (q.v.).

'Bāṇa's greatness can very well be seen from the fact that his works supplied ample material for later critics to base their theories on. Thus it was on the basis of his works, that Rudraṭa and others sought to lay down the points of distinction between Kaṭhā and Ākhyāyikā. It was again after him that several varieties of prose such as Kalikā, Chūrṇaka and Padyagandhi came to be recognised, whereas Daṇḍin knows of such varieties. The box system again, though old, is yet given a new life by Bana who has combined his boxes into one inseparable whole unlike those in works like the Pañchatantra. So far as this technique is concerned, he makes a decided advance even over Daṇḍin who has shown little improvement in his Daśakumāra-charita in this respect, HCIP, III, 316-17.

BANĀRSI DĀS JAIN. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are: Ardhu-Māgadhi-Reader (Lahore, 1923) and Hindi tr. of Woolner's Introduction to Prakrit.

BANDHASVĀMITVA. A Prakrit work by Devendra Sūri (q.v.) on the doctrine of Karman.

BANERJEA, J.N. A modern Indian scholar, whose chief studies are: The Development of Hindu Iconography, 'Avatāras of Viṣṇu and their enumeration in some early Indian texts' and articles on Vaishṇavism and on Purāṇic studies.

BANERJEA SHĀSTRY, A. A modern scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Hemachandra's Deśinamāmālā (Calcutta, 1931), The Evolution of Māgadhi (Oxford, 1922) and Asura India (Patna, 1926); he has discussed also some Vedic words.

BANERJEE, N.V. A scholar, whose chief works are: The Bhagavad Gītā (with English text and comm.; 1984), Studies in the Dharmaśāstra of Manu (1980) and Glimpses of Indian Wisdom (1972).

BANERJI, SURES CHANDRA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: A Companion to Sanskrit Literature (1971), A Companion to Middle Indo-Aryan Literature (1977), Dharmasūtras—A Study in Their Origin and Development (Calcutta, 1962), Aspects of Ancient Indian Life, Critical ed. of Saduktikarṇāmṛta, Smṛiti Material in the Mahābhārata, Kālidāsa-kośa, Cultural Heritage of Kashmir, Eng. tr. of Vikramāṅkadeva-charita, Indian Society in the Mahābhārata, Introduction to Pali Literature, and articles on Purāṇic studies.

BĀNEŚVARA VIDYĀLAṆKĀRA (fl. c. 1744). A Sanskrit writer of Bengal (Hughly District), he is the author of Chitra-champū (a Champū-kāvya for his patron Chitrasena of Vardhamana, containing useful historical and geographical details, 1744), Rahasyāmṛita (a Mahākāvya), Chandrābhisheka (a drama), Vivādhārṇava-setu (a compilation work on Dharmaśāstra in which task he was assisted by several Pandits; written at the instance of Warren Hastings, Governor-General of India), a Śataka on Benares and several Stotras.

BAPAT, P.V. A modern Buddhist scholar, whose chief works are: 2500 years of Buddhism (New Delhi, 1956) and Evidence of Indian Culture in South-East Asia (Nagpur, 1964); he ed. Dhammasaṅgaṇī and Atthasālinī as also did Eng. tr. of Shan Chien -P'i -P'o —Sha (a Chinese version of Sanghabhadra of Samantapāsādikā comm. on Pali Vinaya) and of Chinese versions of the Pāli Atthakavagga under the title Arthapada Sūtrā (1951).

BĀPUBHAṬṬA KELAKARA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Utsarjanopākarma-prayoga, Prāyaścitta-mañjarī and Śrāddha-mañjarī.

BAREAU ANDRE (1921-). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Les sectes bouddhiques du petit véhicule (Saigon, 1955), Les premiers conciles bouddhiques (Paris, 1955) (both on early Buddhism) and Recherches sur la biographie du Buddha dans les Sūtrapitaka et les Vinayapitaka anciens (Paris, 1963, 1970, 1971; on the biography of Buddha).

BARNETT, L.D. (1871-1960). An English Indologist, who tr. into English two Jaina Aṅgas Antagaḍḍasao and Apattaravavaiyadasao (London, 1907), and wrote The Parmārtha-sāra of Abhinavagupta (1910), Antiquities of India (London, 1913), he compiled also Catalogue of Sanskrit, Pali and Prakrit Books in the Library of British Museum.

BARODIA, U.D. A modern scholar, whose chief work is History and Literature of Jainism (Bombay, 1960).

BARRT, I.E. ROY CARR. A Sanskrit scholar, who, along with F. Edgerton, pub. (with critical notes on the text) Books I, II, IV-X of the Paippalada recension of the Atharvaveda (1906-23). See Bloomfield, Garbe

BARSCHLI, BERND. A modern German Indologist, who is working in the field of the historical grammar of Sanskrit.

BARTH, AUGUSTE (1834-1916). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Les religions de l'Inde (Paris, 1879; Eng. tr. The Religions of India by Wood in 1882), Inscriptions Sanscrites du Cambodge et du Campa (Paris, 1885; jointly with Bergaigne), Inde Buddhisme, Jainisme, Hindouisme (1894). He carefully analysed many important publications on Buddhism and his reviews have appeared in five Volumes (Paris, 1914-27). The bibliography of his works and the general index in Vol. V are very useful for the study of the history of Buddhist studies.

In his Religions of India, Barth considers Veda pre-eminently a 'sacerdotal' literature; and that Kṛishṇa, around whom the Bhāgavata cult originally centred, was a popular divinity of solar origin, and that Viṣṇu came to occupy supreme position as a result of his fusion with the popular god, Kṛishṇa.

BARTHELEMY SAINT-HILAIRE, J. (1805-95). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Des Vedas (1854), Du Bouddhismus (1855) and Les Bouddha et sa religion (1860; Eng. tr. Buddha and his Religion), Hieun Tsiang in India (Eng. tr.) and Life and Legend of Buddha.

BARTHOLOMAE, CH. A foreign Indologist, whose Altiranische Worterbuch (Strassburg, 1904) is a dictionary of Iranian language and serves as a comparative dictionary to the extent that it cites corresponding Sanskrit words.

BARTHOLOME, W. (1748-1806). An Austrian Indologist, whose chief works are : Systema Brahmanicum (Rome, 1791), Amarasimha sen Dictionari Samascrada....cum versione Latine (1798), Reise nach Ostindien, and two Sanskrit grammars in Tamil script, based on the unpub. grammar of J.E. Hanxleden (q.v.).

BARTUA, B.M. (fl. early 20th cent.). A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Old Brāhmi Inscriptions in Udayagiri and Kharagiri Caves, Religion of Aśoka and Studies in Buddhism.

BARUCH, WILLY. A modern Indologist, who, in his chief work Beiträge zum Sad-śārmapurāṇarika-sūtra (Leiden, 1938) has pointed out that Nepalese manuscripts were not properly ed. by Nanjia and Kern.

BASAVAPPA NĀYAKA (fl. 1697-1714). A Sanskrit writer of Ikkeri, compiler of Subhāshita-suradruma, an anthology and of Śivatattva-ratnākara (1709-10), an encyclopaedic work giving the essence of different arts and sciences treated in the Vedas and Āgamas; it also gives a history of the House of Keladi and a legendary account of the foundation of the city of Vijayanagar.

BASHAM, A.L. (1914-86). A celebrated Indologist, who was Professor in the Australian National University, Canberra. He had recently been appointed as Vivekananda Professor in the Asiatic Society, Calcutta to be the Editor-in Chief of "Encyclopaedia of Indology"; a project sponsored by the Asiatic Society. Basham's chief works are : The Wonder that was India (London, 1954), History and Doctrines of Ājīvikas (London, 1951), Concise Encyclopaedia of Living Faiths, Sources of Indian Tradition (New York, 1958), A Cultural History of India (ed.) etc.

BASU, J. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Culture and Civilization as Revealed in the Brāhmanas.

BASU, S.K. A modern scholar, who has tr. into English the Mṛicchhakaṭika (q.v.).

BAṬAKRISHṆA GHOSH. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Linguistic Introduction to Sanskrit and Les formation nominals et verbales en p. du Sanskrit (1933)

BAṬUK NĀTH SHARMA. A modern scholar, whose chief works are 3rd ed. of Nāṭyaśāstra (jointly with Baladeva Upādhyāya) and ed. of Prākṛita-vyākaraṇa (also with Baladeva Upādhyāya).

BAUDDHĀDHĪKKĀRA. See Ātma-tattva-viveka.

BAUDHĀYANA (Bodhāyana). A celebrated author of Baudhāyana-dharma-sūtra, Baudhāyana-sulva-sūtra, Baudhāyana-gṛihyasūtra and Baudhāyana-śrauta-sūtra (qq.v.) in Sanskrit. See Vedāṅga.

BAUDHĀYANA-DHARMASŪTRA. See Vedā-

ṅga (Kalpasūtra).

BAUDHĀYANA-GRIHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

BAUDHĀYANA-ŚRAUTA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

BAUDHĀYANA-ŚULVA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra). The oldest and largest of the Sulva-sūtras, which contains three chapters. The 1st Chap. consists of 116 aphorisms dealing with various measures, important geometrical propositions necessary for the construction of altars, relative positions and spatial magnitudes of the various altars. The 2nd Chap. contains 83 aphorisms, devoted to the description of the spatial relation in the different construction of fire-altars made of bricks. Chap. 3 consists of 323 aphorisms describing the construction of 17 different kinds of fire-altars for sacrifices performed with the object of attaining definite results.

BAUMGARTNER, ALEXANDER (1841-1910). A German-speaking Jesuit, who was born in St. Gallen, Switzerland. He began writing a History of World Literature, 6 vols. of which were published 1897-1911. The second volume of this work is devoted to India and East Asia. As preliminary studies for the volume on Indian literature, Baumgartner wrote articles on the Mahābhārata and on Indian drama. In 1894, he brought out a book in German : 'The Ramayana and Indian Rama literature. A sketch in literary history.' A reprint of this book appeared in 1972 in Osnabrueck. In this book, he gave a summary of the contents of Vālmiki's Rāmāyana and then discussed its age. In this connection, he briefly summarised the opinions of modern authors and the notices of Megasthenes and Alberuni. The next chapters are devoted to the Rāma story in the Mahābhārata and the Purānas, as well as the Daśarath Jātaka in Buddhist literature. He discusses works like Kālidāsa's Raghuvamśa, Bhavabhūti's Uttararāmacharita and Mahāvīra-charita, and the Bhṛṅgikāvya. He also makes mention of the vernacular versions and folk plays. He refers to the Javanese Ramayana without taking notice of the great divergence to Valmiki found in these versions. Other Ramayanas from Thailand, Burma, Tibet and China were not known to him.

BEAL, SAMUEL. A modern Indologist, who tr. into English Pātimokkha from Chinese (1862); his other works are ed. of Dhammapada, Chinese Accounts of India, Travel of Hieun Tshang and Buddhist Records of Western World (4 Vols.).

BECHAN JHĀ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Concept of Poetic Blemishes in Sanskrit Poetics.

BECHARADĀSA. A modern scholar, who pub. Bhagavatīsūtra, also called Vyākhyāprajñapāṇi, a Jaina Aṅga from Ahmedabad, along with the comm. and Gujarati tr., and the famous Sanmatitarka of Siddhasena with a big comm. (6 pts; jointly with Sukhalāla) and then a small epitome of the same in Gujarati (Ahmedabad, 1932).

BECHERT, HEINZ (1932 -). A German Indologist, who specialises in Buddhist studies in India and Ceylon. His chief studies are: Bruchstücke buddhistischer Versammlungen (1961), Buddhismus, Staat und Gesellschaft (3 Vols., 1966 ff.), Singhalesische Handschriften (1969), ed. of Geiger's Culture of Ceylon (1960), Über die "Marburger Fragments" des Saddharma-puṇḍarīka (Göttingen, 1972), and article on some side-lights on the early history of Pali lexicography. He has also ed. the birch bark ms. of the Bhāgavata-purāṇa (New Delhi, 1976).

BECKH, HERMANN (1875-1937). A German

Indologist, who was a lawyer by profession, but as he was always attracted by India, he took up the study of Sanskrit, Tibetan, and Avestan. In 1910 he was appointed University Lecturer for Sanskrit and Tibetan at Berlin. In 1916 he published a book on Buddhism, which was meant for the general public. The book proved to be a standard work, written with deep insight into the religion of the Buddha. He also edited Tibetan manuscripts kept in the State Library at Berlin.

VAN DER BEEK, P. A modern Indologist of Netherlands, who is at present engaged on the study of Sigalovāda-sūtra, a canonical Buddhist text on lay morality.

BLER, ROLAND. A German Indologist, whose chief studies are on Daśakūmar-charita (Weimar, 1975), on Vikramacharita (Weimar, 1976), on Buddhist legends in Tibet (Weimar, 1978), on narrative prose literature of Sanskrit (1977-78) and on Mudraraksasha (Berlin, 1979).

BEKANĪYA-SŪTRĀ-ĪKHYĀNĀ. A Sanskrit tr. of Francis Bacon's Novum Organum, pub. from Banaras in 1852; the tr. is done by V. V. Vithala.

BELVALKAR, S.K. (fl. early 20th cent.) An Indian scholar, whose chief works are a study on Kalidāsa's Sakuntala, masterly ed. of Uttar-rāmacharita, of Kāvya-darśa, ed. of Bhīshma, Śanti, Āśramavāsika, Mausala, Mahāprasthānika and Svargārohana parvans of the critical ed. of the Mahābhārata, pub. by the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Introduction to Sāntiparvan, ed. and Eng. tr. of Bhagavadgītā, Vedānta Philosophy, a comm. on Brahmasūtra of Bādarāyana, History of Indian Philosophy (with R.D. Ranade), System of Sanskrit Grammar (Poona, 1915), and several important papers on Kashmir Śaivism.

BENDALL, CECIL. A modern Indologist, who ed. the Śikshāsamuchchaya (1897-1902), pub. under the Bibliotheca Buddhica Series; he also pub. a Catalogue of Buddhist Sanskrit Manuscripts (Cambridge, 1883 ff.).

BENDER, ERNEST. A modern American Indologist, who is Professor, Indo-Aryan Languages and Literatures, University of Pennsylvania, editor of "Journal of the American Oriental Society" and Co-ordinator of American Oriental Society. His works are Indological Studies in Honour of W. Norman Brown (1962; ed.), Special Memorial Issue Dedicated to Franklin Edgerton (1965). His "Mathurā and Jainism" and "The Function of Rāgas in Jain Kathā Literature" are in press. His chief articles are : "Middle Indo-Aryan" (1969), "An Early 19th Century Study of the Jains" (1976), "A Gilt-Illuminated MS of the Gīta Govinda" (1978) and "Illustrations in Jain Manuscripts" (1983). His field of specialization is Jainism, Painting, Old Gujarati, etc.

BENEDETTO, I. F. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Marco Polo, 11 Millions (Firenze, 1928).

BENFEY, THEODOR (1809-81). A German Indologist, who has over 400 publications to his credit, the best known being his work on the Pañchatantra. This is considered to be the origin of the comparative study of fable literature. He combined Sanskrit philology and linguistics in a unique way. At first, Benfey devoted himself to classical languages, but was diverted to Sanskrit. His ed. of Sāmaveda, (1848) of Kauthuma Śākhā, with German tr. together with a glossary, is still considered indispensable; the glossary might be regarded as the first attempt in the direction of a Vedic dictionary. He also tr. Rigveda (1848) up to 1.130. His Handbuch der Sanskritsprache (Manual of the Sanskrit Language; 1852-54) contains in its grammatical part "a complete description of the difficult grammatical system of Panini". He also published A Practical Grammar of Sanskrit Language (1863-68) and Sanskrit-English Dictionary (1886; with reference to the best editions of Sanskrit authors). His 'History of Linguistics and Oriental Philology in Germany' (in German; 1869) is based on extensive research. He began working on Grammar of Vedic language, but he died before completing it; only the first part : 'Introduction to the Grammar of Vedic Language, First part, the Samhitā Text' (in German; 1874) was published. In Vedic mythology, he relates Saramēyau in Rigveda to the Greek Kerberos and the Greek god Dionysos to be understood as Dyū and Niś, or day and night.

Benfey's fame rests on his Pañchatantra (1859). In the Introduction he showed that many Oriental and Occidental fairy tales are of Indian origin, and he showed how these tales reached the West : they were first tr. into Pahlavi (this tr. is no longer extant), then into Arabic, which was later rendered into Greek, Persian, Hebrew, Latin and German. According to Benfey, the Pañchatantra was Nītiśāstra, a book on statesmanship for kings and ministers. It had originally not five but thirteen parts, which have been lost in the Sanskrit version. Benfey compared each fable with the old trs.; he made use of the Arabic rendering and the South Indian Pañchatantra. He refers to Aesop's fables and quotes from a Mongolian tr. of the Vetālapañchaviṃśati as he thought the Mongols played an important part in the transmission of fables. He concludes the Introduction by saying "my research in the field of fables, fairy stories and tales of Orient and Occident have convinced me that few fables, but a large number of fairy tales and stories, was spread from India all over the world." Benfey was very happy when he received a Syrian tr. of the Pañchatantra, which had been newly discovered. A.W. Schiefner drew his attention to one passage of the Pañchatantra in Tibetan Buddhist scriptures.

Benfey edited the quarterly 'Orient and Occident', but he himself published most of his papers and reviews in the Proceedings of the Goettingen Academy of Sciences. A bibliography of Benfey's works is contained in "Theodor Benfey als Begründer der vergleichenden Maerchenkunde" (1931; anonymous).

BENGALI BĀBĀ. A modern scholar, whose chief work is the Eng. tr. of the Vyāsabhāṣya on the Yoga Sūtras.

BENGYTOSH BHATṬĀCHĀRYA (fl. early 20th cent.). A modern scholar, whose chief works are An Introduction to Buddhist Esotericism and ed. of Sādhana-mālā (Vols. I, II).

BENTLEY, J. An Indologist, whose chief work is Historical View of the Hindu Astronomy (1893).

BENVENISTE, E. A modern French Indologist, whose chief contribution is Le doctrine des Indo-Européens; he has made studies also on Vedic mythology and linguistics.

BERGAIGNE, ABEL H.J. A French Indologist, whose chief works are: La religion Védique d'après les hymnes du Rigveda (3 Vols. 1878-83; a pioneer work discussing the elements of Vedic mythology in their natural phenomena and in the sacrificial cult as also the individual Vedic deities; Eng. tr. Vedic Religion), Etude sur le lexique du Rigveda (1883-84; a lexical work), ed. and Fr. tr. of Bhāmini-vilāsa, of Nāgānanda and of Śṛṅkuntala, Inscriptions Sanscrites du Cambodge et du Campa (Paris, 1885; jointly with Barth) and Manuel Pour etudier la langue Sanscrite (1884). He wrote articles on Vedic figures of speech and held the view that rhetoric holds the key to the meaning at many places in the Rigveda. In Vedic mythology, he believes that the natural phenomena are expressed in terms of male and female elements. On sacrificial ritual, he is of the view that it is the true reproduction on earth of the cosmic happening. It was with Bergaigne that Sylvain Lévi studied.

BERGER, HERMANN (1926-). A modern Indologist, whose chief works are : an extensive monograph Zwei Probleme der Mittellindischen Lautlehre (München, 1955), a study on Middle Indo-Aryan, and Das Yasin-Burushaski (Pts. 1-3; 1974). He is a specialist of Indo-Aryan and Burushaski languages.

BERNHARD, FRANZ (1931-71). A German Indologist, who studied at Goettingen University and took up Indology. He edited Udānavarga, which is a collection of 1050 verses (udānas), which are ascribed to the Buddha himself. The verses have been arranged in 33 chapters (vargas). Many fragments of this text had been brought to Germany by the Turfan expeditions, others were in the libraries in Paris and Leningrad. Tibetan, Chinese, and Mongolian translations of this text, and commentaries in these languages, as well as parallel versions in Pali and Gandhari had to be taken account of. In spite of the difficulty of reconstructing the text from 700 fragments, he submitted the text to the Academy of Sciences already in 1961. The edition appeared (in German) as : Udānavarga (vol. 1. Description of manuscripts, text, edition, bibliography; Goettingen 1965; vol. 2 with indices, concordances, and synoptical tales; 1968). In 1966, Bernhard was appointed Professor at Hamburg University.

Bernhard wrote a number of papers connected with problems of the Udānavarga and on other subjects. He explained how in compiling concordances of Sanskrit texts, computers can be helpful. Bernhard visited India for the first time in 1968 and since then his interest was turned to Lamaism in the Himalayan regions. He visited Nepal, Sikkim, Bhutan and Ladakh. He brought to Germany thousands of slides, films, and tape records of the everyday life of the Tibetans and their esoteric ceremonies. He reached the tiny kingdom of Mustang in Nepal, where he died of a heart failure.

BERWAL, RENE DE. A modern Buddhist scholar, whose chief work is Présence du Bouddhisme (Saigon, 1959).

BETH, A. A modern scholar of Netherlands, whose Vier Upanishaden is a tr. from Sanskrit of four Upanishads (Amsterdam, 1977).

BEYER, S. An American Indologist, who at present teaches in the University of Wisconsin; his special field of study is Buddhism.

BEYTHAN, HERMANN (1875-1945). A German Indologist, who wrote a grammar of Tamil (Leipzig, 1943). His other publications in German are 'What is India?' (Heidelberg, 1942) and 'The Social Question in India' (1943). He is said to have tr. Hitler's Mein Kampf into Tamil, but the submarine carrying the text never arrived in India. On 20th September, 1945, Russian Secret Service men arrested Beythan and nothing has been heard of him since.

BHADANT ĀNAND KAUSALYĀYANA A modern Buddhist scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Jātaka (Vols I-VI) and Hindi tr. of Āṅguttara-nikāya (Pts I-IV)

BHADRABĀHU. One of the earliest teachers and most prominent Prakrit author among the Jains. He is said to have been the sixth Thera after Mahāvīra, and to have died 170 years after Mahāvīra's Nirvāṇa. Tradition has it that he was the last who knew the Puvvas that had gone astray, and he is said to have extracted the third and fourth Chheva-sūtras from the ninth Puvva. Besides the Ayāradasāo (q.v.), which contains the Kalpasūtra (q.v.), the Nijjuttis (Niryuktis), concise metrical explanations of certain parts of the Canon, are also attributed to him. He is supposed to be the author of Uvasaggahara-stotra (q.v.), the earliest of the Jaina hymns in Prakrit.

BHAGAT, M.G. A modern scholar, whose chief work is : Ancient Indian Asceticism

BHAGAVADĀCHĀRYA, SVĀMĪ A modern Sanskrit poet, who, in the classical Mahākāvya form, wrote Bhārata-pārijāta, an epic on Gandhārī; its three parts are called Bharata-pārijāta, Pārijātāpuhāra and Pārijāta-saurabha (second complete edition, Ahmedabad, 1951); he also wrote a Sanskrit poem on the Sāma-veda-saṁhita under the title Sāma-saṁskāra-bhāṣya (1957), commented in Sanskrit on 10 Upanishads as also on Śukla Yajurveda-saṁhitā

BHAGAVADĀJIT KĪYAM. A Sanskrit farcical play attributed to Bodhivānī (q.v.) so named 'as Bhagavān, a Yogin and Ajjuka, a courtesan, play the prominent roles

Ajjuka, waiting for her lover in a garden, is bitten by a snake and dies. The Yogin by his yogic powers, causes his soul to enter the dead body. The messenger of Yama, finding that a mistake has been committed, allows Ajjuka's soul to enter the dead body of the Yogin. The exchange of souls makes the saint speak and act like the courtesan and the courtesan speak and act like the saint. At last, Yama's messenger makes the souls enter their respective bodies.

BHAGAVADDATTA (1893-1968). An Ārya-samājist Vedic scholar, whose chief works are an exhaustive history of Vedic literature in Hindi. Vaidika Vāṁmaya-kā Itihāsa (in 3 Pts., 1st part on the Śākhās of Vedas, 2nd on the Commentators of the Vedas, and the 3rd on the Brāhmanas and Āraṇyakas, (revised ed. by his son, Satyaśravā, 1976), Veda-vidyā-nidarśana (an interpretation of Vedic Suktas on Vedic cosmology; Eng. tr. Story of Creation as Seen by Vedic Seers), a Hindi tr. of Nirukta, and Bhāratavarsha-kā Bṛihad Itihāsa (in Hindi, 1951).

BHAGAVADDATTA (1912-). A modern Vedic scholar, whose chief works are: Ribhū-devatā, Vishnu-devatā (both studies) and Vaidika Svapna-vijñāna (on Vedic concept of dreams; all in Hindi).

BHAGAVADDATTA SHASTRI. A modern Sanskrit writer, who tr. Hindi poet Jayasankara Prasada's Kāmayānī into Sanskrit (1960-61).

BHAGAVADGĪTĪ. Same as Gītā (q.v.).

BHAGAVĀNA PANDA SHARMĀ. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Rāṣṭrabhārati-Saṃskṛita-bhāṣā (1983) is a prose work in 5 chapters to show that Sanskrit has the qualification of being the National Language of India.

BHĀGAVATA. See Bhāgavata-purāṇa.

BHĀGAVATA-BHĀṢA-ĪRTHA-DĪPKĪ. See Sṛdharā Svamin.

BHĀGAVATA-CHAMPŪ. See Abhinavakāśa-dāsa.

BHĀGAVATA-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

BHĀGAVATA-SANDARBHA. An elaborate Sanskrit treatise by Jiva Gosvamin (c. 16), which consists of six books called Sandarbhas. Based chiefly on the Bhagavata-purāṇa (q.v.). It discusses the means of valid knowledge, the power and qualities of the Bhagavat, Bhagavat's relation with Prakṛiti and Jiva, the nature of Kṛiṇa, who is regarded as Lord himself, the nature, classification and superiority of the Bhakti, the nature of liberation, the love of the lord and the relation between Kṛiṣṇa and the Gopīs, etc.

BHAGAVATĪ DĀSA (fl. middle of 17th cent.). A Digambara Jaina poet, who was born in an Agrawal family. He appears to be the last-known Apabhramśa poet and was the author of Mṛigāṅkalekhā, a love story in 4 Sandhis. The work was composed at Hissar in Haryana.

BHAGAVATĪ-VIYĀHA-PANNATTI. See Āṅga.

BHAGAVATĪ-VYĀKHYĀ-PRAÑÑĀPTI. See Āṅga.

BHĀGAVRITTI. One of the oldest Sanskrit comms. on Ashṭādhyāyī, attributed to Vimalamati or to Bhartṛhari (qq.v.). It is not available at present but was copiously quoted by Purushottamadeva and other grammarians of the 12th cent. A.D. and of later centuries.

BHAGAWAT SHARAN UPĀDHYĀYA (1910-). An eminent scholar, who was born in the Balia district of Bihar. Besides Indic of Kālidāsa, he wrote Viśva ko Asia ki Den and Women in R̥gveda.

BHĀGCHANDRA JAIN BHĀSKAR (1939-). A Prakrit scholar, whose chief works are: Jains in Buddhist Literature and Yasodhara-charitram (ed. and tr. into Hindi).

BHAGIRATHA JHĀ. A modern scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Gautamīya Tantra.

BHAGIRATH PRASĀD TRIPĀTHĪ (alias Vāgisa Śāstrī). A modern Sanskrit writer of Sampurnanand Sanskrit University, Varanasi, whose Narmasaptasatī (1948) is a collection of 700 verses, containing 288 satirical and humorous poems. Some of the poems are in the form of dialogues.

BHAGWĀN DĀS (1869-1959) A modern thinker, whose shorter and longer Mānava-dharmasāstra in Sanskrit try to bring ancient thought in line with the modern. Comparing Hinduism with other religions, he enquires into the rise and fall of Hindu kingdoms and points out that one of the great drawbacks of the culture is its failure to achieve a united national feeling. Sangha-sakti. His other works are Bhāratīya-Samskrīti Pradhānam-Aṅgam (1956) and Mahabhārataṁ Puraṇam (1956) both in Sanskrit.

BHAGWAN DASH, VAIDYA (1934-) A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are English of Charaka Samhitā (2 Vols.), Material Medica of Āyurveda (1980), Basic Principles of Āyurveda (1980) and Diagnosis and Treatment of Diseases in Āyurveda (Pt I 1981), the last three works are in collaboration with Lalitesh Kashyap. Bhagwan Dash is at present Deputy Adviser (Āyurveda) to the Ministry of Health, Government of India.

BHAGWĀN DĀS, ĀCHĀRYA (1910-) A celebrated scholar, who has made exhaustive studies on culture history and ancient coins of Harvaṇa. His chief works in Hindi are Harvaṇa ki Prachina Mudranka (a monumental work) and Harvaṇa ki Prachina Takasala. He has his Ashrams at Gurukula Jhajjar and at Kanya Gurukula, Narela (Delhi).

BHĀTIMĀRĪTHI A Sanskrit prose Kavya, mentioned in Patañjali's Mahabhashya (q.v.), but is no longer extant.

BHĀIRAVĀNANDA. See Manika.

BHĀISHAJYA-RAINĀVALĪ A Sanskrit Āyurvedic compilation by Govindadāsa, which was composed probably towards the end of the 16th century. It is a useful work to Āyurvedic practitioners.

BHĀKṬĪMĀRA-SĪOIRĪ See Mānatunga.

BHĀKṬĪ-PARIJŪA See Bhātaparimā.

BHĀKṬĪ-RASĀMRĪTA-SINDHU A voluminous Sanskrit work on Vaishnava Rasa-śāstra, by Rūpa Gosvāmin (q.v.), which consists of analysis of the Bhakti-rasa and definitions and subtle divisions of its constituents. The work is divided into parts, each of which is sub-divided into sections.

BHĀKṬI-SANDARBHA See Bhagavata-sandar-bha.

BHĀKṬI-ŚATAKA See Rāmachandra Kavibhārati.

BHĀLLATA A Sanskrit poet of the court of king Sankaravarman of Kashmir (853-900), who suffered severely from the failure of the king to reward him. His Bhāllata-sataka (q.v.) is a collection of a hundred stanzas on morals which are in different metres carefully elaborated curiously enough. It contains one stanza of Anandavardhana. Bhāllata's other verses are quoted in the anthologies and his style is usually fairly simple.

BHĀLLATA-ŚATAKA A Sanskrit work by Bhāllata (q.v.), consisting of 108 verses of varied metres. The work, verses from which have been quoted by Abhinavagupta, Kshemendra and other eminent rhetoricians of Kashmir, lays down the poet's reflections on the ways of the world. Śārngadhara-paddhati and Sadukti-karnāmṛta, the Sanskrit anthologies, quote verses from it. See Bhāllata.

BHĀMAHA (fl. between 7th and 8th cent.) A Kashmirian Sanskrit author of Kāvyalankara (q.v.), a well-known work on poetics. He is the earliest exponent of the Alankāra school which appears to have been founded earlier, he emphasised Alankāra as the essential element of poetry

BHĀMAHĀLĀNĀKĪRĀ Same as Bhamaha's Kavyāṭlankāra (q.v.)

BHĀMAHĀLĪLĪRĀVA A Sanskrit commentary by Udbhata on Bhamaha's Kavyāṭlankāra (q.v.)

BHĀMITI A Sanskrit work also called Śruraka-bhashya vibhaga or Vibhaga which is an exposition by Vachaspathi Mishra of the Vedānti philosophy of Sankaracharya contained in his commentary on the Brahma-sūtra

BHĀMĪNĪTĪĀSA A Sanskrit poem by Jagannātha (q.v.) which is divided into four parts. Though the poet deals with various matters the dominant element is towards the erotic and the didactic. Many verses are remarkable for their neatness, elegance of expression and pictorial finesse. It appears to be a collection of verses composed by the poet at the intervals.

BHANDĀRKAR, D. R. (d. 1950) An Indian scholar whose chief works are Factors on the Ancient History of India (Calcutta, 1919), Asoka (1932), Archaeology, Religion and Excavations at Varanasi (1920), Lectures on Ancient Indian Numismatics (1921), Kāśmīra Stone Inscription and the Origin and History of Lakulisha Sect and article on Kāśmīra, he edited also Lakṣhasha

BHANDĀRKAR, RĀMAKRISHNA GOPĀLA (1837-1925) A celebrated scholar who was the founder of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. His chief works are Sanskrit and the Prakrit Languages, ed. of Mālatīmādhava (1905), Ancient Indian Numismatics (1921), Some Aspects of Ancient Indian Culture (Madras, 1940), an article 'The Aiyanas in the land of the Asuras' (1922), excavations at Banat (near Jaipur, where the Pandavas are said to have passed the 13th year of exile incognito), the study of coins of Western Kshatrapas and Satavahanas, Report on the research of Sanskrit MSS. in the Bombay Presidency during the year 1883-84' (Bombay, 1887), Vaishnavism, Śaivism and Minor Religious Systems (1913) is however, Bhandarkar's monumental work, which was originally included in the Grundriss der Indo-arischen Philologie and was first published in 1913 (first Indian edition in 1928, later included in his Collected Works 4 Vols.). In this work the author placed before the scholarly world a complete picture of Vaishnavism from about the 5th cent. B.C. to about the middle of the 17th cent. A.D. He showed how Vasudeva preached a monotheistic religion and was himself apotheosised by his kinsmen, the Sittvatas and how the three different streams of religious thought, one flowing from the Vedic god Vishnu, another from the cosmic and philosophic god Nityavana and the third from the historical god Vasudeva, mingled together and formed what is called Vaishnavism.

About Śaivism he traced the history of the Vaishnava sect from its origin to its present state and placed before the scholars a complete picture of the development of that system from Vedic times to 12th cent. after Christ.

BHĀNUDATTĀ (fl. 1450-1500) A Sanskrit poet and son of Gananātha or Ganesvara of Vidha (Mithila) also called Bhanukara Mishra. His father wrote Rasa-ratna-dīpikā, from which quotations are found in Rasa-tarangī, while his great grandfather Sankarāmīśra was the author of Upaskara and of a commentary on Śrī Harsha's Khandana-khadya. Bhanudatta's Rasa-mañjarī deals with the nature of heroes and heroines of different ages and experiences the Sittvika. It has two varieties of Śringara in three of Vipralambha, etc.; all examples, except those with expressly contrary indications, are by the author. His Rasa-taraṅgini, a similar work, in 8 chapters, deals mainly with the various components of the Rasas such as Bhāva, Vibhāva, Anubhāva, etc. and also with various Rasas and three kinds of Dṛṣṭis. Among his other works are: Alaṅkāra-tilaka, Śṛṅgāra-dīpikā and probably the poem Kumāra-bhārgaviyam. His Gīta-gaurīśa appears to follow the model of Jayadeva's Gītagovinda. There are numerous comm. on Rasa-mañjari and Rasa-taraṅgini.

BHĀRADVĀJA-GRIHYASŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

BHĀRADVĀJA ŚIKSHĀ. See Śikshā.

BHĀRADVĀJA-ŚRAUTA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

BHĀRADVĀJA-VIMĀNAŚĀSTRA. An ancient Sanskrit work on aircrafts, which is available in its several versions. Attributed to the sage Bhāradvāja, it has been ed. by Brahmanuni (q.v.)

BHĀRDWĀJ, K. D. An Indian scholar, whose chief work is The Philosophy of Rāmānuja (New Delhi, 1958), written from the devotional view-point.

BHARATA (fl. between 2nd cent. B.C. and 3rd cent. A.D.). A celebrated Sanskrit writer of Nṛtyaśāstra (q.v.), the earliest extant work on dramaturgy. Sometimes referred to as Ādi-Bharata, he appears to have propounded for the first time, the theory of Rasa in connection with drama. Gītālaṅkāra, a work on music, is attributed to him.

BHĀRATA-BHAJANA. A collection of Sanskrit songs (Madras, 1948), composed by Mayūram Viśvanātha Śāstri, a well-known South Indian music composer. He adopted common Hindustani-cum-Carnatic tunes to enable the songs to be sung widely.

BHĀRATA CHAMPŪ. See Ananta Bhaṭṭa.

BHĀRATA-CHAMPŪ-TILAKA. See Lakshmana Kavi.

BHARATAKA-DVĀTRIMŚIKĀ. A Sanskrit collection of 32 tales of Bharatakas, who were probably Śaiva mendicants; its date and authorship are not known. The work, designed to ridicule Bharatakas, may or may not be of Jaina inspiration. The inclusion of vernacular verses indicates its contact with the literature of the people.

BHĀRATA-MANJARI. A Sanskrit poem by Kshemendra (q.v.), written in 1037. In place of about a lac verses of the Mahābhārata, the whole matter has been summed up in about 500 stanzas, but the contents have been re-arranged in certain cases.

BHĀRATA PISHAROTI. A Sanskrit writer, whose methods of teaching Sanskrit are well-known. His Ekabhārata (Trichur, 1978) is a drama in 4 Acts, in which natural features of India play important roles. He has also prepared a cinema version of the Śākuntalam. For the last few years, he has started a bimonthly Sanskrit journal "Kāmadhenu".

BHARAT SINGH UPĀDHYĀYA. A Pali scholar, whose chief works are: Pāli-Sāhitya-kā Itihāsa (History of Pali Literature) and Bauddhakālina Bhāratiya Bhūgola (1961; both in Hindi).

BHARATASVAMĪ. (fl. 1300). A Vedic scholar, whose Sanskrit comm. on the Sāmaveda has been ed. by K.K. Rājā and has been pub. along with the comm. of Mādhava (Adyar, 1914); Bharatasvāmī also commented on the Rigveda and on the Sāmavidhāna-brāhmaṇa.

BHARĀTA-TĀTPARYA-NIRṆAYA. See Mahā-bhārata-tātparya-nirṇaya.

BHARATEŚVARA-BĀHUBALĪ-RĀSA. An Apabhraṃsa poem (1184) by Śālibhadra Sūri (q.v.), which describes the story of Bharata and Bāhubali. When Bharata proceeds on a conquest, all the Rajas as also his 98 brothers, accept his sovereignty save his own brother, Bāhubali. There is a battle between the two, in which Bāhubali is not defeated. Bāhubali, however, hands over the kingdom to Bharata and accepts the life of a recluse. Later on, Bharata also renounces the world. The poem claims a high place not only in Jaina literature, but also amongst the heroic poetry of the early period in respect of language and poetic elegance. There are realistic descriptions of warfare and diplomacy and psychological analysis of Bāhubali's mind and heart.

BHĀRATI KRISHNA TĪRTHA, JAGAD-GURU ŚĀṆKARĀCHĀRYA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Vedic Mathematics, which has run into several reprints.

BHĀRATI MUKHERJI. A scholar, whose chief work is : Kauṭilya's Concept of Diplomacy—A New Interpretation (Calcutta, 1976-77).

BHĀRATĪTĪRTHA Joint author of the Pañchadaśī (q.v.).

BHARATSVĀMĪ (fl. 1300). A Vedic scholar, whose Sanskrit comm. on the Sāmānīya has been ed. by C. Kunhan Rājā and has been pub. along with the comm. of Mādhava (Adyar, 1941); Bharatasvāmī also commented on the Rigveda and on the Sāmavidhāna-brāhmaṇa.

BHĀRAVI. A famous Sanskrit poet and author of the Kīrātārjunīya (q.v.), one of the five famous Sanskrit Mahākāvya. Bhāravi is mentioned in the Aihole inscription (634) along with Kālidāsa, and is also cited in the Kāśikā-vṛtti (c. 650); he is perhaps not much earlier than Bāna (q.v.), who, however, ignores him. He may, therefore, be placed in the latter half of the 6th cent. A.D.

The author's style at its best has depth of expression (artha-gaurava) which is certainly attractive; he excels also in the observation and record of the beauties of Nature as also of maidens, but at places the poem contains a number of stanzas illustrating all kinds of verbal tricks and mannerisms. He appears to have influenced Māgha (q.v.), a later poet.

BHĀRGAVA, P.L. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Chandragupta Maurya (Lucknow, 1935), India in the Vedic Age (1956), Fundamentals of Hinduism A Rational Analysis (1981), Retrieval of History from Puranic Myths (1985) and several articles on Puranic studies.

BHARTṚIHARI. A Sanskrit poet and author of the Śatakatraya (q.v.), i.e., Nīti-śataka, Īśvara-śataka and Śṛṅgāra-śataka. The author is identified with the author of the Vākyapadīya (q.v.), who is said to have died in c. 650; the Vākyapadīya is a metrical work on the philosophy of grammar in three parts called khāṇḍas. Some scholars identify the author of Vākyapadīya with Bhaṭṭi (q.v.), the author of Bhaṭṭi-kāvya. The author of the Vākyapadīya, as is known, had leanings towards Buddhism, while that of the Śatakatraya shows no trace of this faith. But it is said that Bhartṛihari was constantly wavering in his creed so that the identity of the grammarian with the poet Bhartṛihari is not improbable. He is said to have commented upon the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali under the title Mahabhāṣya-dīpikā, though the commentary is not extant. Another work attributed to him is the Bhagavittī (q.v.).

BHARTRIHARI-NIRVĒDĀ A Sanskrit drama by Harīhara (q.v.) (c. 15th cent.).

It describes how king Bhartrihari, influenced by the Yogic teachings of Gorakshanatha or Gorakhanatha, attains such a condition of renunciation, that even when his dead wife is recalled to life, he has no attraction either for her or for his child. In the beginning, however, Bhartrihari is represented as doleful by his wife's death through false rumour of his own death. The work is in great part a glorification of the Yoga philosophy of Gorakhanatha.

BHARTRIMĒTHA Same as Mētha (q.v.).

BHĀRUCHĪ (fl. 950-1050). A Sanskrit writer on Dharmaśāstra whose name has come only from quotations.

BHĀSA A famous Sanskrit dramatist whose name was discovered by Gopinath Sastri (q.v.) of the thirteen Trivandrum plays in 1910-11 was a mere name celebrated (along with Saumilla, Kaviputra and others) by Kalidasa, Bāna, Vakpati, Rājasekhara, Vamana, etc. The text of these plays does not offer any direct evidence to settle the problem of their authorship but most of the scholars assign them to Bhasa. Again, the question of the date of Bhasa has also been a matter of prolonged controversy. He has been dated variously in 2nd or 3rd cent. A.D. and in 5th or 4th cent. B.C.

The plays ascribed to Bhasa number thirteen (excluding two more dramas, Dumaka and Tanvīkrama which are also ascribed to him) and, except Charudatta, all of them are preserved in tact. The plays, divided according to their sources, are as under: ghatotkacha, Karnabhara, Dutavakya, Ūrubhanga, Pañcharatna (based on the Mahābhārata, and most of them being one-act plays), Bālucharita (based upon the Krishna legend), Avimaraka, Chārudatta (based on the hetuśāstra stories), Pratīpā-vaugandharayana and Swapnavasavadatta (probably based on the current story literature) (q.v.). An incomplete drama Yagna phalam is also ascribed to Bhasa.

Pratima-nāṭaka, Abhisheka nāṭaka, (based on the Ramayana), Madhyamāyama, Duta-

The dramas based on the Ramāyana show 'little ingenuity on the part of the author. They vary from the original only in unimportant details and no effort at characterization is in evidence. The Mahābhārata plays show the dramatist in better relief. The departures from the original show skill and intelligence and the characters are more lively and vivid' - ICI II 262. Swapnavasavadatta is Bhasa's masterpiece; it is in continuation of the Pratīpā-vaugandharayana (q.v.).

Bhasa, the author of the largest number of extant Sanskrit dramas, has also variety in his works, which is not found elsewhere. Of all Sanskrit dramatists, he appears to have recognised the importance of the one-act play, but his plot construction is quite crude and certain incidents are simply repeated. In technique, he sometimes flagrantly violates the rules of the Nāṭyaśāstra but his style is simple and direct. His Sanskrit usually agrees with the norm fixed by Pāṇini while the Prakrit normally used by Bhasa is Sauraseni with occasional use of Māgadhī.

BHĀSARVAJÑA (fl. 10th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit writer on philosophy whose Nyaya-sara (q.v.) is a survey of the Nyaya philosophy in the form of a tract.

BHĀSHĀ-PARICHCHHĒDA A Sanskrit work by Visvanatha (q.v.), which is a practical guide-book to Nyaya-Vaiśeṣika philosophical systems. In 166 memorial verses divided into four parts, viz., Pratyakṣa, Anumāna, Upamāna and Sabda, it agrees with

Vaiśeṣika but in regard to means of knowledge, it is in conformity with Nyāya philosophy

BHĀSHĀ-VRITTI A brief but lucid Sanskrit comm. by Puruṣhottamadeva (q.v.) on the Aṣṭādhyāyī (q.v.), excluding the Vedic portion.

BHĀSKARA (A.D. 600) A Sanskrit writer on astronomy and a contemporary of Brahmagupta (q.v.), who appears to have composed Āryabhaṭṭa-śāstra bhāṣya or Āryabhaṭṭa-śāstra-bhāṣya (a comm. on the Āryabhaṭṭa-śāstra (q.v.)), the Mahā-(or Bṛhat)-bhāṣkarīya a treatise on astronomy in eight chapters and the Laṅgha-bhāṣkarīya an abridged version of the Mahābhāṣkarīya

BHĀSKARA (fl. 9th cent.) Author of the Bhāṣka-śāstra (q.v.) in Sanskrit a comm. on Brahma-sūtra (q.v.)

BHĀSKARA (fl. 1114) A noted mathematician and astronomer whose famous work in Sanskrit is Siddhanta śiromaṇi (q.v.) of which two chapters, entitled the Līlavatī and the Bījagaṇita (qq.v.) are the most important treatises on Mathematics; his Graha-gaṇita and the Gola are the most valuable writings on astronomy. Said to have been born in a village in Deccan he was son of Maheśa Daivajña or Mahesvara. His other works are Bījopaniṣad Karmakutūhala (also called Graha-gaṇita kutūhala) Brahmatulya Brahma-siddhanta-tulya, Brahmatulya-siddhanta Paśana-bhāṣya and Uparatā

BHĀSKARA (fl. mid 14th cent.) A Sanskrit dramatist, whose Urmatta-raḥasya in one act, depicts Rama's search and his identifying soliloquies on Sita's transformation into a gazelle through Durvasas' curse and her recovery with the aid of Agastya. The general plan is in imitation of the Fourth Act of the Vikramorviśya (q.v.)

BHĀSKARA (fl. 14th cent.) A Sanskrit author of Nānārtha-ratna-mālā, a lexicon. Also called Irupaga Daṇḍadhinātha, the author lived under Harichandra II of Vijayanagara

BHĀSKARA-BHĀṢYĪ A Sanskrit comm. by Bhāskara (q.v.) on the Brahmasūtra (q.v.), also called Saṅkara-mānasa-bhāṣya. Upholding the Bhedabheda-śāstra or the doctrine that unity and multiplicity are equally real, it rejects the illusion of time and believes in re-creation (parīṇama). According to this view, Jīva is naturally one with Brahman; the difference from Brahman is due to limitation. It advocates the combination of knowledge and action (Viśvānara-samuchchaya)

PHĀSKARAKAṆṬHA (fl. 18th cent.) A Sanskrit writer of Kashmir and author of Phāṣkarī a comm. on Abhinavagupta's Pratyabhijñā-vimarsinī. His Lālī is a Sanskrit tr. of the Kashmirian work of Lallī PHĀSKARĀNANDA, SVĀMĪ A modern writer who has rendered from Bengali into Sanskrit Chaitanya's life under the title Chaitanya-charitamṛta-saṁskṛita-anuvāda (1957).

BHĀSKARĀNANDA SARASVATĪ, SVĀMĪ (1833-99) A saint of Kāśhī and a Sanskrit scholar, who, though born at a village in Kanpur district, renounced the worldly life at the age of 27 and lived thereafter in Kāśhī. His Sarādhi can still be seen at Anand Bagh, Kāśhī. Several supernatural events are associated with his name. Several Rājās, Maharājās and foreign dignitaries including Mark Twain, Sir William Lockhart, the then Commander-in-Chief of India, the Viceroy of India came to visit him and sought his blessings. His works are comms. on Sārāṅya-siddhī (a work on Vedānta), Daśopaniṣad (on ten Upanishads) and on Nalodaya

BHĀSKARA NRISIMHA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who at the instance of Rājā-vrajalāla of Banaras, wrote a comm. on the Kāmasūtra (q.v.).

BHĀSKARARĀYA. A Sanskrit scholar, who was the author of Vaidika-kośa (enumeration in verses the words of the Nighaṇṭu, with the comm. of Nārāyaṇa Yajvan) and Sahasra-bhajana-sūtra-vyākhyā; nothing is known about his time and place.

BHĀṢI 411 (Bhāṣya karana). A famous astronomical Sanskrit work, chiefly based on Varāhamihira's works and the Sūryasiddhanta (q.v.). Written in 8 chapters by Śātānanda, it contains rules for the accurate determination of the occurrence of eclipses.

BHĀSYAM VIJAYASĀRATHI. A modern Sanskrit poet, who has several works to his credit. His Mandūkini (1980) is a lyrical poem on the well-known story of the descent of the Ganges from the matted locks of Lord Śiva. The poem is an invocation of the human soul for divine grace for leading it to its spiritual goal.

BHAT, GOVIND KESHAV (1914-). A Sanskrit scholar, who is at present Curator and Director, Post-graduate and Research Dept., Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. Author of 35 books and articles, his chief works in English are: The Vidūshaka (a major study of the Sanskrit comic character), Bhārata-nāṭyamañjarī, Tragedy and Sanskrit Drama, Vedic Themes (research papers on problems connected with Rigveda, Nirukta, Upanishads, etc.) and Sanskrit Drama; he has ed. also several Sanskrit plays, with Introduction and notes.

BHATT, G.H. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Bālakāṇḍa in the critical ed. of the Rāmāyana pub. by the University of Baroda (1960) and the Pāda-Index of Vālmiki Rāmāyana; with U.P. Shāh, he also ed. the Uttara-kāṇḍa of the above Rāmāyana (1975).

BHATT, G.P. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Epistemology of the Bhaṭṭa School of Pūrva Mīmāṃsā.

BHATT, N.R. A modern scholar, who has critically ed. Mātanga-pārameśvarāgama, with Introduction in French (1977).

BHATT, S.R. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Studies in Vedānta.

BHAṬṬA ĀHLĀDAKA. A Kashmirian Sanskrit poet and author of Delaramā-kathā-sāra (q.v.), a poetical work, his date is uncertain.

BHAṬṬA BHĀSKARA. A Sanskrit scholar, who commented on the Rigveda, on Attareva-brāhmaṇa and on Taittirīya-āraṇyaka; his time is not certain.

BHAṬṬA BHĀSKARA MIŚRA, KAUSIKA (fl. 11th cent.). A Vedic scholar, whose Sanskrit comm. on the Taittirīya-saṃhita of Kṛishṇa Yajurveda was ed. and pub. by Mahadeva Shāstrī and Rangachārya (1894-28), which, however has remained incomplete. Bhatta Bhāskara also wrote a Sanskrit comm. on the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa. One Bhatta Bhāskara Miśra, Kāśyapa wrote a Sanskrit comm. on Ārsheya-brāhmaṇa.

BHATTA BHĪMA. Same as Bhaumaka (q.v.).

BHAṬṬĀCHĀRYA, B.K. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Śārdūla-śatakam, a drama, deals with the labour problem in a bus company.

BHAṬṬĀCHĀRYA, H. A modern scholar, whose chief work is A Comprehensive Study of the Indian Science of Thought from the Jaina Standpoint (Madras, 1925).

BHAṬṬĀCHĀRYA, S. B. A Sanskrit author of Uttarākhaṇḍa-yatrā (Calcutta, 1948), which describes the author's pilgrimage to the Himālayan shrines.

BHAṬṬĀCHĀRYA, S.P. A Sanskrit scholar, who has discussed Śānta Rasa with reference to its scope in literature (Calcutta, 1976-77).

BHAṬṬA GOPĀLA. Same as Gopāla Bhaṭṭa.

BHAṬṬAGOVINDA (fl. prior to 1310). A Sanskrit scholar, whose Śrutivikāśa is a comm. on the 8th Aṣṭaka of Ṛigveda; he also commented on the Āitareya-brāhmaṇa.

BHAṬṬA JAGADDHARA. A Kashmirian Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Balabodhinī (1000) a grammar of the Katantra school. See Kātantra.

BHAṬṬA LAKSHMĪDHARA. See Lakshmi-dhara.

BHAṬṬA LOLLĀṬA (fl. 9th cent). A Kashmirian Sanskrit author of Uṭpatti-vāda, a famous comm. on Bharata's Rasasūtra. See Nāṭya-śāstra and Bharata.

BHAṬṬA MATHURĀNĀTHA SHĀSTRĪ. See Mathurānātha Shāstri.

BHAṬṬA NĀRĀYAṆA. A Sanskrit dramatist, who probably flourished between 8th and 9th century, for he is quoted by Ānandavardhana (800) and Abhinavagupta and was the grantee of a copper plate inscription of 840. He was of Śāṇḍilya Gotra, surnamed Mṛigarāja. Wilson identifies him with a Brahmana of that name who was invited by Ādiśūra from Kanauja to Bengal. His Veṇisamhara (q.v.)

is a Nāṭaka in six acts based on an episode in the Mahābhārata, when Bhīma fulfils the vow of avenging the insults heaped upon Draupadī by the wicked Duryodhana.

BHAṬṬA NĀRĀYAṆA. A Sanskrit writer, who is supposed to have written an Introduction to Daśakumaracharita (q.v.).

BHAṬṬANĀTHASWAMI, S.P.V. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Mārkaṇḍeya's Prākṛita-sarvasva (Vizagapatnam, 1927) and an article 'Trivikrama and His Followers' (1911).

BHATTANĀYAKA (fl. 900-1000). A Sanskrit author, the most celebrated commentator of the Rasa school; his work Hṛidayadarpaṇa is not extant. However, from later writers, particularly from Abhinavagupta, his interpretation of the famous Rasa-sūtra of Bharata is known as Bhukti-vāda. Bhattanāyaka has rejected the views of Lollāṭa and Śrī Śaṅkuka; he has recognized two additional powers of word, viz., the power of generalization (bhāvakatva) by which the meaning is made intelligible to the audience and the power of bhojakatva which enables the audience to relish the enjoyment of the poem.

B: TT4PARINNA. See Paṇṇa.

BHAṬṬĀRA HARICHANDRA (fl. 5th-6th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Mālatī, a prose-kāvya, mentioned in an introductory verse (12) of Bāṇa's Harsha-charita (q.v.). He may be identified with Harichandra, who is quoted and praised in Sadukti-karnāmṛita (q.v.) and whose verses are quoted in other anthologies too.

BHAṬṬĀRAKA VINAYACHANDRA (fl. 1150-96). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, who composed three works: Chūnaḍī (q.v.), Nijjhara Pañchamī Vihāṇa Kahā (a story* narrated on the occasion of Nirjhara Pañchami) and Kalyāṇaka Rāsu.

BHAṬṬAŚRI NARĀYAṆA ŚĀSTRĪ. See Nārāyaṇa Śāstrī, Bhaṭṭaśrī.

BHAṬṬA, R.M. A modern scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Vidyūpada of the Matanga Parameśvara Āgama.

BHĀTTA SUKUMĀRA. See Sukumāra.

BHAṬṬA TAUTA (fl. 960-990). A Sanskrit writer, known to us as Abhinavagupta's guru and the author of the Kavī-kautuka, known only from citations; in his Lochana (q.v.), Abhinavagupta tells us that he had written a comm. on this work. Kshemendra, Hemachandra and Somēśvara refer to and quote from Bhaṭṭa Tauta, who is credited with the definition of Pratibhā. Bhaṭṭa Tauta held the Śāntarasa as the most important and that the Kavī, the Nāyaka and the reader (Śrotā) pass through the same experience so far as Rasa is concerned. He was against the views held by Śankuka (q.v.), who interpreted the Rasa-sūtra of Bharata.

BHAṬṬATIRI, PATTATTU VĀSUDEVA. See Vāsudeva.

BHAṬṬI (fl. 7th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of the Bhaṭṭi-kāvya (or Rāvaṇa-vadha). According to the poet, he wrote in Valabhi under the patronage of king Śrīdharasena, but four kings of this name are known, the last of whom died in A.D. 641. The last king was a patron of letters and it is probable that Bhaṭṭi wrote his poem under him. The suggestion that he is to be identified with Vatsabhaṭṭi of the Mandasor inscription lacks all plausibility, if only for the reason that Vatsabhaṭṭi commits errors in grammar. The name Bhaṭṭi, which is a Prākṛita form of the Sanskrit word Bhartri, has given room for identifying Bhaṭṭi and Bhartṛihari or for making a son or half-brother of that famed poet. The dates of the two writers differ and hence this identification cannot be supported; Bhaṭṭi is certainly earlier than Māgha and was known to Bhāmaha.

BHAṬṬI-KĀVYA (or Rāvaṇa-vadha). A Sanskrit kāvya in 22 cantos by Bhaṭṭi (q.v.).

The poem is intended to serve the double plan of describing Rāma's story upto the coronation of Rāma on his return from Laṅkā as also of illustrating the rules of grammar. In the latter aspect, its 22 cantos fall into four sections : the first four on miscellaneous rules, v-ix on the leading rules, x-xiii on illustration of the ornaments of poetry and the remaining poem illustrates the use of the moods and tenses. The poet himself is conscious of the fact that this is intelligible only through a comm. and that it can be enjoyed by those who are proficient in grammar. Indian opinion gives Bhaṭṭi without hesitation a rank of a Mahakavi.

BHAṬṬOJI DĪKSHITA (fl. between 1547 and 1635). Author of Siddhānta-kaumudī (q.v.), a celebrated Sanskrit comm. on Ashtādhyāyī (q.v.), which is more popular than Pāṇini's work itself. He wrote also Śabda-kaustubha (q.v.), another comm. on Āṣṭādhyāyī. On his own Siddhānta-kaumudī, he wrote a comm., Praughā-manoramā, Bāla-manoramā is its abridgement. Vaiyākaraṇa-siddhānta-kārikā is also ascribed to him; an astronomical work Tīthi-nirnaya, is also attributed to him. Besides the above works, some thirty more, including a Veda-bhāṣya-sāra, are also attributed to him. A South Indian, Bhaṭṭoji used to live at Vārānasī, where he prepared a school of grammarians. Son of Lakshmidhara, brother of Rangoji Dikshita, father of Bhānu Dikshita (variously called Vireśvara Dikshita or Rāmāśrama), he was a pupil of Śeṣha Kṛishna. Bhaṭṭoji's chief contribution is the arrangement of Pāṇini's rules under different topics.

See Varadarāja

BHAṬṬOPALA (fl 10th cent.) A Sanskrit writer on Mathematics, who made a deep and accurate study of his predecessors. His comms are all learned and prove the accuracy of their author. He is perhaps also the author of an independent work, the Ganutaskandha. Bhattopala's comm Bṛhat-saṃhita-vivṛiti (composed in c. 966) on the Bṛhat-saṃhita (q.v.), gives a good idea of the history of this science in India in the earliest stages. He also revised the original work of Kālyanavarman (q.v.). An astronomical work called Horasastra is also ascribed to him.

BHAUṂA Same as Bhaumika (q.v.)

BHAUMAKA A Kashmirian Sanskrit poet, who is the author of the Ravataṭṭamva in 27 cantos describing the toiv of Arjuna, Kartavīrya and Ravana and of the same time illustrating almost the whole of the Iśa-dhivā (q.v.). He is also called Bhatta Bhuma, Bhuma or Bhauma and appears to have flourished earlier than the 11th century. Some scholars think that the poet is quoted in Kaśika (q.v.), a comm. on the Iśa-dhivā.

BHĀVA See Nagaraja

BHĀVABHĀṬAVĪ A Prakrit work in 531 Gathas by Hemachandra (q.v.) written in 1113. It treats of matters relating to re-birth; there is an anonymous Sanskrit comm. on it.

BHAVABHŪTI (alias Śrīkantha, surnamed Udumbara.) A Sanskrit dramatist, the best among the successors of Kālidāsa (q.v.). Son of Nilakaptha and Jatukarni, he was born in a Brahmana family of Kasyapa gotra at Padmapura in Vidarbha (Berar) but he shifted to Ujjayinī where, before Mahākīla, his dramas were staged. His grandfather Bhatta Gopala had performed the Vājapeya Yajña, while Jānanidhi was the name of his guru. According to Kalhana's Rājataranginī (q.v.), Bhavabhūti was the court-poet of Yaśovarman, king of Kanvakubja, who was defeated by Muktāpīḍa Lalitāditya of Kashmir some time after A.D. 736. From Gaudavaho (q.v.), it would appear as if Bhavabhūti had not seen the downfall of his patron. He, therefore, should be placed in the beginning of the eighth century. In his plays, Bhavabhūti styles himself Pada-vākya-pramāṇajña, which would show that he was proficient in Vyākaraṇa, Mīmāṃsā and Nīti. He also appears to be well-versed in Vedānta and Veda. In one MS. he is identified with Umbeka and stated to be a pupil of the famous Mīmāṃsaka Kumarila Bhaṭṭa. This identity, however, is not accepted by Kane who places his literary activity between A.D. 700 and 730.

Bhavabhūti is the author of Mahāvīra-charita, Uttararama-charita and Mālitā-madhava (qq.v.), all dramas. He surpasses Kālidāsa in depicting sentiments—particularly the karuṇa (pathos or tenderness).

BHAVADIVA A Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of Paśvaratha-charita, a work on the life of a Jaina Tīrthankara, the author's date is uncertain.

BHĀVADEVA BHATṬA (fl. c. 1100). A Smṛiti writer of Bengal, who was minister of king Harivarmadeva. Born in the Sāvārṇa gotra, he was son of Govardhana and Śaṅkoka. A versatile genius, he composed several valuable works on Dharmaśāstra. Describing himself in his works as Bālavalabhībhuṅga, his works in Sanskrit are : Karmamushthāna-paddhati (q.v.), Prāyaścitta-prakaraṇa (or, -nirupāṇa; (q.v.), Tatātāta-mata-tilaka (on the doctrines of Mīmāṃsā from the standpoint of Kumārila), Sambhādhanveka, Śiva-sūta kasaucha-prakaraṇa and Uvabhara-tilaka (on judicial procedure; hitherto undiscovered).

BHAVADEVĀ NYĀYALĀṆKĀRA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Smṛiti-chandra, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

BHĀVA MIŚRA. A court-physician of Emperor Akbar and author in Sanskrit of the Āyurvedic compilation Bhāva-prakāśa (c. 1550). His other works are : Haritakyādinighaṇṭu, Guṇaratnamālā and Tāntrika-chikitsā.

BHĀVANĀ SANDHI PRAKARAṆA. A small Apabhraṁśa poem (10th-13th cent.) by Jayadeva Muni (q.v.), which is didactic in nature. It considers the world as illusion and advocates that one can get release from the bondage of the world by following the religion as propounded by the Jinas.

BHĀVANĀTHA (fl. c. 550). A Sanskrit author of Tarkajvālā, a work on philosophy, available in the Tibetan translation.

BHAVANUSANTA TRIVEDĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose Samiskṛita-yuropyān-bhāṣhā (1984) is a comparative study in Sanskrit of Sanskrit and European languages. It contains two sections of 108 and 168 Kārikās, and prose explanations.

BHĀVA-PRAKĀŚA (or—prakāśika or,—prakāśana). An extensive Sanskrit work, dealing with Rasas, Bhāvas and dramaturgy, written by Śāradātanaya (q.v.). The book is divided into four sections and ten chapters. The first section deals with Bhāva, the second with Rasa, while the third describes the relation between the words and meanings. These sections advocate the method of Rasa-Dhvani, according to which the Alāṅkāras, Guṇas and Ritis should beautify the soul Rasa, and these should be so chosen as to develop the Rasas, for, according to the author of this work, Rasa is the soul of poetry. The fourth section, on dramaturgy, describes ten types of drama and twenty types of Nṛitya. In regard to the nature and functions of a Nāṭaka, the work mainly follows Bharata and Dhanañjaya and mentions the views of Kohala and Mātṛigupta whenever these two differ. The topics dealt with in the entire work are : Bhāva, Avāntara-bhāvabheda-svarūpa, Nāyaka-bheda-vasthū-rasa-bhāva-vikāra, Śabdārtha-sambandhu-bheda-prakāra, Nāṭyativṛttādi-lakṣhaṇa, Daśarūpaka-lakṣhaṇa, Nṛitya-bheda-svarūpa-lakṣhaṇa and Nūṭya-prayoga-bheda-prakāra.

BHĀVA-PRAKĀŚA. A Sanskrit Āyurvedic compilation by Bhāva Miśra (q.v.), also called Bhāva-prakāśana, composed in c. 1550.

BHĀVĀRTHA-DĪPIKĪ. A famous Sanskrit comm. by Śrīdharasvāmī (q.v.) on the Bhāgavata purāṇa (q.v.).

BHĀVAŚATAKA. See Nāgarāja.

BHAVASVĀMIN. A Sanskrit scholar, whose comm. on the Taittirīya-samhitā of Yajurveda is no longer extant; he fl. before Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara (q.v.).

BHĀVA-VAIRĀGYA-ŚATAKA. A Prākṛit anthology (12th or 13th cent.), describing the vanity of existence and such other things. The main aim of the authors is to impress upon the reader that Jainism is the sole means of the cessation of worldly sufferings.

BHĀVIŚAYATTA-KAḤĀ (Bhavishyatta-kathā). An Apabhraṁśa epic by Dhanapāla (q.v.; fl. 10th cent.).

Dhanapāla, a merchant, with his wife Kamalaśrī and son Bhavishya, lives in the city of Gajapura (Hastināpura); he marries another lady Sarūpā who gives birth to Bandhudatta. Bandhudatta is an adventurous youth and collects about 500 merchants to go to foreign lands; his half brother, Bhavishya also joins him. A gale drives their fleet to the Mainākadvīpa; Bhaviṣya is lost in the jungle and Bandhudatta, in spite of remonstrances of his companions, orders the party to set sail. Bhaviṣya comes upon a city which has been deserted by a demon; there is a Jaina temple where he offers worship. The god Achyuta-nātha sends Mañibhadra, the king of the Yakshas, to protect Bhaviṣya; Bhaviṣya there meets a lovely maiden and both of them fall in love with each other. Once the demon appears; he suddenly recollects his own former life and takes kindly to Bhaviṣya. The demon makes the city hum with life and offers the maiden in marriage to Bhaviṣya.

After years of happy life, they set sail for Gajapura; on the way they meet Bandhudatta whose ship has been wrecked. Bhaviṣya forgives his brother and offers him presents, but again, while Bhaviṣya is away making a religious offering, he sets sail with Bhaviṣya's bride and wealth. He reaches Gajapura and passes off Bhaviṣya's wife, as his own. The king of the Yakshas brings Bhaviṣya to Gajapura in his aerial car; the hero seeks justice from the king; the king wants to punish Bandhu, but forgives him at the instance of his magnanimous brother. The king offers his own daughter Sumitra to Bhaviṣya.

The prince of Poyanapura matches on Gajapura, the king offers resistance, his army led by Bhaviṣya. The king is victorious owing to the valour of the hero and Bhaviṣya is appointed as the crown prince. This was, perhaps, the closing incident of the story as it originally stood before a Jaina author retouched it. Bhaviṣya and his wife go to Ikadvīpa, where a sage explains to them the principles of Jainism, and recounts the past lives of Bhaviṣya. The hero then upon makes over the reins of royalty to his son and retires to a forest.

The Bhavisyatta-kahā is the most popular form of literature, known as the social dharma-kathā. Despite the many supernatural elements, it is written in an attractive style.

BHAVISHYA-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

BHAWANI LAL BHARTIYA (1928-). A scholar, who is Professor and Head, Dayananda Chair of Vedic Studies, Panjab University, Chandigarh. His chief works in Hindi are: Rishi Dayananda aur Arya Samaj ki Sanskrit Sāhitya ko Den (Contribution of the Arya Samaj to Sanskrit Language and Literature; 1968), Vedādhayana ke Sopān (Critical Essays on Higher Vedic Studies; 1974), ed. of Chaturveda Vishaya Sūchi of Dayānanda Sarasvatī, Śrīkṛishṇa-charita (life of Kṛishṇa, based on the Mahābhārata), biographies of Dayananda Sarasvatī (1983) and Shyāmji Kṛishṇa Vermā (1984), Bibliography of Arya Samaj Literature (1984) and Philosophy of Dayananda (ed.; 1982). His specialization is in the comparative study of 19th century Indian Reform Movements with particular reference to Svami Dayananda and the Arya Samaj.

BHAWF, S.S. A Sanskrit scholar, who has given a fresh interpretation of the Soma Hymns (Bk. IX) of Rigveda (1957, 1960, 1962, etc.) while trying to utilize Panini's work as far as possible. See Siddhānta-kāumudī.

BHAYABHAÑJANA ŚARMA. A Sanskrit author of Ramala-rahasya, dealing with geomancy, his date is uncertain.

BHAYAHARA-STOTRA. A Jain Prakrit work by Mahatma (q.v.), written in 1309. Composed in honour of Jinaparsvanatha, there is a comm. on it by Jinaprabhā Suri.

BHAYĀLIKAR, ANNĀJI RĀMACHANDRA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who has given an astronomical interpretation to some mantras of the Rigveda in his Suktārtha-muktavali (written with Haribabā Puranika).

BHAYĀNI, H.C. A modern scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of the big Apabhraṃśa work, Paumachariu (3 Vols., 1953-60), with good introductions and critical material, and the ed. of Saṃdeśarāsaka (Bombay 1945; in collaboration with Muni Jinavijaya).

BHELĀCHARYA. Supposed author of the Bhela-saṃhitā (q.v.), a work on Āyurveda; his date is uncertain but he is an ancient writer.

BHELĀ-SAMHITĀ. A Sanskrit work on Indian medicine, which is preserved in a defective manuscript. Mostly in metrical form with some mixture of prose, it shows acquaintance with Sūśruta (q.v.) and has the same divisions as in the Charaka-saṃhitā (q.v.). The work, attributed to Bhelāchārya (q.v.), presents a tradition inferior to that of the Charaka-saṃhitā.

BHIKKUNĪ-VIBHAṄGA. A part of Sutta-vibhaṅga (q.v.).

BHIKSHĀRĀMA. A modern Sanskrit writer of Kurukshetra, who is the author of prose biographies of Madanmohan Mālavīya, Rājendra Prasad, Vallabhabhāi Paṭel and Jawaharlal Nehru.

BHIKSHĀṬĀNA. A Sanskrit poem in 40 Paddhatis, by Utprekshāvallabha (fl. before 14th cent.; q.v.).

It describes how Śiva as a mendicant approached Rājārāja Chola King for alms in order to test his liberality and how the appearance of Śiva influenced the women of the city. The poem is more an erotic than a religious one and is replete with descriptions of high fancy, interspersed with didactic matter.

BHIKSHU GOVINDA. A Sanskrit author of the medical work Rasa-kūṭana (q.v.); his date is uncertain.

BHĪMA (Bhīmaṭa; fl. 9th cent.). A Sanskrit dramatist; a verse attributed to Rājasekhara mentions the five dramas composed by him, but all of which are now lost. Among them are: Svapnadaśanana (this won him chief fame), Pratibhāchāṇukya, and Maṇḍana-Vatsurāja. As the Pratibhāchāṇukya appears to be modelled after the Mudrārākṣasa, Bhīma may be placed somewhere in the 9th century. There is, however, a positive ground for connecting him with Chandella king Harsha. The dramatist's son, Vasunaga wrote the play Pratimāniruddha.

BHĪMĀCHARYA CHAṬṬOPĀDHYĀYA. A Sanskrit scholar of Benares, who wrote Kṛishi-vijñāna (1905) on agriculture and an essay on the nature of heat.

BHĪMASENA DĪKSHITA (fl. 18th cent.)
A Sanskrit writer of Kanyakubja and author of Sudhāsagara, a comm. on Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.).

BHĪMASENA ŚARMĀ (1854-1917). A prominent disciple of Dayananda Sarasvatī, who was born at the village Lālpur in the Etah district of Uttar Pradesh. He was appointed as a Lecturer in Veda in Calcutta University in 1912, a post held earlier by Satyavrata Sāmaśrami (q.v.) and worked for five years. He commented upon the Upanishads.

BHĪMASENA ŚHĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is a comm. on Laghu-kaumudī (Pt. 1, 1950, Pt. 2,) BHĪMAṬA. See Bhīma.

BHOGANĀIHA (fl. 14th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and younger brother of Mādhava and Sayana, who is reported to be the author of six works, Mahagunapati-stotra, Gauri-niṭha-śataka, Udāharana-mālā, Śṅgāra-mañjarī, Tripura-vijaya and Ramollasa; information about him has been given by M.P.L. Śāstry.

BHOJA (fl. c. 1000-1055). Mentioned also as Bhoja-raja or Dhāreśvara, he was king of Dhārā. Son and successor of Sindhuraja, he was a nephew of Muñjavākapatiraja. A patron of arts and learning, he was himself a distinguished Sanskrit writer. He is the author of Sarasvatī-kaṇṭhabharaṇa (on poetics; q.v.), Śṛiṅgāra-prakaśa (on poetics and dramaturgy; q.v.), Samarāṅgana-sūtradhara (chiefly on architecture and iconography), Āṭmika-kalpataru (Nitiśāstra; q.v.), Tattva-prakāśa (on Śaivism), Rāja-martanda (comm. on Patanjali's Yoga-sūtra), Rāmāyaṇa-champa (q.v.), Sālihotra (on horses), Rajamṛigaṇika (on astronomy) and Nāmamālikā (q.v.), a lexicon. Vividha-vidyā-vichārachatura and Chārucharya (both ed. by V. Venkaṭachalam) are also ascribed to Bhoja. Śṛiṅgāra-mūñjarī-kathā, also ascribed to Bhoja, based on a single palm-leaf manuscript has been recently pub. and it resembles the Kuṣṇānimata of Dāmodaragupta and the Samavamātrikā of Kshemendra.

BHOJAKA, A.M. A modern scholar, whose chief work is the good ed. of Chauppana-mahāpurīsa-charita (Benaras, 1961), which is a kind of Universal History of the Jains.

BHOJANA-KUTŪHALA. A Sanskrit work, existing in manuscript form. Dealing mainly with Deccan Dietetics, it is written by Raghunātha, a Mahārāshṭrian Brahmana of the late 17th century.

BHOJA-PRABANDHA. A Sanskrit prose work by Vallālasena (q.v.), which eulogises Bhoja of Dhārā in relation to many poets attached to his court for his liberal patronage. It describes how Bhoja came to the throne and then narrates a number of anecdotes, regardless of chronology, it brings together in Bhoja's court such literary figures as Kālidāsa, Bhavabhūti, Daṇḍin, Magha and some other less-known poets. The work exists in several versions.

BHṚIGU-SAMHITĀ. An old Sanskrit work on horoscopy, which is a celebrated one.

BHŪDLVA MUKHERJI. A Sanskrit author of Rasa-jala-nidhi (1926), which is on Hindu Chemistry.

BHŪDEVA ŚUKLA. (fl. end of 16th and beginning of 17th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Kāshmir and author of Dharma-vijaya, an allegorical play, eulogising the 'advantages of the life of spiritual duty' through the characters, Virtue and Vice, in personified form. His Rasa-vilasa is a work on poetics.

BHŪMĀNANDA SARASVATĪ. A Christian missionary of south India, who became a follower of Dayānanda Sarasvatī. His other works are: Scientific Gleanings from Vedic Mythology, Eugenics in the Vedas, Anatomy in the Vedas, Eng. tr. in full, with critical and explanatory notes of the Yajurveda and Eng. tr. of the Āryābhivāya and Gokarūṇānidhi (1939), both by Dayānanda. His other works are: Anthology of Vedic Hymns (Lahore, 1935) and Ecclesia Divina (1936).

BHŪMINĀTHA (Nalla Dīkshita). A Sanskrit court-poet of Shāhji of Tanjore (r. 1687-1711), whose Dharma-vijaya-champū glorifies the life and achievements of his patron. His drama Subhadra-pariṇaya describes the marriage of Subhadrā with Arjuna; his Śṛiṅgāra-sarvasabhāna is a one-act play on an erotic theme, while Jivānmukti-kalyāna and Chitta-vṛtti-kalyāna are allegorical dramas.

BHŪ-PARIKRAMĀ. A Sanskrit work by Vidyāniti (q.v.), which describes Balarāma's journey around the earth wherein are mentioned 56 countries. It is one of the earliest specimen of gazetteers.

PHŪTABALLI (fl. early centuries of Christian Era). A Digambara Jaina scholar, who was pupil of Dharasena. He lived in Girinagara (Junāgarh) and is the author of Shaṅkhaṇḍāgama Sūtras (with Pushpadanta). There is a comm. Dhavalā by Virasena on these Sūtras.

BHUVANĀBHYUDAYA. See Śaṅkuka.

BHUVANA-PRADĪKĀ. See Rāmakrishṇa Śāstrī.

BHUVANASUNDARĪ-KATHĀ. A Prākṛit religious poem (975) by Vijayasīmha, a pupil of Samudra Sūri of the Nāgila Kula; it consists of about 9,000 stanzas and employs Gāthā metre.

BIDYALONGKORN, PRINCE. A modern Thai scholar, who has tr. into Thai the stories from the Vetāla-pañchaviṃśati.

BIGANDET, BISHOP P. (1813-94). A Roman Catholic bishop, who studied Burmese sources on the life of the Buddha; his chief work is The Life or Legend of Gaudama, the Buddha of the Burmese (Rangoon, 1858).

BĪJAGAṆITA. A Sanskrit work by Bhaskarāchārya (q. v.), which is one of the most complete and systematic works on Algebra.

BILHAṆYA (fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who was born at Koṇamukha (village Khunmoh) near Pravarapura, the capital of Kashmir. Son of Jyeshthakalaśa and Nāgidevī, his father wrote a comm. on Mahābhāṣya. His brothers Uhtatama and Ānanda were also poets. Educated in Kashmir and particularly proficient in grammar and poetics, he undertook a tour in about A.D. 1050. At Mathurā, he held disputations with the learned of Vṛindāvana; he also visited Kanauj, Prayāg and Benares. He was received well in the court of king Kṣīṇa of Dāhala (Bundelkhand) and in that court probably composed a poem in honour of Rāma. He intended to see Bhoja of Dharm but he could not do so. He went to Anhilwad in Gujarat, but he was not heartily welcomed there and he complains of this indifference. After visiting Somanātha, he reached Rāmeśvaram. On his way back, he reached the Court of Kalyāṇa, where Vikramāditya VI Tribhuvannamāla (1067-1127) admired his learning and made him his Vidyāpati or Director of Instruction. From the last verses of Vikramāṅkadeva-charita and some other verses attributed to him, it is conjectured that later on he fell into disfavour with Vikramāditya and had to leave his territories. This may account for the incomplete narrative of Vikrama's history in Bilhana's poem, for it stops with his Chola war and does not refer to the expedition beyond the Narbadā in 1088.

Bilhana's works are : Vikramāṅkadeva-charita (q. v.); a poem describing the story of king Vikramāditya, Kṛnasundarī (q. v.), a Nāṭikā in 4 Acts, Chaurapañchāṅkika (q. v.) and Śivastuti, a small poem in praise of Śiva.

Bilhana is a master of vivid description; his style is elegant and is a good specimen of the Vaidarbhi type. See Śilhana.

BILHANA-KĀVYA. See Chaurapañchāṅkika.

BILVAMAṆGALA. See Līlāśūla.

BINDESWARI PRASĀD SINHA. A scholar, who is noted for his Readings in Kautilya's Arthaśāstra (Delhi, 1976-77).

BIRA, SH. A Mongolian scholar, who is mainly interested in the Mongolian and Tibetan trs. of the Kāvyaḍarśa. He wrote articles on the history of the tr. and the spreading of Kāvyaḍarśa in Tibet and Mongolia, as well as on its Tibetan and Mongolian comms. (1976). He is at present working on the tr. of Kāvyaḍarśa from Tibetan and Sanskrit with extensive comments based on its Tibetan and Mongolian commentaries.

BIRENDRAKUMĀRA BHAIṬĀCHĀRYA.

A modern Sanskrit author of two farces : Veśṭhāna-vyāyoga and Śārdūlaśakaṣa (1969). His Kavi-kālidāsa was written for the Kālidāsa festival.

BIRNBAUM, RAOUL. A scholar, whose chief work is: The Healing Buddha (1968).

BISNUPĀDA BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A modern scholar, who has ed. Dhvanyāloka of Ānanda-vardhana with a kind of running comm. in English.

BIŚVEŚVARANĀTHA REU. See Viśveśvaranātha Reu.

BLIKSTEIN, IZIDORO. A modern Indologist who is Head of the Departments of Romanic Linguistics and of Sanskrit Language and Literature at the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil. His chief articles (in Portuguese) are: "Hinduism, Linguistics and Semiology" (1980), "To see the Brahman : a semiological mirage. Problems with the translation of Kena Upanishad" and "Mirage and knowledge : problems of perception in a Sanskrit text" (1983).

BLOCH, JULIUS (d. 1953). A foreign Indologist, who studied the linguistic characteristics of Kharoshthī Dhammapada. His other works are : Formation de la Langue Marathe (Eng. tr. The Formation of the Marathi Language, ed. by Dev Raj Chanana), L' Indo-Aryan (1934), Aśoka et la māgadhī (Bulletin of the school of Oriental Studies, VI), Some Problems of Indo-Aryan Philology (1930) and Structure of Dravidian Languages (in Eng. tr.). He was also associated with the French tr. of the Buddhist Canon in Cambodian language.

BLOCH, T. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is Vararuchi and Hemachandra (Gutersloh, 1893).

BLOOMFIELD, MAURICE. An American Indologist, whose chief works are : Vedic Concordance (1906; pub. in the Harvard Oriental Series; a gigantic work, which is an alphabetical index to every line of Vedic mantras, together with an account of their variants in the different Vedic books, including Brāhmaṇas, Āraṇyakas, Sūtra-granthas, Upanishads etc.; reprinted in 1964 with the assistance of the Government of India), Rigveda Repetitions (1916, in the Harvard Oriental Series; all the repeated passages of the Rigveda are presented in the order of their occurrence in the Saṁhitā, with critical comments and notes from metrical, lexical, grammatical and other points of view), Vedic Variants (a study of the variant readings of the repeated mantras of the Veda—two Vols. in collaboration with Edgerton, 1930-32, the third Vol. by Edgerton in collaboration with Emeneau, 1934), Religion of the Veda (a collection of lectures delivered in America, pub. 1908; a survey of Vedic religion from the Rigveda to the Upanishads), ed. of Gopatha-brāhmaṇa, pub. of Kauśikasūtra of Atharvaveda (1890; with portions of comms. from Dārila and Keśava along with Introduction), Atharvaveda and Gopatha-brāhmaṇa (a critical study), pub. of Atharvaveda (4 Vols., 1901; jointly with Garbe of Eṣpalāda Śākhā, as available in Kashmir in Śāradā script), Eng. tr. of hymns of the Atharvaveda under the title, Hymns of the Atharvaveda (pub. in the Sacred Books of the East Series), and Life and Stories of the Jaina Saviour Pārśvanātha (Baltimore, 1919). He was responsible for making a beginning in the study of "Jaina Sanskrit" as defined by him.

BODE, M. H. A foreign Indologist, whose chief works are : Pali Literature of Burma (London, 1909) and Legend of Raṣṭhapāla in Pāli Apadāna and Buddhaghosha's Commentary.

BODEWITZ, H. W. A modern scholar of Netherlands, whose Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa (I, 1-65) is a tr. from Sanskrit (1973), while The Daily Evening and Morning Offering according to the Brāhmaṇas is a monograph (1976). He is at present working on the 'Vedic Ritual Texts; the Esoteric Interpretations of the Ritual in the Brāhmaṇas' and on 'The Philosophy of the Upanishads'.

BODHA-PAŪCHADAŚIKĀ. A Sanskrit work on Kashmir Śaivism by Abhinavagupta (q. v.). Consisting of 15 verses, which deal with the subject-matter, the work is meant for the ordinary reader to have an idea of the essentials of monistic Śaivism.

BODHĀYANA (fl. 1st-4th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of a farcical drama, Bhagavadajjukīu (q. v.).

BODHICHARYĀVATĪRĀ. A Buddhist Sanskrit work by Śāntideva (q. v.), written in the form of a kāvya. It deals with the ideal of attaining Buddhahood as opposed to the narrow Hinayāna ideal of sainthood.

BODHISATTVAVADĀNA-KALPALATĀ Same as Avadāna-kalpalatā (q. v.).

BODHIVAMSA, Same as Mahābodhivamsa (q. v.).

BOEHTLINGK, OTTO VON (1815-1904). One of the greatest of 19th century German Indologists, who is best known for the compilation of the monumental St. Petersburg dictionary: Sanskrit-Worterbuch, the great Sanskrit-German dictionary. After studying at St. Petersburg, he went to Bonn and Berlin, where he studied with Fr. Bopp and A.W. von Schlegel.

Boehtlingk's first publication was on Pāṇini (vol. 1, 1839; containing Pāṇini's sūtras with Indian commentaries; vol. 2, 1840, containing the introduction, explanatory notes, and indices). Its second ed. appeared in 1887, which has a shorter introduction and commentary, with German tr. and notes. He added the Dhātupāṭha and "Panini's vocabulary" to the indices. Vopadeva's Mugdhabodha, a 13th century grammarian's work, appeared in 1847; the edition is accompanied by explanations and indices. He also published three papers in German: "First attempt on the accent in Sanskrit", "Declination in Sanskrit" and "The Uṇādi affixes", which were preliminary studies for a Sanskrit grammar he intended to write. He was the first to give a specimen of the original accentuation in the Rigvedu, this problem not having been taken note of by scholars before.

Boehtlingk ed. and tr. Śākuntalam (1842) Mṛichchhakaṭika (1877), Chhāndogya-upanishad (1889) and Dandin's Kāvyaadarśa (1890). He also brought out an anthology of Sanskrit texts, Chrestomatie (1845; 2nd ed. 1877; 3rd ed. by Garbe, 1907). Boehtlingk compiled also a very large collection of 4,519 verses of wisdom in Sanskrit, Subhāshitas, in three volumes entitled: Indische Spruche, arranged alphabetically and accompanied by German translation.

By far, the monumental work of Boehtlingk is his dictionary, referred to above. Produced in 7 folio volumes (1852-75), it has 9478 large quart pages printed in two columns. A large number of passages from Sanskrit illustrate the meaning of the entries. It was published by the Russian Imperial Academy of Sciences. Though the lexicon was based on extraction of material from less than 500 source books, it was done with a thoroughness and mastery, which has scarcely been equalled in subsequent lexicons of any classical language; it is being tr. into English. The dictionary has been an indispensable tool for Indologists: it will be superseded only after the Critical Sanskrit Dictionary, which is being prepared in Pune, has appeared in print. The Dictionary is the joint work of Boehtlingk and Rudolph von Roth : Roth was responsible for Vedic literature, Boehtlingk for classical literature; Boehtlingk's share is estimated at 9/10th of the whole work. W.D. Whitney contributed a word index to the Atharvaveda, W. Weber an index to ritual literature while A.F. Stenzler to Manu. It is due to the untiring energy of Boehtlingk that the work could be completed in 23 years. After the Dictionary had been completed, Boehtlingk immediately started to work on an abridged version for beginners, for which he revised some parts and gave entirely different quotations from literature as examples for the entries.

During the last years of his life, Boehtlink mostly wrote on Vedic passages, attempting to explain doubtful verses in the Veda. He was active to the last and published a small Vedic article on his death-bed.

A bibliography of Boehtlingk's works was compiled by K. Salemann and S.V. Oldenburg in 'Melanges Asiatiques', X, St. Petersburg 1892.

BOHLEN, PETER VON (1796-1840). A German Indologist, whose Das Alte Indien mit besonderer Beruecksichtigung Aegyptens (Ancient India with special reference to Egypt; 2 vols., 1830) is a monumental work, in which the author deals with all aspects of Indian culture. According to this work, religion in India, as in Egypt, had its beginning in the worship of the Sun-god. He compared India with ancient Egypt, because he thought there was a cultural connection in ancient times, Egypt being at the receiving end. He also edited and tr. into German the Sayings of Bhartṛihari (Hamburg, 1835) and Ṛitusamhāra (Leipzig 1840), a poem ascribed to Kālidāsa. Bohlen was Professor for Arabic, Persian and Sanskrit at Koenigsberg in 1828.

BOHN, W. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Die Religion des und the Verhältniss- zum Buddhismus, etc.

BOIN, S. A modern British Indologist, whose chief work is the Eng. tr. of E. Lamotte's French tr. of Vimala kīrti-nirdeśa.

BOKIL, V.P. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Śiva-vaibhavam () is a drama on Śivājī.

BOLLEE, W.B. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is the study of Kuṇāla-jātaka

BOLLENSEN, FRIEDRICH (1809-96). A German Indologist, who had held a Professorship in Russia but he lived in retirement after his return to Germany, devoting his time to the study of the Ṛigvedic metre. In the St. Petersburg Academy, he found material for a critical edition of Kālidāsa's Urvaśī; this edition is accompanied by an excellent German tr. and numerous notes on Prakrit and Sanskrit passages as well as on the metre. He also ed. Mālvikāgnimitra (Leipzig, 1879). He contributed a paper on the Reconstitution of the Veda, in which he attempted to reconstruct the original text of the Vedas after purging them from those parts which the metre showed to be later additions. He also wrote a number of papers on the text of the Ṛigvedic hymns and on problems of lexicography and grammar and on Vedic gods : Mitra, Varuṇa, Aryaman, and Indra. For reasons of ill health, Bollensen went to Wiesbaden, where he died.

BONGARD-LEVIN, G.M. A Russian Indologist, who, along with G. F. Ilyin., is the author of 'Ancient India—An Historical Outline' (1909), which is a comprehensive book on the history of Ancient India. His book 'India in the Mauryan Period' (1973) gives detailed characteristics of the political, social and cultural history of the country in Mauryan period. He has pub. some fragments from the Sanskrit version of the Mahāparinirvāṇa-sūtra (1975) and two fragments from the Saddharmapūṇḍarīka (1975). On the newly-discovered Sanskrit and Prakrit Texts from Central Asia, he has written in Indologica Taurinensia (1975-76, Vol. III-IV), Journal of Ancient History (1975, No. 4), Peoples of Asia and Africa (1975, No. 6) and Malalasekara Commemoration Volume (Colombo, 1976). He has also studied the problem of land property and materialism in Ancient India in his articles pub. in Journal of Ancient History (1973, 1977 and 1978). See Grantovsky, E.A.

BOPADEVA. See Vopadeva.

BOPP, FRANZ (1791-1867). A celebrated German scholar, who made Berlin a centre for linguistic research in Sanskrit and is regarded as the real father of comparative linguistics in Europe. Born at Mainz, Bopp went to Paris. He attempted to learn Sanskrit by reading and he wrote that he read the whole of the Rāmāyaṇa without the help of a dictionary. It was at the age of 25 that Bopp wrote: Ueber das Konjugationssystem der Sanskritsprache in Vergleichung mit jenen der griechischen, lateinischen persischen und germanischen Sprache. Nebst Episoden des Ramayan und Mahabharat in genauen metrischen Uebersetzungen aus dem Original text und einigen Abschnitten aus den Vedas. Herausgegeben und mit einer Vorerrinerung begleitet von K.J. Windischmann (Frankfurt, 1816). The object of Bopp's researches was to trace the common origin of the grammatical forms of inflections of Sanskrit, Persian, Greek, Latin, and German. Other scholars before Bopp had already noted some affinities between Sanskrit and other languages, but it is Bopp's merit that he showed the relationship convincingly and methodically. By a historical analysis of the grammatical forms as applied to the verb, he furnished the first trustworthy materials for a history of the languages compared. His work was greatly acclaimed in France and Germany. In the Appendix are given some specimens of German tr. from the Vedas and metrical tr. of some episodes from the Rāmāyaṇa and the Mahābhārata.

In 1818, Bopp went to London, from where he brought out Nalus Carmen Sanscriticum e Mahabharate (Nala, a Sanskrit poem from the Mahābhārata-Sanskrit text, Latin tr. and notes). He had made use of one Paris manuscript and five others from London. Bopp's edition was a favourite text for beginners and has been included in several anthologies.

In the "Annals of Oriental Literature", Bopp brought out Analytical Comparison of the Sanskrit, Greek, Latin and Teutonic Languages, showing the original identity of their Grammatical Structure (London, 1820), in which he extended to all parts of the grammar what he had done in his book to the verb alone.

In 1820, Bopp went to Goettingen University, where the Faculty conferred on him the doctorate honoris causae. A year later, he went to Berlin, where he was associated with Wilhelm von Humboldt, who had studied Sanskrit with Bopp in London. Humboldt was instrumental in obtaining the chair of Sanskrit at the Berlin University for Bopp where Bopp stayed till his death in 1867. In Berlin, he brought out in German: "Concise Compendium of the Sanskrit Language" (1827). He also compiled a Sanskrit-Latin Glossary (1830), in which, more especially in the 2nd and 3rd editions, 1847 and 1867, an account was also taken of the cognate languages. He elaborated his comparative Grammar, which appeared in six parts (1833-52) as Vergleichende Grammatik des Sanskrit, Zend, Griechischen, Lateinischen, Litauischen, Altslawischen, Gothischen und Deutschen (Comparative Grammar of Sanskrit, Zend, Greek, Latin, Lithuanian, Old Slavonian, Gothic, and German). The English tr. by E.B. Eastwick appeared in 1856. Two other essays on the numerals in Sanskrit and Zend appeared also in 1856. Old Slavonian began to take its stand among the languages compared from the second part onward. Bopp revised the Comparative Grammar for the second edition (1856-61) and also included Armenian. Bopp's book in German. "Comparison of the System of Accentuation together with a Concise Description of Sanskrit and Greek" (Berlin, 1854) showed that the accents in Greek and Sanskrit are often similar.

Bopp earned an enormous reputation as a scholar by demonstrating the relationship of the Indo-European languages. By studying comparative linguistics, in which Sanskrit played an important part, he encouraged further Indological studies.

BORSANI, S. A modern Italian Indologist, who has made analyses of the Tipitaka and the Balakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa; she is at present teaching Sanskrit.

BOSCH, F.D.K. A foreign Indologist, who is a specialist in Indonesian and Indian art; his works are : De Gouden Kiem (The Golden Germ), Inleiding in de Indische symboliek (Introduction into Indian Symbolism), Hiraṇyagarbha and De Legende van Jimūtavāhana in de Sanskrit-Litteratuur (Leiden, 1915).

BOSCH, L.P. VAN DEN. A Dutch Indologist, who has pub. a tr. into Dutch of Atharvaveda-pariśiṣṭa (21-29; 1978).

BOSE, G.C. An Indian scholar, whose chief work is Purāṇa-Praveśa (in Bengali; Calcutta, 1934); he has also written articles on Purāṇic studies.

BOTTO, OSCAR. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief studies are on Kshemen-dra's Daśavatāra-charita, Gumāni's Upadeśa śataka, Chāṇakya-rāja-nītiśāstra, Nītivākya-mṛita; he has also written an account of the science and literature of polity in ancient and mediaeval India.

BOWER MANUSCRIPT. A Sanskrit manuscript, discovered in Kashgar by Bower in 1890 and ed. by Hoernle in 1914. Ascribed to 4th cent. A.D., it cites previous authors, viz., Ātreya, Kshārapāni, Jātukarṇa, Parāśara, Bheḍa, Harīta and Suśruta. It deals with the qualities of garlic, elixirs for prolonging life, recipes for external and internal application and many other topics.

BRAHMA-BHARATA. A small portion of a Sanskrit MS., now available in 6 chapters and dealing with Abhinaya. It is perhaps identical with the Brahma-nāṭyaśāstra mentioned by Dāmodaragupta in his Kuṭṭanīmata (q.v.); Padmabhu's view, mentioned by Śāradātanaya in his Bhūva-prakāśa, perhaps refers to this work.

BRAHMA DATTA JIJÑĀSU (1892-1964). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works in Hindi are : Veda aur Nirukta (an essay) and Ashṭādāvāyī Bhāṣhya (a comm. up to 5 chapters; the rest 3 were completed by Prajñākumārī).

PRAHMADEVA (fl. latter half of 11th cent.). A Sanskrit writer and author of Karṇa-prakāśa (q.v.), an astronomical work.

BRAHMA GUPTA (b. 598). A Sanskrit writer on astronomy, whose works are : Brāhma-siddhānta (c. 628), Khaṇḍakhādya (665) (qq.v.) as also the Dhvanāgraha in 72 verses. Son of Jishṇu, from the testimony of Alberuni, it is learnt that he was a native of Bhilamāla near Multan. He appears to have lived in the court of a Chāpa king Vyagramukha. He did not recognise the diurnal motion of the earth; some scholars think that he based his Brāhma-siddhānta on the Brahma siddhānta portion of the Vishnu-dharmottara-upapurāṇa (q.v.). "Brahmagupta's work covers very briefly the ordinary arithmetical operations, square and cube roots, rule of three, interest, progressions, geometry, including treatment of the rational right-angled triangle and the elements of the circle, elementary mensuration of solids, shadow problems, negative and positive quantities, cipher, surds, simple algebraic identities, indeterminate equations of the first and second degrees, in considerable detail, and simple equations of the first and second degrees which are briefly treated. Special attention is given to cyclic quadrilaterals."

BRAHMAJĀLA-SUTTA. The first Sutta of Dīgha-nikāya (q.v.) in Pali, in which the Buddha exhorts his followers to shun the company of Brāhmanas, who give themselves to sensual pleasures, perform sacrifices and while away their time in idle speculation about the origin and destruction of the world, the reality or non-reality of things, the nature of soul and the like.

BRAHMAMITRA AVASTHĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who, along with Devadatta Kaushik and Ramesh Kumār Khaṭṭar, has critically ed. text of Sāhitya Darpaṇa with Lochana comm. as also with Kanakalatā Hindi commentary.

BRAHMAMUNI PARIVRĀJAKA (1893-1978). A Sanskrit writer of Ārya Vānaprastha Ashram, Hardwar, whose comm. Vedānta-darśana (Hoshiarpur, 1954) on the Vedānta-sūtras criticises the methods of interpretation as adopted by the classical Bhāshyakāras and instead establishes the soundness of Traitavāda as expounded by Dayānada Sarasvatī. His Sāṅkhya-darśana is a comm. on the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy, while Nirukta-sammarsha is a comm. in Sanskrit on Nirukta. He also ed. Bṛihad-vimāna-śāstra of the sage Bhāradvāja as also tr. Sāmaveda into Hindi.

BRĀHMAṆA. Comms. in Sanskrit on the Vedas (q.v.). The word 'Brāhmaṇa' means 'the explanation or utterance of a learned priest upon any point of ritual'; used collectively, the word means a collection of such utterances and discussions of the priests upon the science of Yajña. According to another version, however, Brahma is one of the names of the Vedas and the works explaining the meanings of the Vedas, came to be termed as 'Brāhmaṇas'. The Brāhmaṇas also contain cosmogonic myths, legends and narratives (Ākhyānas, Purāṇas and Itihāsa) in explanation of Vidhis (rites) and all these together are called Arthavāda. The beginnings of Brāhmaṇa literature, however, may be seen in the Brāhmaṇa-like parts of the Śaṁhitās of the Black Yajurveda, while their latest development is indicated by the Āraṇyakas and Upanishads (qq.v.). All this literature—the explanatory and theological Brāhmaṇas, the theosophical Āraṇyakas and the philosophical Upanishads—goes under the name of Brāhmaṇa and is included by orthodox Hindus in the term of Veda and is considered as 'revealed' (śruti). There are Brāhmaṇas of each of the Vedic Śaṁhitā and they are essentially more or less uniform in their contents, for all that is found in the Brāhmaṇas, that is not directly concerned with ritual, is, strictly speaking, irrelevant and unnecessary from the viewpoint of their authors. It is in this context that the duties of the Hotṛi-priests, who had to recite the Mantras of the Rigveda at the sacrifices have been luxuriantly speculated upon and mystified by the authors of the Brāhmaṇas of the Rigveda, while those of the Udgātṛi-priests in the Brāhmaṇas of the Samaveda and so forth.

The Brāhmaṇas are indispensable for understanding the whole of the later religious and philosophical literature and are highly interesting for the science of religion and the history of the Yajña and priesthood. Regarding their age, scholars have agreed to place the old and genuine Brāhmaṇas to the pre-Buddhist period. The earlier Brāhmaṇas contain accent marks but the later ones are devoid of this nicety of pronunciation and approach the form of the classical Sanskrit. As to their form, the Brāhmaṇas, containing explanatory notes and legends, are naturally in prose (their syntax representing the oldest stage in the development of Sanskrit prose), though Gāthās (metrical pieces) occur now and then.

The principal Brāhmaṇas are as under :—

(i) Aitareya-brāhmaṇa. Belonging to the Rigveda, it consists of 40 Adhyāyas which are divided into eight Pañchakas or 'fifths'. It deals chiefly with Soma Yajña; tradition mentions Mahidāsa Aitareya as the author or compiler of this work. As compared to the second Brāhmaṇa (Kaushītaki) of the Rigveda, it is older in date and bigger in bulk, though the Kaushītaki is richer in contents.

(ii) Kaushītaki or Sāṅkhāyana. It also belongs to the Rigveda and consists of 30 Adhyāyas: I to VI Adhyāyas dealing with the food-sacrifice (fire-laying, fire sacrifice, new and full moon sacrifices and the sacrifices of the season) and VII to XXX treating of Soma-Yajña, fairly agreeing with the first Brāhmaṇa of the Rigveda.

The lost Brāhmaṇas of the Rigveda are: Paingi, Bahvrīcha, Āsavālāyana and Gālava.

(iii) Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa. Belonging to the Black Yajurveda, it contains later additions to the Taittirīya-saṃhitā of the Black Yajurveda, for the Brāhmaṇas were already included in the Saṃhitās of the Black Yajurveda. This Brāhmaṇa treats of the Purushamedha, the symbolical 'human sacrifice'.

(iv) Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa. 'The Brāhmaṇa of the Hundred Paths' is so called because it consists of one hundred Adhyāyas. Belonging to the White Yajurveda, it is the best-known, the most extensive and the most important of all the Brāhmaṇas. There are two recensions of this Brāhmaṇa—Kāṇva and Mādhyandina. In the Mādhyandina, the hundred Adhyāyas are distributed among 14 Kāṇḍas. Kāṇḍas I to IX are a continuous comm. on the first eighteen sections of the Vājasaneyi-saṃhitā of Yajurveda, Kāṇḍa X deals with the Agni-rahsya, i.e., 'fire-altar-mystery'; XI to XIV, besides appendices to the preceding Kāṇḍas, treat of the Upanayana or initiation of a pupil, Svādhyāya or Veda study, death ceremonies, Āśvamedha, Purushamedha, Sarvamedha Yajñas and the Pravargya ceremony; the last six Chaps. of Kāṇḍa XIV constitute the Bṛihadāranyaka-upaniṣad (q.v.); this Brāhmaṇa contains the well-known flood-legend. The Kāṇva Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa has 104 Chaps., distributed into 27 Kāṇḍas. Śaṅkarācārya and other scholars accept the two Chaps. of Kāṇva Bṛihadāranyaka-upaniṣad as supplements. If the last 2 Chaps. are considered as supplements, this Brāhmaṇa has only 102 Chaps.; possibly two more Chaps. were added at some stage. The difference between the two recensions is negligible.

The lost Brāhmaṇas of the Yajurveda are: Charaka, Śvetāśvatara, Kāṭhaka (since discovered by Sūrya Kānti), Maitrāyaṇī, Jābāla, Khāṇḍīka, Aukheya, Hāridravika, Tumburu, Āhvarāṇa, Kankati, and Chhāgaleya.

(v) Tāṇḍya-mahābrāhmaṇa or Tāṇḍya-brāhmaṇa. It belongs to the Sāmaveda and treats of the same subjects as the Brāhmaṇas of the Rigveda, but the Tāṇḍya, also called Pañchaviṃśa because of its 25 books, contains the oldest legends and describes the Vratya ceremonies dealing with the purification of those who were not initiated at proper time.

(vi) Shaḍviṃśa-brāhmaṇa. Belonging to the Sāmaveda, it consists of 26 books, the contents of the first 25 books being the same as those of the Tāṇḍya-brāhmaṇa. With the addition of one more book, it came to be termed as Shaḍviṃśa, because of its having 26 books. The 26th book is called Adbhuta or wonderful and deals with miracles and omens.

(vii) Jaiminiya-brāhmaṇa. It belongs to the Sāmaveda and treats of the same subjects as do the Brāhmaṇas of the Rigveda. This Brāhmaṇa is older than the Tāṇḍya-brāhmaṇa and is important for the history, both of religion and legend, for in elucidation of the details of the ritual, it has introduced numerous stories mostly of an aetiological character, which nevertheless throw welcome light on social conditions. Often, this Brāhmaṇa is called Talavakāra-brāhmaṇa, though at one stage they may be separate.

The other Brāhmaṇas attached to the Sāmaveda are Mantra and Chhāndogya (these Brāhmaṇas were accepted by Śaṅkara Svāmī as related to Tāṇḍya), Daivatā or Devatādhyaya, Ārsheya, Sāmavidhāna, Samhitopaniṣad, Vamśa, Jaiminiya-ārsheya and Jaiminiyopaniṣad.

The lost Brāhmaṇas of the Sāmaveda are: Bhāllavī, Kālabavī, Raurukī, Śāṭyāyana (Oertel has carefully collected references to it wherever available in literature), and Talavakāra.

(viii) Gopatha-brāhmaṇa. The only Brāhmaṇa attached to the Atharvaveda (q.v.), it is divided into two parts—Pūrva-Gopatha and Uttara-Gopatha, the former having 135 Kaṇḍikās and the latter 123, the total being 258 Kaṇḍikās. Perhaps of a very late origin, myths, legends and parables constitute the staple of the work, which are intended to explain the origin, nature and fruits of particular ceremonies but they are short and pointless.

The other Brāhmaṇas, termed 'Miscellaneous' are: Āruṇeya, Saulabha, Śailālī, Parāśara, Māshaśarāvī, Kāpeya, Rahasyāmnāya, Nirukta, Anvākhyāna, Bāshkala, Māṇḍukeya, Triharva and Karadvisha.

BRAHMĀNANDA GIRI (fl. c. 1550). A Sanskrit writer and celebrated author of the Śāktānanda-taraṅgiṇī and Tārā-rahasya, the Tantric treatises. He elaborates the various rites to be performed in the course of the worship of Śakti.

BRAHMĀNANDA SARASVATĪ (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer and author of Bṛihachchhāṅkara-vijaya (on the life of Śaṅkara).

BRAHMĀNANDA SHUKLA. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Mahākāvya Śrī Nehru-charitam (Khurjā, 1969) in 18 cantos describes the life and activities of Jawāharlāl Nehru, the first Prime Minister of India.

BRĀHMAṆA-SARVASVA. A Sanskrit work by Halāyudha (q.v.), also called Karmopa-deśiṇī. It is a guide for the Kāṇva Śākhā Brāhmaṇas of the Śukla Yajurveda to the Vedic mantras employed in the daily rites and periodical ceremonies and deals also with the other various daily duties.

BRAHMĀṆḌA-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

BRAHMA-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

BRAHMA REDDI, P.P. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose playlet in five scenes was published in "Saṁvid", a quarterly of Bharatiya Vidya Bhavan. The quarrel is between the various languages of India like Tamil, Telugu and Hindi for power, leading to the realization about the greatness and importance of Sanskrit for Indian languages and culture.

BRAHMAṚISHI-VILĀSA. See Virendrabahādura Singh.

BRĀHMA-SIDDHĀNTA. A famous Sanskrit mathematical-astronomical work by Brahmagupta, also called Sphuṭa Brāhma-siddhānta, which consists of 24 chapters; some scholars think that it was based on the Brahma-siddhānta portion of the Viśṇudharmottara upapurāṇa (q.v.). The work influenced Arabic astronomy and mathematics in the 8th century. See Brahmagupta.

BRAHMA-SŪTRA. Sanskrit Sūtras, ascribed to Bādarāyaṇa; also called Vedānta-sūtra, Śārīraka-sūtra, Śārīraka-mīmāṃsā or Uttara-mīmāṃsā. The work, in 555 cryptic Sūtras, describes the philosophical-theological views of the Upanishads, but is not intelligible without comms.; of the commentators, the chief are : Śaṅkara, Bhāskara, Yādavaprakāśa, Rāmānuja, Nimbārka, Keśava, Nīla-kaṇṭha, Madhva, Baladeva, Vallabha and Vijñānabhikṣu (qq. v.). See Brahmamuni.

BRAHMA-SŪTRA-BHĀSHYA. A Sanskrit comm. by Śaṅkarāchārya (q.v.) on the Vedānta-sūtras (q.v.), which is an exposition of Advaita Vedānta and laid the foundation of Śaṅkarāchārya's school. The comm. was commented upon by Vāchaspati Miśra (9th cent.), Ānandajñāna (13th cent.) and Govindānanda (14th cent.).

BRAHMAVAIVARTA-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

BRAJ BIHĀRI CHAUBE. See Vraj Bihārī Chaube.

BRAJALĀLA MUKHOPĀDHYĀYA. See Kṛishṇa-dharma-kaumudīsamālochanā

IRAJ MOHAN CHATURVEDĪ. (1932-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Unrevealed Aspects of the Rasa Theory (1978; on Sanskrit poetics). Sāṅkhyā-kārikā (a study) and Hindu Philosophy (1979).

BRELOER, BERNHARD (1894-1947). A German Indologist, who obtained a doctorate in 1921 on his thesis in German: "Fundamentals of ancient Indian music according to the Bharatiya Nāṭyaśāstra". Breloer then took up the study of Indian law and brought out three volumes of Kautilya studies in German: "The Real Estate in India" (1927), "Ancient Indian Civil Law with Megasthenes and Kautilya" (1928) and "Financial Administration and Economics" (1934). By applying the methods of comparative law and by comparing Megasthenes' notices on India with Kautilya's Arthaśāstra, Breloer was able to elucidate many problems of ancient law and finances. He also wrote papers on Alexander the Great and king Porus.

Breloer took part in both the World Wars and died in 1947 in a Russian POW camp at Tiflis.

BREWSTER, E.H. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is Life of Gotama, the Buddha (London, 1926). Compiled exclusively from the Pali canon, it carries an Introductory Note by C.A.F. Rhys-Davids.

BṚIHDĀRĀNYAKA. See Āranyaka.

BṚIHADĀRĀNYAKA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

BṚIHAD-BHĀGAVATĀMṚITA. A famous Sanskrit work by Sanātana Gosvāmin (q.v.), which is based on the Bhāgavata-purāṇa and is written in the style of a Purāṇa. Divided into 10 parts, its first part describes Nārada's quest of the dearest devotee of Kṛishṇa, while the second part concerns Kṛishṇa's manifestation of himself before his devotee.

BṚIHADDEŚĪ. A Sanskrit work on music by Maṭaṅga (q.v.), written between the 5th and 7th century. Though the title indicates that the work deals with only regional music, yet the extant work, consisting of six chapters, discusses also Śruti and Svara. It mentions Bharata (q.v.) but differs from him in several places.

BṚIHADDEVATĀ. A Sanskrit metrical work, ascribed to Śaunaka (q.v.), which is a large catalogue of gods worshipped in the different hymns of the Rigveda. It contains also myths and legends relating to these deities ; it is one of the earliest Indian narrative works and is important from the point of view of the development of narrative literature in India.

BṚIHADDHARMA-UPAPURĀṆA. The eighteenth Upapurāṇa, consisting of three sections, of which only the first and the last sections are devoted to Dharma, the glorification of which is its main purpose. Section I deals with the duties to one's parents and the gurus, the glorification of the tīrthas, the incarnations of Viṣṇu, of Rāma, the story of Sītā and the origin of the Rāmāyaṇa. Section II contains legends of Gaṅgā and other myths and legends ; it even declares Kapila, Vālmiki, Vyāsa and Buddha as the incarnations of Viṣṇu. Section III deals with the duties of the castes and āśramas, the duties of women, the adoration of various gods, the festivals of the year, the worship of the sun, the moon and planets, the origin of evil and wickedness in the world and with the intermixture of castes. It is believed by some scholars to have been compiled in Bengal in the 13th century. See Upapurāṇa and Purāṇa.

BṚIHAD-HARIVAMŚA-PURĀṆA. Same as Harivamśa-purāṇa (q.v.) of Jināsena.

BṚIHAI-JĀTAKA. A Sanskrit work on the Horā section of astrology, written by Varāhamihira (q.v.). Consisting of 25 chapters, its importance lies in the use, perhaps for the first time in India, of the Zodiac, with Greek names of the Zodiacal signs and planets. The author employs quite a large number of Classical Sanskrit metres in his work.

BṚIHANNĀRADIYA-PURĀṆA. See Nārada-purāṇa.

BṚIHASPATI. One of the twenty traditional Sanskrit writers of original Smṛiti, whose work has not yet been recovered, though commentators and digest-makers quote extensively from his Smṛiti. A short versified Bṛihaspati-smṛiti (see Dharmaśāstras) and a Dharmasūtra of Bṛihaspati exist. He appears to have founded a school of politics and statecraft as is revealed from the Arthaśāstra (q.v.). The extant Bārhaspatya Arthaśāstra, however, seems to be a later work. A Bṛihaspati is supposed to have been the founder of the school of philosophy called after the name of his pupil, Chārvāka (q.v.).

BṚIHASPATI RĀYAMUKUṬA. See Rāyamukuṭa.

BṚIHASPATI-SMṚITI. See Dharma-śāstra.

BṚIHATI A celebrated Sanskrit comm. by Prabhākara (q.v.) on the Pūrvamīmāṃsa-sūtra of Jaimini, which gave rise to the Prabhākara school of Mīmāṃsā philosophy.

BṚIHAT-KALPA. See Kappa.

BṚIHATKATHĀ. A collection of romantic tales in Paisācī Prakṛit, written by Guṇādhya (fl. between 1st cent. to 4th cent. A.D.). Probably a voluminous work, no longer extant, it has supplied themes to many a work of later times as can be gathered from its three Sanskrit versions.

From the three versions (Bṛihatkathā-śloka-saṅgraha of Buddhasvāmin, Bṛihatkathā-maṇjarī of Kshemendra and Kathā-sarit-sāgara of Somadeva) (qq.v.), that are available, it appears that the form of the original was metrical but Daṇḍin probably hints that it was prose. The main theme of the narrative was no doubt the marriage of Naravāhanadatta with Madanamañchukā, who, like Vasanta-senā, was a courtesan. It is also possible that the original work contained many other stories of the love adventures of the hero.

BṚIHATKATHĀ-MANJARĪ. A collection of stories by Kshemendra (11th cent. A.D.), which is one of the two Kashmirian versions (the other being Somadeva's Kathāsaritsāgara) of the Bṛihat-kathā (q.v.).

Both Kshemendra and Somadeva have added much matter to the original narrative of Guṇaḍhya and from this fact it seems permissible to surmise that the two Kashmirian authors had before them not the original Bṛihat-kathā but some later and enlarged version of it. When compared with Somadeva's work, Kshemendra's version looks like an abridged edition, so much so that his brevity has sometimes led to obscurity, but at the same time he unnecessarily dilates upon erotic matters and prolongs religious sections. Divided into 18 cantos called Lambhakas, the Bṛihat-kathā-mañjarī consists of over 7,000 verses. It describes, like the other two versions, the adventure of Naravāhanadatta, son of Udayana, his acquisition of Madana-manjukā as his bride and of the land of Vidyādhara as his empire. See Pañchatra.

BRIHATKATHĀ-ŚLOKA-SAṅGRAHA. See Śloka-saṅgraha.

BṚIHAT-SABDENDENDUṢEKHARA. An exhaustive Sanskrit comm. by Nāgeśa (q.v.), commonly known as Śabdenḍuṣekhara, on Siddhānta-kaumudī (q.v.).

BṚIHAT-SĀDHU-KALPASŪTRA. See Kalpa-sūtra (Prakrit).

BṚIHAT-SAMHITĀ. A voluminous Sanskrit work on astronomy and astrology by Varāhamihira (q.v.).

Consisting of 106 chapters, the work is in verses of varied metres and is important from the point of view of history of astronomy as it contains a large number of references to astronomers. The chief subjects dealt with are "effects of the movements of the sun and changes of the moon, eclipses, various constellations and their influence over the fate of man, effect of the presiding planet over the fortunes or mishaps within a year, signs of weather, means of foretelling the crop and the rise and fall of its prices, importance of astrology in relation to architecture, digging of tanks, laying out of gardens, making of images, characteristics of oxen, dogs, cocks, tortoises, horses, elephants, men, women, parasols etc., praise of women, life in the harem; couches and seats; jewels, lamps and tooth-sticks, science of augury, marriage, etc." There is also an interesting sketch of Indian geography. Chap. 103 of this work is devoted to the illustrations of about 60 classical metres.

BROCKHAUS, HERMANN (1806-77). A German Indologist, who was born in Amsterdam, where his father had established a publishing house (shifted to Leipzig in 1818 and now working in Wiesbaden). Brockhaus studied Oriental languages in Leipzig, Goettingen and Bonn and obtained doctorate on his German thesis: "Foundation of the City of Pāṭaliputra and History of Upakosa" (1938). In 1841, he became Professor at Leipzig University and stayed on this post till his death in 1877.

Brockhaus first became known for his ed. of Prabodhachandrodaya (Leipzig, 1835), with a Latin translation. He is best known for his ed. of Kathāsaritsāgara (1st Pt. 1839, 2nd Pt. 1862 and 3rd Pt. 1866), by which he furnished a wealth of material for comparative folklore. He also wrote papers in German: "On the History of Indian System of Numbers" and "On the Algebra of Bhāskara". He wrote on Chhandomañjarī, on printing Sanskrit books with Latin letters and other papers devoting to subjects pertaining to the Kathāsaritsāgara.

Brockhaus not only edited Sanskrit texts, he wrote "The Holy Scriptures of Zoroaster" (1850), "The Songs of Hafiz, Persian text, with the comm. of Sādi" (3 vols. 1854-60), all in German.

Brockhaus was the first Professor of Sanskrit at Leipzig University and was one of the founders of the German Oriental Society.

BROCKINGTON, JOHN LEONARD (1940-). An English Indologist, who is Head of the Department of Sanskrit, University of Edinburgh, Edinburgh. His chief works are: The Syntax and Style of the Rāmāyaṇa (Oxford, 1968), The Sacred Thread: Hinduism in its Continuity and Diversity (1981) and Righteous Rāma: The Evolution of an Epic (Oxford, 1984). He has published some 20 research papers, mostly on the Rāmāyaṇa and reviews of about 30 books. He is now engaged in the compilation of a catalogue of the Epic and Puranic MSS in the Chandra Shum Shere collection of the Bodleian Library, Oxford.

BROECK, J. VAN DEN. A modern Belgian Indologist, whose chief study is: La saveur de l' immortel, La version chinoise de l' Amṛitarasa de Ghosaka (T. 1553) traduite e annotee (1977).

BROOKS, ROBERT R.R. An American Indologist, whose chief work in collaboration with V.S. Wakankar is Stone Age Painting in India (New Haven, 1976).

BROUGH, JOHN (1917-84). An English Indologist, who was Professor of Sanskrit in the University of Cambridge. His chief works are : Selections from Classical Sanskrit Literature (with Eng. tr. and notes; London, 1951), The Early Brahmanical System of Gotra and Pravara (Cambridge, 1953), ed. of the Kharośṭhi Dhammapada under the title Gāndhārī Dharmapada (London, 1962) and Poems from the Sanskrit (tr with an Introduction; London, 1968). He has pub also some papers on Buddhist Sanskrit texts and his studies are on Dhvanyāloka, Buddhist Dvāvimśatyavadāna and Sanskrit and Buddhist literature in Nepal.

BROWN, MACKENZIE. A modern Indo-logist, who is the author of a work on Indian polity called The White Umbrella ; he has written also two other works on India and has been studying Manu.

BROWN, PERCY. An Indologist, whose chief works are : Indian Architecture (2 Vols., 1942) and Indian Painting (1947).

BROWN, W. NORMAN (d. 1975). An American Indologist, who was the most active among the promoters of Indic studies in the States and was responsible for the setting up of the 'American Institute of Indian Studies' in Poona. Honoured in India and America, he produced several attractive publications of Sanskrit and Prakrit texts, some of the manuscripts of which are illustrated with miniature paintings, besides studies and papers on Vedic and religious subjects, Indian fiction, and art history. His chief studies are on the position of the Pañchatantra in the Indian Folk-lore, The Story of Kālakāchārya (Washington, 1937), A Descriptive and Illustrated Catalogue of Miniature Paintings of the Jaina Kalpasūtra as executed in the Early Western Style (Washington, 1934), a study of Saundarya-laharī of Śaṅkara (pub. in the Harvard Oriental Series), Old Gujarati illustrated Vasanta-vilāsa (ed. text with tr., introduction and glossary), a similar ed. of Śiva-mahimnas-stava, and The United States and India and Pakistan. He has worked on 'Cosmological Theories in the Rigveda' and 'Continuing Values in Indian Culture' ; on the latter topic, his work is Man in the Universe: Some Cultural Continuities in Indian Thought (1966). A collection of his papers on Vedic, Folk-lore, Art and Philology ed. by Professor Rosane Rocher has recently been brought out (1978) under the title India and Indology.

BRUECKNER, H. A modern German scholar, whose field of specialization is Indian history.

BRUGMANN, KARL. A modern German Indologist, whose chief work is A Comparative Grammar of the Indo-Germanic Languages (vols. I-V: Eng. tr. from German by Joseph Writing); the Germ. work, in collaboration with B. Delbrueck was published from Strassburg in 1886-1900.

BRUHN, KLAUS (1928-). A German Indologist, whose chief works are : a study of Śīlaṅka's Chauppaṇṇa-mahāpurisachariya (1954) and The Jaina Images of Deogarh (1969); he is a specialist in Jain literature, archaeology and iconography.

BRUNNHOFER, HEINRICH (1841-1917). A German-speaking Indologist, who was born in Aargau, Switzerland. He studied Sanskrit with W. Weber and in 1866 went to England where he became assistant of Monier-Williams at Oxford. In 1867 he assisted Max Mueller in compiling the Index to the Rigveda. In his paper in German : "On the original home of the Indo-Europeans", he discussed the migration of the Vedic Aryans. He considered Armenia to have been the original home of the Aryans. In his German work : "Iran and Turan" (Leipzig, 1899), Brunnhofer states that Vedic tribes lived as nomads in the area between the Caspian Sea and the Punjab and he asked the Russian Government to collect all legends in the regions of the Elburz and the Hindukush, because he believed that memories of ancient periods persist into modern times. He maintains that Samudra (ocean) in the Vedas refers to the Caspian Sea, which derived its name from the sage Kasyapa. He even found references to Babylon and to Queen Semiramis in the Veda, and he was so sure of the Iranian home of the Vedic Aryans that he thought most of the sages had never set foot on Indian soil. In his second work : Arische Urzeit, Forschungen auf dem Gebiet des ältesten Vorder-und Zentralasiens nebst Osteuropa (Aryan Prehistory. Researches in the ancient Near East, Central Asia, and Eastern Europe; Bern, 1910), he traces references to Iran in the Veda. In the ornaments and weapons of the Maruts, he recognised the ornaments and weapons of the Parthians, and he claimed that the Aryans knew gunpowder.

Brunnhofer collected more than 40 of his essays in German under the title "Eastern Development, Cultural Exchange and Trade between Orient and Occident from Prehistoric times to the Present Day".

BRUNNER-LACHAUX, HELENE. A modern French scholar, whose chief work is a study on Somaśambhu-paddhati, a work on Śivaite rites (1977).

BRYANSKY, M. G. A Russian Indologist, who is concerned with analysis of some conceptions of Buddhism. His article "On the European translations of the Vasubandhu's treatise : The Refutation of the Concept of Personality" (1976) is noteworthy.

BÜCHELER, PÁL. A Hungarian Indologist, who tr. Manu's Mānavadharmaśāstra into Hungarian (1915).

BUCK, CARL DARLING. A modern American Indologist, whose chief work is Dictionary of Selected Synonyms in the Principal Indo-European Languages.

BUCK, HARRY. A modern American scholar, whose thesis on the Rāmāyaṇa is a part of his study of the role of sacred books in religion.

BUDDHA BHATṬA. See Ratnaparikṣu.

BUDDHĀCHARITA. A Sanskrit Mahākāvya by Aśvaghoṣa (q.v.), a contemporary of king Kanishka (A.D. 78-106).

According to the available Chinese and Tibetan trs. of this poem done in the 5th and 7th centuries respectively, the original poem ran into 28 cantos but the text that is now available shows only 17 cantos of which, again, only the first 13 are genuine, the rest being added by Amṛitānanda in the 19th century. The poem narrates the life of Buddha but the poet shows his originality in selecting incidents and depicting them in a touching manner. The prince's ride from the palace which brings him into contact with the sordid spectacle of old age, is preceded by an account of beautiful women who assemble to watch his exit. The poet again shows his skill in depicting the loving ruses by which the beauties of the harem seek to divert Buddha's mind from the desire to renounce the vanities of the world as also his art in describing the famous scene when the prince gazing on them in their sleep resolves to abandon the palace. Nor is the poet skilled in the science of erotics alone, he adduces the arguments by which the family priests, fortified by the precepts of political science, seek to deter the prince from his resolution to abandon secular life with its duties and in order to describe a battle scene, the poet provides a spirited picture of the contest of the Buddha against the demon Māra and his monstrous hosts.

The poem appears to be essentially the work of an artist both in choice of incidents and arrangement of matter.

BUDDHA-CHARITĀMṚITA. See Alam-ellamma.

BUDDHADATTA. A Buddhist Pali writer, who is probably the first among the successors of Buddhaghosha (q.v.; fl. early 5th cent. A.D.). He was a native of Urāgapur (Urāyur), capital of the Chola territory, near the river Kāverī. Gray, Malalaseker and Law regard him as a senior contemporary of Buddhaghosha, but Winternitz takes him to be a much later writer. He is reputed to be the author of the Vinaya-vinichchaya, Uttara-vinichchaya, Abhidhammavatāra, Pīpārūpa-vibhaṅga and Madhurattha-vilāsini (qq. v.), but according to Geiger, the ascription to him of the above works except Madhurattha-vilāsini is problematical. Buddhadatta composed all his works in the famous monastery erected by Kaṇhadāsa on the banks of the river Kāverī.

The first four works are mostly based on Buddhaghosha's comms.; Madhurattha-vilāsini (or Madhurattha-ppakāsini) is a comm. on the Buddhavaṃsa; Jināṅkāra (q.v.), a poem, is ascribed to him, though sharp differences of opinion exist among scholars as to its authorship and date.

Buddhadatta's style is less discursive and more graphic, his diction often less involved and ambiguous, and his vocabulary considerably richer than that of Buddhaghosha. — HCIP, III, 404.

BUDDHADEVA VIDYĀI AṅKĀR (d. 1968).

A Vedic scholar, whose chief works in Hindi are: Śatapatha men ek Pat'ra, a comm. on the 1st Kanda of Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa (1973), comm. on further two Kāṇḍas of Śatapatha (unpub.), Rigveda-maṇḍala-māṇisūtra (proving a continuous thread in all the Maṇḍalas of the Rigveda), studies on the Vedic deities: Soma and Maruts, a treatise on 'Svarga' and a comm. on the Gītā; he has followed the lead given by Dvānanda Sarasvatī (q.v.).

BUDDHAGHOSHA. A famous Pali writer, who, according to the Mahāvamsa (chap. 37) was born in a Brahmana family in the neighbourhood of Bodhi-Gayā. He mastered the Vedas along with other branches of learning. A monk, named Revata, converted him to Buddhism and induced him to go to Ceylon for the study of the authentic and orthodox comms., then not available in India. Accordingly, Buddhaghosha reached Ceylon in the reign of king Mahānāman (A.D. 409-31) and heard the Sinhalese comm. and the Theravāda tradition from Sanghapāla at the Mahāvihāra of Anurādhapura. Before going to Ceylon, he, however, is said to havṛ composed Nānodaya, (q.v.). In Ceylon when he composed the Visuddhimagga (q.v.), he was acclaimed a veritable Metteyya Bodhisattva. His tr. of the Aṭṭhakathās from Sinhalese into Māgadhi was honoured by the teachers of the Theravada as a sacred text. After this, he returned to Magadha and devoted himself to the worship of the Bo-tree. Dharmānanda Kosambi, however, believes Buddhaghosha to be a Telanga from the Telugu country of Southern India and neither a Brāhmaṇa from Bodh-Gayā nor a Burmese Telang as recorded in the Burmese traditions. According to some scholars, from Ceylon Buddhaghosha went to Burma where he tr. Kachchāyana's Pali grammar into Burmese and wrote a comm. on it. The Manu-smṛiti, current in Burma, is said to have been taken for the first time by him from Ceylon.

Buddhaghosha himself mentions Visuddhimagga, Samanta-pāsādikā, Sumaṅgalavilāsinī, Papañchasūdanī, Sarathhappakasini, and Manorathapūraṇī (qq. v.) as his works. In addition to these, the Gandhavaṃśa ascribes to him Kankhāvitarāṇī, Paramatthakathā (qq.v.) and comms. : Jātakatṭha-vañṇanā (on Jātaka ; q.v.), Dhammapadatṭha-kathā (on Dhammapada, q.v.), Paramattha-jotikā (on Khuddakapāṭha and Suttanipata ; q.v.) and a comm. on Apadāna (q.v.). Winternitz does not doubt about Buddhaghosha's authorship of Atthasālinī, Sammoha-vinodanī (qq.v.) and the comm. on Paṭṭhāna-pakaraṇa (q.v.). He believes that the Kankhāvitarāṇī and Paramattha-jotikā (qq.v.) also most probably belong to Buddhaghosha; Paramattha-dīpanī (q.v.) or Pancha-prakaranaṭṭhakathā is another comm. ascribed to him. Opinions, however, differ widely with regard to the works composed by Buddhaghosha.

Buddhaghosha's works can be divided into two broad classes : original and comms.; his original works are the Nānodaya and the Visuddhimagga (the latter his most outstanding work), while by his comms. on each of the three Piṭaka and on several parts thereof, he has rendered great service to the progress of Buddhist knowledge. Visuddhimagga and the comms. proclaim him to have been a man of remarkable erudition and extensive reading. Indeed, Buddhaghosha was a critical scholar, for he consulted manuscripts of several schools and faithfully recorded variant readings. Buddhaghosha's service to the development of Pali language was also singular.

BUDDHAGHOSHA (fl. c. A.D. 387). A Buddhist Sanskrit poet and author of the Mahākāvya Padyachūdāmaṇi (q.v.). The author evidently knows both Aśvaghoṣa and Kālidāsa.

BUDDHAGHOSUPPATTI. A Pali work, attributed to Mahāmaṅgala (q.v.), which contains some biographical account of the renowned commentator Buddhaghosha (q.v.). The events, mixed up with fact and fiction, are very similar to those described in Milindapañha and Mahāvastu (qq.v.).

BUDDHAPRIYA (Buddhappiya; fl. 13th cent.). A Pali writer and author of the Pajjamadhu (q.v.); his Rūpasiddhī or Padarūpa-siddhi (q.v.), a Pali grammar, is only a reshuffling of Kachchāyana's work.

BUDDHARAKKHITA. See Jinālaṅkāra.

BUDDHASĪHA. A Pali author of Vinaya-vinichchaya (q.v.), which is to be distinguished from Buddhadatta's work of the same title. He probably flourished in 5th cent. A.D.

BUDDHASVĀMIN. A Sanskrit poet and author of the Śloka-saṅgraha (q.v.), also called Bṛihat-kathā-śloka-saṅgraha. The work is an abridgement in verse of Guṇāḍhya's Bṛihat-kathā (q.v.) and is called its Nepalese version. From the old condition of the manuscript, critics hold that Buddhasvāmin composed this version about the 8th or 9th cent. A.D.; there is, however, no strong ground on which to fix the date of this author, while Lacote holds the date as 5th or 6th century.

BUDDHAVAMSA. A part of the Khuddakānikāya. See Sutta-piṭaka.

BUDDRUS, GEORG (1929-). A German scholar, whose chief study is on the dialects of Indo-Afghanistan region. His chief works are : Beiträge zur Kenntnis der Pashai-Dialecte (1957), Kanyawali (1959), Die Sprache von Wotapur and Katarqala (1960), and Die Sprache von Sau in Ostafghanistan (1967).

BUEHLER, GEORG (1837-98). A celebrated Indologist, who was born near Nienburg, Hannover. He studied Greek, Latin, Sanskrit, Zend, German, Persian, Armenian, Arabic, Archaeology and Philosophy at Goettingen University. His Sanskrit Guru, T. Benfey, considered him to be his most promising student. After a brief term working at Goettingen University Library and earlier as assistant to the Librarian of Queen Victoria, in London, he was nominated Professor of Oriental Languages at Elphinstone College, Bombay in 1863. On account of ill health, he was pensioned in 1880 and after recovery, accepted the Professorship of Indian Philology and Archaeology in Vienna (Austria) the same year. He held this post till his death.

The first articles written by Buehler were concerned with questions of comparative philology and Vedic mythology. While in London, he compiled an index to Max Mueller's History of Indian Literature. At Elphinstone College, Bombay, Sanskrit texts for the use of students had to be brought out, and F. Kielhorn and Buehler were appointed as editors; the Bombay Sanskrit Series was started by them Buehler ed. some books of the Pañchatantra and the first part of Daśakumāra-charita in this Series. Buehler's travels in search of manuscripts began in 1866 and occupied him for years to come.

He was the first foreigner allowed to examine the Library at Jaisalmer in Rajasthan and he found Jaina manuscripts as well as secular literature. These finds later became the basis of work done by A. Weber, H. Jacobi and E. Leumann. The general results of Buehler's search for manuscripts are found mainly in his "Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts contained in the private Libraries of Guzarat, Kathiawar, Kachch, Sind and Khandes" (1871-73), in the Annual Reports of the Royal Asiatic Society and in the Journal of the German Oriental Society. Buehler's Detailed Report on a Tour in Search of Sanskrit Manuscripts in Kashmir, Rajputana and Central India (Bombay, 1877) gave details about hitherto unknown authors and their works. Among them was Kshetendra (q.v.).

Buehler set out to find material for chronological data in inscriptions. His results were published in the Indian Antiquary, Epigraphia Indica, and other journals. In a German Paper "Indian Inscriptions and the Age of Kavya Literature", he showed that inscriptions prove a higher antiquity for kāvyā literature than had hitherto been assumed by Western scholars.

In the Ueber das Leben des Jaina Moenchs Hemachandra (Vienna, 1889, Eng. tr. The Life of Hemachandra), he gave an account of a Jaina monk, who was also a grammarian and lexicographer. He also devoted much time to the decipherment of the edicts of King Aśoka. He ed. the Vikramāṅkadeva-charita (q.v.) of Bilhana in the Bombay Sanskrit Series and discussed the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, the chronicles of the kings of Kashmir. Buehler wrote On the Origin of the Indian Brahmi Alphabet, a revised ed. of which contained two Appendices on the origin of the Kharoshthī alphabet, and on letter-numerals of Brahmi (1898). He contributed a treatise on Indian Palaeography to the Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research.

Indian Law was the second field of studies in which Buehler was a pioneer. Together with the judge Sir Raymond West, he brought out the Digest of Hindu Law of Inheritance, Partition and Adoption (3rd ed. 1884). In 1868 and 1871, he pub. a critical ed. of the Aphorisms of the Sacred Laws of the Hindus by Āpastamba. The Sacred Laws of the Aryas (vol. II and vol. XIV of Max Müller's Sacred Books of the East) were chiefly based by Buehler on manuscripts which he himself had discovered. They contain the translation of the legal Sūtras of Āpastamba, Vasishṭha, Gautama, and Bauddhāyana The Laws of Manu (vol. XXV of the Sacred Books of the East) contain—besides the tr.—Buehler's extracts from commentaries and discussions on the development of legal literature, and of the relation of the Mānavadharmasāstra to the Epics.

Buehler taught Sanskrit at Vienna University later and wrote grammar in German for the use of students; it was tr. under the title Sanskrit Primer. He was co-founder of the Oriental Institute of Vienna University and he initiated the Vienna Oriental Journal. The last years of his life were devoted to the editing the "Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research". Buehler had planned the work, enlisting collaborators and he was General Editor.

Buehler's other works are : On the Indian Sects of the Jains (Eng. tr., London, 1903 by J. Burgess; original German: ed., Vienna, 1887), Aśoka Inscriptions (Leipzig, 1887), Three New Edicts of Aśoka, ed. Deśināmālā of Hemachandra, and wrote articles on Puranic studies.

J. Jolly wrote an obituary in "Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research" I/1-A, 1899, and appended a bibliography of Buehler's works.

BUITENEN, J.A.B. VAN A Dutch Indologist, now in America, whose chief works are ed. and tr. of Rāmānuja's Vedārthasaṅgraha (Poona, 1956), a study and tr. of the Maitrāyaṇīya-upanishad (The Hague, 1962), studies on Sāṅkhya and on Bhāskara's Gītābhāṣya, author of : Rāmānuja or the Bhagavadgītā (Delhi, 1968) and Tales of Ancient India (1961), tr. and pub. of Mṛichchhikaṭika and of the Mudrārākṣasa. He has a project of an Eng. tr. of Mahābhārata in its Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute edition ; Vols. I and II have so far been published ; the third volume is under print. He has also pub. a paper 'The Subhāśraya Prakaraṇa (Vishṇu-purāṇa) and the meaning of Bhāvanā'.

BÜLCKE, C. A modern scholar whose chief works are : Rāmakathā (in Hindi, Allahabad, 1950) and The Theism of Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika.

BUNYU, N. (1849-1927). A Japanese Indologist, whose chief work is Catalogue of Chinese Translations of Buddhist Tripiṭaka.

BURCH, GEORGE B. A modern Indologist, who has written about the neo-Vedantic standpoints of some modern Indian Philosophy scholars (pub. in the International Philosophical Quarterly) as also on the Saptabhaṅgi logic of Jainism.

BURGESS, EBERNEZER. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is the Eng. tr. of Sūryasiddhānta under the title A Text-book of Hindu Astronomy with Notes and an Appendix (1860).

BURLINGAME, E.W. An American Indologist, whose chief works are : Eng. tr. of Dhammapada-aṭṭhakathā, Buddhist Legends (1869) and Buddhist Parables (New Haven, 1922).

BURNETT, ARTHUR COKE (1840-82). An English Indologist, whose chief works are : The Aindra School of Sanskrit Grammarians (1875), The Ordinances of Manu (Eng. tr., completed and ed. by Edward W. Hopkins), The Law of Partition and Succession from manuscript of Varadarāja's Vyavahāra- nirṇaya, ed. of Samavidhāna-brāhmaṇa (1873), ed. of Ārśheya-brāhmaṇa (1876) and ed. and tr. of Shadvimśa-brāhmaṇa with Siyaṇa's comm. (1873 : all the three Brāhmanas belonging to the Śāma-veda) He wrote articles also on Jaina and epigraphical studies.

BURNOUF, EMILE. A French Indologist, who was nephew of Eugène Burnouf, his chief work is Essai sur le Vēda (Paris, 1863; study of religion, literature, and social organization of India from the early times to the brahmanic period). He has dealt with the origin of caste, the Vedic ritual, and the origin of gods and their symbolic nature: many of his ideas about the Vedic religion and mythology seem to have been adopted and developed by Bergaigne (q.v.).

BURNOUF, EUGENE (1801-52). A celebrated French Indologist, who was 'essentially a pioneer and pathmaker' and though, he himself wrote little about the Vedas (tr. into French, some portions of the Rigveda), his lectures on the subject at Paris inspired many pupils: Rudolph Roth, Max Müller, Regnier, and Nève. His chief works in other fields are : Essai sur le Pali ou langue sacrée de la presque île au-delà du Gange (1826; with Chr. Lassen: the first Pali grammar, in which the first chapter sketches the history of Pali studies upto 1926), Observations grammaticales sur quelques passages de L' Essai sur le Pali (1827; also with Chr. Lassen; a small brochure in which are quoted Mahāvamsa and the Pali dictionary Abhidhānapradīpikā), Introduction à l'histoire du Bouddhisme Indien (Paris, 1844; trs. from the Divyāvadāna, Avadāna-śataka and other texts), tr. of Saddharma-pundarika and other texts, Le Lotus de la Bonne Loi (Paris, 1852), and Le Bhāgavata Purāna (3 Vols., text and French tr. upto Skandha IX; Paris, 1840-47). Among his posthumous papers are an almost complete tr. of the Ashṭasāhasrikā Prajñāpāramitā, Kāraṇavyūha and the Sumāhavadāna. Burnouf carefully read many other texts, even such difficult and voluminous texts as the Mahāvastu and the Abhidharma-kośa-vyākhyā. He also continued his studies of Avestan and Pehlevi texts as also the study of Sinhalese, Burmese and Siamese trs. and comms. Moreover, he did not neglect modern Indo-Aryan languages such as Bengali, Marathi and Gujarati; for most of these languages, he had to compile his own dictionary. All this was done without neglecting his duties as Professor at the Collège de France (appointed in 1832, succeeding Chézy) and often in poor health.

BURROW, T. A modern English Indologist, whose chief works are : The Sanskrit Language (London, 1955; Hindi tr. by Bholā Śankara Vyasa) and jointly with Emeneau Dravidian Borrowings from Indo-Aryan (1962); his other works are : The Language of the Kharoshthi Documents from Chinese Turkestan (Cambridge, 1937) and A Translation of the Kharoshthi Documents from Chinese Turkestan (London, 1940). He surveyed dialects in Mysore, Andhra and other places and the result of this field work of his is the book The Parji Language, a Dravidian Language of Bastar (1953). Burrow's view is that the Dravidian is related to the Uralian; in The Sanskrit Language, the philological treatment of Sanskrit is preceded by a history of the language and followed by a chapter on the non-Aryan influence on Sanskrit.

BURTON, R.W. An English Indologist, who has ed. Kāmasūtra of Vatsyāyana (1883; new ed. New York,).

BURTT, E.A. A modern American Indologist, whose chief work is Teaching of the Compassionate Buddha.

BUSSAGLI, M. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief works are : The Archaeological Aspects of Asiatic Contacts with Italy (East and West, I) and An Important Document on the Relations between Rome and India (East and West, IV); he is also a specialist in Gāndhāra arts.

Indologist, whose chief work is : Concept of Ancient Indian Theatre (1974). He now represents Indology in the University of Warsaw.

BYRSKI, M CHRISTOPHER. A Polish

CALAND, W. An Indologist, who ed. the Jaiminiya text of the Sāmaveda (1907), ed. and tr. into English Pañchavimsa-brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda (1931; with notes), ed. and tr. into German selections from Jaiminiya-brāhmaṇa (1919), ed. part of Kāṇva recension of Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa under Panjab Sanskrit Series (1926; a work completed in 1939 in 2 Vols. by Raghu Vira), Dutch tr. of the Vaitāna Sūtras of the Atharvaveda, tr. into German and pub. of Āpastamba-śrauta sūtra (1921-28), ed. of Baudhāyana-śrautasūtra (1904-23); ed. Sāṅkhāyana-śrauta-sūtra, Varāha-śrauta-sūtra (with Raghu Vira), Vaikhānasa-smārta-sūtra, Vaikhānasa-śrauta-sūtra (1941), Kaṭhaka-gṛihya-sūtra (1925), Vaikhānasa-gṛihyasūtra (1927), Pitṛimedha Sūtras of Baudhāyana, Hiranyakesin and Gautama (with Eng. notes), Jaiminiya-gṛihya-sūtra and wrote a work on Agnishoma (jointly with Victor Henry).

CAPELLER, CARL (1840-1925). A German speaking Indologist, who was born in Alexkehnen in Eastern Prussia. He began his studies in 1860 in Berlin, where he took up classical languages, Indo-European linguistics, Sanskrit, and Lithuanian. He obtained his doctorate on his thesis on Kālidāsa's Mālavikāgnimitra and came to the conclusion that Kālidāsa was the real author of the drama and that he must have written the drama in the latter part of his life. He also wrote another thesis on Ganachhandasa—a contribution to Indian metrics.

Capeller was appointed Reader for Sanskrit at the University of Jena in 1872 and he became Associate Professor in 1875. In 1921, when he was 81 years of age, he discontinued giving lectures.

Capeller's Sanskrit-English Dictionary (based upon St. Petersburg Lexicon; 1887) served the needs of beginners in an ideal manner. A rev. Eng. ed. appeared in Strassburg in 1891. From 1890 onwards, Capeller assisted Monier-Williams in bringing out a new edition of his Sanskrit-English Dictionary, the first edition of which had appeared in 1872.

Capeller brought out in 1909 an ed. and tr. of Kālidāsa's Śākuntala; this tr. was used by the well-known producer Reinhard to stage the play in Nuremberg in 1942. He also ed. Prachanda-pāṇḍava by Rājasekhara. His ed. of Harsha's Ratnāvalī appeared in Boehlingk's Chrestomatie in 1877 and in 1909. He also ed. several farces; the Dhūrtasamāgamu and Hāsyārṇava appeared in 1883. In 1912, he brought out a tr. of Bhāravi's Kirātārjunīya. Capeller also discussed Dillisāmrajvam, a modern drama, which had the coronation of King George V in 1911 as its subject. He wrote a book on poetics as well. The ed. appeared in two parts (in German) as "Vāmana's Manual of Poetics" (1875) and "Vāmana's Rules of Composition" (1880). He also brought out a tr. of German and Greek verses in Sanskrit, which attest to his excellent command of the Sanskrit language.

CARDONA, GEORGE. A modern American Indologist, who at present teaches in the University of Pennsylvania, America. He specializes in Pāṇini and Sanskrit grammar and his chief works are : Studies in Indian Grammarians-I, The methods of Description reflected in the Śiva Sūtras (1969), Haplogy in Indo-European (1968) and Pāṇini : A Survey of Research.

CARNOY, ALBERT J. A modern Belgian scholar, whose chief works are : Les Indo-Européens, Elements of Sanskrit Grammar (in comparison with other Indo-European languages) and Religion of Ancient Persia and Iranian Mythology.

CARPENTER, J ESTLIN. An English Indologist, whose chief works are : ed. of Sumānigala-vilāsinī (with T.W. Rhys-Davids; 1886), Buddhism and Christianity, ed. of Dīghanikāya (with T.W. Rhys-Davids; London, 1890-1911), on Visuddhimaggagaṇṭhi and Theism in Mediaeval India.

CARTELLIERI, WILHELM (1860-1908). A German-speaking Indologist, who went to Vienna in 1878 where he studied Indology and comparative linguistics. He was appointed Associate Professor in 1902 in the University of Innsbruck. He contributed a number of papers on epigraphy to "Epigraphia Indica" and "Indian Antiquary". He specialized in Kāvya literature and wrote two treatises : Sabandhu und Bāṇa and Das Mahābhārata bei Subandhu und Bāṇa.

CARUS, PAUL (1852-1919). An American Indologist, whose chief work The Gospel of Buddha (1894), has been tr. into many languages.

CATALINA, FRANCIS V. A foreign scholar, whose chief work is : The Study of Self Concept of Sankhya Yoga Philosophy.

CHĀCHARĪ. Same as Chachchurī (q.v.).

CHACHCHARĪ. An Apabhraṃśa eulogy in 47 verses of the author's preceptor, Jinavāṇabha Sūri, composed by Jinadatta Sūri (q.v.); also called Chāchharī or Dharmasāyana. Composed in second half of 12th century, there is a comm. on it by Jinapāla.

CHAITANYA (Kṛishṇa Chaitanya). See Gaurāṅga.

CHAITANYA-CHANDRODAYA. A ten-act Sanskrit drama by Kavikarṇapūra (q. v.), which deals with the life of Chaitanya, the celebrated saint of Bengal, through the allegorical figures, Maitrī, Bhakti, and the like.

CHAITANYA-CHARITĀMRITA. A Sanskrit Mahākāvya by Kavikarṇapūra (q. v.) which consists of about 2000 verses in 20 cantos and deals with the life and activities of Chaitanya, who is considered as an incarnation of Kṛishṇa.

CHAITANYA-CHARITĀMRITA. A Sanskrit poem by Murārigupta (q.v.), popularly known as Kaṇachā and also styled as Śrīkṛishṇa-chaitanya-charitāmrita. Composed in 1510, in 78 cantos, it deals with the entire life of Chaitanya.

CHAKKAMMOVAESA. See Amarakīrtigaṇi.

CHAKRA DHAR BIJALWAN. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work, Indian Theory of Knowledge (1976-77) is written according to Jayarāja's masterly work, the Nyāyamañjarī. He also pub. Hindu Omens (based on the Tantra).

CHAKRAKAVI (fl. 1st half of 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Jānakī-prerīṇaya, a kāvya in 8 cantos, describing the story of Rāmāyaṇa from the birth of Rāma and his marriage at Mithilā ; his other works on the marriages of Rukmiṇī, Gaurī and Draupadī are of the class of Champūs. His Chitra-ratnākara is a humorous poem.

CHAKRAPĀṆIDATTA (fl. 11th cent.). A Bengali Sanskrit writer on Āyurveda, who was son of Nārāyaṇa. A pupil of Naradatta and an official of the Gauḍa King Nayapāla, his chief work is Chikitsā-sāra-saṅgraha (q. v.) or Chikitsā-saṅgraha, an original work on Āyurveda. His other works are : Śabda-chandrikā (a vocabulary of vegetable as well as mineral substances), Dravya-guṇa-saṅgraha (a work on dietetics), Chikitsā-sāra or Gūḍhavākya-bodhaka, Sarva-sāra-saṅgraha, Āyurveda-dīpikā (or Charaka-tātparyā-dīpikā ; comm. on Charaka-saṃhitā) and Bhānumati (comm. on Suśruta-saṃhitā).

CHAKRAVARTI, A. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Jain Literature in Tamil (Arrah, 1941), Eng. tr. of Pañcīstikāya (Arrah, 1920) and The Religion of Ahimsā (Bombay, 1957). It is also through the expositions of Chakravarti that Jainism finds a creditable place in some of the important histories of Indian Philosophy.

CHAKRAVARTI, N.P. A modern scholar, who partly ed. an old manuscript of the Udānavarga; he is the author of L' Udānavarga Sanskrit (Paris, 1930).

CHALMERS, R. (1858-1938). An English Indologist, whose chief works are ed. of Majjhima-nikāya, Eng. tr. of Suttas under the title of Further Dialogues of the Buddha, (Vols. I, II), metrical tr. of Sutta-nipāta and tr. of Jātaka (Vol. I).

CHĀLUKYA-CHARITA. A Sanskrit work (Madras, 1938) by Paravastu Lakshminarasimha Svāmī, which collates and weaves together the Chālukyan inscriptions into a connected historical account of the dynasty.

CHAMDĀ-VEJJHAGĀ. See Chāmdā-Vijjhaya.

CHAMDA-VIJJHAYA. See Puñña.

CHAMLONG SARAPADNUKE. An Indo-logist of Thailand, who is a professor in the Silpakorn University. A prolific writer, his chief publs. are: Introduction to the R̥gveda, Manual of Vedic Grammar, Saṃskritarachana-vidhi and small monographs on grammatical topics. He has tr. into Thai the selections from the R̥gveda under the title Veda-saṃhitā as also tr. the Bhagavadgītā.

CHAMPAKA-ŚRESHṬHI-KATHĀNAKA. A Sanskrit collection of tales of Jaina origin (probably written in the 15th cent.), one of which relates Rāvaṇa's vain effort to avoid fate. It is of the nature of fantastic fairy tales.

CHAMPŪ-RĀMĀYAṆA. See Rāmāyaṇa-champū.

CHAMŪPATI (1839-1937). An Arya-samajist scholar, whose chief works are: Jīvana Jyoti (exposition of 'Āgneya-parva' of Sāmaveda; in Hindi), Soma Sarovara (exposition of Pavamānaparva of Samaveda), Eng. tr. of the 1st ten chapters of Yajurveda, Vedārsha Kośa (3Pts. 1934, 1939, 1940; in collaboration with Svāmī Vedānanda), Glimpses of Dayānanda, The Ten Commandments of Dayānanda, Mahatma Gandhi and the Arya Samaj, Yogeśvara Kṛishṇa (in Hindi) and an Urdu tr. of Satyārtha Prakāśa.

CHĀṆAKYA. See Kautilya. To Chāṇakya are attributed the Sanskrit works called Chāṇakya-sūtra and Chāṇakya-rājanīti-sāstra.

CHĀṆAKYA. A Sanskrit writer on medicine, who is known to Arabic writers as Šānaq.

CHĀṆAKYA-RĀJANITI-SĀSTRA. A Sanskrit work on politics and statecraft, attributed to Chāṇakya (q.v.). In its contents, the work is almost identical with the Bṛihaspati-saṃhitā of the Garuḍa-purāṇa.

CHĀṆAKYA-SŪTRA. A collection of Sanskrit Sūtras ascribed to Chāṇakya (q.v.), which is a list of maxims of the didactic-moral type.

CHAṆḌA. Author of the Prākṛita-lakṣhaṇa, one of the oldest among the grammars of the Prākṛit languages, composed in Sanskrit and is moulded on the pattern of Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī; the work is to be distinguished from another work of the same title attributed to Pāṇini. Chaṇḍa's date is uncertain.

CHAṆḌAKAUŚIKA. A Sanskrit drama by Kshemīśvara (q.v.), which treats of the Harischandra legend of the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa without displaying any distinct dramatic merit or even high poetical ability.

It opens with the scene where king Harischandra rebukes the Kauśika Viśvāmitra for the apparent sacrifice of a damsel on the fire. As the sage is merely bringing the sciences under control, he becomes irritated (chaṇḍa) at the interruption by the king and curses him. The king secures the sage's pardon at a heavy cost: the surrender of the kingdom of the whole earth and a thousand gold pieces. To secure the money, the king sells his wife and son to a Brāhmaṇa at Kāśī and himself to a Chāṇḍala to become a cemetery keeper there. One day his wife brings the dead body of their child, but the king insists on the prescribed toll. This turns, however, to be a trial of his character, for his son recovers from the effect of a snake-bite and his wife is rescued. The sage being highly pleased with the unique observance of truth (satya) returns the kingdom of whole earth to the king, who, however, transfers it to his son.

CHAṆḌAMARUTA ĀCHĀRYA (fl. latter part of 19th cent.). A Sanskrit scholar and poet of Kānchi, who came under the patronage of a feudal lord, Ravivarmā. His chief works are: Lag'rasa Kusumāvalī (on poetics), Alinarāja Kathā (a poem in 6 cantos; incomplete) and Chitramīmāṃsoddhāra (by way of vindication of Appayya Dīkshita, whose Chitramīmāṃsā had been subjected to severe criticism by Jagannātha).

CHANDANA MUNI (1914-). A Jaina Sanskrit writer, who prepared a Sanskrit version of Rāyanavāla-kahā (originally written in Maharashtri Prakrit) under the title Rātrapāla-kathā. The style is simple, straightforward and graceful. The story is about a childless couple, who are blessed with a son by the grace of a Yaksha. The couple as also the son suffer untold sufferings but ultimately, the son marries Ratnāvatī and is also united with his parents. Being a work meant for religious edification, Jaina principles and doctrines are enunciated on appropriate occasions. His other works are: Arjuna-mālā-karam (a gadyakāvya; 1969) and Jyotiṣphulingāḥ (1968; containing short didactic writings).

CHANDAPĀVA ITI. See Uvanga.

CHAṆḌEŚVARA (fl. early 14th cent.). One of the great Smṛiti writers of Mithilā, whose chief work in Sanskrit is Smṛiti-ratnakara (q.v.) or Ratnakara. Like his father, Viśeśvara and grandfather Devaditya, he was a minister of king Harisimhaḍeva of Tirhut, who ascended the throne about 1280. His other works are: Kṛitva-chintāmaṇi (q.v.), Ratnātī-ratnākara (q.v.) or Vīti-ratnākara, Dama-vākya-valī, Siva-vākya-valī and Saiva-mānasollāsa. He had a long literary career of over 50 years and exercised considerable influence on the later writers of Mithilā and Bengal.

CHANDĪ. See Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa.

CHANDĪ-KUCHA-PAÑCHĀŚIKĀ. A highly erotic Sanskrit poem by Lakshmana Āchārya (fl. 13th cent.), which describes the breasts of the goddess Chaṇḍī in fifty verses. It displays a curious development of religious fervour.

CHAṆḌĪŚATAKA (Devī-Śataka). A Sanskrit devotional lyric, consisting of 102 stanzas, composed by Rāṇa (q.v.).

Written chiefly in Sragadharā metre, it is in honour of the goddess Chaṇḍī, consort of Śiva, and in special, of her feat in killing the buffalo-demon, Mahisha. The lyric is also a prayer, as the goddess is invoked to guard her worshippers; the work appears to have been inspired by the Devī-(Chaṇḍī-) Māhātmya section of the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa.

"Bāṇa does not impress us with any sincerity or of devotion and the poem, though laboured and sometimes clever, has little of the attraction of his romances."-- Keith, HSL, 210.

CHAṆḌĪ- (CHAṆḌIKĀ-) UPAPURĀṆA An Upapurāṇa in Sanskrit, which deals with Śivaite cult. See Upapurāṇa and Purāṇa.

CHANDRA. (Chandragomin, fl. c. 500). A Sanskrit grammarian, author of the celebrated Chāndra-vyākaraṇa (q.v.) and founder of one of the several systems of Sanskrit grammar. Utilizing the works of the great Āchāryas of the school of Pāṇini, he made an attempt to evolve a system of grammar free from the traditional Brahmanical element. He was a Bengali Buddhist and his grammar was very popular in Kashmir, Tibet, Nepāl and Ceylon. His grammar has 3100 aphorisms arranged into six chapters of four quarters each. He is also credited with the authorship of: Lokānanda (a drama), Nvāya-siddhyāloka (a work on Nyāya philosophy) and Ārya-tārādevī-stotra-muktikā-mālā (containing hymns).

CHANDRA. A Sanskrit author to whom are ascribed the Tantric works called Simha-nāda-sādhana, Mahā-kāruṇika-stotra, Rakshā- chakra and Abhichāra-karma. The Mahākāruṇika-stotra, the epistle called Śishyalekha-dharma-kāvya and the hymn Manoharakalpa are ascribed to him as also to the 1st Chandragomin.

CHANDRA. A Sanskrit writer, whose Daśa-padārtha-śāstra, a work on philosophy is available only in a Chinese version of A.D. 648.

CHANDRA, A.N. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Dilemma of Kurukshetra War.

CHANDRABALĪ PĀṆḌE. A modern scholar, whose chief study in Hindi is on Kālidāsa; he has written also in Hindi a work on outlines of Sanskrit Literature.

CHANDRABHŪSHAṆA ŚARMĀ. A Sanskrit author of Jīvita-vṛttānta (Benares, 1890), which gives a short account of the life of Pāṇita Bechana Rāma of the Benares Sanskrit College, Benares.

CHANDRĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit writer, mentioned in the Vākyapadīya (q.v.).

CHANDRADEVA. See Rudradeva.

CHANDRADHAR ŚARMĀ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa.

CHANDRAGOMIN. See Chandra.

CHANDRAGOMIN. A Sanskrit author to whom are ascribed: Simhanāda-sādhana, Mahākāruṇika-stotra, Rakshā-chakra, Abhichāra-karma (all Tantrik works), Śishyalekha-dharma-kāvya (an epistle) and Manoharakalpa (a hymn); his time is not certain.

CHANDRAGUPTA VEDĀLĀṆKĀR. (d. 1944). A modern scholar, whose chief work is Bṛihattara-Bhārata (a study in Hindi on Greater India).

CHANDRAKALĀ. A Sanskrit Nāṭikā by Viśvanātha (q.v.), author of Sāhitya-darpaṇa.

CHANDRAKĀNTA TARKĀLANKĀRA (1836-1909). A Bengali Sanskrit poet, who is author of works in several branches. Besides Satī-pariṇaya and Chandravaṃśa, poems in imitation of Kumāra-sambhava and Raghuvaṃśa, Alāṅkāra-sūtra on rhetorics, Kaumudī-sudhakara, a play, he wrote a gloss on Vaiśeṣika-sūtra, a supplement to the Kātantra-ryākarāṇa, covering the Vedic usages, and Smṛiti-chandrāloka (1903-1906) on Dharmaśāstra.

CHANDRAKIRTĪ (fl. 16th cent.) A Jaina Sanskrit writer of the Sarasvata school of grammar and belonging to the Bṛihadgachchha of Nāgpur. He is the author of Subodhikā or Dīpikā, a comm.; he was honoured by Sahi Salum. See Sarasvata-ryākarāṇa.

CHANDRĀLOKA. A Sanskrit treatise on poetics by Jayadeva (q.v.) or Piyushavarsha in ten chapters, which consists of about 350 verses. The subjects discussed are: Vāgvidhāra, Dosha-nirūpana, Lakṣaṇa-nirūpana, Guna-nirūpana, Alankāra-nirūpana, Rasādi-nirūpana, Dhvani-nirūpana, Gūṇanāṭya-vyāṅgya, Lakṣaṇā-nirūpana, and Abhidhā-nirūpana; the Kārikās of the Arthālankāra section of this work are incorporated in the Kuvalayānanda (q.v.). An elementary treatise and admirably suited for the beginners. Chandrāloka is lucid and easy in style.

CHANDRAMAṆI VIDYALANKĀR (b. 1891). A modern Vedic scholar, whose work is a Hindi comm. on Nirukta, under the title Vedārtha-dīpaka-nirukta-bhāṣya; his other works are a Hindi tr. (in 3 Parts) of Vālmīkī-rāmāyaṇa, a treatise on Maharshi Patañjali and his Bhārata, in Hindi.

CHANDRA PRABHĀ (Mrs.). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Historical Mahākāvya in Sanskrit (1977; a study of important Mahākāvya written between 11th and 15th centuries).

CHANDRAPRABHĀ MAHATTARA. A Prakṛit poet and author of a work on the life of Vijayachandra Kevalin, composed in the second half of the 11th century. The work, consisting of 1064 Gāthās, narrates eight stories describing the eight different ways of worshipping the Jinas.

CHANDRAPRAJÑAPTI. See Chandapannatti.

CHANDRA PRAKĀSH TYĀGĪ. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Deśī Śabdōṇ kā Bhāṣhāvaijñānika Adhyayana (1972).

CHANDRAŚEKHARA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet of Bengal, whose Śūrjana-charita treats of the life and exploits of prince Surjana, a contemporary of Akbar.

CHANDRASEKHARA SARASVATĪ (1729-89). 63rd Āchārya of Kāmakoṭipīṭha of Kānchī and author in Sanskrit of Śivagīti-mālikā, a musical composition.

CHANDRA ŚEKHARA ŚARMĀ. A Sanskrit writer, who has written on earthquakes in his Bhūmikampan and on the five basic elements, Earth, Water, Fire, Air and Ether in Pañcha-bhūtāni (1916).

CHANDRAŚEKHARA VĀCHASPATĪ. See Vāchaspati Miśra.

CHĀNDRA-VYĀKARAṆA. A Sanskrit grammar, attributed to Chandra (q.v.), which abridges and simplifies the Aṣṭādhyāyī (q.v.). It has six chapters, in place of eight in the Aṣṭādhyāyī and the number of aphorisms is 3100 instead of 3981; the work has left out the portion of Pāṇini's grammar dealing with Vedic grammar and accents. This grammar was very popular in Kashmir, Tibet, Nepal and Ceylon. The Kāśikā-vṛtti (q.v.) has borrowed without acknowledgement several sūtras from this work.

CHANDRIKĀ. A Sanskrit version (1955) of a Malayalam drama.

CHARAKA. A Sanskrit author or compiler of the oldest work on Āyurveda, called Charaka-saṃhitā (q.v.). His date is uncertain, though tradition makes him the physician of the great king Kanishka (1st cent. A.D.).

CHARAKA-SAMHITĀ. The oldest of the extant Saṃhitās of Āyurveda in Sanskrit, ascribed to Charaka (q.v.). The present text is not the original one but is that which was revised by Dīdhabala, a Kashmirian of the 9th cent., who admits to having added the last two chapters and to having written 17 out of 28 or 30 chapters of Book VI. Even then, the work appears to have been a revision of a number of Tantras on special topics written by Agniveśa. The work, divided in eight sthānas (parts), deals with: (1) remedies, diet, duties of a physician; (2) eight chief diseases; (3) general pathology and medical studies; (4) anatomy and embryology; (5) diagnosis and prognosis; (6) special therapy; (7 & 8) Kalpa and Siddhi (General therapy).

The work, in prose mixed with verses, is very popular even today. It was tr. very early into Persian and Arabic.

CHARAKA-TĀTPARYA-DĪPIKĀ. Same as Āyurveda-dīpikā (q.v.).

CHARAYĀNUYOGA. A class of Prakrit works belonging to the secondary or substitute canon of the Digambara Jainas and includes ritual works: Vaṭakera's Mūlīchāra and Trivarāchāra (qq.v.) and Samaata-bhadra's Rānakaraṇḍa-srāvaka-chāra.

CHARCHARĪ. See Chachcharī.

CHĀRITRASUNDARA GAṆĪ. A Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of the Śīladūta (q.v.; a didactic poem on the story of Sthūlabhadra, completed in 1431), Kumārā-charita and Mahipāla-charita (a fairy tale).

CHARIYĀPIṬAKA. A part of the Khuddaka-nikāya. See Sutta-piṭaka.

CHARLA BHASYAKARLA ŚĀSTRIN (fl. 19th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who composed only one verse in Anuṣṭup metre called Kaṇkana-bandha-rāmāvaṇa, which conveys 128 meanings, if read in a particular order. These meanings had to be explained by the poet himself.

CHARPENTIER, JARL (1884-1935). A Swedish Indologist, whose chief works are: Study of Chariyapīṭaka, ed. of Uttarājñhayana-sutta (the 3rd Jaina Mūlasutra; Upsala, 1922, with an elaborate introduction), Pachchekabuddha Geschichten (Upsala, 1908; on the study of legends of four Patvekkabuddhas) and Die Legende der heiligen Pārśva. In the Vedic field, his works are: Brahman (1932) and Die Suparna-Sage (Suparna-ākhyāna; 1921) and articles on Vedic and Purāṇic studies.

CHĪRU-CHARYĀ. A Sanskrit poetical work in 100 verses by Kshemendra (q.v.), which seeks to inculcate morality and good conduct.

CHĪRUDATTA. A Sanskrit drama by Bhāsa (q.v.), of which only a fragment in four Acts is extant, without the Nāndī verse at the opening and the Bharata-vākya at the close. It seems to have been based on the story, which also forms the plot of the later Mūlīchhakaṭika (q.v.).

Chārudatta, a merchant, whose generosity has impoverished him, sees a hetaera, Vasantasenā by name, at a festival and they fall in love at first sight. Pursued by the king's brother-in-law, Saṃsthāna, Vasantasenā takes refuge in Chārudatta's house, and, when she departs, she leaves in his charge her jewellery. She generously rescues from his creditors a former servant of Chārudatta, who then renounces the world and becomes a monk. During the night, the ornaments which she has deposited, are stolen by a thief Sajjalaka, who breaks into Chārudatta's house in order to gain the means to purchase the freedom of a slave-girl of Vasantasenā with whom he is in love. Chārudatta is overcome with shame at learning of the theft of ornaments deposited in his care and his noble wife sacrifices a pearl necklace, which she gives to Vidushaka to be handed over to Vasantasenā in lieu of her stolen jewels. He takes the necklace to the hetuera, who has learnt of the theft, but accepts it to have the excuse of visiting Chārudatta once more. She, therefore, hands over the slave to Sajjalaka and starts out to Chārudatta's house. At this point, the play ends abruptly. See Mṛichhakaṭika.

CHĀRUDEVA SHĀSTRĪ (1896-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Sri-Gandhī-charitam (1930), Śabdāpasabha-viveka (1954), Vākyamuktāvalī (1954), a Hindi comm. on Mahābhāṣya (1962-68), Vyakarana-chandrodaya and Upasargārtha-chandrikā (1976-79).

CHĀRVĀKA. Supposed to be a pupil of Brihaspati, he is the founder or greatest exponent of the materialist philosophy called after his name. According to Chārvāka, 'pleasure is the highest goal of life'; he does not recognise Vedic authority, denies the existence of soul and other world and refuses to accept all means of knowledge excepting perception. No work of this school exists, but its views are refuted by certain orthodox schools of philosophy.

CHATTERJEE, J.C. An Indian scholar, whose chief work is Kashmir Śaivism (1919).

CHATTERJEE, ANITI KUMĀR (1890-1977) A celebrated scholar, whose works are: Origin and Development of Bengali Language (its Introduction is considered as an encyclopaedia of Indian languages), Languages of India, Indo-Aryan and Hindi (1930); Some Aspects of Indo-Iranian Literary and Cultural Traditions (ed. with R.N. Dandekar and others), Select Writings (vol. I, 1978) and important papers on Rāmāyaṇa Reliefs from Prambana, Java as also articles on Puranic studies. Highly honoured in India and abroad, several Universities and Institutes of the world conferred upon him degrees and enlisted him their distinguished member.

CHAṬṬOPĀDHYĀYA, D. A modern Marxist scholar, whose chief works are : An Encyclopaedia of South Indian Culture (with G. Ramakrishna & N. Gayathri), Marxism and Indology, Nyāya-sūtra with Vātsyāyana's Commentary, Studies in the History of Indian Philosophy (3 vols.) and Tāranātha's History of Buddhism in India.

CHAṬṬOPĀDHYĀYA, K.C. See Kshetresh-chandra Chaṭṭopādhyāya.

CHATUḤŚARĀYA. See Chaūsaraṇa.

CHATUḤŚATIKĀ. A Buddhist Sanskrit poetical work, also called Chatuḥśataka or Śata-śāstra, by Ārya Deva (q.v.). Consisting of 400 Kārikas, the work criticizes the Brahmanical practices of bathing in the Ganges with a view to acquiring merit and washing off sin; a good power of irony is displayed therein. Being a fundamental work of the Mādhyamika school, it defends Nāgarjuna's doctrines against the other Buddhist schools as also against Brahmanical system, especially the Vaiśeṣika. The Chatuḥśatikā is one of the ground works of the faith of the Sanron sect in Japan.

CHATURVEDA. The religious works of the Digambara Jainas, written in Prakrit. These are four in number : Prathamānuyoga, Karanānuyoga, Dravyānuyoga and Charaṇānuyoga (qq.v.) and are called Chaturveda.

CHATURADĀMODARA. See Dāmodara.

CHATURANGA-DĪPIKĀ. A Sanskrit work on the game of Indian Dice-chess, ascribed to Śūlapāni (q.v.), who may have been different from the famous Smṛiti writer of Bengal, bearing this name.

CHATURBHĀṆĪ. A title of four one act monologues of Bhāṇa type in Sanskrit.

The four Bhāṇas, viz., Ubhayābhisārikā, Padmaprābhātaka, Dhūrtiṣasārvāda and Pādātāḍitoka, ascribed on the strength of a traditional verse respectively to Vararuchi, Śūdraka, Īśvaradatta and Syamalika, have been pub. under the title 'Chaturbhāṇī'. In atmosphere and spirit, these are closely similar to one another and to the Mṛichchhakaṭika (q.v.). These are variously dated, much earlier than the 10th cent. A.D. or in the beginning of the Christian era or earlier. The plays represent amusing pictures of the lives and adventures, scandals and gossip of rogues and rakes who lived in imperial cities like Ujjayinī or Kusumapura. These Bhāṇas are different from the later Bhāṇas; in their literary quality and style and in the portrayal of characters, the plays, which are unique, richly deserve a place of their own in the history of Sanskrit drama.

CHATURBHUJA (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Haricharita-kāvya, a poem in 13 cantos on the adventures of Krishna; the work was composed at Rānakeli (Bengal) in 1493.

CHATURMUKHA. An Apabhraṃśa poet, mentioned by Harishena (q.v.) as his predecessor. No work has so far come to light of this author; his date is uncertain but he flourished before 987.

CHATURVARGA-CHINTĀMAṆI. A voluminous Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Hemādri (q.v.), which deals with Dharmaśāstra in five sections called Vrata, Dāna, Tīrtha, Moksha and Parīśeṣa. It is an encyclopaedia of ancient religious rites and observations, quoting frequently from the Smṛitis and Purāṇas.

CHATURVARGA-SANĠGRAHA. A Sanskrit poetical work in four chapters by Kshemen-dra (q.v.), which seeks to teach that power of discrimination and indifference to worldly objects are the essential things in life.

CHATURVIJAYA, MUNI. A modern Jaina scholar, whose chief works are ed. of Moharāja-parājaya (Baroda, 1918; jointly with Dalal), ed. of Bḥiḥatkalpasūtra (6 Vols., jointly with Puṇyavijaya) and ed. of Vasudeva-hindī (2 Pts, also jointly with Puṇyavijaya).

CHATURVIMŚATI-JINASTUTI (Tīrtheśastuti or Śobhanastuti). A Sanskrit hymn by Śobhana (q.v.), which consists of 4 groups of verses : the first in praise of 24 Tīrthankaras, the second in praise of all the Jinas, the 3rd in praise of the Jaina doctrine, and the fourth in praise of various deities. Dhanapāla, brother of Śobhana, composed a comm. on it.

CHATURVIMŚATI-JINASTUTI. There are several Sanskrit stotras composed by Jaina poets extolling all the 24 Jinas; such works are called Chaturvimśati-jinastuti or Chaturvimśikā.

CHATURVIMŚATI-MATA. A Sanskrit compilation on Dharmaśāstra, which contains a summary of the teachings of 24 sages; it belongs to the 8th-10th cent. A.D. It has been quoted by Vijñāneśvara in his Mitāksharā and also by Aparārka. It is an anti-Buddhist work.

CHATUTTHA-SĀRATTHA-MANĪJŪSĀ. A Pali comm. by Sumedha Thera, on the Manoratha-pūraṇī (q.v.).

CHAUDHURY, S.B. An Indian scholar, whose chief work is Ethnic Settlement in Ancient India (Calcutta, 1955); he has written also several articles on Purāṇic studies.

CHAURA-PAÑCHĀŚIKĀ. A Sanskrit poem of 50 stanzas by Bilhana (q.v.; fl. 11th cent.), dealing with secret love and the liveliness of women in different amorous situations. The poem describes how a robber, when making love to a princess, is discovered and is condemned to death and as he is being taken to the execution ground, gives expression to these stanzas to the love enjoyed by him with his beloved. The title of the poem has given rise to various interpretations, some of which involve the author himself in a love intrigue with a princess. It is said that the king was moved by the last invocation of Bilhana and the result was a pardon and a formal bestowal of the hand of the princess.

CHĀṢARĀṆA. 4. See Paṇṇa.

CHAVANNES, EDOUARD (1865-1918). A Sinologist, who has made notable contribution to Buddhist studies by his tr. into French of Hsüan-tsang's work on the pilgrims to the Western countries and of many Buddhist stories. Together with Sylvain Lévi he wrote articles on some enigmatic titles in the Buddhist hierarchy and on the sixteen Arhats.

CHEMPARATHY, G. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is An Indian Rational Theology, Introduction to Udayana's Nyāyakusumāñjali (Wien, 1972). He is at present preparing an annotated tr. of Nyāyakusumāñjali and is studying the authoritativeness of the sacred scriptures of Hinduism.

CH'EN, KENNETH (1907-). An American-

Chinese Indologist, whose chief works are : Buddhism in China: A Historical Survey (Princeton, 1963; the first history of Buddhism in China) and Buddhism: the Light of Asia (1968).

CHEZY, A.L. DE (1773-1832). A French Indologist, whose chief works are the French tr. of Śakuntalā (1830) and Amarasataka (1831). Chézy was appointed to the chair of Sanskrit, established in 1815 at Collège de France, Paris.

CHHĀBRĀ, B. CH. A modern scholar, who was in the Archaeology Department of the Government of India. In Sanskrit, his poetical collection is Suvarṇa-bindu (1951; containing poems on Gandhiji in Vedic Gayatri metre; on Mathurā, with its cultural associations as revealed by literature and the archaeological excavations, etc.). He also wrote a poem, Nyaktara-janapada-śobhā on scenes in Holland, where he studied. He is the author of several works on history and culture, e.g., Expansion of Indo-Aryan Culture (1965).

CHHAJJURĀMA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Sultan-charitam is in praise of the Muslim rulers. The time of the author is not certain.

CHHAJJURĀMA (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Dayānand-śiṣyaka is a satire on Svāmī Dayānanda.

CHHAJJURĀM SHASTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose chief works are : Niruktam (ed., 1963) and Śivakathāṃṛitam Mahākāvyaṃ (1974).

CHHĀKESA-DHĀTU-VAMSA. A Pali work in prose and verse, written by a Burmese, which describes stupas built on the hair-relic of the Buddha, on Sakka, Pajjuna, Manimekhālā, Addhikanāvika, Varuṇa-nāgarāja and Sattha-nāvika.

CHHAKKAMMOVAESA. (Shaṭkarmopadeśa).
See Amarakīrtigaṇi.

CHHANDAS. One of the six Vedāṅgas (q.v.), dealing with Sanskrit Metrics.

CHHANDAHSŪTRA. A Sanskrit work on prosody, ascribed to Pingala (q.v.). Dealing partly with Vedic metres but mainly with classical ones, the author adopts the system of algebraic symbols for a short (laghu) or a long (guru) syllable, etc. The names of the metres are interesting, for some of them are named after epithets of the beloved, e.g. Kuṣilagati (one of crooked gait), Chañchalākshikā (one of glancing eyes), Tanumadhya (one of slender waist), Chāruhāsini (one of sweet smile), etc. The names of some metres suggest poetic observation of animal life e.g., Aśvalalita (the gait of the horse), Śārdūlavikrīḍita (the tiger's play) and so on. Some of the names are suggested by the plant-kingdom, e.g., Mañjarī (the cluster), Mālā (garland), etc.

CHHANDANĀTHA BHATṬA ROY, NEPAL RĀJPANDIT. A Sanskrit writer of Nepal, whose Parīṇāma Vikrama (1959), a drama in 7 Acts, presents useful discussions on the philosophy of Kant and Hegel as also on communism, socialism, democracy and humanism.

CHHĀNDOGYA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

CHHĀNDOGYA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

CHHANDOMANJARI. A Sanskrit work on prosody by Gaṅgādīśa (q.v.), which defines and illustrates only those metres which are commonly used. Based on various works on prosody, the majority of the illustrative verses are composed by the author and deal with various sports of Kṛishṇa at Vṛindāvana.

CHHANDONUŚĀSANA. A very exhaustive work on Sanskrit, Prakrit and Apabhraṁśa metres, composed by Hemachandra (q.v.) about 1150. A clear and methodical treatise, it consists of three parts, viz., the Sutras, the Vṛitti and the illustrations, composed by the author himself. In the case of Sanskrit, Prakrit as well as Apabhraṁśa metres, their names have been introduced in the illustrative stanzas themselves. It is this work, as also another work (Śabdānusāsana) of Hemachandra, which gave a final sanction and sanctity to the Apabhraṁśa language and literature.

CHHANDONUŚĀSANA. A Sanskrit work on metres by Jayakīrti (q.v.), which defines Sanskrit metres; the definitions serve illustrations as well. Several old Kannaḍa metres, of course in Sanskrit, have also been defined. The author mentions a few Digambara poets by name, without giving any illustrations from their works. The only manuscript of Jayakīrti's work lies at Jaisalmer and is dated Śaṁvat 1190 or A.D. 1133.

CHHANDOVICHITI Real title of Pingalachhandahsūtra (q.v.), while some think it the title of a lost work of Daṇḍin and yet others are of the view that it denotes Metrics as a branch of learning and not any particular work. It is also considered as a work of Śārngadeva (q.v.), the author of Saṅgītaratnākara. It is also the name of a Pali work on Metrics.

CHHAPADA (fl. 12th cent.). A Pali writer, pupil of Sāriputta and native of Burma. According to tradition, he received his education at Ceylon where he stayed from 1170 to 1180. He is the author of a number of comms. on the sacred Pali texts. His best known work is Abhidhammattha-saṅgraha-saṅkhepa-tīkā, a comm. on Anuruddha's work Abhidhammattha-saṅgaha (q.v.). His Suttaniddesa is a Pali grammar belonging to the school of

Kachchāyana

CHHAPPĀHUḌA A Prakrit work in six chapters, attributed to Kundakunda (q.v.), dealing with Jaina doctrine

CHHATRE, VISVANĀTHA KISAVA A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief work is Subhāsha-charitam (a poem in 16 cantos on the life and work of Subhasha Chandra Bose).

CHHEDA-SŪTRA, See Chheya-sutta

CHHEYA-SŪTRA (Chheda-sūtra) A class of Jaina canonical works in Prakrit, forming part of Śiddhanta (q.v.) Chheya (Skt. Chheda) means 'cut', chheya in Jaina discipline means a kind of penance so Schubring thinks that the title Chheya-sutta is derived from chheda. These works, besides containing various kinds of legendary material prescribe rules of life for the monks and nuns as well as for atonements and penances. These did not, perhaps, form a group in the Canon until a late period as it is not always the same text which are placed in this group. The Chheya-sutta (35) however, belongs to the earliest portion of the Canon and are treated by tradition as one book (śūla-skāndha) and are called Dasakappa-vavahara. The Chheya-sutta six in numbers are as under

(i) Nisīha (Nisītha) The first Chheya-sutta, which contains rules and regulations for the punishment for various transgressions of rules of duly life. It incorporates the major portion of the Vavahara in its first sections and contains many Sūtras in common with Chulas I and II of the Āraṃga (q.v.)

(ii) Mahā-nisīha (Maha-nisītha) The second or sometimes the sixth Chheya-sutta, though there are objections to its inclusion in the Canon. Dealing mainly with rules about confession and penance, which are considered essential steps to liberation, legends of great and borrowed also occur. References to non-canonical literature indicate a late origin of this work. According to a tradition, Haribhadra participated in its compilation, while its Chap. 6 has been redacted by Devendia Suri in 519 Ārya stanzas under the title Susadha-kaha.

(iii) Vavahara (Vyavahara) The third Chheya-sutta, which is a supplement to the old and genuine Kappa, the fifth Chheya-sutta, it teaches the methods of meting out punishment for transgression of the law.

(iv) Āvādasāo 'The ten sections on behaviour' Īcharadasaḥ also known as Dasao or Dasasrutaskandha, is ascribed by tradition to Bhadrabahu, and the eighth section of this Dasao has been known by the title kalpa-sūtra (q.v.) of Bhadrabahu.

(v) Kappa (Bṛhat-kalpa or Bṛhat-sādhulalpa-sūtra) The fifth Chheya-sutta and the principal work on the rules and regulations for the monks and nuns, which teaches the liability for punishment.

(vi) Pañchalappa (Pañcha-kalpa) The sixth Chheya-sutta which is no longer extant. Sometimes, however, the Jvalappa (Jita-lalpa) by Imabhadra is regarded as the sixth Chheya-sutta. Treating of the cases of individual transgression it is a detailed metrical compilation often called Yatijita-kalpa. The Foraniputti and Ohaniputti, which also deal with discipline are also occasionally classed among the Chheda-sūtras.

CHHICHHUBHATTIA A Kashmirian Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Laghu-vṛtti (1000), a grammar of the Katantra school. See Katantra.

CHIDAMBARA (fl. 16th cent.) A Sanskrit poet son of Anantanarayana and Venkata, who was perhaps patronised by king Venkata (1586-1614) of Vijayanagara. In his Raghava-vadaya-pandavaya in 3 cantos he made use of treble entendre, relating simultaneously three stories of Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata and Bhāgavata. His Bhāgavata-champū relates the story of Kṛishṇa; there is a comm. on it by his father, which interprets the meaning three-fold. The Pañcha-kalyāṇa-champū describes at once the story of the five marriages of Rāma, Kṛishṇa, Viṣṇu, Śiva and Subrahmaṇya, with a comm. by himself. Chidambara-vilāsa-kāvya in 5 cantos describes the tales of Lord Naṭarāja of Chidambaram.

CHIDAMBARA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose novels: Kamalakumār and Satī Kamalā have appeared in the Sahridayā (ix), Śrīraṅgam.

CHIKITSĀ-KALIKĀ. A Sanskrit Āyurvedic work by Tīshata (fl. 14th cent.).

CHIKITSĀMṚITA. A Sanskrit work on Āyurveda in 2500 verses by Milhaṇa, who flourished in Delhi in 1224.

CHIKITSĀ-SĀRA-SAṆGRAHA (or Chikitsā-saṅgraha). A Sanskrit work on Āyurveda by Chakrapāḍidatta (q.v.), which deals with the diagnosis of diseases and the efficacy of minerals; it was written in about 1060. Besides being an authoritative work on the subject, it is important in the history of Indian medicine for marking an advance in the direction of metallic preparations which had been introduced since the time of Vāgbhaṭa and Vṛinda.

CHIKITSĀ-SĀRA-SAṆGRAHA. A Sanskrit work on Āyurveda by Vaṅgasena (q.v.); it is based on the works of Suśrīta and Mādhava.

CHILDERS, ROBERT CAESAR (1838-76), An English Indologist, whose chief works are: Dictionary of Puli Language, Khuddakapāṭha (ed. with Eng. tr.), Mahāparinivvāṇa- suttanta (Eng. tr.) and Buddhism.

CHINMULGUND, P.J. See Mirashi, V.V

CHINNASWĀMI SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Vedic scholar, who has ed. the Tāṇḍyamuhābrāhmaṇa of Sāmaveda with Sāyaṇa Bhāṣhya (2 Vols., 1938) and the Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa of Krishṇa Yajurveda, with foot-notes and Pāṭha-bhedas (2 Vols., 1937, 1950) and ed. Āpastamba-śrautasūtra-Dhūrta-swāmibhāṣhya.

CHINTĀHARAṆ CHAKRAVARTI. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are a new ed. of Saundarānanda (along with bibliography of the studies of the poem between 1905 and 1933), A Study of Ancient Indian Numismatics (1931), The Tantras, their Religion and Culture, The Tantras, Studies in their Religion and Literature and 'Purāṇa Digests'. He has tried to explain the philosophical and religious aspect of Tāntric life.

CHINTĀMAṆI, T.R. A Sanskrit scholar, who ed. and pub. Kaushītaki-gṛīhyasūtra (Madras, 1944).

CHINTĀMAṆI BHATṬA (fl. 13th cent.). A Sanskrit author, who is supposed to have been responsible for the Ornatior recension of Śuka-saptatī (q.v.).

CHINTĀMAṆI BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is: Gobhila-gṛīhyasūtram (with Bhattanārāyaṇa's commentary, ed. with notes and indices; 1982).

CHINTĀMAṆI DĪKSHITA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of astronomical works: Sūrya-siddhānta-sūtrīṇi and Golānanda.

CHINTĀMAṆI MĀDHAVA GOLE. A modern Sanskrit author of Madana Latikā (Bombay, 1911, a novel).

CHINTĀMAṆI RĀMACHANDRA SAHAS-RABUDHE. A Sanskrit writer, whose Rāshṭrīyopanishad (1919) gives the principles of political science in the Upanishadic style.

CHIRAṆJIVA (fl. c. 1731). A Sanskrit writer, also known as Rāmadeva or Vāmadeva; he was grandson of Kāśīnātha, the great palmist of Bengal. He was patronised by Yaśavantasiṃha, Naib Dewan of Decca about 1731. His chief works are: Śrīngāra-rajinī (a collection of erotic verses), Mādhava-champū (based on the Bhāgavata), Vṛtta-ratnāvalī (a work on prosody with illustrations in his patron's praise), Kāvya-vilāsa (in two parts dealing with Rasa and Alankāra) and Lulvanmoda-tāraṅgiṇī (a humorous quasi-dramatic work, wherein he brings home the truth of different religions and philosophical doctrines); CHIRAPAT PRAPANDVIDYA. A modern Indologist of Thailand, whose chief work is Cultural Study of the Dharmāraṇya-purāṇa.

CHITALE, K.W. A Modern Sanskrit author, whose chief work is Tilaka-charitra, a prose biography of Tilak (q.v.).

CHITRABHĀNU SEN (1927-). A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Dictionary of Vedic Sacrifices and A Dictionary of the Vedic Rituals : Based on the Śrauta and Grhya Sūtras (1978)

CHITRAPATI (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Ujjayinī-siddhanta-pīṇṣha, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

CHITSUKHĀCHĀRYA (fl. 12th cent.). A Vedantic Sanskrit scholar, whose works are: Advaita-pradīpikā and Tattva-pradīpikā. He is a well-known commentator on Śaṅkara's comm. on the Brahma-sūtra and on Śrīharsha's Khandanakhaṇḍakhādya (q.v.).

CHITSUKHI. A Sanskrit work, which is a popular name of Chitrsukhāchārya's Pratyak-tattva-dīpikā or Tattva-pradīpikā, a work on Advaita-vedānta.

CHITTIGUDUR VARADĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit poet, who in his Sushupti-vṛtta (1937) draws the past glory and the present gloom of India.

CHOKKANĀTHA. A Sanskrit court-poet and author of Kāntimati-pariṇaya (a semi-historical drama on the marriage of the author's patron Shāh-jī (r. 1687-1711) with Kāntimati, Sevantikā-pariṇaya (a drama describing the marriage of Basavarāja with Sevantikā; the hero being identified with Basavappanāyaka, the ruler of Keladi (r. 1697-1714) and Rāsa-vilāsa (a bhāṇa type of drama on an erotic theme).

CHOMSKY, NOAM. A modern distinguished mathematical grammarian, who has opened up new approaches in linguistic analysis with the aid of International Business Machines and has applied the same to the grammarian Pāṇini.

CHONGSAKDI DIPAYAGASORN. A modern Sanskrit scholar of the National Library, Bangkok who has worked on some of the Sanskrit Inscriptions of Thailand.

CHOPRA, T.R. A modern scholar, whose chief study is The Kūsa-jātaka (Hamburg, 1966).

CHOS-KYI 'OD-ZER. A Mongolian scholar, who tr. from Tibetan into Mongolian, The Bodhicaryavatāra of Śāntideva (1305) and wrote an extensive comm. on it in Mongolian (1312). He also wrote "The Twelve Deeds of Buddha", "Ode to Mahakali" and the first Mongolian grammar, under the strong influence of linguistic school, particularly the grammar of Pāṇini.

CHOUDHURY, JOTINDRA BIMAL. A modern Sanskrit author of Bhārata-rājendram (published Pāṭalaśrī, January 1968 ff.), which dramatises the life of Dr. Rājendra Prasād, the first President of India and Bhārata-vivekam (1963), a drama on Svāmī Vivekānanda. In collaboration with his wife, he wrote a drama, Bhāratūchāryam (Pāṭalaśrī, July 1970 ff.), on Dr. S. Rādhākrishṇan, the second President of India.

CHCĪPĀMAṆI (or Āscharya-chūḍāmaṇi). A seven-act Sanskrit drama by Śaktibhadra (fl. 8th or 9th cent., q.v.), which is regarded by some as the oldest South Indian drama.

Based on the Rāmāyaṇa, it presents the coming of Śūrpaṇakhā into Rāma's hut, her mutilation, the abduction of Sītā by Ravaṇa, Hanumān's visit to Laṅkā, and the final scenes where Rāma, after his victory over Ravaṇa, ascertains Sītā's purity by the fire-ordeal and a message delivered by Nārada. The play derives its name from the miraculous crest-jewel and ring given to Rāma and Sītā by the hermits.

CHŪLA-VAMSA. A Pali work, which is a sort of supplement to the Mahāvamśa (q.v.), parts of which appear to have been composed by different persons at different periods. According to a Ceylonese tradition, its composition was commenced by Thera Dhammakitti, who is said to have come from Burma to Ceylon at the time of king Parāhramabāhu II in the 13th century. While the Dīpavamśa and Mahāvamśa end with the reign of king Mahāsena (4th cent. A.D.), the Chūlavamśa begins with the reign of Mahāsena's son Sirimeghavamśa and ends with Sirivikkama-rājasīha, giving an account of more than a hundred kings.

CHŪLA-SADDA-NĪTI. A Pali grammatical work based on the Saṅkha-nīti (q.v.).

CHULLA DHAMMAPĀLA. A Pali writer, a disciple of Ānanda and probable author of the Sachcha-saṅkhepa (q.v.), which according to Saddhamma-suṅgaha (q.v.), was composed by Ānanda. The Gandhavaṁsa and the Colophon, however, support the authorship of Chulla Dhammapāla, who appears to have been earlier than Anuruddha (12th cent.).

CHULLA-GANDHAVAMSA. Same as Gandhavaṁsa (q.v.).

CHULLA-NIDDESA. A Buddhist canonical work in Pali, referring to 500 Jātaka stories. See Niddesa.

CHULLA-NIRUTTI-GANDHA. A Pali grammatical work, attributed to Kachchāyana (q.v.).

CHULLAVAGGA. See Vinaya-piṭaka.

CHCṆAPĪ. An Apabhraṁśa work in 31 Paḍyas by Bhaṭṭāraka Vinayachandra (fl. 1150-96), which is a didactic poem meant for householders.

CHURCH, CORNELIA D. (Mrs). An American Indologist, who has worked on the concept of Yugas in her thesis 'The Yugas or Four Cosmic Ages as found in the Purāṇas' (1974).

CLARKE, WALTER EUGENE. A modern American Indologist, who was interested among other subjects, in Indian Mathematics (Āryabhaṭīya); he held the Chair of Sanskrit at Chicago University. Besides two big volumes on Two Lamaistic Pantheons (Harvard), he is the author of articles: Māgadhi and Ardhmāgadhi and The Sandalwood and Peacocks of Ophir.

CLAYTON, R.B. An Indologist, whose chief work Rigveda and Vedic Religion (1913) vindicates cates Christianity.

CLOTHEY, FREDERICK W. A modern American Indologist, whose work is on the cult of Kumāra (Murugan) in South India.

CLOUGH, BENJAMIN. A Western missionary, who has pub., A Compendious Pali Grammar with a copious Vocabulary in the same Language (Colombo, 1824), which consists of three parts: a grammar based on the Pali grammar Bālāvatāra, a collection of roots based on the Dhātumaijushā and a vocabulary based on the Abhidhānappadīpikā.

COBURN, THOMAS B. An American Indologist, who teaches in the St. Lawrence University. His latest work is: Devi-Māhātmya: The Crystallization of the Goddess Tradition (1984). He specializes in Buddhist and Hindu religious traditions and mythology.

COIDES, G. A French Indologist, whose works are: Les États Hindoues d'Indochine et d'Indonésie etc. (Paris, 1948) and Inscriptions du Cambodge (7 Vols., 1937-64).

COLEBROUX, FATHIER (fl. c. 1766) A Christian missionary, who pointed out the remarkable similarity of Sanskrit to Greek and Latin nearly twenty years before Sir William Jones spoke in the third annual address to the Asiatic Society of Bengal in January, 1786. He spoke of the common source of Sanskrit, Greek and Latin, and also Gothic and Celtic and even Old Persian, and made the historic pronouncement about Sanskrit being more perfect than Greek, more copious than Latin, and more exquisitely refined than either.

COLEBROOKE, SIR HENRY THOMAS (1765-1836). An Indologist, who was a member of the Superior Court of Appeal in Calcutta and Professor of Sanskrit in the College of Fort William. In 1805 he wrote

'On the Vedas, or Sacred Writings of the Hindus', an essay and thereby became entitled to the distinction of being the first Western scholar ever to write about the Veda. He speaks of the four Vedas, the Vedic rishis, the various Vedic schools, the Vedic commentaries, the authority of the Vedas, the Aitareya, Sāṅkhya and the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇas, the Sūtras, the importance of Nirukta and of Jyotisha. Whatever information about the Veda, Colebrooke has given in his essay, is generally correct, but his writing also shows that he had not made any deep study of the Veda. His other works are: On Sanskrit and Prakrit Languages (Asiatic Researches, VIII, 1801), Observations on Sects of Jains (Asiatic Researches, IX, 1807), On Sanskrit and Prakrit Poetry (Asiatic Researches, X, 1803), A Digest of Hindu Law on Contracts and Successions (1797-98; tr. of a composition, prepared by native scholars, on the law of succession and contract from the Indian law books, 4 Vols.), Miscellaneous Essays (on various subjects including Vaishnavism and the coins of Bengal Sultanas), Grammar of the Sanskrit Language, ed. of Hitopadeśa, with introductory remarks, ed. of Amarakośa with marginal tr., ed. of Śatoku-trayam of Bhartṛhari (1804), Eng. tr. of Sāṅkhya-kārikā of Īśvarakṛishṇa (1837), Eng. tr. of two treatises on Hindu Law of Inheritance (1819) and a treatise on mensuration based on Sanskrit works, with a dissertation on science as known to Hindus (1817).

COLTMAN, DEREK. An American scholar, who has tr. J. Varenne's Yoga and the Hindu Tradition (Chicago, 1976).

CONE, MARGARET. See Gombrich, R.F.

CONZE, EDWARD (1904-). An English Indologist, who has pub. a comprehensive survey of the Prajñāpāramitā literature (The Hague, 1960), eds. and trs. of the Abhisamayālaṅkāra (Roma, 1954), Vajra- chchhedikā (Roma, 1957), Ashṭasāhasrikā (Calcutta, 1958; new ed. together with tr. of the Ratnagunasamchaya-gāthā; Bolinas, 1973), Pañchaviṃśati-sāhasrikā, Ashṭadaśa-sāhasrikā (Roma, 1962) and a dictionary of Prajñāpāramitā literature (Tokyo, 1967); on many other aspects of Buddhist studies are : Buddhism : Its Essence and Development (Oxford 1951), Buddhist Texts through the Ages, Buddhist Scriptures (1959), A Short History of Buddhism (1961), Buddhist Thought in India (London, 1962), and Thirty Years of Buddhist Studies (Oxford, 1967). His latest work is The Large Sūtra on Perfect Wisdom (dealing with early Mahāyāna doctrine, 1979)

COOMARASWĀMY, ANANDA K. (1877-1947). A celebrated Indologist, who was for long (1917-47) Keeper of Asiatic Art in the Fine Arts Museum at Boston. Indian renaissance owes a great part of its awareness of the Indian heritage in art to him, who did not live in India and wrote from a foreign country. His chief works are : Aims of Indian Art (1908), History of Indian and Indonesian Art (London, 1927), Transformation of Nature in Art (Cambridge, Mass., 1934), Elements of Buddhist Iconography (1935), Dance of Śiva (Bombay, 1948), Myths of the Hindus and Buddhists (with Sister Nivedita), Hinduism and Buddhism and A New Approach to Vedas. Coomaraswamy later developed deep interest in Christian and mediaeval aesthetic, similar in approach to the Indian, and in comparative religion and traditional culture, on all of which he produced several illuminating expositions. Mrs. Coomaraswamy was working on these writings to bring out the edition of the collected works of Coomaraswamy, but before she could complete her work, she passed away in 1970. The entire material is now with the Princeton University.

COOMARASWAMY, E.M. A Ceylonese Indologist, whose chief works are : Eng. tr. of Dīpavaṃśa (Colombo, 1901) and of Mahāvāṃśa (1908).

CORDIER, PĀLMYR (1871-1914). A Tibetologist, whose chief work is a very accurate catalogue of the Tibetan Tanjur (Paris, 1909-15).

CORREIA-AFONSO, JOHN. A foreign scholar, whose chief work is : Historical Research in India (1979).

COSTER, G. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Yoga and Western Psychology (Delhi, 1968).

COULSON, M. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are : Teach yourself Sanskrit (London, 1977) and Three Sanskrit Plays in Translation.

COWARD, HAROLD GEORGE (1936-). A Canadian Indologist, who is Head of the Religious Studies Department and Director of the Calgary Institute for the Humanities, University of Calgary, Calgary. His chief works are : Bhartṛihari (1976), Psychological Epistemology : A Critical Review of the Empirical Literature and Theoretical Issues (jointly; 1978), Sphota Theory of Language (1980), Religious Pluralism and the World Religions (Madras, 1983), The Philosophy of Language (with K. Kunjunni Raja; Princeton, 1984), Pluralism : Challenge to World Religions (1985), Jung and Eastern Thought (Albany, 1985), Mystics and Scholars (ed. with T.M. Penelhum; 1977), Revelation in Indian Thought (with K. Sivaraman; 1977), Language in Indian Philosophy and Religion (ed., 1978), Religion and Ethnicity (ed. with L.S. Kawamura; 1978), Humanities in the Present Day (ed. with John Woods; 1979), Scholarly Communication (ed. 1980), Studies in Indian Thought : The Collected Papers of Professor T.R.V. Murti (ed. 1983), and Traditions in Contact and Change (jointly; 1983). Associated with many Research Projects, Coward continues his studies in the areas of Indian Philosophy and Religion, Religious Pluralism and psychology of Religion.

COWELL, E.B. (1826-1903). An English Indologist, whose chief works are : Eng. tr. of Buddhist Mahāyāna Texts (with Max Müller and J. Takakusu ; in Sacred Books of the East Series; Cowell's contribution was tr. of Buddha-charita of Asvaghosha), ed. of Divyāvadāna, ed. and Eng. tr. of Jātaka (jointly with various scholars, 3 Vols.) and ed. and Eng. tr. of Vararuchi's Prākṛita-prakāśa, a grammatical work, along with the oldest comm. on it called Manoramā by Bhāmaha (London, 1868), Eng. tr. of Sarva-darśano-saṅgraha by Mādhava-Sāyaṇa (jointly with A.F. Gough), ed. and Eng. tr. of The Twelve Principal Upanishads (with Rājendralal Mitra), ed. of Rigveda-saṃhitā (Vol. V), ed. and Eng. tr. of Kaushītaki-brāhmaṇa-upanishad and of Aphorisms of Śāṅḍilya. He pub. also a Catalogue of the Buddhist Sanskrit Manuscripts

COX, GEORGE W. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Mythology of the Aryan Nations.

CSEHI, ANDRAS. A Hungarian scholar, whose chief work is 'Indian Histories and Fables of Bidpai and Lokaman (1783).

CSOMA DE KOROS, ALEXANDER (1784-1842). A celebrated Hungarian Indologist, who in 1819 left his native country, Hungary, in order to find the ancient homeland of his people and the places where they were staying during their wandering towards West. After three years of wandering, he arrived at Ladakh, Western Tibet, where he realized that the Europeans did not know the language and literature of the highly cultured Tibetan people. Between 1823 and 1830, with the help of lamas in monasteries, he completed the Tibetan Grammar, Tibetan-English Dictionary, Vocabulary of Buddhist Terminology and a number of articles. In 1831 he descended from the Himalayas and began publishing his works in Calcutta. On the occasion of his bicentenary in 1984, his collected works have been published in a reprint edition. A Commemoration Volume, entitled Tibetan and Buddhist-Studies ed. by L. Ligeti has also been published. Besides the above, his works : The Life and Teachings of Buddha (1836; reprint 1957) and Tibetan Buddhism (1834) are important. He did pioneering work on Tibetan Buddhism and is regarded as the founder of Tibetan philology.

CUNNINGHAM, ALEXANDER (1814-93). A celebrated Indologist, who was Father of Indian Archaeology, Numismatics, and Art History ; it was under his leadership in 1861, that the Indian Archaeological Survey was constituted. By his ceaseless efforts, he has brought to light a large number of ancient sites, Buddhist establishments, sculptures and inscriptions that lay unnoticed in the country. The exhaustive accounts of the explorations undertaken by him between 1860 and 1884 are contained in the 24 volumes called the 'Archaeological Reports'. He made also a comprehensive study of Yuan Chwang's Travels to India and back. His other chief works are : Ancient Geography of India (Vol. I, London, 1871), The Bhilsa Topes (1854), The Stūpa of Bharbut (London, 1879), Book of Indian Eras (1883), Coins of Ancient India, Coins of Indo-Scythians, Sakas and Kushāns, Later Indo-scythians, Corpus Inscriptionum Indicarum (Vol. I), Coins of Mediaeval India and Coins of Alexander's Successors in the East.

D

DAALEN, L.A. VAN. A modern Indologist of Netherlands, whose present project is 'Studies on the Texts of the Rāmāyaṇa'.

DABBS, JACK A. A modern Indologist whose History of the discovery and exploration of Chinese Turkestan (The Hague, '963) mentions expeditions to Central Asia for discovering manuscripts and other material.

DAFFINA. A modern Italian Indologist, who has worked on the Samādhirāja-sūtra.

DAFTARY, K.L. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Upanishad-ārtha-vyākhyā (1955-56) and Astronomical Method (Nagpur, 1942; dealing with the astronomical method and its application to the chronology of ancient India).

DAGENS, BRUNO. A French scholar, who has studied Ajitāgama and Rauravāgama from the architectural point of view DAHAMUHAHAHO. Same as Setubandha (q.v.).

DAHLKE, PAUL (1865-1928). A German Indologist, who, on a journey to Asia, became acquainted with Buddhism. He learnt Pali and tr. the Dhammapada and parts of the Dīghanikāya and Majjhima-nikāya into German. Dahlke wrote several works in German, which were tr. into English as : Buddhist Essays (London, 1908), Buddhist Stories (1913), Buddhism and Science (London, 1913), Buddhism as Religion and as Moral Teaching (1923), and Buddhism and its Place in the Mental Life of Mankind (1928). He contributed many papers to the journal he founded: "New Buddhist Journal". His lectures were published in 1928 and his last book in Eng. tr. was : "Buddhism as a doctrine of reality and as a way of life" (1928). In 1924 Dahlke had built a Buddhist Centre in Berlin-Frohnau, situated on a hillock in a large park. It was the chief Buddhist centre between the two Wars.

DAHLMANN, JOSEPH (1861-1930). A German-speaking Indologist, who studied Oriental languages in Vienna and in Berlin during 1891-1900. He obtained his doctorate in Berlin and published a number of books. His book in German (Eng. tr. The Mahabharata as an epic and a Lawbook) (1892) maintains that the Mahābhārata is the work of a single author. A number of scholars, among them M. Winternitz, H. Jacobi, J. Jolly, and W. Cartellieri opposed this theory; and the controversy resulted in the so-called "Dahlmann literature", as Winternitz termed the papers written to refute this view. Dahlmann's book in German (Eng. tr. as "Nirvana, a Study in the Early History of Buddhism"; 1896) is a treatise on Indian philosophy from the Upanishads to Buddhism. According to Dahlmann, the concept of Nirvana has been borrowed from Brahmanical philosophy and corresponds to Mukti (deliverance). He believed that Vedānta and Buddhism are both based on the older Sāṅkhya system.

His German work : "The Idealism of Indian Philosophy of Religion" (1901)

DALES, GEORGE F. A modern American

Indologist, whose paper 'The Mythical Massacre at Mohenjo-Daro' (University of Pennsylvania Museum Bulletin Expedition: Spring, 1964) effectively explodes the myth of R̥gvedic Indra having destroyed the Indus Valley cities.

DALĪPĀDATTOPĀDHYĀYA, the late. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Municharī-tāmṛita deals with the life and mission of Svāmī Dayānanda Sarasvatī. Dalīpadatta was a teacher at Jwālāpur Mahāvidyālaya, Jwālāpur (Hardwar).

DALLAṆA (Ḍalbana or Dalhana; fl. 13th or 11th cent.). A celebrated Sanskrit commentator on Susruta-saṁhita, his comm. being Nibandha-saṁgraha. Son of Bīrapala, he was a Brāhmaṇa of Ankolī.

DALLAPICCOLA, A A German scholar of Heidelberg, who has specialized in Ragamala and Paithan paintings; she has pub. a monograph as well (Wiesbaden, 1980).

DAMAYANTĪ-KATHĪ. Another name of Nala-champū. (q.v.).

DAMDINSUREN, TS. A modern Mongolian scholar, who, by studying the Mongolian and Tibetan versions of 'Vikramāditya trilogy', '70 Tale of Parrot', 'Stories from Pañchatantra' and 'The Tales of Vetāla' establishes the Indo-Mongolian literary ties. His monograph 'Ramāyana in Mongolia' was pub. recently in Mongolian. He has also written a number of articles on Buddhism, etc.

DĀMODARA (fl. 17th cent.). Author of Sanskrit Saṁgītadarpaṇa (q.v.), which is a well-known work on music and dance. Also called Chatura Dāmodara, he was one of the connoisseurs of music at the court of Emperor • Jahangīr or Shah Jahan. He is supposed to be a descendant of Kallinātha (q.v.).

DĀMODARA GUPTA. A Sanskrit poet, who was minister of Jayapīḍa of Kashmir (779-813). He composed the Kuṭṭanimata (q.v.), a work on Indian pornography. Kalhaṇa mentions him as a poet, and Mammaṭa and Ruyyaka cite verses from him, as do the anthologies, showing that his work won considerable fame.

DAMODARA MIŚRA. A Sanskrit redactor, of Hamumannaṭaka (q.v.).

DĀMODAR SHĀSTRĪ (fl. 1st half of 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Puri, Orissa, whose chief work is Bhārata-gaurava on India's greatness.

DAMSTEEGT, TH. A modern Indologist of Netherlands, whose chief work is Epigraphical Hybrid Sanskrit (1978).

DĀNA-KELI-KAUMUDĪ. A one-act Sanskrit drama of the Bhāṇika type by Rūpa Gosvāmīn (q.v.), in which Radhā is proposed to be given as a toll to Kṛṣṇa.

DĀNA-KRĪYĪ-KAUMUDĪ A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Govindānanda (q.v.), dealing with various gifts.

DĀNA-RATNĪKARA. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest, forming a part of Chaṇḍeśvara's Smṛiti-ratnakara (q.v.). It consists of chapters called Tarāṅgas and deals with various kinds of gifts and matters connected with them.

DĀNA-SĀGARĀ. A extensive Sanskrit Smṛiti digest in 70 sections by Vallālasena (q.v.), which describes 1375 kinds of gifts. The chief topics dealt with are: eulogy of Brāhmaṇas, merit accruing from gifts, proper time and place for gifts, bad donations, rites and procedure to be followed in making and accepting gifts.

DANDAVIVEKA. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Vardhamāna (q.v.), which is a part of the Smṛiti-tattva-viveka. In its seven chapters, it deals with penal offences, the propriety of inflicting punishments and the different forms of punishment.

DĀNDEKAR, RĀMACHANDRA NĀRĀYAṆ (1909-). A celebrated Vedic scholar, who is associated with the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. His chief works are : Progress of Indic Studies (1917-42; 1942), Vedic Bibliography (vol. I, 1946, vol. II, 1961, vol. III, 1973, vol. IV, 1985; covering all the work done in the field of Vedic studies), The Śrauta Ritual and Vājapeya Sacrifice (in collaboration, 1955), Vedic Religion and Mythology (1965), Vedadarśana (Lad Memorial Lectures, 1966), Śrautikośa (vols. I-II), Some Aspects of the History of Hinduism (1967), Recent Trends in Indology (1978), Vedic Mythological Tracts (1979), Insights into Hinduism (1979), Exercises on Indology (1981), The Age of the Guptas and Other Essays (1982) (the last four vols. I-IV of his Select Writings) and Amyīta-dhārā (Dandekar Felicitation Volume; 1984, ed. S D. Joshi). Some of his other publications are : Post-Vedic Literature, Hinduism and Modern Culture, Gods in Hindu Thought, Some Aspects of the Indo-Mediterranean Contacts, Vasishṭha as Religious Conciliator, Varuṇa, Vasishṭha and Bhakti, Proceedings of the Seminar in Prakrit Studies (1970; ed. with A.M. Ghatage), etc. His important articles are : "Rudra in the Veda", "New Light on the Vedic God, Sāvitri" and "A Decade of Vedic Studies in India and Abroad" (1975). He ed. the Śālya and Anuśāsanā parvans in the critical ed. of the Mahābhārata, pub. by the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute.

As the original concept of a particular Vedic deity differs from scholar to scholar, Dāndekar has suggested that for a view to be acceptable, it must satisfy the following criteria : (i) it must enable one to give a complete picture of the deity, found in the Rigveda; (ii) it must enable us to explain the origin and development of the deity in consonance with history and comparative mythology; (iii) it must satisfactorily explain the nature and the status that the deity is known to have in later literature and mythology; and lastly (iv) it must not run counter to sound philological principles.

DANḌIN (fl. 6th cent. A.D. ?). A Sanskrit poet and one of the earliest writers on Poetics. The view that Daṇḍin was a resident of Kāñchī, that he flourished under the Pallava kings, and that Ratnavarman (or Rājavarman) referred to by him is a Pallava prince, is based not on very firm ground. He is earlier than Bāṇa (fl. 630-45), and even Subandhu (fl. 608-9), as is suggested by his comparative simplicity. The geographical data in the Daśakumāra-charita also seem to point to a date anterior to the empire of Harshavardhana. His Kāvya-darśa is very probably earlier than Bhāmaha's work.

Traditionally, Daṇḍin is the author of Daśakumāra-charita, Kāvya-darśa (qq.v.) and one more. Pischel takes the third work to be the Mṛichchhakaṭika (q.v.) while others hold that it is the Chhandovichi (q.v.) that is referred to in the Kāvya-darśa. There is also an allusion to the Kalāparichchheda in the Kāvya-darśa, but it is more likely that both the Chhandovichi and Kalāparichchheda are merely the names of the chapters—and not independent works—which Daṇḍin wanted to include in his Kāvya-darśa; while Daṇḍi's authorship of the Mṛichchhakaṭika becomes highly doubtful since the verse on which the theory is based is found to be common not only to the Mṛichchhakaṭika and the Kāvya-darśa, but also to the Chārudatta which is definitely from the pen of Bhāsa. From quotations in Bhoja's Śrīngāra-prakāśa it would appear that the third work of Daṇḍin is the Dvisandhāna-kāvya, a poem with double entendre narrating simultaneously the stories of the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata. There are various imitations of this Dvisundhānakāvya abounding in greater feats of artificiality as seen in what are called the *Vilomakāvya*s. The Avantisundarikāthā (q.v.) is another work which has been ascribed to Daṇḍin by those scholars who doubt his authorship of Daśakumāracharita. But it is difficult to accept the former as a work of Dandin and reject his authorship of the latter. Of the three parts of the Daśakumāra-charita, the Pūrvapīṭhikā (Introduction) and the Uttarapīṭhikā (Conclusion) are not from the pen of Daṇḍin, but this does not go against the Daśakumāra-charita proper being the work of Daṇḍin.

Daṇḍin is reputed for his elegant use of words (pada-lālitya) and is the precursor of the Riti school which was developed by Vāmana; his most outstanding contribution to poetics is the concept of Guṇa. In his definition of poetry, Daṇḍin gives more importance to the word-element than to the sense-element.

DANGE, SADĀSHIV A. (1922-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Critiques on Sanskrit Drama (1963), Pastoral Symbolism from the Rīgveda (1970), Vedic Concept of 'Field' and the Divine Fructification (1971), Cultural Sources from the Veda, Legends in the Mahābhārata and Sexual Symbolism from the Vedic Ritual (1979); he has written articles on Purāṇic studies as well.

DANI, A.H. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Indian Palaeography (Oxford, 1963).

DANIELOU, A. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Le polytheisme hindou (Leiden, 1960).

DANTADHĀTU-VAMSA. A Pali epic in 5 cantos by the monk Dhammakitti.

It describes the history of the tooth-relic of the Buddha. According to this work, the tooth-relic was brought to Ceylon by prince Dantakumāra of Ujjain from Dantapura, the capital of Kāliṅga. There is also description of Buddha's early life, his work in Ceylon, the distribution of Buddha's relics, and the various miracles wrought by the relic. The epic is a specimen of fine poetry written in different metres. Its language is artificial Pali having long compounds.

The work was composed originally in the Sinhalese in the first half of the 4th cent. A.D. but later on was rendered into Māgadhī by Dhammakitti in the 13th cent. A.D. at the instance of Parakkamo or Parākramabāhu II, the Commander-in-Chief of Ceylon.

DĀRĀ SHUKOH (d. 1659). A Mughul Prince and son of Emperor Shah Jahān, who is the author of a Sanskrit praśasti in honour of Nṛsiṃha Sarasvatī of Benares; the work is in rhythmic prose full of alliterations. In the introduction to his translation of 52 Upanishads into Persian, Dārā Shukoh writes that some of the most learned Paṇḍits and Sannyāsīs of Benares explained to him the difficult passages of the Upanishads in A.D. 1656. He sought to bring together Islam and Hinduism in his work, The Mingling of the Two Oceans (Majma-ul-Bahrain).

DARGYAY, L. A modern Indologist of Austria, whose chief work is Die Legende von den sieben Prinzessinnen (Saptakumārikā Avadāna; Wien, 1978).

DARPA-DALANA. A Sanskrit poetical work by Kshemendra (q.v.). In its seven sections, it denounces vanity born of lineage, wealth, learning, beauty, valour, charity and penance.

DARŚANĀNANDA SARASVATĪ (b 1861). A Vedic scholar, who was born at Jagraon in Ludhiana district of Panjab. He was the founder of Jwālāpur Mahāvidyālaya, Jwālāpur (Hardwar) and established also many other Gurukulas. He was the author of some 200 pamphlets on Vedic subjects, e.g., 'Vedon kā Mahatva' (importance of the Vedas), Vedon kā Vishaya' (the subjects of the Vedas). He spent all his money, some 50 to 60 thousand rupees in publication of 50 Sanskrit works, which he distributed free of cost or at a nominal price.

DARŚANA-SĀRA. A Sanskrit Kāvya by Devasenāchārya (q.v.), composed in 933; it discusses the doctrines of the Digambara Jains.

DAS, A.C. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Ṛigvedic India (1921) and Ṛigvedic Culture (1925).

DAS, S.C. See Sarat Chandra Das.

DAS GUPTA, S.N. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : History of Indian Philosophy (5 Vols.), A History of Sanskrit Literature (Classical Period; 1947, jointly with S.K. De, in which there are many fine appreciations of poets with their limitations duly brought out) and Fundamentals of Indian Art (1960).

DAŚAGĪTIKĀ-SŪTRA. A Sanskrit work on astronomy by Āryabhaṭa I (q.v.), which gives numerical notation.

DAŚAKUMĀRA-CHARITA. A prose romance in Sanskrit by Daṇḍin (q.v.). As the title implies, there are to be accounts of the adventures of ten princes; eight of these are given in the eight Uchchhāvāsas which make up the work proper; a Pūrvapīṭhikā or Introductory portion supplies the history of two more as well as the framework, and an Uttarapīṭhikā or the concluding portion completes the tale of Viśruta left incomplete in the last Uchchhāvāsa of the main text. The Pūrvapīṭhikā and the Uttarapīṭhikā are extant in varied forms and are later additions.

The king of Magadha, Rājahaṃsa, defeated by the Malwā king, takes refuge in the Vindhya mountains, where a son is born, named Rājavāhana. There are also brought to the king in succession nine hapless sons of noble and valiant but unfortunate kings, and the ten young princes (including Rājavāhana) grow up together. When of age, they set out individually on a campaign of conquest. It is on their return and being again reunited, they relate to each other their strange adventures. This device gives a sort of unity to diverse stories, which treat of different types of men and women belonging to all classes of society and in different walks of life.

The prince, Rājavāhana meets one Mataṅga, a kirāta, though in dress a Brāhmaṇa, who induces the prince to accompany him to Pātāla (nether world) where the queen offers her hand and kingdom to Mataṅga. In gratitude for accompanying him, Mataṅga gives the prince a magic jewel, which appeases hunger, thirst and suffering; the prince returns to the upper world and proceeds to Ujjain, where he marries Avantisundarī, the daughter of that king. The tales of other princes are also curious: expert thieves turn the millionaires into beggars and vice versa; where the rope that binds the captives changes into a beautiful girl; where a magician carries a lovely maiden to immolate her; where fervent lovers, in a dream or by a prophecy, are urged on to meet the beloved; where Buddhist nuns serve as go-between for courtesans or help an injured wife to punish her husband or are asked to aid in brutal seductions—in short, love appears in its lightest and most passionate form as an affair of the senses.

At the end of their tales of adventures, the princes capture Malwā and to pay their homage, proceed to Pushpapura, where king Rājahaṃsa and his queen live. The king distributes among them the various kingdoms they have conquered; Rājavāhana becomes king of the united kingdom of Pushpapura and Ujjain. Guided by Rājavāhana, the princes rule over their kingdoms just and enjoy pleasures not easily attainable even by Indra.

Dandin shows in this romance great powers of characterization; as also he draws realistic scenes of life. His style is easy and unaffected and full of wit and humour

DASĀO. See Chheya-sutta.

DAŚAPADĀRTHA-ŚĀSTRA. See Chandra.

DAŚARŪPAKA (Daśarūpa). A Sanskrit work on dramaturgy by Dhanañjaya (q.v.), which contains also sections on Rasa and allied topics. Taking its name from the ten primary forms of drama as mentioned in the Nāṭya-śāstra (q.v.), the work, divided into four books, deals with: subject-matter and plot of the drama; the hero, heroine and other characters, the language of the drama; the prologue and its varieties and different kinds of drama; and emotions and sentiments. It was commented upon by Dhanka (perhaps author's younger brother) in Avaloka.

DAŚASLOKĪ. A Sanskrit philosophical tract of ten verses in which Nimbārka (q.v.) elucidates his view of the distinctness of Jīva, Īśvara and Jagat.

DAŚĀŚRUTA-SKANDHA. Same as Āyāradasāo (q.v.).

DAŚAVAİKĀLIKA. See Dasaveyāliya.

DAŚĀVATĀRA-CHARITA. A Sanskrit work by Kshemendra (q.v.), written in 1066, which extols the ten incarnations of Viṣṇu in separate cantos. In canto IX, the Buddha and Kṛiṣṇa legends have been intermingled.

DASAVEYĀLIYA. See Mūlasutta.

DATE, V.H. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Brahma Yoga of the Gītā (1971), Vedānta Explained (2 vols., 1973) and The Yoga of the Saints (1974).

DĀṬHĀ-DHĀTU-VAMSA. Probably identical with Dāṭhā-vamśa (q.v.).

DĀṬHĀ-VAMSA. See Dantadhātu-vamśa.

DATT PANDEY. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Pallava Paneakam (Hoshiarpur, 1981) is a collection of five one-act plays of different varieties.

DATTĀ An original Sanskrit novel, which appeared in 'Sanskṛita-sāhitya Parishat Patrikā' (1935). It is a story of absorbing interest about the friendship that Jagadīśa, Vanamāli and Rāsa Vihārin enjoyed. Their school-days, their married life and the relationship between their children are all narrated in a realistic manner.

DATTA, B. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Extraordinary Scientific Knowledge in Vedic Works (Delhi, 1963).

DATTA, DINES CHANDRA. A modern Sanskrit poet of Bengal and author of Subhāsha-gauravam in 174 verses (1968), which eulogises Subhāshachandra Bose.

DATTAKA-CHANDRIKĀ. A Sanskrit work on adoption, which is regarded in Bengal as the most authoritative work on the subject. Generally ascribed to Kuvera, it was perhaps written by Raghumaṇi (q.v.), spiritual preceptor of the king of Nadīyā.

DATTAKA-MĪMĀṂSĀ. A well-known Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Nandapaṇḍita (q.v.), which deals with all aspects of adoption and was considered as the most authoritative work in Mithilā and Benares.

DATTĀTREYA VASUDEVA ŚĀSTRĪ (1863-1918). Sanskrit writer of Pangrada in Konkan and author of Gaṅgagūṇādarśa, wherein two Gandharvas Hāhā and Hūhū speak of the merits and demerits of the river Gaṅgā and finally establish its greatness, sanctity and purity.

DATTILA. Author of Sanskrit Dattilam, a well-known work on music. Traditionally son of Mataṅga, he was one of the immediate disciples of Bharata, as mentioned in the Nāṭya-sāstra (q.v.).

DATTILAM. A Sanskrit work on music and dancing, by Dattilāchārya, perhaps a pupil of Bharata (q.v.).

DAVANE, G.V. An Indian scholar, whose chief work is Nominal Composition in Middle Indo-Aryan (Poona, 1956).

DAVE, K.N. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is : Birds in Sanskrit Literature (1985).

DAVID-NEEL, A. A modern French Indologist, whose chief work is Buddhism : Its Doctrines and Methods.

DAVIDSON, S.S. A modern scholar, who has pub. Index to the Journals of the Pali Text Society (1973) in collaboration with P.D. Ratnatunga (q.v.).

DAVA-SANĠGAHA. A Prakrit poem in 58 verses by Nemichandra, dealing with Jiva, Ajiva, means of salvation, didactic matters, meditation, etc. There are a Brihaḍ-dava-saṅgaha and a Laghudava-saṅgaha, the latter by the author himself.

DAVYA-SAHĀVA-PATĪŚA. A poem in Apabhraṃśa dohā by Devasena (q.v.).

DĀYABHĀGA. A Sanskrit work by Jimūta-vāhana (q.v.), which was probably a part of a bigger treatise called Dharma-ratna. A work of paramount authority, it deals with the inheritance and succession in respect of ordinary properties and Strīdhana (exclusive property of women), partition, etc. It is the principal authority in Bengal in modern law-courts.

DĀYABHĀGA-TĪKĀ. See Raghunandana.

DAYĀNAND BHĀRGAVA (1937-). A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Jaina Ethics, Jaina Tarka-bhāṣā (Eng. tr.), a detailed Hindi comm. on Tarka-saṅgraha and Jaina Jivana Darśana-ki Prīṣṭhabhūmi (in Hindi, 1975).

DAYĀNANDA-DIGVIJAYA. See Akhilānanda Śarmā Medhāvratā.

DAYĀNANDA-PRĀBHAVA. See Vāmanāchārya.

DAYĀNANDA SARASVATĪ, MAHARSHI (1824-83). Founder of the Ārya Samāj, a sage, a social reformer and a celebrated Vedic scholar, whose Sanskrit works are : Rigvedādīpīkṣā (pub. 1878), Sanskrit comm. on Rigveda (upto Maṇḍala VII. Sūkta 61. 2), Sanskrit comm. on Mādhyanandin text of Śukla Yajurveda, Ash'ādhyāvī-bhāṣya, Pañcha-Mahājajña-vidhi, Advaita-mata-khandana, Sikṣa'ṇṇatidhivanta-nivaraṇa (all pub. with Hindi trs. done by Paṇḍits under Dayānanda's general supervision), Bhāgavatākhaṇḍana, Unadikosa (Sanskrit comm.), Veda-vimuddhamata-khaṇḍanam, Chaturveda-vishaya-sūchi, amskṛita-vakya-prabodha and Sandhyā (1st ed.); the Satyārtha-prakāśa (his monumental work written in Hindi) has been tr. into many languages of the world.

Reacting against the ritualistic and historical interpretations of the Vedas made by Śivāṇa and other scholars, Dayānanda's comms. reveal that the Vedas possess not only spiritual knowledge but also the fundamental principles of all social and natural sciences and indeed contain all true knowledge; his impact is visible on many of the modern commentators of the Vedas.

According to Dayānanda, 'God is the primary cause of all true knowledge' and 'the Vedas are the books of true knowledge' which means the 'Doctrine of the Divine Origin of the Vedas'. His philosophy is generally termed 'Taitavāda' or Trinitism, which means the doctrine of three eternal; the three eternal are : (i) Parmātman: One Supreme Being or God (Greatest Spirit). (ii) Jīvātman : Souls or smaller spirits, and (iii) Prakṛiti: Matter, a general name given to that dead and inert matter of which world is made.

DAYĀPĀLA (fl. after 9th cent.). A Sanskrit grammarian, pupil of Matisāgara, and a fellow student of Vādirāja (or Jayasimha II, Chaulukya). He composed the Rūpasiddhi, an abridgement of Śākaṭyana's grammar, somewhat resembling the Laghukaumudi.

DE, S.K. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Early History of the Vaishnava Faith and Movement in Bengal (Calcutta, 1961), History of Sanskrit Literature (Calcutta, 1947; jointly with S.N. Das Gupta), History of Sanskrit Poetics (2 Vols., 1960), ed. of Vakroktijivita (Calcutta, 1961), Sanskrit Poetics as a Study of Aesthetics (1963), Ancient Indian Erotics and Erotic Literature (1959), Bengal's Contribution to Sanskrit Literature and Studies in Bengal Vaishnavism and Aspects of Sanskrit Literature. He ed. the Udyoga and Drona Parvans of the critical ed. of the Mahābhārata, pub. by the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute. See Hazra, R.C.

DEBES, P. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Das Dasein und seine Meisterung nach der Lehre des Buddha (Analysis of human existence according to the doctrine of the Buddha).

DEBRUNNER, ALBERT. See Wackernagel, Jacob.

DELARĀMĀ-KATHĀSĀRA. A Sanskrit poetical work, in 13 cantos by Bhaṭṭa Āhlādaka (q.v.), which describes how through the machinations of the courtesan named Delarāmā, two youthful brothers were separated from each other but they were finally re-united. It is the Sanskrit version of a story contained in Muslim works.

DELBRUECK, BERTHOLD (1842-1922). A German Indologist who devoted his whole life to the study of Indo-European languages. He specialized in comparative syntax. He showed that the syntax has the same importance as phonetics, accidence, and word formation in the study of Indo-European languages. His thesis in German was on the use of dative case in the hymns of the Rigveda; its rev. version appeared in 1869 as On the Indo-European, particularly the Vedic dative case. Delbrueck was appointed Reader in Jena in 1870 and became full Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Linguistics in 1873. He stayed in Jena till death in 1922.

Besides contributing articles on the origin of myth with the Indo-European people, on the relation between religion and mythology and names of relatives, his contribution to comparative antiquities, he ed. with E. Windisch, a journal (in German) on Syntactic Research. Its 1st volume was devoted to : On the Conjunctive and Optative in Sanskrit and Greek (1861). In 1874 Delbrueck brought out Das Altindische Verbum aus den Hymnen des Rigveda Dargestellt (The ancient Indian verb described according to the hymns of the Rigveda). In the Introduction, he stated that Pāṇini's source was the spoken language, not literature. He also mentioned the differences between older and younger hymns and the changes brought about by Sandhi. In 1876 appeared his Altindische Tempuslehre (Ancient Indian Tenses). He also wrote a paper on the Ancient Indian order of words according to the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa.

By far Delbrueck's chief works are : Altindische Syntax (Ancient Indian Syntax; 1888) and Vergleichende Syntax der Indogermanischen Sprachen (Comparative Syntax of Indo-European Languages; 3 vols., 1893, 1897, 1900). His Einleitung in das Studium der Indogermanischen Sprachen (Introduction to the Study of Indo-European Languages) was first pub. in 1880, a 6th ed. appeared in 1919, and the work was tr. into English, Italian, and Russian. His work (in German) on the Fundamental Problems of Linguistics, explained with regard to W. Wundt's psychology of language appeared in 1910.

E. Hermann wrote a biography (in German) of Delbrueck in 1973, which contains a list of Delbrueck's works.

DELLA PENNA, FRANCESCO ORAZIO (1680-1745). An Italian missionary, who lived in Lhasa and compiled a great Tibetan dictionary (of about 35,000 words) which was later tr. into English by F.C.G. Schroeter and pub. in Serampore in 1826 under the title A Dictionary of Bhotanta or Boutan Language.

DEMIEVILLE, PAUL (b. 1894). A French scholar whose Choix d'études bouddhiques (Leiden, 1973) contains some of his contributions to Buddhist studies. Along with J. Takakusu and Sylvain Lévi, he is the author of Tables de la Taisho Issaikyo (1931).

DEO, S.B. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : History of Jain Monachism (Poona, 1956), From History to Prehistory at Pava (with H.D. Sankalia, 1960) and Jaina Monastic Jurisprudence, Benares, 1960).

DEPERT, J. A German Indologist, whose chief work is Rudras Geburt: systematische

Untersuchung Zum Inzest in der Mythologie der Brāhmaṇas (Wiesbaden, 1977).

DERRITT, J. DUNCAN M. An Indologist, whose chief works are : Hindu Law : Past and Present (Calcutta, 1957) and Megasthenes, Der kleine Pauly (Stuttgart, 1969; giving recent literature on Megasthenes), Classical Law of India (Berkeley, 1972), History of Indian Law (Dharmaśāstra; Leiden, 1973), Dharmaśāstra and juridical Literature (Wiesbaden, 1973) and Bhāruchi's Commentary on the Manusmṛiti (2 Vols., Wiesbaden, 1974).

DESAI, M.D. An Indian scholar, whose chief works in Gujarati are : Jaina Gurjara Kavio (Vols. I-III, Bombay, 1925), and Jaina Sāhityāno Saṅkshipta Itihāsa (1933).

DESAI, P.B. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Jainism in South India and some Jaina Epigraphs (Sholapur, 1957).

DESCHI HSIAN-LIN. An Indologist, who has defended the view that the original Buddhist canon was written in Old-Ardhamāgadhī (Nachrichten der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften in Göttingen, 1944).

DESHMUKH, C.D. (1896-). A modern thinker, administrator and writer, whose Gāndhī-sūkti-muktāvalī (1957) renders into Sanskrit in diverse metres a hundred select sayings of Gandhiji. His collection, Saṃskṛta-kāvya-mālikā (1968) covering a wide spectrum of modern subjects, contemporary events and personalities shows how Sanskrit is adequate to any modern need including comments and repartees in the Parliament.

DESHMUKH, P.S. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Origin and Development of Religion in Vedic Literature (1933).

DESHPANDE, MĀDHAV V. A modern scholar, whose chief study is on Parama-laghu- mañjūshā of Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa.

DE SILVA, H.T. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Eng. tr. of Bālāvatāra (with K.O. Thera, revised by Woodward, Pegu, 1915).

DEŚI-NĀMA-MĀLĀ. A dictionary of Prakrit words by Hemachandra (q.v.); the author himself wrote a comm. on it.

DEŚOPADEŚA. A Sanskrit poetical work, in eight sections, by Kshemendra (q.v.), which deals with the villain, the miser, the prostitute, the old procuress, the voluptuary, the student from abroad, the passionate fellow, and the depraved Śaiva teacher with his despicable followers. It portrays corruption prevalent in contemporary Kashmir.

DEUSSEN, PAUL (1845-1919). A celebrated German Indologist, who had captured the imagination of India by his work on the Upanishads. In 1880, he was Lecturer at Berlin University and Professor (1887). In 1889, he became full Professor of Philosophy at Kiel University, where he stayed for the rest of his life. Deussen has—as he himself stated—dedicated 35 years (1873-1908) of his studies to Indian philosophy. He tr. into German sixty Upanishads (1897; Eng. tr. by V.M. Bedekar and Palsule) and wrote a work in 1899 on the philosophy of Upanishads (Eng. tr. by A.S. Geden under the title : Philosophy of the Upanishads); his other works are : Systems of the Vedānta (Eng. tr. by Charles Johnson), Outline of the Vedānta System of Philosophy according to Śaṅkara (Eng. tr. by J.H. Woods and C.B. Runkle), German tr. of Bhagavadgītā and Philosophy of the Vedānta and Vedānta-sāra (jointly with G.A. Jacob)

Deussen's leading ideas for the history of the human mind was that truth can be and has been reached at all times, but it was not fully welcome at his time, which believed in progress and historical accumulation of knowledge. The true impact of his insight was not recognised.

DEUTSCH, ELIOT. A modern American Indologist, who is the author of Advaita-Vedānta: A Philosophical Reconstruction (East-West Centre Press, Honolulu).

DEVA. See Āryadeva.

DEVABHADRA. A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of the Pārśvanātha-charita (1108), describing the life of 23rd Tīrthankara, at Bhṛṅgukachchha.

DEVACHANDRA SŪRI (Devā Suri). A Jaina Prakrit poet, teacher of Hemachandra (q.v.) and author of the Śāntinātha-charita (1103), a Prakrit poem narrating the life of Śāntinātha, a Jain Tīrthankara; the work also contains many Apabhraṃśa verses. The author belonged to the Purnatallagachchha

DEVADATTA. Author of a Sanskrit version of the Śuka-saptatī (q.v.)

DEVADATTA. Author of the Sanskrit Dhāturātnamālā (q.v.), a work on medical science, his date is uncertain.

DEVADHAR, C.R. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose editions of the works of Kālidāsa, Bhāsa and other Sanskrit writers are quite popular; his ed. of Yayāti-charita has been pub. by the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute.

DEVAGUPTA. Same as Jinachandra Gaṇi (q.v.).

DEVAKI MENON. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Śārādādevī-charita Saṅgraha (Rāma-kṛṣṇa Math, Madras, 1978) in 9 Cantos gives an account of the life and teachings of Śārādādevī in simple and chaste Sanskrit.

DEVĀLA-SMṚITI. See Smṛiti.

DEVANANDIN. See Pūjyapāda Devanandin.

DEVANNA BHATTA (fl. between 1150 and 1225). A South Indian Sanskrit author of Smṛiti-chandrikā (q.v.; a well-known Smṛiti digest) and Saṅgīta-muktāvalī (on music and dancing), who has exercised great influence in southern India. Described as son of Keśavāditya Bhaṭṭa, he is variously called Devānanda, Devendra, Devagaṇa or Devaṇāchārya.

DEVAPĀLA. A Sanskrit scholar, who was the commentator of Laugākṣhi-gṛīhya-sūtra alias Kāṭhaka-gṛīhya-sūtra; he probably belonged to Kashmir and appears to be a later writer.

DEVAPRABHĀ SŪRI (fl. middle 13th cent.). A Jain poet surnamed as Maladhārin. Pupil of Mumuchandra and tutor of Devānanda, he composed the Pāṇḍava-charita (q.v.), a poem, describing the story of the Mahābhārata in 18 cantos, and another poem the Mṛigavati-charita (q.v.).

DEVARĀJA (fl. 15th cent.). A Vedic scholar, who lived in Śrīrangam. He was the celebrated author of the Nighaṇṭu-vyakhyā, a learned exposition of Yāska's Vedic lexicology, namely the Nighaṇṭu. The work marks an important stage in the history of Vedic scholarship in south India.

DEVARĀJA. A Sanskrit writer, who was son of Śeṣhādri. Devarāja is the author of Bālamārtanḍa-vijayam, a five-act drama on the heroic exploits and liberality of his patron king Mārtanḍavarman (r. 1729-53) of Travancore; the work also describes the renovation of the shrine of Śrī Padmanabha at Trivandrum by the king.

DEVARĀJA. A Sanskrit writer, who, at the instance of prince Chelāsimha of Benares (1770-81) compiled Prāyāścitta-saṅgraha, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

DEVARĀJA (fl. end of 19th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, whose Nānaka-char-droḍaja (Rise of moon-like Nānaka; Bombay, 1887) treats of the life of Guru Nānak. This work was composed in collaboration with Gaṅgārāo.

DEV RĀJ CHANANA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Ṛig-bhāṣhya-saṅgraha (in Hindi), ed. of Renou's The Destiny of the Veda in India (1965) and The Classical Doctrine of Indian Medicine: its Origins and Greek Parallels (Eng. tr. of Filliozat's work in French).

DEVARĀJA YAJVAN (fl. early 14th cent.?). A Sanskrit scholar, whose Nighaṇṭu-nirvachana is a comm. on the Nighaṇṭu and is indispensable for Vedic scholars. In his work, he has given the etymology of all the words of the Nighaṇṭu and illustrated their Vedic usage.

DEVARAKKHITA, B. A modern Ceylonese Indologist, who ed. Rasavahini with Sinhalese interpretation (Colombo, 1917).

DEVARĀJ RDHIGANĠI. See Siddhānta.

DEVASAṆKARA PUROHIT (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and son of Natānabhāi, who lived at Uratpattana near Surat. His Alaṅkāra-mañjūṣā simultaneously illustrates the Alaṅkāras and glorifies the royal deeds of Peśvā Mātṭhav Rao I and his uncle Raghunātha Rao.

DEVASENA. Same as Devasenāchārya.

DEVASENĀCHĀRYA (b. 894). A Jain poet, belonging to Kāṣṭhasaṅgha, whose chief works in Apabhraṃśa are: Śrāvakāchāra (q.v.; on the conduct of Jain laity), Davvasahāva-payāsa, Sāvaya-dhamma-dohā (all in Dohā metre); his Prakrit works are : Darśana-sāra, Tattva-sāra, Ārādhanā-sāra (qq.v.) and Nayachakra, a work on logic.

DEVASENA GAṆĪ (fl. before 1315). A Jaina Apabhramśa poet, who was a pupil of Vimalasena. Gaṇī was the author in 28 Sandhis of Sulochanā-charīu, which describes the beauty of princess Sulochanā, who in a svayamvara, chooses Jayakumāra, the commander-in-chief of Bharata, the emperor, as her husband. At this, there is a duel between Jayakumāra and Arthakīrti, the enraged son of Bharata, who feels humiliated at the choice; Jayakumāra is victorious and Sulochanā is formally married to him.

DEVASTHALI, GOVIND VINĀYAK (1906-)

A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : A Descriptive Catalogue of Sanskrit and Prakrit Manuscripts in the Bombay University Library, Religion and Mythology of the Brāhmaṇas (1965), Anubandhas of Pāṇini, The Phitsūtras of Santanava, Sāra-siddhānta-kaumudī of Varadarāja Bhaṭṭa, An Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Sanskrit (Vol. I, Pts. 1 & 2; in collaboration) and A Dictionary of Sanskrit on Historical Principles (A Fascicule; in collaboration), and ed. of Śṛṅgāra-rasa maṇḍana of Viṭṭhalesa.

DEVASSIA, P.C. A modern Sanskrit poet of Kerala, whose Kiṣṭu Bhāgavatam in 32 cantos is a Mahākāvya on the life and teachings of Jesus Christ, composed in lucid and chaste Sanskrit.

DEVA SŪRI. Same as Devachandra Sūri (q.v.).

DEVA SŪRI. A Jaina author of Śāntinātha-charita in Sanskrit verses in A.D. 1282.

DEVA SŪRI (d. 1169). A Jaina Sanskrit author of Pramāṇa-nayatattvālokāṅkāra, a logical work.

DEVATĀDHYĀYA-(DAIVATA-) BRĀHMANĀ.
See Brāhmanā.

DEVENDRA GAṆĪ (fl. latter half of the 11th cent.). A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of the Mahāvīra-charita (q.v.), to be distinguished from Guṇachandra Gaṇī's work of the same title. He wrote an exhaustive comm. on the important and popular canonical work, the Uttarādhyayana.

DEVENDRANĀTHA CHAṬṬOPĀDHYĀYA.

A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Vaṅgavīra-pratāpāditya, a novel, using a historical episode, was published in the Saṁskṛita Sāhitya Parishat Patrikā (1930-31), Calcutta.

DEVENDRASTAVA. See Devīmadatthaa.

DEVENDRA SŪRI (fl. 13th cent.). A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of the six works Karmavipāka, Karmastava, Bandhasvāmitva, Shaḍaśītikā, Śataku and Saptatikā, all of them dealing in great details with the entire doctrine of Karman. A disciple of Jagachchandra, he fl. during the reign of kings Nīradhavalā and Tejaḥpālā of Gujarat.

DEVI, J. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Women in Sanskrit Drama (Delhi, 1965).

DEVĪ-BHĀGAVATA. See Purāna.

DEVI CHAND (1880-1965). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is the Eng. tr. of Śukla Yajurveda, based on Dayānanda Sarasvatī's Bhāṣya. He also tr. Atharvaveda and Sāmaveda into English.

DEVĪ-CHANDRAGUPTA. A Sanskrit drama, attributed to Viśākhadeva, who is probably identical with Viśākhadatta (q.v.). The work, no longer extant, is known only from citations in the Nāṭyadarpaṇa (q.v.).

The heroine Dhruvadevī, when she is in her husband's camp with a small retinue and enjoys summer in the cool abodes of the Himalayan frontier, is carried away by an unprincipled foreigner, a Śaka, by birth, and is much tormented to accept his hand. Kumāra Chandragupta, Dhruvadevī's husband, in the disguise of a courtesan, forms a dramatic company and approaches the licentious Śaka. By a series of political stratagems, Kumāra Chandragupta makes Dhruvadevī escape and takes her place in a female garb. When the Śaka prince almost becomes mad of his love to Dhruvadevī and complacency blinds him to the probable dangers from an offended enemy, he allows himself to meet in a secret chamber the enemy in the disguise of Dhruvadevī and suffers for his follies. The same story is perhaps alluded to in Bāṇa's Harsha-charita, where this Chandragupta is taken to be identical with Chandragupta II of Gupta dynasty.

DEVĪ-MĀHĀTMYA. Same as Chandī (q.v.).

DEVĪMDATTHAA. See Paiṇṇa.

DEVĪNĀMA-VII ĀSA. A devotional poem in Sanskrit by Saṁib Kaula, a Kashmirian. Composed in 16 cantos, it takes its name from the one thousand names of the goddess recounted in Cantos VI to XV.

DEVĪ-ŚATAKA. A devotional Sanskrit poem in 100 verses, composed by Ānandavardhana (q.v.), in honour of the goddess Pārvatī or Bhṛvānī. In this śataka, the author, even against his own theories so ably expressed in his Dhvanyāloka (q.v.) pays more attention to the embellishment than to suggestion, in keeping with his own admission again that the latter is only of secondary importance in hymns.

DEVĪ-ŚATAKA. Same as Chandī-śataka.

DEVĪ-ŚATAKA. See Śobhākara.

DEY, S.K. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: 1. History of Sanskrit Literature (Classical Period; 1947, with S.N. Das Gupta), History of Sanskrit Poetics (1960) and Some Problems of Sanskrit Poetics (1959).

DHĀHILA (fl. 12th cent.?). A Jaina Apabhramśa poet and author of the Paūmasirichariu (Padmaśrī-charita; q.v.); the poet's pseudonym was Divva Diṭṭhi (Divya Dṛiṣṭi). From the account given by the poet about himself, it appears that he was a descendant of Māgha (q.v.), a great Sanskrit poet.

DHAMMACHAKKA-PPAVĀJANA-SUTTA. Belonging to the Sutta-piṭaka (q.v.), it is known as the sermon of Benares by means of which the Buddha set the wheel of the religion in motion.

DHAMMAKITTĪ (fl. 13-14th cent.). A Buddhist Pali writer and author of Danta-dhātu-varisa (q.v.), Saddhamma-saṅgaha and Bālavatoṭa (the last work traditionally ascribed to him) (qq.v.). Chapter 37 of the Mahāvamsa (q.v.), appears to have been added by him. According to a Ceylonese tradition, he came from Burma to Ceylon in the reign of Parākramabāhu II (13th cent.) and that the composition of the Chula-vamsa (q.v.) was commenced by him.

DHAMMAPADA. A part of the Khuddakavagga. See Sutta-piṭaka.

DHAMMAPADA-JHA-KAṬṬHĪ. A Pali comm. by Buddhaghosha (q.v.) on Dhammapada (q.v.). While Winternitz, Burlingame, Geiger and others raise doubts of its authorship by Buddhaghosha, Law sees no reason to disbelieve the colophon which ascribes it to Buddhaghosha. The Dhammapada comm., however, is a voluminous work, explaining the stanzas of the Dhammapada and like the Jatavagga-vaggaṇa (q.v.), it contains many ancient popular stories, short edifying legends and interesting fairy tales. Each story in this comm. contains the following eight sub-divisions: (i) gāthās (stanzas) to which the story refers, (ii) person or persons to whom the story is told, (iii) pachchuppannavatthu, the story of the present, ending with, (iv) a stanza or stanzas, (v) word for word comm. on the stanza, (vi) spiritual benefits which accrued to the hearer or hearers, (vii) atītavatthu, story of the past, and (viii) identification of the persons of atītavatthu with those of pachchuppannavatthu. It will be seen that in general character and structure of parts, there is no difference between this comm. and Jātakaṭṭha-vaṇṇanā, another comm. on the Jātaka.

DHAMMAPĀLA. A Buddhist Pali writer, who was a resident of Padaratiṭṭha on the south coast of India. The similarity of conceptions and the identical method indicate that he was not much later than Buddhaghosha (fl. early 5th cent. A.D.). Reputed to be the author of 14 comms., his Paramatthadīpanī (q.v.; Elucidation of the True Meaning) comments on the 7 texts of the Khuddakanikāya (See Sutta-piṭaka). His other comms. are (8) Netti-pakurajussa-attha-samvaṇṇanā on the Netti-pakarana (q.v.) on Visuddhimagga, (10-13) Linattha-vaṇṇanā (q.v.) or Linatthapākāsīnī ṭīkā on Buddhaghosha's comm. on the four Nikāyas and (14) another comm. of the same name Linatthapākāsīnī (q.v.) on the Jātakaṭṭhakathā. A regular scheme is followed by Dhammapāla in his comms.; in the introduction at the beginning is given the traditional account of how the particular collection of poems came to be put together. After a description of how, when, and by whom each poem came to be composed, individual clauses are quoted and explained philologically and exegetically.

Much of Dhammapāla's work is but a recast in scholastic Pāli of the earlier Sinhalese or Tamil commentatorial literature. Some scholars doubt that Dhammapāla, the junior contemporary of Buddhaghosha, was the author of all these works. Probably works of later namesakes have been fathered on the earlier Dhammapāla as he had made it his life's task to supplement the comms. of Buddhaghosha. If he is to be identified with the Dhammapāla of the Nālandā Monastery, the teacher's teacher of Hiuen Tsang, his date would be a cent. later; Hardy and Geiger, however, consider the identity yet unproved.

"Dhammapāla's works show great learning, much exegetical skill, and sound judgment. In comparison with Buddhaghosha, his style is simpler and less diffuse. Though Dhammapāla was well-read and well-informed, Buddhaghosha's knowledge was more widely diffused and more encyclopaedic; the former shows more of the grammarian and academician than of the exegetical compiler and fanciful etymologist." — HCIP, III, 403-404.

DHAMMA-PARIKKHĀ (Dharma-parikshā) An Apabhramśa satirical poem by Harishēṇa (q.v.; fl. 987), which spreads over 11 sandhis, comprising 234 Kaṭavakas, equal to more than 2000 ślokas. The poem is didactic, with a number of stories and fables intervening, and is similar to that of the Sanskrit Dharma-parikshā of Amitagati (q.v.), composed in A.D. 1014. The poet acknowledges his debt to the work of his predecessor Jayarāma's Dharma-parikshā in Guthā metre, but not yet available.

DHAMMA-SAṄGANĪ. See Abhidhamma-piṭaka.

DHAMMASIRI. A Ceylonese Pali scholar to whom is attributed Khuddaka-sikkhā (q.v.). The Burmese tradition places him nearly 920 years after the Buddha's demise and makes him the author of another work, called Mūla-sikkhā (q.v.) but other scholars attribute it to Mahāsāmi.

DHAMMAVILĀSA (fl. 13th cent.). A Buddhist monk, also called Sāriputta. He is the author of the Pali work Dhammavilāsa- dharmasattha, the oldest Burmese law-book. The importance of the work lies in the fact that it forms the basis of the later legal literature of Burma.

DHAMMAVILĀSA-DHAMMASATTHA. See Dhammavilāsa.

DHANADARĀJA (fl. 1434). A Sanskrit poet, son of Dehala and author, like Bhartṛhari, of three Śatakas on Śringāra, Nīti and Vairāgya.

DHANAÑJAYA (fl. latter half of 10th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Daśarūpaka (q.v.), a work on dramaturgy, commented upon by perhaps his younger brother Dhanika in his Avaloka. Son of Viṣṇu, he appears to have enjoyed the patronage of Muñja, the Paramara king of Malwā.

DHANAÑJAYA. A Digambara Jaina Sanskrit poet and native of Karmāṭaka, who fl. between 9th and 12th centuries. He is the author of Rāghava-pāṇḍavīya (q.v.), divisandhana kāvya and of Nāmamālā (q.v.), a lexicon. Some scholars think that the Nāmamālā is the work of Dhanañjaya Śrutakīrti, while others regard Dhanañjaya and Dhanañjaya Śrutakīrti as one person.

DHANAÑJAYA-VIJAYA. A Sanskrit Vijāyoga, in one Act, by Kāñchanāchārya (q.v.; fl. 12th cent.), which deals with the exploits of Arjuna in rescuing the cattle of Virāṭa from the hands of Duryodhana and the Kauravas; it is based on a story in the Virāṭa-parvan of the Mahābhārata.

DHANAPĀLA (fl. 10th cent.). A Sanskrit, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa writer, son of Sarvadeva and brother of Śobhana (q.v.), who converted him to Jainism. He was a contemporary of Pālāyudha, Padmagupta, Dhanañjaya and Devabhadra and enjoyed the patronage of kings Śiṅga and Vākpati of Dhārā. Dhanapāla composed the Tilaka-mañjarī (q.v.), a Sanskrit romance admittedly in imitation of Bāṇa's Kādambarī. Merutuṅga, in his Prabandha-chintāmaṇi, has narrated the incident which induced Dhanapāla to name his romance after his daughter. Before his conversion, Dhanapāla composed the Prakrit lexicon Paiyalachchhi-nāmamālā (q.v.) in 972-3, and it was after becoming a Jaina that he composed the Rishabhapañchāsikā (q.v.) in fifty Prakrit stanzas. He also composed Bhavisuyatta-kahā (q.v.) in Apabhraṃśa.

DHANAPĀLA (fl. end of 14th cent.). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, whose Bāhubali-charita (1397) describes in 18 Sandhis the life of Kāmadeva Bāhubali, a Jaina saint. The poet was son of Subhaṭadeva and Subhaṭadevī and was a native of Palhanpur in Gujarat.

DHANAYĀLA. Same as Dhanapāla (q.v.).

DHANEŚVARA (fl. 11th cent.). A Prakrit poet, disciple of Jineśvara Sūti and Buddhisāgara and author of Sitasundarī-chariya (q.v.).

DHANĪKA (fl. 10th cent.). A Sanskrit author of the famous comm., Avaloka (q.v.) on Dhanañjaya's Daśarūpaka (q.v.), and of Kāvya-nirṇaya. Son of Viṣṇu and minister of Utpaladeva (Muñja), he is regarded as a brother of Dhanañjaya (q.v.), or identical with Dhanañjaya himself.

DHANVANTARI (fl. c. 8th cent.). A Sanskrit writer on medicine and author of the Nighaṇṭu or the Dhanvantarīya-nighaṇṭu, the oldest medico-botanical dictionary. This work is found in two recensions, comprising 7 and 9 chapters respectively. Amara (q.v.) is said to have used this work in his Amarakośa (q.v.), but in its extant form, it must be ascribed to a later date. The original Nighaṇṭu is said to have been revised by Kāśyapa. According to the Purāṇas, Dhanvantari was born with a Aṃṛita-kumbha (nectar-jar) in his hands after the churning of the ocean (Samudra-manthana).

DHANVANTARĪYA-NIGHAṆṬU. See Dhanvantari.

DHARMĀBHYUDAYA (or Saṅghādhipati-charitra). A Sanskrit Mahākāvya, composed by Udayaprabha Suri (q.v.) and Narendraprabha; this work was composed on the occasion of Vastupāla's pilgrimage to the Jaina shrines in Western India.

DHARMABINDU. A Jaina Sanskrit work by Haribhadra (q.v.), which gives a review of ethics of laymen, monks, and the blessings of Nivāṇa.

DHARMADĀSA. See Vasudeva-hiṇḍi.

DHARMADĀSA GAṆĪ. A Prakrit author of the Upadeśa-mālā (q.v.; Uvesamālā). Tradition makes him a contemporary of Mahāvīra.

DHARMADĀSA SŪRĪ (fl. 13th cent.). A Buddhist ascetic and author of Vidagdha-vākha-maṇḍana (q.v.), a Sanskrit work on poetics.

DHARMADEVA MEHTĀ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who is known for his books: Sciences of Physics and Chemistry in the Vedas, Mathematics in the Vedas, Concept of God in the Vedas, Bases of Astrology in the Vedas and Medicines in the Vedas.

DHARMADEVA VIDYĀMĀRTAṆḌA (1901-78). A celebrated graduate of Gurukula Kangri, Haridwar, whose chief works are: Eng. tr. of Sāmaveda (with notes and comments), Eng. tr. of Rigveda, Vedāṅg-kā Yathārtha Śiṣṭī (in Hindi) and two Sanskrit works: Mahāpuruṣa kīrtanam and Mahilā-kīrtanam.

DHARMAGHOSA (fl. before 1496). A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of Isimaṇḍala (q.v.).

DHARMAKĪRTI (fl. 7th cent.). A Buddhist logician and author of famous Sanskrit Nyāya-bindu, and Pramāṇa-vārtika (qq.v.). His Pramāṇa-viniścaya exists in Tibetan, the original Sanskrit having been lost (See Ānandavardhana). In his Nyāya-bindu, Dharmakīrti defends Dinnāga against Uddyotkara (qq.v.).

DHARMAKUMĀRA. See Śālisthadracharita.

DHARMA-PARĪKSHĀ. See Amitagatī.

DHARMA-PARĪKSHĀ. See Dhamma-Parikkhā.

DHARMARĀJA (fl. 16th cent.). A disciple of Venkaṭanātha and author of Sanskrit Vedānta-paribhāṣā (q.v.), a famous manual of the Advaita Vedānta.

DHARMARAKSHITA, BHIKSHU. A modern Pali scholar, whose chief work is Pāṭi-vyākaraṇa.

DHARMARASAYANA. Same as Chuchchurī (q.v.).

DHARMASĀGARA (fl. 16th cent.). A Śvetāmbara Jaina Prakrit writer and author of the Kupakṣha-sahasra-kāvya (q.v.).

DHARMA-SAMGRAHA. A Sanskrit collection of technical terms relating to Buddhist philosophy, attributed to Nāgārjuna.

DHARMAŚARMĀBHYUDAYA. A Sanskrit epic in 21 cantos by Harichandra or Hariśchandra (q.v.), which, on the model of the Śiśupāla-vadha (q.v.) treats of the life of Dharmanātha, the 15th Tīrthanāka of the Jains.

DHARMA-ŚĀSTRA. See Smṛiti, Vedāṅga

(Kalpasūtra).

DHARMA SŪRI STUTI. A Jaina Apabhramśa poem of an anonymous author, which in its 50 verses, is a religious Bārahmāsā.

DHARMA-SŪTRAS. A part of the Kalpa-sūtra (q.v.). See Vedanga (Kalpa-sūtra).

DHARMAVARDHANA. See Shaḍbhāṣhā nir-mita-Pārśva-jinastavana.

DHARMENDRA KUMĀR GUPTA. A modern scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Svapnavāsavadattam and of Kavyā-darśaṇi (1973).

DHARMOTTARA. See Nyūya-bindu.

DHĀTU TĪRTHA-DĪPANĪ. A Pali grammatical work based on Saddanīti (q.v.), which is a list of roots.

DHĀTU TĪRTHA-DĪPANĪ. A Pali grammatical work by Jinatāna, which contains re-arrangement in metrical form of the roots mentioned in the Saddanīti (q.v.).

DHĀTUKATHĪ. See Abhidhamma-piṭaka.

DHĀTU-MAṆJUSHĀ. A Pali grammatical work of the Kachchāyana school, which is a list of roots.

DHĀTU-PĀṬHA. A Sanskrit grammatical work by Pāṇini (q.v.), which is a list of roots.

DHĀTU-PĀṬHA. A Pali grammatical work of the Moggallāna school, which is a list of roots.

DHĀTU-PRADĪPA. A Sanskrit grammatical work by Maitreya-rakṣita (q.v.), which is based on Pāṇini's Dhātupāṭha.

DHĀTU-RATNAMĖLĪ. An Āyurvedic work in Sanskrit by Devadatta (q.v.), which deals with the properties of all metals and minerals and the mode of their incineration.

DHAVALA (fl. 10-11th cent.). A Jaina Apabhramśa poet and author of Harivaṁśa-purāṇa (q.v.). He also transformed Devasenāchārya's Nayachakra, a Prakrit work on logic, into Gāthā metre, because a critic remarked that Dohā metre was not suitable for a serious subject like logic. The poet was a pupil of Ambasena Rishi and was the son of a Brāhmaṇa named Sūra. The author mentions many names who had preceded him but makes no mention of Pushpadanta (q.v.); it is likely they were contemporaries.

DHAVALĀ. A famous Prakrit comm. by Vīrasena on the Digambara Jaina Sūtras called Shaṭkhaṇḍāgama by Pushpadanta and Bhūtabali; the comm. has been pub. in 16 Vols. (completed in 1959).

DHIKOTĪ. A Sanskrit astronomical work by Śrīpati (q.v.) of the Karaṇa type, which follows the Āryabhaṭīya of Āryabhaṭa I with corrections according to Lalla. It has adopted 1039 as the epochal year.

DHĪRANĀGA (fl. c. A.D. 500). A Sanskrit dramatist of Arālapura and author of Kundamālā (q.v.), a play in six Acts on the same theme as that of the Uttararāma-charita (q.v.) and depicting pathos. The dramatist was a precursor of Bhavabhūti (q.v.). Some of the verses of this writer, quoted in the Subhāshitāvalī and Sadukti-karṇāmṛita are not traceable in the Kundamālā.

DHIRENDASH. A Sanskrit scholar, whose New Light on Rani Gumpā (Bhubaneswar, 1976-77) shows that the Rani Gumpā caves in the Khandagiri-Udayagiri complex of the Ramgarh hills of Chhota Nagpur were a regular rectangular theatre of ancient India answering to that type described by Bharata.

DHĪVRIDDHI-TANTRA. A Sanskrit astronomical work by Lalla (q. v.), which consists of 14 chapters and is based on the Āryabhaṭīya (q. v.).

DHOYI (fl. 12th cent.). A Sanskrit court-poet of Lakshmaṇasena of Bengal, who was called Śrutadhara, because he learnt by a single hearing. His Pavandūta (q. v.) is on the model of Meghadūta, while his Satyabhāmā-Kṛishṇa-saṁvāda is no longer extant. Verses of Dhoyī, not traceable in the Pavana-dūta, have been quoted in the anthologies entitled Sadukti-karṇamṛta, Subhāshita-muktāvalī and Śārngadhara-paddhati. Dhoyī is also called Dhoī or Dhoyika.

DHRUVA, ĀNAND SHAN̄KAR B. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are : Notes on the Syādvādamañjari (Poona, 1933) and on Nyāya-praveśa (Pt. I).

DHRUVA, K.H. A modern scholar, who has ascribed to Viśakhadatta, a play based on the Rāmāyana; he wrote also on the historical contents of the Yuga-purāṇa.

DHUNDIRĀJA SHASTRĪ BĀPAT An Indian scholar, who has ed. the Lajjasevī-samhitā of Yajurveda with a Marathi tr. (2 Vols., 1940).

DHUNDIRĀJA VYĀSAJYAN (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and son of Lakshmaṇa, who was patronised by kings Shāhājī (r. 1687-1711) and Sarphojī (r. 1711-28) of Tanjore. Besides his musical poem Shāhāvilāsa on the pattern of Gīta-govinda and a poem Abhīnava-kādambarī, he wrote a comm. on Mudrārākṣasa in 1713, probably at the instance of king Sarphojī, who wrote his own gloss on the play.

DHUNDUKANĀTHA (fl. 15th cent.). An author of Sanskrit Rasendra-chintāmaṇi (q. v.), an Āyurvedic treatise.

DHŪRTĀKHYĀNA. A Prakrit poem in 485 Gāthās by Haribhadra (fl. 2nd half of 8th cent.), written in a simple style. It is a collection of tales, divided into five chapters, where five professional cheats (dhūrta), a woman being one of them, narrate their imaginary experiences. There is a competition among the story-tellers in which the woman wins. "The tales of the cheats are fantastic and extremely amusing owing to their imaginativeness. But their cutting sarcasm becomes quite apparent when similar tales from the Epics and Purāṇas, supposed to contain the truths of the Brahmanical religion are placed side by side with them." — HCIP, II, 209.

The work is a remarkable satire in Indian literature

DHŪRTA-SAMĀGAMA. (or 'the Meeting of Knaves'). A Sanskrit Prahasana by Jyotirīśvara Kaviśekhara (q. v.; c. A.D. 1320).

Viśvanagar, a religious mendicant and his pupil Durachara quarrel over the possession of a lovely courtesan Anāngasena. They refer the case to Asajjati, a Brahmin arbitrator, who decrees that until his judgement, the damsel shall remain under the protection of himself as umpire, although his Vidushaka also covets the prize.

DHŪRTA-VITA-SAMVĀDA. See Chaturbhāṇi.

DHVANIKĀRA (fl. 9th cent.). The supposed author of Karikā portion of the famous Sanskrit work on poetics called Dhvanyāloka (q. v.). He is also called Sahajidaya and was perhaps the guru of Anandavardhana.

DHVANYĀLOKA (also called Kāvyaloka or Sahajidayaloka). A celebrated Sanskrit work on rhetorics by Anandavardhana (fl about the middle of the 9th cent AD-95), which represents the Dhvani school.

Like many other works on poetics this work is in three parts, the Karika, the Vritti and Udaharana. The last part consists of illustrations from Sanskrit literature, regarding the authorship of the other two some scholars consider the Karikas the work of Dhyanikuta or Sahridaya while the Vritti as that of Anandavardhana. Some scholars, however, attribute the entire work to Anandavardhana. In the Dhvanyaloka comprising 120 Karikas Anandavardhana has stated several views regarding Dhvani (tone or suggestion) including his own given it classification on the basis of Vyanjana and also on that Vyanjaka tried to fix the place of Gunas and Alankaras in poetry and ultimately stated his view regarding Pratibha and the province of poetry. It was in this work that the theory of Dhvanī in rhetorics found its first expression in clear and definite terms though it might have been in the air for some time before it. ICIP II 191. The work exercised profound influence on the later writers on poetics.

DHYANAGRATHA See Brahmarupā

DIKONOVA, N. V. A Russian lady scholar who is working on the Asian material collected in the Hermitage at Leningrad one of the five great Museums in the West.

DICKSON, J. I. An Indologist who ed and tr into English Patimokkha (1876).

DĪGHĀ-NIKĀYĪ See Sutta-pitaka

DIKSHIT, R. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Women in Sanskrit Drama (Delhi, 1964).

DIKSHITA VATAVE, BĀBA (fl 20th cent.)

A Sanskrit writer whose chief work Kalpita kalavyut nīlakaṣa-purāṇa satirizes those people who have taken to a horrible modern habit and let go of traditional acharya.

DIKSHITAR, V. R. RAMACHANDRA A modern scholar whose chief works are Purāṇa-bhāṣya (Vol. I-III 191-2) an index of deities, persons, etc. in Indian river etc. covering five Purāṇas Varāha Purāṇa, Viṣṇu Purāṇa, Matsya and Bhāgavata a monograph on Layupurāṇa (1933) Matsya Purāṇa a Study (Mumbai 1955) Gaṇita Polity and Studies in South Indian Literature of the Sangam Age (1936) he ed the Bhāgavata Sūktā with Nagesh's commentary.

DIKSHITULU, K. Y. A modern Sanskrit writer, who tr into Sanskrit Allama Peddina's Telugu Mamucharita under the title Varutham.

DILLON, MYLES An Irish Sanskritist, whose chief work is the ed of Nāṭaka-lakṣaṇa-ratnakosa (Oxford, 1937). It has even been presented with considerable improvement. See Lower.

DĪPAKAPA (fl 14th cent.) A Sanskrit writer of Poona and author of Graha-panna, Manu-pravacana, Vantrachintamani, atik etc. and works on Jyotiḥśāstra.

DINKARA BHATTA (fl 1610-40) A Sanskrit author of Rigurtha-sāra or Rigurtha-vākhyā-sara, which is a comment on the selected Riks from the eight Ashtakas of the Rigveda and on the prose portions culled from the Altareya-brahmana. Rigurtha-sara has been pub by Aryendra Sharma in 1959.

DINĀNĀTHA TRIVEDI (fl 20th cent.) A Sanskrit writer, who has given a brief biography of Pandita Purushottama Śūmā Chaturvedi.

DINESH CHANDRA SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit author of Prachina-bhāratiya-manovi-jñāna (1972), a work on Ancient Indian psychology.

DINESH PRASĀD PĀṆDEY. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Bhāratāyana (1968) brings the history of India upto king Harshavardhana ; the Sanskrit here is mixed with a large number of Hindi words. He also wrote in prose a history of the Indian National Congress, under the title Bhāratīya-congress-etiḥāsa (1964).

DIĀNĀGA (fl. before 400). Chief of the early Buddhist logicians and author in Sanskrit of Pramāṇa-samuchchaya, Nyāya-praveśa (qq. v.) and other texts, most of which are preserved in Tibetan language, in which they were translated. Prajñā-pāramitā-piṇḍārtha (q. v.), epitomising in 58 verses the Aśṭasahasrikā-prajñāpāramitā (q. v.) is also attributed to Diānāga ; I-tsing ascribes eight other philosophical works to him. Kundamālā (a drama), another work ascribed to him, was brought to light by M.R. Kavi. Diānāga has, from the Buddhist point of view, criticised Vātsyāyana (q.v.). See Uddyotkara.

DĪPA. A Buddhist Pali poet; a verse towards the end of Parivāra (q. v.) states that it was composed by him.

DĪPAK CHANDRA BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A scholar, whose chief works are : Iconology of Composite Images (1980), Tantric Buddhist Iconographic Sources (1974) and Mythological and Ritual Symbolism (1985).

DĪPAKA GHOSH. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Meghavilāpa (pub. in Saṃskṛita Sāhitya Parishat Patrikā, May-October, 1970) is on the self-denigration of the cloud which has been praised to the skies by Kālidāsa.

DĪPA-KALIKĀ. A Sanskrit comm. by Sūlapāṇi (q.v.) on the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti, which, though brief, is lucid.

DĪPAVAṂSA ('History of the Island, i.e., Ceylon'). An epic poem in Pali, of an unknown authorship, which is a history of Ceylon up to the end of the reign of Mahāsena (A.D. 325-52); Buddhaghosha (5th cent.), in his comm. of Kathāvatthu, copiously quotes from it. In contents, the chronicle is based on the historical portions of the Sinhalese Aṭṭhakathās and for the first time puts together the traditions mentioned in that work.

Treating of Gotama's three visits to Laṅkā, the first made after his enlightenment, it traces Buddha's descent from the Prince Mahāsammata, the first inaugurated king of the earth ; a brief account of the first two Buddhist Councils and the different Buddhist schools that arose after the Second Council, is also given. It further deals with the reign of Aśoka, for it was during his reign that Mahinda went to Ceylon and spread Buddhism there with the help of the Ceylonese King Devānampiyatissa. It is said that this great king built 84,000 viḥāras all over the Jambudvīpa. It then gives a brief account of the colonisation of Ceylon by Vijaya, son of the King of Vanga, and also a systematic account of kings of Ceylon who ruled after Vijaya and their activities in promoting the cause of Buddhism. The most eminent king after Vijaya was Devānampiyatissa in whose reign Mahinda came to Ceylon. There is a long list of kings after him, but Duṭṭhagāmaṇi (who drove the Damiḷas out of Ceylon and built the Lohapāsāda, nine storeys in height, the Mahāthūpa and many other viḥāras) and Vaṭṭagāmaṇi (in whose reign the bhikkhus recorded in written books the text of the Tipiṭaka and also the Aṭṭhakathā) stand out pre-eminent. The accounts of the kings of Ceylon is brought down to the reign of King Mahāseṇa.

The author's name has not come down but he had only an imperfect knowledge of Pali, and from the literary point of view, the Dīpavaṁsa is regarded a very poor performance. 'The verses are interspersed with prose passages, and there are numerous grammatical and metrical lapses. The work suffers from repetition and omissions, and is fragmentary. The author abruptly jumps from one subject to another, leaves many gaps in presentation, and frequently interceding narrative verses are lost between speeches. The Dīpavaṁsa was composed later than the middle of the 4th cent. A.D., the date of king Mahāseṇa with whose reign it brings its account to a close, and is prior to Buddhaghosha who copiously quotes from it in his commentary of Kathāvatthu. HCIP, III, 406-7 See Mahāvamsa

DĪPIKĀ. Same as Tarkasaṅgrahā-dīpikā (q.v.).

DĪṬṬHIVĀYA. See Anga.

DIVĀKARA (fl. 13th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Amoghaśāghava in champu is on the story of Rāma.

DIVĀKARA. A Sanskrit court-poet of Kṛṣṇadevarāya of Vijayanagara (r. 1509-29), who was son of Vaidyeśvara and Muktāmbā. From king Rudra, the poet says, he got the title 'Kavichandraraya'. Besides Pārijata-haraṇa (a drama), Rasamañjarī and Devī-stuti, he composed in more than 40 cantos the poem Bhāratāṁṇi, on the story of the Mahābhārata.

DIVĀKARA. Same as Siddhasena Divākara (q.v.).

DIVĀKARA. Same as Mātāṅga Divākara (q.v.).

DIVYĀVADĀNA. One of the oldest Sanskrit Avadānas (collection of tales), which draws largely on the Vinaya-piṭaka (q.v.) of the Sarvāstivādin school of Buddhism. One section is definitely described as a Mahāyāna-sūtra, while the body of the work is still of the Hīnayāna school. Its date is uncertain, though one famous tale, the Śārdūlaka-rṇāvadāna, was rendered into Chinese in A.D. 265; it cannot, however, be earlier than the 1st cent. A.D. It tells how the Buddha by his persuasive skill converts to Buddhism the maiden Prakṛiti, who has fallen in deep love for his beloved disciple Ānanda and would have won him from his vows, had not the Buddha come to his rescue. The gem of the collection is, however, the pathetic legend of Kunāla, son of Aśoka, whose false stepmother succeeds in poisoning his father's mind against him and in having him blinded without his feeling any hatred or reproach for her. There is still a more gruesome and repellent theme in the tale of Rūpavatī who severs her own breasts in order to feed a starving mother when on the point of eating her own child; Rūpavatī is extolled as a pattern of the Bodhisattva, who seeks to save the whole world and is accorded a somewhat quaint honour of being reborn a prince, Rūpavata.

The work is written in prose mixed with gāthās and pieces of ornate stanzas; the language is debased Sanskrit marked by Prakritism.

DIWAN CHAND (1878-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Fundamentals of Religion, Short Studies in Upanishads, Short Studies in Bhagavadgītā, Darśana Saṅgraha and Dharma (the last two works in Hindi).

DIXIT, ŚAṆKARA BĀLAKRISHṆA (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is History of Indian Astronomy (in Marathi and in Hindi).

DIXIT, V.V. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Relation of the Epics to the Brāhmaṇa Literature (Poona, 1950).

DOHĀKOŚA. Collection of Dohās, composed by the Siddha poets : Sarahapā, Mīnapā, Luipā, Sabarpa, Ḍombipā, Śāntipā, Kaṇhapā, etc. from the 8th to the 12th centuries; the Padas, composed by these Siddhas are collected in Charyāpada or Charyāgīta.

The manuscript was first discovered in the beginning of 20th century by Mahāmahopādhyāy Har Prasad Shastri in Nepal Durbar Library. The Dohākośa was edited by M. Shahidullah (Paris, 1928) and by Prabodh Chandra Bāgchī (Calcutta, 1939), while the Charāypada has been ed. by Prabodh Chandra Bāgchī under the title Charyāgītikośa (1956). Many more examples have been brought to light by Rāhul Sāṅkṛityāyan (q.v.). The theme of the Dohās is Tantic Yoga-Sādhana, mysticism, religious and philosophical beliefs with ethical strains. The traditional name for the language used is termed 'Sandhyā Bhāshā', i.e., 'Twilight Tongue', quite close to Apabhramśa. See Sarahapā.

DOHĀPĀHUDA. An Apabhramśa poetical work by Joindu (q.v.), written in the Dohā metre.

DOHĀ PĀHUḌA. An Apabhramśa work (Script 1545) in 333 Dohās, composed by Mahachanda Muni, which is of spiritual and religious character.

DOHĀSĀRA. See Yogichandra Muni.

DONNER, OTTO (1835-1909). An Indologist of Finland, who was the first Professor of Sanskrit and Indo-European linguistics at the University of Helsinki. He pub. a thesis comparing the Indian and Finnish cosmogonic ideas (1863) and a description of Pinḍapitrāyājña (1870).

DOWSON, JOHN. An English Indologist, whose chief work is A Classical Dictionary of Hindu Mythology and Religion, Geography, History and Literature (1879).

DĀHYĀYANA-GRĪHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

DĀHYĀYANA-ŚRAUTASŪTRA. See Śrautasūtra.

DRAUPADĪ-SVAYAMVARA (Sanskrit). See Vijayapāla.

DRAVYĀNUYOGA. Prakrit works belonging to the secondary or substitute canon of Digambara Jainas; these include the philosophical works of Kundakunda (q.v.), Umāsvāti's Tattvārthādhigama-sūtra, with the comments. and Samantabhadra's Āptamīmāṃsā, with the commentaries.

DRESDEN, M.J. A modern Indologist, who tr. into English the Mānava-gṛīhyasūtra (Batavia, 1941).

DRIDHABALA (fl. 8th or 9th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit writer on medicine, who was son of Kapilabala. He is said to have revised and enlarged the Charaka-saṁhitā (q.v.) of Agniveśa. The extant Charaka-saṁhitā is the result of revision and addition by him.

DRISHṬĀNTA ŚATAKA. See Kusumadeva.

DRISHṬIVĀDA. See Diṭṭhivāya.

DŪHĀ MĀTRIKĀ. A small Apabhramśa work of some 57 Dohās, which is didactic in nature. Nothing definite can be said about its author and date.

DUḤKHA BHANJANA (fl. 19th cent.). A Sanskrit poet of Benares and author of Chan- draṣekhara-charita, a poem on the feats of Śiva.

DUMEZIL, G. A French Indologist, whose chief work is Les Dieux des Indo-Europeans (Paris, 1952); he has also made a study on the god Varuṇa in his book Ouranos-Varuṇa (1934) on the close relationship between Ouranos and Varuṇa as also on Mitra and Varuṇa in his study Mitra-Varuṇa (1948).

DUMONT, PAUL-EMILE (d. 1968). A Belgian Indologist, who spent a considerable period in America and is the author of works: Aśvamedha (1927; a popular work on its being a detailed study on one subject) and Agnihotra; he ed. and tr. Īśvaragītā as also tr. portions of Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa. His other studies are 'Indo-Aryan names from Mitanni, Nuzi, and Syrian documents', 'The Legend of Sitā in the Kūrma Purāṇa' and on Vedic words. See Albright, William F.

DUNKEL, G. A modern American Indologist, who at present teaches in the Princeton University. His field of specialization is Sanskrit classics.

DUPERRON, ANQUETIL (1731-1805). A French writer, who made a Latin tr. of the Upanishads from the Persian version prepared by Dārā Shukoh; it was the Latin tr. that was read by the German philosopher, Arthur Schopenhauer. See Upanishad.

DURGĀBHAKTI-TARAṅGIṆĪ. A Sanskrit work in 1000 verses by Vidyapati (q.v.) on the famous Durgā festival during autumn.

DURGĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit commentator on the Nirukta (q.v.); some scholars identify him with Durgasimha (q.v.). The comm. explains every word of the Nirukta and was regarded by Sāyaṇa and others as authoritative. Durgāchārya flourished between 6th and 14th centuries.

DURGĀDĀS LĀHIRI. A Vedic scholar, who has tr. into Bengali the Sāmaveda (1919), the Śukla Yajurveda (1919) and the Atharvaveda.

DURGĀDATTA ŚĀSTRĪ. A Sanskrit poet, whose Madhuvarshaṇam (Hoshiarpur; 1972) in 7 cantos contains a message from a young lady to her husband asking him not to return without defeating the enemy in the Indo-China war. He has also published two dramas: Vatsalā and Tṛinajataka (1984; against social evils like bonded labour and the caste-system).

DURGĀDATTA SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Rāshṭra-patha-pradarśana (1967) and Tarjanī (1970) are collections on modern problems at home and abroad, on teachers and students, parents and children, marriage, infidelity, smoking, drinking, officialdom, bribery and so on.

DURGĀMOHAN BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A Vedic scholar, who has ed. the Chhândogya-brāhmaṇa (1958), with the comm. of Guṇavishṇu and Sāyaṇa.

DURGĀNANDA SVĀMĪ (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose autobiography in fine prose was published in the Vidodaya.

DURGA PRASADA. An Arya-samajist scholar, who tr. Dayānanda Sarasvati's Satyārtha Prakāśa into English (Lahore, 1908). Durgā Prasāda was a native of Sāgar in Madhya Pradesh.

DURGĀ-SAPTASATI. Same as Chandī (q.v.).

DURGASIMHA (fl. c. 800). Author of the well-known Sanskrit comm. called Kātantra-vṛitti or Vṛitti on the Kātantra (q.v.) or Kalūpa-vyākaraṇa. He himself wrote a Tikā on the Kātantra-vṛitti, a Parabhāṣā-vṛitti is also attributed to him. Though Kātantra may have been very old in its origin, there is at present no work of this school earlier than that of Durgasimha ; the school, however, spread over Bengal and Kashmir. See Durgā-chārya.

DURGHATA-VṚITTI. A Sanskrit grammatical work by Śaraṇadeva (q.v.), which deals with the difficult passages of Pāṇini's text. It was written under the supervision of Sarvarakshita.

DURGOTSAVA-VIVEKA. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Śulapāṇi (q.v.), which discusses all the aspects of Durgā-pūjā.

DURGOTSAVA-VIVEKA. A Sanskrit work by Śrīnātha Āchārya-chuḍāmaṇi, teacher of Raghunandana (q.v.).

DURLABHARĀJA. See Jagaddeva.

DUROISELIE, CH. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are : A Practical Grammar of the Pali Language (Rangoon, 1906), ed. of Dhammapada-aṭṭhakathā and ed. and Eng. tr. of Jina-charita (with W.H.D. Rouse, Rangoon, 1906).

DURRANY, MOHAMMAD KIFĀN. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is : The Gītā and the Qurān : A Comparative Study (1983).

DUSDIE MALAKUN, (Mrs). A modern Thai scholar, who has tr. into Thai the Svapnavāsavadattā of Bhāsa and the Ratnāvalī of Śrī Harsha.

DŪTA-GHAṬOTKACHA. A Sanskrit drama in one Act by Bhāsa (q.v.), based on the Mahābhārata.

The Kauravas are delighted over the death of Abhimanyu, son of Arjuna, at the hands of Jayadratha, though Dhṛitarāshṭra warns them of the impending disaster ; Ghatotkacha (son of Bhīma) appears to them as a messenger (dūta) and predicts the doom of the Kauravas at the hands of Arjuna.

DŪTĀṆGADA. A Sanskrit shadow-play (Chhāyānāṭaka) by Subhaṭa (q.v. ; fl. 13th cent.), enacted in the reign of king Tribhuvana-Pāla Deva of Anhilvid about 1243.

It describes in four scenes the embassy of Aṅgada, who is despatched to demand restoration of Sitā from Rāvāṇa ; there is a regular prologue. The story, however, goes beyond this : when in the fourth scene two Gandharvas report that Rāvāṇa is slain and Rāma enters in triumph. The work exists in various forms but a longer and a shorter recension are distinguished.

Outwardly dramatic in form, it is devoid of any dramatic action, being merely a collection of poetical stanzas.

DŪTA-VĀKYA. A Sanskrit drama (Vyāyoga) in one Act by Bhāsa (q.v.), based on a scene from the Mahābhārata.

Kṛishṇa comes as the ambassador (dūta) seeking peace with Duryodhana, but at the time Bhīshma has been made the chief of the Kaurava forces. The herald announces the arrival of Nārayaṇa but Duryodhana forbids that any respect or honour be shown to him. He even goes to the extent of seating himself before a picture in which is painted the dishonour shown to Draupadī, when Yudhishtira gambled her away. Kṛishṇa's entry makes a great impression on all by his majesty ; even Duryodhana falls down from his seat. Kṛishṇa demands the half of the realm for the Pāṇḍavas, which Duryodhana refuses ; he even seeks to imprison the envoy. Kṛishṇa gets infuriated and calls for his magic weapons, but finally, he subdues his wrath and receives homage from Dhṛitarāshṭra. The mission, however, remains unsuccessful.

DUTT, B. B. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are : Aryanisation of India (1925) and Town Planning in Ancient India (1925).

DUTT, M.N. A modern scholar, who has ed. Agni Purāṇa (4 vols.), Garuḍa Purāṇa (3 vols.), Mahānirvāṇa Tantra and The Dharmasāstras—Hindu Religious Codes.

DUTT, ROMESH CHANDER (fl. 19th cent.). A civil servant, historian and Sanskritist, who is known for his works : Ancient India, Buddhism and Buddhist Civilization in India, editions of the Rāmāyana and Mahābhārata (condensed into English verse); all these works are still reprinted.

DUTTA, NALINAKSHA. A Buddhist scholar, whose chief works are : Early Monastic Buddhism (Vols. I-II), Early History of the Spread of Buddhism and the Buddhist Schools (1925), Aspects of Mahayāna Buddhism and its Relation to Hinayāna (1930) and Three Principal Schools of Early Buddhism.

DVIJENDRA NĀTHA ŚĀSTRĪ, the late. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who composed Dayānandodaya, a Mahākāvya on the life and mission of Svāmi Dayānanda Sarasvatī. His Saṃskṛita-sāhitya-vimarśa (Meerut, 1957) is a history of Sanskrit literature in Sanskrit.

DVIRŪPAKOŚA. See Purushottamadeva.

DVITĪYA-RĀJATARANĠINĪ. A Sanskrit continuation by Jonarāja (q.v.) of the Rājataranī (q.v.). Designed to bring the history down to the time of the author's patron Sultan Zain-ul-Ābidin (1420-70), it was left incomplete due to the author's death in 1459.

DVIVEDI, H.P. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Studies in Pāṇini : Technical Terms of the Aṣṭādhyāyī.

DVYAŚRAYA-KĀVYA. See Kumārapālu-charita.

DWIVEDI, R.C. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who has brought out a revised edition (1976-77) of Ruyyaka's Alaṅkāra-sarvasva with the comm. of Vidyā Chakravartin.

DYĀ DVIVEDA (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, whose Nīti-mañjari illustrates some 200 verses of maxims by tales taken from Śāyana's Rigveda-bhāṣya; the Nīti-mañjari (1494) is of great help in understanding Vedic mythology.

DYEN, ISIDORE. A modern Indologist, who produced a thesis on the Sanskrit Indeclinables (Apyayas, Upasargas, Nipītas). This study and concordance was pub. as a supplement to Language by the Linguistic Society of America (1939).

DYNOWSKA, WANDA (d. 1971). A Polish lady, who tr. works from various Indian literatures into Polish. From Sanskrit she tr. Bhagavadgītā and other works in the first volume of the series 'Indian Anthology'. She founded an Indo-Polish Library in Madras and died in Bangalore. A collaborator of Gandhiji, she was known under the India name Umādevī.

EDGERTON, FRANKLIN (1885-1963). A celebrated Indologist, whose monumental work is Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit Grammar and Dictionary (New Haven, 1953). Edgerton embarked upon this immense task in the nineteen-thirties and a number of articles preceded the publication of his grammar and dictionary. However, only after the pub. of his work did Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit become the subject of a lively discussion. His other works in this field are : Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit Language and Literature (Varanasi, 1954) and Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit Reader (1953). From 1926 to 1953, Edgerton was associated with Yale University in America and did a great deal of work on the Pañchatantra (Pañchatantra Reconstruct ¹, 2 Vols.), Veda, besides the Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit. With Bloomfield, he prepared the first two volumes of Vedic Variants (1930, 1932), while the third volume was prepared by him in collaboration with M.B. Emeneau (1934). He ed. also the Sabhāparva in the critical ed. of the Mahābhārata, pub. by the Bhaṇḍārkar Oriental Research Institute. He was also interested in trs. of Sanskrit classics: Vikrama's adventures, Bhagavadgītā and Māghadūta, the last one in verse form done along with his wife. The Beginnings of Indian Philosophy (London, 1965) is a translation.

EDHOLM, E. AF. A modern Swedish Indologist, who, along with C. Suneson, has pub. "The Seven Bulls and Kṛishṇa's Marriage to Nīlā/Nappinnai in Sanskrit and Tamil Literature" (1972).

EDMUNDS, ALBERT J. A foreign Indologist, whose chief works are : Eng. tr. of Dhammapada (under the title Hymns of the Faith; Chicago, 1902), Buddhist Texts quoted as Scripture by the Gospel of John and Buddhist Loans to Christianity in The Monist (1912).

EDSMAN, C.M. A Swedish scholar, whose chief work is Mysticism, Historical and Contemporary : An Introduction (1970).

FELSINGH, H.F. An Indologist, who ed. the Shadvimśa-brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda with Vijnāpanābhāṣya (Leyden, 1908).

EGEROD, SOREN. A Danish scholar, who, as the chief editor, has pub. bulletins and reports of the Scandinavian Institute of Asian Studies, Copenhagen, and Acta Orientalia, pub. by Munksgaard Copenhagen.

EGGELING, JULIUS (1842-1918). A German Indologist, who studied Indology in Breslau and Berlin and went to London in 1867 to work on Indian manuscripts. As assistant of Max Mueller, he compiled an Index to Max Mueller's edition of the Prātiśākhya (1869) and checked the Index Verborum of the Padapāṭha of the R̥gveda prepared by Max Mueller. From 1869-75, he was Secretary and Librarian of the Royal Asiatic Society, London, from 1872-75 also Professor at the University College, London. From 1875 onwards, he held the Professorship of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology at Edinburgh. He returned to Germany in 1914 at the outbreak of World War I.

Eggeling's earlier works are: ed. of a short grammar, The Kātantra with the Commentary of Durgasiṃha, with Notes and Indexes (in the Bibliotheca Indica, Calcutta 1874-78), and also Vardhamana's Gaṇaratna-mahodadhi with the Author's Commentary (London, 1879-80) and The Catalogue of Buddhist Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Possession of the Royal Asiatic Society (London 1875; in collaboration with E.B. Cowell).

Eggeling's two chief works, however, are: Tr of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (5 vols. in the Sacred Books of the East Series); in the Introduction to the first vol. he discusses the caste system, the priests, the Vedic gods, as well as problems of the text. In the following volumes, he deals with the Soma and other sacrifices. The tr. has been useful to the grammarians as well as philologists. The second major work is: Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the India office Library; Pt. I, the Catalogue of Vedic works, appeared in 1887; Pt. II is a catalogue of works on grammar, metrics, music, and lexicography; Pt. III has a description of manuscripts on religious law (Dharma); Pt. IV deals with philosophical and Tantra literature; in Pt. V works on medicine, astronomy, mathematics, architecture and technical sciences are treated; Pt. VI is devoted to Epic literature; the contents of Pt. VII are poetic compositions in verse and prose and dramatic literature.

EIMER, H. A modern German Indologist of Bonn, whose special field of study is Buddhism.

EKAKKHARA-KOSA. A renowned Pali dictionary by Saddhammakitti Thera (q.v.) of Burma written in 1465. Modelled on the Sanskrit works of this type, monosyllabic words are compiled in it in metrical form.

EKĀKSHARA-RATNA-MĀLĀ. See Mādhya-vāchāra.

EKĀVALI. A Sanskrit work on poetics by Vidyādhara (q.v.). Consisting of Kārikā, Vṛitti, and examples, the contents of its eight chapters are: discussion of the definition of Kāvya on the pattern of Dhvanyāloka (I), three Vṛttis of Abhidhū, Lakṣaṇā and Uyāñjanā (II), Dhvani (III-IV), three Guṇas, three Rittis and Doshas (V-VI), and poetic figures (VII-VIII). The chief merit of the work lies in its systematic compilation and arrangement; it is modelled on the Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.), while the treatment of poetic figures is mainly based on Ruyyaka (q.v.).

EAUTIARAKA-ĪYA. Same as Anguttara-nikāya (q.v.).

FLAN HUR P. RĀGHAVAN. A modern Sanskrit writer, who has translated (1984) Kṛṣṇan Āśan's minor poem, Nalini into Sanskrit.

ELIADE, MIRCEA. An American Indologist, who has pub. a large treatise on Yoga, he has ed. along with J.M. Kitagawa, The History of Religions (4th Impression, 1969).

ELIOT, SIR CHARLES. An English Indologist, whose chief work is Hinduism and Buddhism (3 Vols., London, 1922).

ELIZARENKOVA, T.Y. (Mrs.). A modern Russian Indologist, who had studied with Renou (q.v.) at Paris. Her studies are on grammar, phonetics, verbal system and textual criticism; along with V.N. Toporov, she is the author of Jazyk Pali (1965), Pali grammar in Russian. She has completed the 'Vedic Grammar', which is the first of its kind in Russian. She has tr. selected hymns of the Rigveda (1972) and selections from the Atharvaveda (1976) as also pub. articles: 'Researches in the dischronical phonology of the Indo-Aryan Languages' (1974), 'Phoneme distribution within the verbal stem in the Rigveda', 'Problems of the history of languages and culture of the peoples of India', etc.

ELWELL, L.H. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is Nine Jātakas (Boston, 1886).

EMENEAU, MURRAY BARNSON (1904-)
A celebrated American Indologist, who is Professor Emeritus of Sanskrit and General Linguistics, University of California, Berkeley, U.S.A. He is well-known for his work in Sanskrit as well as for his contribution to Dravidian Linguistics, both by himself and in co-operation with T. Burrow, Boden Professor of Sanskrit in Oxford. His relevant chief works, reviews and articles are given in a chronological order : Jambhaladatta's Version of the Vetālapañchavimsati (1934, reprint 1967), Vedic Variants (vol. III, with Maurice Bloomfield and Franklin Edgerton; 1934), "A story of Vikram's birth and accession", A union list of printed Indic texts and translations in American Libraries (1935, reprint 1967), "Central Asian versions of the Vetālapañchavimsati" (1936), "American research in India" "Review of Foundations of Language by Louis H. Gray" (1940), "Review of the Burushaski Language by D.L.R. Lorimer, The Dāmāki Language by D.L.R. Lorimer and Language Hunting in the Karakoram, by E.O. Lorimer" (1940), "The faithful dog as security for a debt: a companion to the brahman and the mongoose story-type" (1941, 1942), "Review of Pūshan in the Rigveda, by S.D.

Atkins", "The Sindhuvāra tree in Sanskrit Literature" (1944), "The Nasal Phonemes of Sanskrit", (1946), "The strangling figs in Sanskrit literature" (1949), "Notes on Śriharsha's Naiṣṭha-charita" (1951), "Sanskrit Sandhi and Exercises" (1952, 1958, 1966, with A. van Nooten, 1968), "Review of La grammaire de Pāṇini by Louis Renou" (1953), Kolami, a Dravidian Language (1955, reprint 1961), "Signed verses by Sanskrit Poets", "India and Linguistics" (1955), "Review of Trishashīśalākāpuruṣa-charitra, tr. by Helen M. Johnson" (1959), "Śriharsha's Naishadha-charita and the Mahābhārata critical edition" (1960), "Nāgapāśa, Nāgabandha, Sarpabandha, and related words", A Dravidian Etymological Dictionary (with T. Burrow; 1961, 1966, 1970), Dravidian Borrowings from Indo-Aryan (with T. Burrow; 1962), Brahui and Dravidian Comparative Grammar (1962), Kālidāsa's Abhijñāna-śākuntalam translated from the Bengali recension (1962, reprint 1976), "Barkcloth in India—Sanskrit valkala" (1962), "New Brahui Etymologies" (1962), "India and Historical Grammar" (1965), "The Dialects of Old Indo-Aryan" (1966), "Style and Meaning in an Oral Literature" (1966), A Dravidian Etymological Dictionary (2nd ed., with T. Burrow, 1984) and Language and Linguistic Area: Essays by Murray B. Emeneau, selected by Anwar S. Dil (1980), etc.

He worked in India in the Nilgiris on Koṭas and Toḍas on whose texts, language and anthropology, he produced a number of works. Emeneau believes that a basic competence in Sanskrit is a necessity for linguistic work in India, whatever the language: Indo-Aryan or Dravidian.

ENSINK, J. A Dutch Indologist, who has tr. Rāshṭrapāla-pariprichchhā into Eng. under the title The Question of Rāshṭrapāla (Zwolle, 1952); the tr. is based on the Sanskrit, Tibetan and Chinese texts.

EPICS. See Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata.

ERHARD, ADOLF. A modern Czech Indologist, whose special study is on the development of old Indian philology and comparative linguistics.

ERMAN, V.G. A modern Russian Indologist, whose study is on Sanskrit dramaturgy and drama; he tr. Mudrārākshasa into Russian, and with Kalyanov (q.v.), pub. a book on Kālidāsa (1976) in the series 'Writers and Thinkers of the East'. Erman's research students are engaged on Indo-European parallels of Vedic deities Mitra-Varuṇa, tr. of stories from Kathāsaritsāgara etc. Along with E.N. Tyomkin, he has pub. "The Three Great Legends of the Ancient India" (1978) and "Myths of Ancient India" (1975).

ERVIN, SAKTAY. A modern Hungarian scholar, whose chief works are: India, My Years in India, Wisdom of India and Rāja-yoga.

ESCHMANN, ANNCHARLOTT, MISS (1941-77). A promising young German scholar, who was interested in the interaction between tribal and folk religion and Brahmanic Hindu traditions. She was a member of a team of scholars from the South Asia Institute at Heidelberg and worked on the Orissa Research Project.

Daughter of Professor Ernst Wilhelm Eschmann, she studied Protestant Theology, Comparative Religion and Indology in Munich. She did field work on the Mahima Dharmins, a hitherto rather unknown Hindu reform movement that turned against the Jagannatha worship. After completing this study, she turned to the origin of the Jagannatha cult in Puri. She visited Orissa frequently and on her last field trip, she contracted Malaria and died in Delhi.

Along with H. Kulke and G.C. Tripathi, she brought out jointly The Cult of Jagannātha and the Regional Tradition of Orissa (New Delhi, 1978). Her papers are: "Hinduization of Tribal Deities in Orissa: the Śākta and Śiva Typology" "The Vaiṣṇava Typology in Hinduization and the Origin of Jagannātha" and "Prototypes of the Navakalevara Ritual and their Relation to the Jagannātha Cult". She also pub. Religion in Modern Indian Literature (1974).

ESTELER, A. A modern Indologist, who is of the view that the original Kavi-text of the Vedic Samhitās can be reconstructed by applying the principles of metre and rhythm to the Samhitā-texts.

EWALD, HEINRICH (1803-75). A German scholar, whose main interest lay in Hebrew and Arabic studies, but he had a good command of Sanskrit as well. He was full Professor at the University of his native town, Goettingen. So far Indology is concerned, he wrote several papers on older Sanskrit metres, on Afghan or Pushto language, which he thought was not Semitic, on Indian manuscripts at the University Library at Tuebingen, on Kālidāsa's Śrutabodha (a small text on metrics, ascribed to Kālidāsa), on the Indian poem on the bird Jataka and on the Bhāgavata Purāṇa according to Burnouf's edition and the Tuebingen Manuscript.

Ewald was involved in the political events of 1866. In 1874 he was found guilty of a libel on prince Bismarck. The following year he died.

EZHUTTACHCHHAN, K.N. A well-known Malayalam poet, whose Sanskrit Mahākāvya, Keralodaśa (1977) in 21 cantos containing nearly 2,300 verses, deals with the entire history (from the beginning to the present day) of Kerala, political, social and cultural against the background of South Indian history. The author prefers to interpret history from the Marxian point of view.

F

FADDEGON, B. A Dutch Indologist, whose chief works are : Śaṅkara's Gītābhāṣya (Amsterdam, 1906), Studies on Pāṇini, Eng. tr. of Kundakurda's Pravachanasāra (Cambridge, 1935) and a work on Vaiśeṣhika.

FAHS, ACHIM. A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Syntax und Nominalkomposition der Pali-Sprache (1970) and Grammatik der Pal-Sprache. His special field of research is the syntax of Pali.

FARQUHAR, J.N. A foreign Indologist, whose chief works are : Outline of the Religious Literature of India (Oxford, 1920), The Crown of Hinduism, Modern Religious Movements in India and A Primer of Hinduism.

FATEH SINGH. A modern scholar, whose studies are on the gods Indra, Rudra, etc.; he is also the author of Vaidika-darśana, a work on Vedic philosophy, and of Vedic Etymology FAUCHE, HIPPOLYTE (1797-1869). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Fr. tr. of Gīta-govinda (1950), of Śiśupāla-vadha, of Daśakumāra-charita, of Mṛichchhakaṭika, of Rāmāyaṇa (10 Vols., 1954-58) and of parts of the Mahābhārata (9 Vols., 1863-70) and a study : Bhartṛihari et al Pantchachika de chaura.

FAUSBOLL, V. (1821-1908). A Danish Indologist, who pub. the Dhammapada with a Latin tr. and extracts from the Dhammatthakathā. He pub. also some Jātakas from the Jātaka collection, e.g., Five Jātakas (Copenhagen, 1861), Ten Jātakas (Copenhagen, 1872), Eng. tr. of Suttanipāta (under Sacred Books of the East Series) and Indian Mythology (London, 1902).

FAY, EDWIN W. An Indologist, whose chief work is The Ṛigveda Mantras in the Gṛihya-sūtras (1899).

FEER, LEON. A French Indologist, whose chief works are : French tr. of Dhammapada, ed. of Pañchagati-dīpana, ed. of Samyuttanikāya (1884-98) and Study of Jātaka : Analytical and Critical.

FENICIO, GIACOMO (d. 1632). An Italian Christian missionary (died at Cochin), who wrote a book dealing with Indian tradition as represented in the Purāṇas.

FERGUSON, JAMES. An English Indologist, whose chief works are : Tree and Serpent Worship (on the monuments of Sānchi; London, 1868) and History of Indian and Far Eastern Architecture; he wrote also articles on the Gupta Era.

FERNER. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Complete Index to Abhidhāna-pradīpikā.

FERREIRA, MARIO (1952-). An Indologist, who is Professor of Sanskrit Language and Literature at the University of Sao Paulo, Sao Paulo, Brazil. He is Treasurer of Latin-American Association of Sanskritists His chief works (in Portuguese) are: "Introduction to Classical Sanskrit" (with Fonseca; 1978), "Sanskrit Literature: An Anthology" (with Fonseca; 1979), "The 'Word' in the R̥gveda-saṃhitā. A Contribution to the Study of Vedic Lexicology" (1983) and articles on Sanskrit grammar, on Amaru's poems and on Viṣṇu's Avatāras.

FICK, A A German Indologist, whose Worterbuch der Indogermanischen Grundsprache (Goettingen, 1868-76) is a comparative dictionary of principal Indo-European languages.

FICK, RICHARD (1867-1944). A German Indologist, who obtained his doctorate in 1888 for his thesis on "A Jaina recension of the legend of Sagara" from Kiel. His best known work in the field of Indology (in German) and tr. into English is: "Social Organisation in north-Eastern India during the Buddha's period". He discussed the caste theories and showed that Brahmanical concepts were accepted by Buddhist monks. He also wrote a Sanskrit grammar, Praktische Grammatik der Sanskritsprache, a 4th ed of which appeared in 1922. Fick left Kiel to take up work in the Royal Library in Berlin, where he edited the "General Catalogue of Journals and Periodicals" From 1921-32, he was Director of the University Library at Goettingen, where he did much to build up the Oriental Section. Besides his contribution to Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics, he wrote many papers on library science, Javanese Art, the origin of Indian caste and on Vessantara Jataka. He died in Goettingen.

FILIPPI, BELLONI. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief works are the Italian trs. of Vāśavadattā, Chārudatta, etc.

FILIPSKY, JAN (1943-) A Czech Indologist, who, in cooperation with J. Vacek, produced a monograph in Czech on Aśoka (Prague, 1970) and prepared a chapter on India for a compendious History of the Antiquity. He also tr. into Czech the Bhagavadgītā (Prague, 1976; again in collaboration with Jaroslav Vacek).

FILLIOZAT, JEAN. A modern French Indologist, whose chief works are: Les échanges de l' Inde et de l' Empire romain (Revue Historique, 1949), Les relations extérieures de l' Inde (Pondicherry, 1956), L' Inde Classique (Vol. I-III, 1947, 1953, 1953; in collaboration), La Doctrine Classique de la Médecine Indienne (Paris, 1949; Eng. tr.: The Classical Doctrine of Indian Medicine: Its Origins and Greek Parallels; tr. done by Dev Rā Chanana; Delhi, 1964), Magie et médecine (Paris, 1948) and Political History of India. He is also engaged in French tr. of the Buddhist Canon.

FILLIOZAT, PIERRE. A French Indologist, whose chief study in French is on the Mahā-bhāṣya of Patañjali along with the commentaries: Kāyaśa's Pradīpa and Nāgeśa's Uddyota (1978).

FINDLY, ELLISON BANKS (1949-) An American Indologist (Assistant Professor, Department of Religion, Trinity College, Hartford), whose works are: From the Courts of India, Indian Miniatures From the Worcester Art Museum (1981), The Islamic Impact (co-editor with Yvonne Yazbeck Haddad; 1984) and Women, Religion and Social Change (co-editor with Yvonne Yazbeck Haddad; 1985), several articles, e.g., on Vedic Apām Napāt, on Jātavedas, on Vaiśvānara, Gārgī at the King's Court, etc. and reviews of books.

FINOT, LOUIS (1865-1935). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : ed. of Rāṣṭrapāla-pariprichchhā (1898), French tr. of Bodhicharyāvātāra (Paris 1920). 'The Legend of Buddhaghosha' (in French; Paris, 1921), ed. of Sanskrit text of the Prātimoksha-sūtra, French

tr. of Milindapañha. (Paris, 1923), a paper on Sanskrit Vinaya and Kālidāsa in China.

FIOOK, KAROLY. A Hungarian Indologist, who pub. trs. of Hitopadeśa (1905), Śakuntalā (1887), Nala and Damayantī (1885) and Sāvitrī (1889).

FISCHER, EBERHARD (1941-). A German Indologist, who is co-author with Jyotindra Jain of Kunst und Religion in Indien; 2500 Jahre Jainismus (Zurich, 1974) and of Iconography of the Jainas (2 vols., Leiden, 1976).

He also takes interest in tribal and folk art.

FISCHER, K. A German scholar, whose chief work is: Schoepfungen Indischer Kunst (Creations of Indian Art; Koeln, 1959).

FISER, PHIL. IVO. A modern Danish Indologist, who is Incharge of the Department of Indology, University of Copenhagen, Copenhagen, Denmark. His chief works are: Social Conditions in Ancient India according to the Jātakas (1952), The Problem of the Setṭhi in Buddhist Jātakas (1954), Ancient Indian Erotics of the Preclassical Period (1964), Contributions to A Critical Pali Dictionary, Contributions to Pali Tipiṭaka Concordance and Indian Erotics of the Oldest Period (1966). At present, he is working on a fascicle for J. Gonda's "A History of Indian Literature" on the Kāmaśāstras literature (forthcoming). His research is carried on with the object of describing "The World of the Indo-Aryans as seen by themselves".

FLEET, J.F. (1847-1917). An English Indologist, whose chief work is Pali, Sanskrit and old Canarese Inscriptions (1876).

FLORENZ, C.A. A German Indologist, who tr. into German 1-50 hymns of 6th Kānda of the Atharvaveda (Goettingen, 1887).

FOLKERT, KENDALL WAYNE (1942-85).

An American Indologist, who was Associate Professor of Religion, Central Michigan University, Michigan. A specialist of Jainism, his articles which appeared in journals and books are: "The Jainas", "Jaina Studies: Japan, Europe, India", "A Re-examination of the Jain 'Canon' of Scripture", "Scripture as Phenomenological Category", "Samosarana: The Jina at the Center", "The gachchha and Jain History", "Jainism", "Scripture and Continuity in the Jaina Tradition", "Jainism", "The Jaina Stupa at Ancient Mathura: The Heritage of Late-Victorian Interpretation" (in press) and "The 'Canon' of 'Scripture'" (forthcoming). He was killed in an accident at Ahmedabad, while on a study leave in India.

FONSECA, CARLOS ALBERTO DA (1949-). An Indologist, who is Professor of Sanskrit Language and Literature at the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil. He is President of the Latin-American Association of Sanskritists. His chief publications (in Portuguese) are: "Introduction to Classical Sanskrit" (with Ferreira, Mario; 1978), "Sanskrit Literature: An Anthology" (with Ferreira; 1979) "Śabdaghama, the 'internal fire of sign'" (in Sanskrit; 1982) and many articles on Kālidāsa and his works. He and his friends have constituted a theatre "Bharatanāṭyadarpana", where he has staged Kālidāsa's Abhijñānaśākuntalam.

FORMICHI, CARLO. An Italian Indologist, who has tr. into Italian the Buddha-charita (1912).

FORSTER, GEORG (1754-94). A German Indologist, whose chief work is the German tr. of William Jones' Eng. tr. of Kālidāsa's Śakuntalā (1791); the tr. awakened in the highest degree the enthusiasm of the German poet, Goethe.

FORSTER, H.P. An Indologist, whose chief work is An Essay on the Principles of Sanskrit Grammar (Calcutta, 1810).

FOUCAUX, PHILIPPE EDOUARD. (1811-94). A French scholar, whose chief work is Lalitavistara (Tibetan version with French tr., 1847-48); he also tr. into French some episodes from the Mahabhārata.

FOUCHER, ALFRED (1865-1952). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : L'Iconographie bouddhique de l'Ind (2 Vols.), The influence of Indian Art in Cambodia and Java (3 Vols. 1900, 1905, 1922), The Greco-Buddhist Art of Gāndhāra (spread over half a century, 1905, 1908, 1951); with Sir John Marshall and N.G. Majumdar : The Monuments of Sāncī (Delhi, 1931); La vie du Buddha (Paris, 1949); an analysis of the Tarkasaṅgraha (1910), Beginning of Buddhist Art and Other Essays and Notes on Indian Geography of Gāndhār.

FOWLER, MURRAY. An American Indologist, who, along with Myles Dillon (an Irish Sanskritist) and V. Raghavan, made an Eng. tr. of Nāṭaka-lakṣaṇa-ratnakōśa (1960), a work on Sanskrit dramaturgy.

FRANCIS, H.T. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is Jātaka Tales (written in collaboration with others; 1895-1907).

FRANCKE, AUGUST HERMANN (1870-1930). A German Indologist, who worked for 14 years as a Christian missionary in the western Himalayas. His knowledge of a number of dialects enabled him to collect folksongs and hitherto unknown versions of the Kesar Saga. He took an interest in the history of Western Tibet and in pre-Buddhist religion, using inscriptions, oral traditions, and manuscripts as sources. His chief works are : Sketch of a Ladakhi Grammar (1901), Antiquities of Indian Tibet (2 vols.), A History of Western Tibet, one of the unknown empires (1907), A Lower Ladakhi Version of the Kesar Saga, The Paladins of the Kesar Saga, A Collection of Sagas from Lower Ladakh, "Tibetan marriage songs", etc.

FRANK, OTTMAR. A German Indologist, who founded a German journal, Vjāsa in 1826; he wrote also a monograph about the Indian connections with Egypt with particular reference to mythology.

FRANKE, RUDOLF OTTO (1862-1928). A German Indologist, who specialized in Buddhist studies and the Pali language. His excellent translations of Buddhist texts helped to make the religion of the Buddha known in Germany. In 1885, he obtained his doctorate on Liṅgānuśāsana by Hemachandra, which he ed. and translated. In 1896, he was appointed Professor at the University at Königsberg and held this post till the end of his life. His chief works (in German) are : "The Indian rules of gender with the text of Liṅgānuśāsana of Śākaṭāyana, Harshavardhana, and Vararuchi, together with extracts from the commentaries of Yakshavardhana and Śabarasaṁvāmin and with an appendix on Indian names" (1890), "The rules of cases of Pāṇini compared to the use of cases in Pali and Aśokan inscriptions", "History and Critique of indigenous Pali Grammar and Lexicography", "Pali und Sanskrit" (1902), a tr. of Dīghanikāya, of the Dhammapadam (1923) "Study in Vinaya-piṭaka", "Study in Suttanipāta", ed. and tr. of Mahāvastu (pub. posthumously). When Franke died, he left behind a nearly complete manuscript on the life of the Buddha and materials for a concordance of Pali texts.

FRANZ, H.G. A German scholar, who has published Hinduistische und Islamische Kunst Indiens (Leipzig, 1967).

FRAUWALLNER, ERICH (1898-1974). An Austrian Indologist, who devoted his whole life to the study of Indian philosophy. In 1939, Frauwallner was appointed Professor for Indian and Iranian studies at Vienna University. After studying texts of Moksha-dharma and the older Upanishads, he devoted his attention to the Buddhist school of logic. He tr. several treatises from Tibetan, such as Diñnāga's Ālambana-parīkshā (1930), Dharmakīrti's Sambandha-parīkshā (1934), and on Kṣaṇa-bhaṅga-siddhi (1935). He also wrote on Maṇḍanamiśra (1938). He discussed in a monograph the date of Vasubandhu (Rome, 1951). His chief work, Geschichte der Indischen Philosophie, vol. I appeared in 1953. It deals with the Veda and the Upanishads, the Epics, Buddha and Mahāvīra, as well as with Sāṅkhya and the classical Yoga system; Vol. II (1956) discusses mainly the Vaiśeṣika system. An Eng. tr. as History of Indian Philosophy by V.M. Bedekar was published in 1973. Preliminary studies on Buddhist philosophy resulted in a treatise: The Earliest Vinaya and the Beginning of Buddhist Literature (1956). According to Frauwallner, the Vinayas of the different schools are derived from a text "Skandhaka" composed in the first half of the 4th cent. B.C. The book Philosophie des Buddhismus contains extracts from the works of Buddhist thinkers. In 1959, he published in German "Diñnāga, his work and his development" (1959) and in his paper Landmarks in the History of Indian Logic (1961), he discussed the date of 16 Buddhist authors. He also studied Bhavadasa, a Pre-Diñnāga Mīmāṃsā philosopher as also Navyanyāya thought and wrote a study on Raghunātha Śiromaṇi (1966-70). After his retirement in 1964, he devoted himself to the Hinayāna school of Buddhism and published several papers but could not write History of Buddhist Philosophy before his death. His main concern was the history of Indian philosophy and in his research, he included both the Hindu and the Buddhist systems. He also re-edited Jacobi's book on Rāmāyaṇa (Darmstadt, 1970).

FRAWLEY, DAVID. A modern foreign Indologist, whose chief works is : The Creative Vision of the Early Upanishads.

FRENCH, HAL W. See Arvind Sharma.

FRIS, OLDRICH (1903-55). A Czech Indologist, whose special field of study was old and middle Indian poetry.

FRYER, G.I. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are: Study of Subodhān-kāra and Study of Uttodaya.

FÜCHS, RUDOLF. A German Indologist, whose chief work is Study of Paṭakopadesa (Berlin, 1908).

G

GAASTRA, D. A Dutch Indologist, who ed. and pub. the Gopatha-brāhmaṇa of the Ītharvaveda, with Introduction, notes, index etc. (Leyden, 1919) as also tr. into Dutch the Jaiminīya-Śrautasūtra (Leyden, 1906)

GACHCHH. ĪRA See Patma

GADĀDHARA (fl. second half of 15th cent.). A Smṛiti writer, son of Nīlāmbara and author of Sanskrit works Kala-sara, Āchāra-sara, Prata-sara and Śuddhi-sāra, (all on Smṛiti) and a comm. on Paraskara-gṛhya-sūtre GADĀDHARA (fl. early 17th cent.). A logician of Bengal, who commented in Sanskrit on the Tattva-chintamani of Gaṅgeśa, the Āloka of Pakshadhara Miśra and on several works of Raghunātha Śrīnām as well as on the Kusumañjali of Udayana, he also wrote many Vada-granthas, e.g. Śakti-vada, Mukti-vāda, etc.

GADĀVINIŚCHAYA. See Nidāna.

GADYACHINTĀMAṆI. A Sanskrit prose romance in 11 Lambhakas, by Ode,adeva (q.v.)

It describes the legend of Satyadhara and his son Jivandhara, culminating in the latter's seeking peace in asceticism; the story, of course, is derived, like other Jaina works on the Jivandhara legend, from Guṇabhadra's

Uttara-purāṇa. The work is a close imitation of the situations and descriptions of the Kadambarī (q. v.).

GADYAKARṆĀMRITA. A Sanskrit prose romance by Vidyāchakravartin II (q. v. ; fl. 13th cent.), describing the battle at Śrīraṅgam between Hoysala Narasimha II and the combined forces of the Pāṇḍya, Magadha and the Pallava kings, in which the Pāṇḍyas become tributary vassals to the Hoysalas. Kailāsa is the scene of the narration and Vyāsa reads the work before Śiva. True to its name, it is an ambrosial solace to the hearers.

The cause of the war between the Pāṇḍyas and the Hoysala king is traced to a mythical feud between Paraśurāma and Skanda, Śiva's son GAIL, ADALBERT. A German Indologist, whose chief work are Bhakti im Bhāgavata Purāṇa (Wiesbaden, 1969) and Paraśurāma, Brahmine und Krieger (Wiesbaden, 1977).

GAIRIKĀPATI LAKSHMIKĀNTAYYA (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who has produced small biographical sketches of men of importance like the pontiff of Śringeri Mutt, Rabindra Nath Tagore, Jayadeva, Nārāyaṇa Tīrtha and Jawahar Lal Nehru. His biography of Rabindra Nath Tagore is entitled : Viśvakavi (The universal Poet), which is a Mahākāvya.

GAJA-ŚĀSTRA. Same as Hastyāyurveda (q. v.).

GALANOS, DEMETRIOS (1760-1833). A Greek Christian missionary, who came to India as a priest. For several years, he stayed in Calcutta. For the study of Sanskrit, he came to Kāśī and lived there for 40 years till death. He tr. into Greek some select Padas of Bhartṛihari, Panditaraja Jagannātha, Bhagavadgītā, Raghuvamśa, Pañchatantra, Hitopadeśa, Śukasaptati, Durgā-saptasatī, etc., which were published in seven volumes from Athens in 1845-53 after the author's death.

GAMPERT, VILEM (1902-). A modern Czech Indologist, whose chief work is on Prāyaścitta literature. He is particularly interested in the study of religious and legal literature of ancient India.

GAṆA. A Sanskrit author of Aśvāyurveda, a work on horse-lore ; his date is not known.

GAṆADHARA. A Buddhist Pali writer and author of the Āvassaya (q. v.) ; his date is uncertain.

GAṆAKA-TARANGINĪ. A Sanskrit work by Sudhākara Dvivedin (q. v.), on the lives and works of Hindu astronomers and mathematicians.

GAṆANĀTHA SENA, KAVIRĀJA. A Sanskrit writer, whose medical works are : Pratyaksha-śārira (Calcutta, 1919 ; on anatomy) and Siddhānta-nidāna (1922 ; on pathology).

GAṆAPĀṬHA. Sanskrit works, which are based on different systems of grammar; such works are attributed, among others, to Pāṇini, Śakaṭāyana, etc.

GAṆAPATI ŚAṆKARA ŚUKLA. A modern Sanskrit author of Bhūdāna-yajñagāthā (Pratibhā, IV ii), which is on Vinoba Bhave's movement.

GAṆAPATI ŚĀSTRĪ, KĀVYAKAṆṬHAM (fl. 20th cent.). A prolific Sanskrit poet, later Vasishṭha Muni, who became a votary of Ramana and composed Ramana-gītā (an exposition of Ramana's teachings) and Saddarśana (a succinct metrical exposition in 44 verses of Ramana's Advaita); on the latter his pupil T.V. Kapāli Śāstrī wrote a gloss. In the Bhārata-saṅgraha, Gaṇapati Śāstrī reviews Indian history, while Purṇā is his novel.

GAṆAPATI ŚĀSTRĪ, P. A Sanskrit writer, whose chief work is Vayo-nirṇaya (Kuntlshakonaṃ, 1910).

GAṆAPATI ŚĀSTRĪ, T. (1860-1926). A Sanskrit writer, who was born at Tiruvāy in the Tirunelveli district of Tamilnadu and wrote a Sanskrit play, Mādhavi-Vasanta at the age of seventeen. He was the author of Śrīmula-charita (a history of Travancore kings), Aparṇāstava (a devotional song in praise of Pārvatī), Chakravartinī Guṇamaṇi-mālā (a panegyric to Queen Victoria) as also numerous devotional poems. His Bhāratānu-varṇana is a history of India. Curator of the Library at Trivandrum, he became famous by his discovery of Bhāsa's plays, on which he wrote his own comms. as also by his pub. of the Arthaśāstra (q. v.) of Kauṭilya with his comm.; his Setu-yātrāvarṇan, though couched in traditional style, deals with Hindu ideals and has reference to many contemporary details and social evils. He also ed. the Āśvalāyana-grihyasūtra (1923) with the comm. of Haradatta, as also Samarāṅga-sūtra-dhāra of Bhoja. His letters in Sanskrit addressed to many scholars in India and abroad have been published in a collection (1976) under the title : Letters of Gaṇapati Śāstrī. His Viśākha-vijaya-samālochanā is a critical work on the historical poem of Keralavarma Valiya Koli Tampurān (q.v.).

GAṆARATNA-MAHODADHI. A Sanskrit

grammatical work (1140) by Vardhamāna, which consists of a metrical enumeration of the words mentioned in the Gaṇapāṭha of Pāṇini. It is followed by a comm. by the author.

GAṆḌAVYŪHA. (Gaṇḍavyūha-mahāyāna-sūtra).

It corresponds to one of the Chinese trs. of the Avatamsaka, though no Avatamsaka or Buddhāvataṃsaka Sūtra is available in Sanskrit. In the Gaṇḍavyūha, the youth Sudhana, on the advice of the Bodhisattva Mañjuśrī, travels throughout India in quest of the highest knowledge and at last attains it from the Bodhisattva Samantabhadra. It inculcates the doctrine of Śūnyatā, Dharmakāya and the redemption of the world by Bodhisattvas.

GANDHĪ-VANŚA. A Pali work, mostly in prose, by Nandapaṇṇichīrya (q.v.), composed in Burma. Containing accounts of many Pali works and their authors as well as of the anonymous works, it deals mainly with the history of Pali books written in Burma and Ceylon; those authors living in Lankā and India are also mentioned. A few modern Pali works are also dealt with.

GĀNDHĪ, LALCHANDRA BHAGWANDAS.

A Jaina scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Nalavilāsa (Baroda, 1926) of Cachcharī (1927), of Apabhraṃśa-kāvyaṭrayī and of Jinadatta's poems.

GANDHĪ, V.R. A Jaina scholar, who represented Jainism at the Parliament of Religions, Chicago (1893) and his lectures and notes have been pub. under three titles: Jaina Philosophy, Karma Philosophy and Yoga Philosophy (Bombay, 1910 ff.).

GĀNDHĪ-DARŚANAM. A special volume brought out by the Sanskrit journal Māgadham (Arrah) on the occasion of Mahātmā Gāndhī's centenary celebrations in 1969; it is devoted to a study of Gāndhī's contribution to politics, economics, education, social reform, uplift of the Harijans, etc.

GĀNDHĪ-VACHANĀMṚITA. A Sanskrit tr. of select sayings of Mahātmā Gāndhī (Divyajyotis, 1970).

GAṆḌISTOTRA-GĀTHĀ. A Sanskrit work, attributed to Aśvaghoṣa (q.v.), which displays great metrical skill and testifies to the author's comprehension of the power of music.

GAṆĒŚA. (fl. 16th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Grahalāghava, a work on astronomy.

GAṆĒŚA (fl. 2nd half of 19th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Jammu and author of Vishahara-tantra, a work on medicine.

GAṆĒŚA ANANTA DHĀREŚVARA. An Arya-samajist scholar of Hyderabad, whose chief works are: Vedic Teachings and Ideals (1925), Vedic Ideals (1927), The Rāmāyaṇa—What It Can Teach Us? and Gems of Thoughts from the Vedas. He also wrote a number of pamphlets on Vedic subjects.

GAṆĒŚA-UPAPURĀṆA. An Upapurāṇa in Sanskrit, which is dedicated to the cult of Śiva. See Upapurāṇa and Purāṇa.

GAṆĒSH DATT SHARMĀ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Ṛigveda meṃ Dārśanika Tattva (in Hindi, a study on the philosophical element in the Ṛigveda, 1976).

GAṆĒŚWAR MIŚRA. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Advaitic Conception of Philosophy.

GAṆGĀDĀSA (fl. between 1300 and 1500). A Sanskrit writer of Bengal or Orissa and author of Chhandomañjarī (q.v.), a famous work on prosody. Son of Vaidya Gopāladāsa and Santoshā, his other works are: Achyuta-charita, Kaṁsāri-śataka (or Gopāla-śataka) and Dineśa-śataka.

GAṄGĀDĀSA-PRATĀPA-VILĀSA. See Gaṅgādhara.

GAṄGĀDEVI (fl. 14th cent.). A Sanskrit poetess and consort of Kampana or Kamparāya, the second son of Bukka I (1343-79) of Vijayanagara. She is the author of the Madhurā-vijaya or Vira-Kamparāya-charita (q.v.).

GAṄGĀDHARA. A Sanskrit dramatist, whose Gaṅgādāsa-pratāpa-vilāsa deals in nine Acts with the struggle of his patron, Gaṅgādāsa Pratāpadeva, ruler of Champakapura (Champāner) with Muhammad Shāh II of Gujarāt (1443-51).

GAṄGĀDHARA. (fl. probably 2nd half of 15th cent.). A Smṛiti writer, who was son of Nīlīmbara. He is also called Gadādhara. His Sanskrit works are: Kāla-sāra, Āchāra-sāra, Vrata-sāra and Śuddhi-sāra.

GAṄGĀDHARA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Māṇḍalikarīpa-charita, a mahākāvya in 10 cantos, gives an account of king Māṇḍalika of the Yādava dynasty at Junāgaḍha in the second half of the 15th cent., and mentions many events and personalities from the history of the Saurāshtra in the pre-Sultan period.

GAṄGĀDHARA. (fl. probably early 17th cent.). A Sanskrit logician of Bengal, who commented on the Tattva-chintāmaṇi of Gaṅgeśa, on the Āloka of Pakshadhara Miśra and on several works of Raghunātha Śiromaṇi as well as on the Kusumāñjali of Udayana. Besides, he wrote many works, known as Vāda-granthas, e.g., Śakti-vāda, Mukti-vāda, etc.; he is also called Gadādhara.

GAṄGĀDHARA. A Sanskrit court-poet and minister of Ekoji (r. 1674-87) of Tanjore, whose poem Bhosala-varhśāvalī deals with the history of the Bhonsle family.

GAṄGĀDHARA. (fl. 1860-65). A Sanskrit writer of Nāgpur, who is the author of 18 works. including two Gīta-Govinda imitations: Saṅgīta-rāghava and Gaṅgā-shaṭapadī.

GAṄGĀDHARA KAVIRĀJA (1798-1885). A Sanskrit writer of Bengal and author of a comm. Jalpa-kalpataru, on the famous medical work Charaka-saṁhitā (q. v.).

GAṄGĀDHARA MIŚRA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Kosalānanda-mahākāvya appears to be a historical poem dealing with the Chauhan rulers of Patna-cum-Sambhalpur kingdoms; his date is uncertain.

GAṄGĀNANDA. A Sanskrit court-poet of Mahārāja Karṇa of Bikaner (r. 1506-27) and author of Kāvyaḍākinī (on poetics, dealing with doshas or poetical blemishes in 5 chapters) and Karṇa-bhūṣhaṇa (a treatise on Rasa in five chapters, dealing with Vibhāvas, Anubhāvas, Vyabhichāribhāvas, sthāyibhāvas, and Rasas). His other works are: Bhṛīṅga-dūta (a poem) and Mandāra-mañjarī (a drama).

GAṄGĀNĀTHA JHĀ (1871-1941). A distinguished Maithilī educationist who was Vice-Chancellor of Allahabad University from 1923 to 1932. Besides his Sanskrit poems, he wrote comms. on well-known texts: Śāṇḍilya-bhakti-sūtras, Prasannarāghava (1906), Khad-yota (1925), on Vātsyāyana's Nyāya-bhāṣhya, Vivāda-chintāmaṇi (Eng. tr.). Sābara-bhāṣhya (Eng. tr. of Jaimini's Mīmāṁsā-sūtra), Mīmāṁsā-maṇḍana (1930; on Maṇḍana's Mīmāṁsā-sānu-kramanikā), Manu-smṛiti and wrote Pūrva-mīmāṁsā in its Sources (1942), Prabhākara School of Pūrva Mīmāṁsā and the Prabhākara pradīpa; he wrote also articles on Purāṇic studies.

GAṄGA PRASĀD. An Arya-samajist scholar, who is known for his work : Fountain-Head of Religion (1903); it was tr into Hindi by Hariśaṅkara Śarmā.

GANGA PRASĀDA UPĀDHYAYA (1881-1968). A Sanskrit scholar, whose works are : Āryodaya-kāvya (a Mahākāvya; Allahabad, 1952; in 21 cantos on Maharshi Dayānanda), The Philosophy of Dayānanda, Hindi trs. of Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa and Aitar ya-brāhmaṇa, Sarvadarśana Siddhānta Saṅgraha (1925), Śaṅkara-Rāmānuja-Dayānanda (1930; a comparative study in Hindi), Sāyana and Dayānanda (a comparative study) and Rājā Ram Mohun Roy-Keshub Chandra Sen-Dayānanda (again a comparative study), Landmarks of Swami Dayananda's Teachings, Elementary Teachings of Hinduism and almost 100 tracts in Hindi and English. Upādhyāya holds a prominent place in the early scholars of Dayānanda and Arya Samaj.

GAṄGĀ RĀM GARG (1924-). A modern scholar, who was born at Kohand in Karnal district of Haryana. Educated at Panjab University from where he obtained doctorate, his chief works are : Concise Oxford Companion to Hindi Literature (Oxford, 1963 ; treating also of Hindu mythology, ancient geographical names, important Sanskrit writers), An Encyclopaedia of Indian Literature (Sanskrit, Pali, Prakrit & Apabhraṃśa) (1982), World Perspectives on Swami Dayananda Saraswati (1984), and An Encyclopaedia of World Hindi Literature (1986). He has been associated with Gurukula Kangri Vishwavidyalaya, Haridwar for some years where he has worked in various capacities, as Senior Lecturer, Registrar and Vice-Chancellor. He was honoured by the Maharsh-Dayānanda Nirvāṇa Centenary Celebration Committee, Ajmer for his work on Dayānanda.

GAṄGĀRĀMAJADI (fl. 18th cent). A Sanskrit writer and author of Alaṅkāra works: Rasamīmāṃsā and Naukā (a comm. on the Rasa-taraṅgiṇī of Bhānudatta).

GAṄGĀRĀO. See Devarāya.

GAṄGĀ-VĀKYĀVALI. A Smṛiti digest in Sanskrit by the poet Vidyapati (q.v.), which deals with the advantages of visiting and worshipping the Ganges and bathing in it, the efficacy of meditation on it and of its sight, etc.

GAṄGEŚA (Gaṅgeśopādhyāya; fl. between 1175 and 1250). Author of Sanskrit Tattva-chintāmaṇi (q.v.), a celebrated work on Nyāya philosophy; this work seemed to be the firm foundation of the Bengal and Mithila schools of Navya-Nyāya. This new logic which was concerned more with the sources of knowledge (pramāṇas) than with metaphysics, has produced an extensive literature expressed in an unusually stiff language.

GAṄGEŚVARĀNANDA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is a comm. on the Śukla Yajurveda; he is responsible for the pub. of a large edition of the four Vedas and placed it at most of the centres of Vedic learning.

GANGULI, KISARI MOHAN. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who tr. into English prose the whole of Mahābhārata.

GANITASĀRA. A Sanskrit compendium of arithmetic by Bhāskara (q.v.), also called Trīśatīganita-sāra, Trīśatikā, Pāṭīśāra, Pāṭīganita, Pāṭīge 'ta-sara Śrīdharapāṭī, Śrīdharī and Līlāvati.

GAṆĪTA-TILAKA. A Sanskrit work on mathematics by Śrīpati (q.v.).

GAṆĪ-VIDYĀ. See Gaṇīvijā.

GAṆIVIJĀ. See Paṭṭa.

GARALPURI ŚĀSTRĪ (fl. late 19th cent.). A Sanskrit writer from Sosale in Mysore district, who was in the Mysore court. Two of his chief works are : Champū Rāmāyaṇa Yuddha-kāṇḍa (written in a chaste and scholastic style, it is a completion of Vidarbharāja's Champū-Rāmāyaṇa) and Kṛishna Bhūpalīyam (a work on rhetorics on the model of Kuvalayānanda, in which the illustrations are in the form of eulogies of Kṛishṇarāja Wodeyar III).

GARBE, RICHARD KARL (1857-1927). A German Indologist, whose main interest was in Indian philosophy, and he studied the Sāṅkhya and Yoga schools of thought. His attempt to reconstruct the original text of the Bhagavadgītā greatly stimulated research. In the latter part of his life, he examined the mutual influence of Western and Indian ideas. Garbe obtained his doctorate for two works : "The accentuation of ancient Indian nominal compounds" and Atharvaveda Anukramanikā. In 1880, when only 23 years of age, he was appointed Associate Professor for Comparative Linguistics. In 1885 he came to India and in Benares, he studied Sāṅkhya texts with Indian pandits. His impressions of travel to India and Ceylon are pub. in Indian Travel Sketches (1889, second ed. 1925). In 1894, Garbe was appointed full Professor in Koenigsberg, a year later he became R. Roth's successor in Tuebingen.

Garbe's chief works are : ed. and tr. of Vaitāna Śrautasūtra (1878) ed. of Āpastamba Śrautasūtra (3 vols., 1882, 1888, 1902), a facsimile ed. of the Paippalāda recension of the Atharvaveda (1901; with Bloomfield), ed. and tr. of Vāchaspati Miśra's Sāṅkhyatattva-kaumudī (1892), of the commentaries of Aniruddha, Vijñānabhikṣu and Mahādeva (1888-95), of Sāṅkhya Sūtras, Die Sāṅkhya Philosophie (1894; 2nd ed. 1917), and Sāṅkhya und Yoga (1896). Garbe was of the opinion that Sāṅkhya as propounded by Kapila, had an influence on Buddhist thought.

In 1905, appeared tr. of the Bhagavadgītā; Garbe attempted to reconstruct the original text of the Bhagavadgītā. He considered 70 verses (dealing with the impersonal Brahman in the Vedantic spirit) to be later additions and they appear in Garbe's edition in smaller print. Although his views were not accepted by all scholars, Winternitz agreed with Garbe. During the last years of his life Garbe published Indien und das Christentum (1914; on Vaishnavism and Christianity) : its first part deals with Indian influence on Christianity and the second with Christian influence on Indian religions. He thought that the Śvetadvīpa legend in the Mahābhārata is the only passage in the epic, which shows a knowledge of Christian doctrine and cult. He did not believe that Bhagavadgītā was in any way influenced by Christianity.

GARGANO, A. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief work is on the legends of king Śūdraka in the Nepali manuscript Tatnakaraṇḍaka.

GARRATT, G.T. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is the ed. of The Legacy of India (Oxford, 1945); the work was written in collaboration with others.

GARUḌA-(GĀRUḌA) PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

GASAN-MUHAMMADA-CHARITRA. A historical Sanskrit poem on Mahmud Gazni, which appeared in the Vol. IV of Sahridaya, Śrīraṅgam.

GĀTHĀKOŚA. A Prakrit anthology of moral sayings by Munichandra Sūri (d. 1120).

GĀTHĀKOŚA. Another name of Gāthā-saptasatī (q.v.).

GĀTHĀ-SĀHASRĪ. A work, partly in Sanskrit and partly in Prakrit by Samayasundara (q.v.), compiled in 1630; it contains verses by earlier writers.

GĀTHĀSAPTAŚATI. A celebrated Prakrit anthology of some 700 stanzas in Gāthā (Ārya) metre, properly arranged, ed. and often supplemented by Hāla (fl. A.D. 100-300), the Sātavāhana king of Pratishthānapura in Deccan. It exists in several recensions, some of which contain more than 700 verses; one recension in Ārya metre has 1,000 stanzas. Though the verses are not associated with the names of poets, yet it seems to be a collection of verses culled from different works; a comm. on it has given the names of the poets.

The work draws scenes from the rural life and the season settings, the countryside, the village folk, the flora and fauna—all these have remarkably contributed to the realistic sketches which these poets draw in one or two stanzas. The chief sentiment is erotic, at times openly put, and the turns of love, with their peculiar Indian ceremonies and conventions, are depicted in a vivid and touching manner. Passionate longings, pangs of separation, devotion of attachment, and the like, are often described with a frankness rare in conventional poetry. A lovely maiden pours water for a thirsty traveller who lets it trickle through his fingers; in her turn she lessens the stream of water from the pitcher; thus both extend the period of feasting their eyes on the other. There is very little of religious setting, though Īśvara and Pārvatī, Viṣṇu, Lakṣmī, are casually mentioned. Rādhā, so familiar in Vaiṣṇavism, is perhaps for the first time mentioned in this work. The work also reveals the existence of a large mass of early secular Prakrit literature, in the formation of which women too took active part. But, unlike many Prakrit anthologies, it has no propaganda motive. The name Hāla stands for Sātavāhana, one of the Āndhrabhr̥itya kings, whose partiality for Prākṛit is well-known. The work has been imitated in Sanskrit and Hindi, but the original stands unrivalled.

GAUḌA ABHINANDA (fl. 10th cent.). A Sanskrit writer on philosophy and author of the Yogavāśiṣṭha-sāra, which, like the original text, is partly philosophical and partly theological.

GAUḌAPĀDA (fl. 6-8th cent.). A famous philosopher, who was Śaṅkarācārya's teacher's teacher and the first systematic exponent of monistic Vedānta. He is the author of Sanskrit Gauḍapāda-kārikā or Māṇḍūkya-upanishat-kārikā (q.v.; a comm. on the Māṇḍūkya-upanishad), Uttara-gītā and a comm. on the Sāṅkhya-kārikā of Īśvarakṛiṣṇa. Some scholars think that the author of the Gauḍapāda-kārikā is different from that of the comm. on the Sāṅkhya system. Familiar as Gauḍapāda was with Buddhist doctrines, which he accepted in so far as they were not in conflict with his own Advaitavāda, he is the earliest systematic exponent of the Advaita Vedānta.

GAUḌAPĀDA. A Sanskrit author of Gauḍapāda-bhāṣya, an abridgement of Maṇḍara-vṛitti.

GAUḌAPĀDA-KĀRIKĀ. (Gauḍapādīya-kārikā). A Sanskrit work in 215 verses on Vedānta philosophy, attributed to Gauḍapāda. Divided into four chapters, the first chapter called Āgama explains the text of the Māṇḍūkya-upanishad; the second, called Vaitathya, explains the phenomenal nature of world, characterised as it is by duality and opposition; the third chapter establishes the Advaita theory, and the last one deals with the sole reality Ātman and the relative character of our ordinary experience. The work is strongly influenced by the nihilistic school of Buddhism; some scholars are of the view that the above Upanishad is based on the Kārikās.

GAUḌA-VAHO (The Slaying of the Gauḍa Prince). A kāvya by Vākpatirāja (q.v., fl. A.D. 725) in Māhārāshtra Prākṛit, containing 1209 verses in Āryā metre.

It describes the deeds of valour of the hero, i.e. king Yaśovarman of Kanauj. More of a panegyric than a historical poem, it is interspersed with descriptions of landscapes and seasons, sunrise and sunset, mountains, rivers and temples, in the manner of the Sanskrit mahākavyas, but also mixed up with many mythical legends. The poem depicts scenes from village life which is rarely seen in the earlier kāvyas. The extant work is probably only an extract from the original poem or perhaps an abridged form of the fuller poem.

GAURANĀRYA. A Sanskrit writer, whose father Ayama Prabhu was the brother of Potana, the minister of Singaya Mādhava of Recharla dynasty (r. about 1427). Gauranārya's Lakshana-dīpikā is a general treatise on poetry, music and dancing.

GAURĀṄGA (1486-1527). A Sanskrit poet, whose original name was Nimāi; his parents were Jagannātha and Śachī and he was born at Nadia on the banks of the Bhāgīrathī. Called Gaurāṅga or Gour for his fair complexion, his childhood foretold his future greatness and when he became inspired and an ascetic, he took the name Śrī Kṛishṇa Chaitanya. He married Vishṇupriyā, daughter of Sanātana Miśra. He sang the stories of Śrī Kṛishṇa and became the founder of the school of Bhakti or devotion. Among his poems are Gopālacharita, Premāmṛita, Saṅkshepa Bhāgavatāmṛita, Hari-nāma-kavacha and Dānakeli-chintāmaṇi.

GAURANGA NATH BANERJEE. A modern scholar, whose chief work is:

Hellenism in Ancient India (4th ed. 1983).

GAURIKĀNTA SĀRVABHAUMA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of works on Nyāya philosophy: Bhāvārtha-dīpikā (a comm. on Tarkabhāṣā) and Sadukti muktāvalī.

GAURĪNATH SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: A Concise History of Classical Sanskrit Literature (1960), ed. of Mammaṭa's Kāvya-prakāśa, with the comm. of Paramānanda Chakravartin (Varanasi 1966-77) and A Study in the Dialectics of Sphoṭa.

GAURISHANKAR HIRĀCHAND OJHĀ. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Prācīna-lipi-mālā (1918; Eng. ed. The Palaeography of India).

GAUTAMA. One of the twenty additional writers on original Smṛiti, whose date is uncertain. A Gautama-dharmaśūtra exists, which probably originated between 4th cent. and 2nd cent. B.C.

GAUTAMA. A Gautama or Gotama (c. 500 B.C.) is supposed to have founded the Nyāya philosophy by his Nyāya-sūtra (q.v.).

GAUTAMA-DHARMASŪTRA. See Dharma-sūtra.

GAUTAMA-GRIHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

GAWRONSKI, ANDRZEJ (d. 1927). A Polish Indologist, whose chief works are treatises on Mṛichchhakaṭika, 'Gleanings from Aśvaghoṣa's Buddhacharita' 'The Digvijaya of Raghu', 'Studies on the Sanskrit Buddhist Literature', 'Notes on the Saundarānanda' and 'Notes sur les sources des quelques drames indiennes'. Posthumously two of his works in Polish 'Grammar of Sanskrit' (1932) and 'A Treatise on the Beginnings of the Indian Drama' (1946) were ed. in Cracow. He also tr. into Polish "Sādhana" of Rabindranath Tagore, Deussen's tract on Indian philosophy and poems of Aśvaghosha.

GAYĀ CHARAN TRIPĀTHĪ. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is: Vāmana Legend in the Purāṇas and Vaidika Devata (vols. I-II, 1981-82).

GEHMAN, H. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Eng. tr. of Vimānavatthu.

GEIB, RUPRECHT. A German Indologist, whose chief work is: Die Indradyumna-Legende (Wiesbaden,).

GEIGER, MAGDALENE. See Geiger. Wilhelm Ludwig.

GEIGER, WILHELM LUDWIG (1856-1943). A German Indologist, who became Professor for Indo-European Languages in Erlangen, and from 1920-24 he held the chair for Aryan Languages at Munich. His earlier studies were confined to Avesta and the culture of ancient Iran. In later years, he became interested in Buddhism and the culture of Ceylon. His chief works are: Elementarbuch der Sanskritsprache (3rd ed., 1923), Literatur und Sprache der Singhalesen (which showed that Sinhalese is an Aryan language), Maldivian Linguistic Studies (Colombo, 1919), Sinhalese Grammar (1938), Glossary of the Sinhalese Language, Studien zur Geschichte und Sprache Ceylons (both 1941), Pali Literatur und Sprache (1916; Eng. tr. by B.K. Ghosh, Calcutta University, 1943), "Pali Dhamma, especially in canonical literature" (in collaboration with his wife, Magdalene), ed. and tr. of Mahāvamsa (1908, 1912) of Chūlavamsa (ed. 1925, 1927, tr. 1929-30), 'Dīpavamsa and Ma'āvamsa and historical tradition in Ceylon" (1905) and "The Sources of the Mahāvamsa" (1929). He was of the opinion that the chronicles are based on a lost Sinhalese commentary to the Buddhist canon. After Geiger's death, H. Bechert brought out Culture of Ceylon in Mediaeval Times (1960), in which Geiger describes Ceylonese culture from 362-1505 in all its aspects.

Geiger's wife, Magdalene Geiger (1877-1960) worked on the concept of Dhamma in Canonical Pali Literature. After her marriage to Geiger, she assisted him in all his projects; Magdalene had come to W. Geiger for her doctoral thesis. Geiger, who had been widowed for several years, married his student in 1917. The Geigers visited Ceylon and Java in 1925/26. In 1931/32 the Geigers again travelled to Ceylon to assist the Government of Ceylon in bringing out the "Dictionary of the Sinhalese Language"; the 1st part of the Dictionary appeared in 1935. After the War, the work was continued by the University of Ceylon. In later years, Mrs. Geiger made a card index of the genealogies of Indian kings from the inscriptions edited in Epigraphia Indica.

GEISSLER. A modern German Indologist, whose chief work is on the Pañchatantra.

GELDER, J.M. VAN. A foreign Indologist, who ed. the Mānava-śrautasūtra (Leyden, 1921).

GELDNER, KARL FRIEDRICH (1852-1929). A German Indologist, who was a scholar equally at home in Avestan and in Vedic studies. His most valuable contribution to Avestan studies is: The Sacred Books of the Parsees. In 1887, Geldner became Professor in Halle, in 1890 he accepted the chair of Indology in Berlin. In 1907, he migrated to Marburg, where he continued lecturing even after retiring from the University. In Halle, Geldner became a friend and a colleague of R. Pischel, and he turned from the Avesta to the Rigveda. In 1889, Geldner and Pischel jointly published the first number of "Vedische Studien" (Vedic Studies); four more volumes of the Vedic Studies were brought out. Geldner and Pischel were of the view that the Rigveda is a purely Indian work, the most ancient and most important product of the Indian spirit and that Sāyaṇa had understood the Rigveda better than any other European scholar. Both discussed several words from the Rigveda quite exhaustively. Geldner made also a study of the twin gods, the Aśvins. Earlier, with Kaegi, he had prepared the German tr. under the title Seventy Hymns of Rigveda. Two volumes in German: "Selections from the Rigveda" appeared in 1907 and 1909. He then devoted all his attention to a translation of the whole of the Rigveda; the complete translation appeared in 3 vols. in the Harvard Oriental Series (vols. 33-35, 1951, vol. 36, 1957; serving as an Index to the tr. was prepared by Johannes Nobel out of the material left by Geldner himself). See Nobel.

GEROW, EDWIN (1931-). An American Indologist, who is Frank L. Sulzberger Professor of Civilizations and Professor of Sanskrit Language and Literature, University of Chicago. His works are: A Glossary of Indian Figures of Speech (Columbia University, 1971), Śrī Studies in the Language and Culture of South Asia (1973; Co-editor), The Literatures of India, an Introduction (1974; Co-editor) and Indian Poetics (1977). Work is in progress on ed. and tr. of Appaya Dikshita's Vṛttivārttika; ed. and tr. of Vedaratnāvalī by Viṣṇudāsācārya and The Theory and Practice of the Traditional Sanskrit Education. He has written a number of articles and Notes : the chief ones being "Notes and Appendices for S.K. De, Sanskrit Poetics as a Study of Aesthetics (1963)", "Renou's Place in the Vedic Exegetical Tradition" (1968), articles on classical Indian authors in The Penguin Companion to Literature (vol. 4, 1969), "Indian Government Policy as it Affects Sanskrit Education" (1973), "Kālidāsa" (in Encyclopaedia Britannica 15th ed.), Sanskrit Poems, selected and tr. in Elek Book of Oriental Verses (1979), "Plot Structure and the Development of Rasa in the Śakuntalā, Pt. I, JAOS, 99; Pt. II, 100), "Dayananda on Kalmasañjña", "Mālavikā and Agnimitra" and "Urubhaṅga : The Breaking of the Thighs" (tr. and notes).

GETTY, ALICE. A foreign scholar, whose chief works are : Gaṇeśa (1972) and The Gods of Northern Buddhism (1978).

GHANAŚYĀMA (ĀRYAKA). A Sanskrit writer, minister of the king Tukoji of Tanjore (r. 1728-35) and author of Veṅkaṭeśa-charita (a poem narrating the story of Lord Veṅkaṭeśvara of Tirupati), Ābodhākaram (narrating the stories of Nala, Kṛṣṇa and Hariśchandra simultaneously), Kalidūshana (a poem which can be read both in Sanskrit and Prakrit), Prachandarāhūdaya (an allegorical play, refuting the views put forth in the play Saṅkalpa-sūryodaya of Veṅkatanātha Vedāntadeśika), Ḍamarūka (a Prahasana, which is a collection of select scenes), Madana-sañjivana (a Bhāna), Ānanda-sundarī (a Sattaka) and of comms. on Śakuntalā, Mahāvīra-charita, Veṇisāmhāra, Bhojachampū, Daśakumāra-charita and Uttarārāma-charita (written in a single night of Rāmanavamī). He also completed the drama Mahāvīra-charita by adding the last two Acts; his Navagraha-charita is a Sattaka in Prakrit. In all he is said to have composed 64 works in Sanskrit, 20 in Prakrit and 25 in other dialects. His wives Sundarī and Kamalā wrote a comm. on Viddhaśālabañjikā (q.v.).

GHĀSĪRĀMA. A modern Arya-samajist scholar, who tr. Dayananda Sarasvati's Rigvedādi-bhāṣhya-bhūmikā into English. He also tr. into English the Hindi comm. of Īsopaniṣad, prepared by Mahātmā Nārāyaṇa Svāmī.

GHATAGE, A.M. A modern writer, whose chief works are: Mahārāṣṭrī Language and Literature (1936), Introduction to Ardhamāgadhī (1941), Repetition in Prakrit Syntax (1939) and Kahāṇayatiḡam—A Prakrit Reader (Kolhapur, 1951); his articles are: 'Instrumental and Locative in Ardhamāgadhī' (1937) and 'A Locative Form in Paūmachariya' (1957). He ed. An Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Sanskrit on Historical Principles (Vol. I, Pts. 1,2, Poona, 1976).

GHATAKARPARA. Traditionally one of the Nava-ratnas in the court of Vikramāditya and author in Sanskrit of Ghaṭakarpara-kāvya (q.v.), a lyric poem. See Ghaṭakarpara-kāvya.

GHATAKARPARA-KĀVYA. A Sanskrit poem, attributed to a poet named Ghaṭakarpara; some think that it was composed by Kālidāsa.

It describes in 22 stanzas a message which a young wife sends through the cloud to her absent husband at the beginning of the rains. It thus describes a situation, the reverse of that depicted in the Meghadūta (q.v.). The poem owes its title to the fact that the poet, at the close, offers to carry water in a broken jar for anyone who can surpass him in Yamakas and alliterations.

GHĀṬE, V.S. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work: Lectures on the R̥gveda (1915; a collection of 13 lectures delivered by the author in the Bombay University) presents original and critical discussion on all the aspects of R̥gveda; the book has been tr. into Hindi by Delhi University in 1976. Ghāṭe's other chief work is Vedānta.

GHOSH, B.K. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is: Linguistic Introduction to Sanskrit. See Geiger.

GHOSH, J.C. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are the study of the historical data of Udayasundarī-kathā, An Epitome of Jainism (Calcutta, 1917; jointly with Nahar) and an article 'Erānamśā and Subhadra'.

GHOSH, M.M. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are the Eng. tr. of Nūṭyasāstra, a new ed. of Karpūramāñjarī (Calcutta, 1934, with a long Introduction) ed. and Eng. tr. of Ramatarkavāḡiśa's Prakṛita-kalpataru (Calcutta, 1954) and an article 'Māhārāṣṭrī—a later phase of Śaurasenī' (1933).

GHOSHAL, ŚĀRAT CHANDRA. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Eng. trs. of Dravyasaṅgraha (Arrah, 1917) and of Parīkshamukham of Māṇikyanandi (Lucknow, 1940); his expositions have enabled Jainism to find a creditable place in some of the important histories of Indian Philosophy.

GHULE, KRISHNA SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Indian scholar, whose chief work is Ghule Lekha Saṅgraha, dealing with Śaivism.

GHURYE, G.S. A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Caste and Races in India (London, 1932), Religious Consciousness, and Indian Costume (Bombay, 1951); he has written articles on Purāṇic studies, in which he has criticised the views of Pargiter.

GILDEMEISTER, JOHANNES GUSTAV (1812-90). A German Indologist, who was equally at home in Semitic as well as Sanskrit studies. In Bonn, he obtained his doctorate for a thesis "On Indian matters as made known by Arab writers". In 1844 he was appointed Associate Professor in Bonn; in 1859 he became full Professor and lectured there till 1889. In 1841, he ed. Kālidāsa's Meghadūta and Śrīṅgāra-tilaka, together with a Latin glossary. He planned a bibliographical survey of all Indological publications and brought out the first part in 1847: Bibliothecae Sanskritae sive Recensus librorum Sanskritorum hucusque typis vel lapide ex scriptorum critici specimen. This reference book is still useful today to look up older Sanskrit prints. He also revised Lassen's "Anthologia Sanscritica", 1865, a second edition of which appeared in 1868.

GIRIDHARA ŚARMĀ. A Sanskrit poet, who tr. the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam into Sanskrit under the title: Amara-sūkti-sudhā-kara (1929).

GIRIDHARA SHARMĀ CHATURVEDĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who has examined in a Sanskrit essay the modern theory of evolution as discernible in the Purāṇas.

GIRNAR INSCRIPTION. A Sanskrit inscription of Mahākshatrpa Rudradāman I, carved on a rock at Girnar near Jūnāgarh in Kathiawar; it celebrates an event of about A.D. 150. It is a high-flown Sanskrit prose composition.

GĪTĀ. (Full title Bhagavadgītā or 'The Song of the Lord'). Kṛishṇa's discourse to Arjuna on the battlefield, it forms part of the Mahābhārata (Bk. VI, Chaps. 25-42). It consists of about 700 verses divided into 18 chapters.

When the hosts of the Kauravas and the Pāṇḍavas are drawn up in array against each other, Arjuna, touched with compunction for the slaughter on both sides and reluctant to fight his own kinsmen in the opposite camp, appeals to Kṛishṇa for guidance; hence Kṛishṇa's discourse. Kṛishṇa exhorts and encourages Arjuna to fight his own kinsmen as a duty or dharma. See Mahābhārata for full story.

The Gītā does not give a cut-and-dried system of philosophy or formal theology but deals with all the major problems thereof, such as the soul, the Absolute God, creation and perfection. A manual of spiritual discipline, it discusses the path of devotion to the personal God (bhakti-yoga), philosophical discrimination (jñāna-yoga), right activity (karma-yoga), and concentration (rāja-yoga). It emphasises, however, the performance of duty following one's inborn nature (dharma) by those still identified with the body and the world. Such duty must be performed in a detached spirit, the doer surrendering the results to God. Relinquishment of duty is prescribed only for those who have realized the world's unreality. A very popular book among the Indians and highly praised by western scholars, it contains suggestions which help man in solving the various problems of practical life.

Of the several comms. on the Gītā by Indian writers, the chief ones are by Śaṅkara, Rāmānuja, Madhva, Vallabha, Nimbārka and Jāneśvara. Of the modern commentators, the chief are Bāl Gangādhara Tilak, Śrī Aurobindo and Mahātmā Gāndhī.

There are differences of opinion about the Gītā being a genuine part of the original Mahābhārata. The adherents of the view that it is a later addition to the epic hold that the original Gītā must have been composed as early as the 2nd cent. B.C. and assumed its present form in the early centuries of Christian Era.

GĪTĀ-BHĀSHYA. A Sanskrit comm. on the Gītā by Rāmānuja (q.v.).

GĪTĀ-GOVINDA. A Sanskrit devotional lyric by Jayadeva (fl. 12th cent.) in praise of Lord Kṛishṇa, which consists of 12 cantos and 24 ashṭapadīs. Jayadeva's wife Padmāvatī danced with Jayadeva in accompaniment to his tunes.

The poem describes in a very attractive style the erotic sports of Kṛishṇa and Rādhā at Vṛindāvana. Rādhā's separation, Kṛishṇa's sports with other cowherd women, Rādhā's anguish, her yearning for union and jealousy, request to Kṛishṇa by Rādhā's friend, Kṛishṇa's return, penitence and appeasement of Rādhā, and finally the blissful reunion—all are described in the poem. The various stanzas are accompanied by indications as regards the tāla and rāga ; the work is a blending of the stanzas that are to be recited and those to be sung. Jayadeva's style is very simple ; his poetry is the best specimen in the whole of Sanskrit literature of complete harmony in sound and sense.

The form of the poem is extremely original and so it has been variously styled as a pastoral (Jones), a lyric drama (Iassen), a melodrama (Pischel), an opera (Levi), and a refined Yātrā (von Schroeder). It soon became so popular that it inspired many other works of similar nature. There are over forty comms. on this work produced in different parts of India, which testifies to its wide popularity.

GITĀLĀṆKĀRA. A Sanskrit work on music, attributed to Bharata (q v.), which consists of 15 chapters and deals with the topics : Gīta-lakṣhaṇa, Kaṇṭha-suddhi, Gīta-dosha, Svara-lakṣhaṇa, Grāma, Murchhanā, Tāna, Mātrā, Laya, Sthāna-lakṣhaṇa, Yati, Āsya, Rasa, Varṇa and Bhāṣnā-lakṣhaṇa.

GLASENAPP, OTTO MAX HELMUTH VON (1891-1963). A German Indologist, who was born in Berlin, where his father was Vice-President of the German State Bank. In 1914, he obtained his doctorate on a thesis : The doctrine of Karma in Jaina philosophy, the Eng. tr. of which appeared in Bombay, 1942. In 1918, he wrote another thesis on Mādhava's philosophy of Vaishṇava faith. From 1928 he was Professor in Koenigsberg and thereafter held the chair for Indology and Comparative Religion at the University of Tuebingen till 1959. He continued giving lectures as Professor Emeritus till his death after a traffic accident.

Glaseappa travelled extensively in India and described these journeys in his autobiography Meine Lebensreise (1964). In his Indische Welt too, he described his personal observations on the twofold faces of Mother India, as he called the glory and poverty of India.

Glaseappa wrote on the three great religions of India; Der Hinduismus (1922), Der Jainismus (1925) and Der Buddhismus in Indien und im Fernen Osten (Buddhism in India and the Far East; 1936). These three works are considered the best general surveys of their kind in Germany.

Glaseappa's other works are : The Doctrine of Vallabhāchārya (Eng. tr. 1959), Die Philosophie der Inder (1949), a study of the philosophy of the Yogavāsiṣṭha and the Adhyātma Rāmāyaṇa (1951), a study of the development of Buddhist Dharma theory, "Stages in the Development of Indian Thought" (1946) and a monograph on Śaṅkara (1954). His works on religion are Brahma und Buddha (1926, rev. ed. 1943 as Die Religionen Indiens), "Immortality and Deliverance in Indian Religion" (1938), "The Religions of Mankind, their Contrasts and Correspondences" (1954), "Kant and the Religions of the East" (1954) and "India as seen by German Philosophers" (1958). His Die Literaturen Indiens (Indian Literatures) was first pub. in 1929; a rev. ed. appeared in 1961. Glaseappa wrote the chapters on Sanskrit literature and on the literature in modern languages in Northern India, viz, Hindi, Bengali, etc. W. Geiger and H. Bechert contributed the chapter on Singhalese literature and that on the literature in Dravidian languages is by H W. Schomerus. On Glaseappa's 70th birthday, a commemoration volume was presented to him: "Von Buddha zu Gandhi". It contains a number of Glaseappa's papers, and a bibliography is appended.

GNOLI, RANIERO. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief works are an excellent ed. of the 1st Chap. of the Pramāṇavārttika under the title The Pramāṇavārttikam of Dharmakīrti (Rom., 1960) and Aesthetic Experience according to Abhinavagupta ; he has also ed. the Tantrasāra of Abhinavagupta, with tr. and notes.

GOBHILA. A Sanskrit author of the celebrated Gobhila-gr̥hya-sūtra and a Gobhila-smṛiti; his date is uncertain.

GOBHILA-GR̥HYASŪTRA. See Gr̥hyasūtra.

GODA VARMĀ, YUVARĀJA (1800-51). Prince of Cranganore, who was proficient in Śāstras and Kāvya. His best-known work is Rasasadana-bhāṇa, a monologue; his Rāma-charita, a poem, was completed by Kochchunṇi Tampurān (1855-1926), who wrote also Goda Varmā's life in Vidvad-Yuvarāja-charita. Kochchunṇi Tampurān's poem, Tripura-dahana shows exquisite poetry.

GODABOLE, N.B. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: the ed. of Mṛichchhakaṭika (1896), ed. of Meghadūta (with the comm. of Mallinātha), ed. of Śakuntalā (along with K.P. Parab; with the comm. of Rāghavabhaṭṭa; 1883) and ed. of Ratnāvalī (along with K.P. Parab).

GODĀVARA MIŚRA. A Sanskrit writer on Yoga, who was Rājaguru and Mantrī of Gajapati Pratāparudra of Orissa (r. 1497-1540) and was author of Yoga-chintamani, a compendium based on the principles and practices of Yoga as enjoined by Patañjali, Vyāsa, Vāchaspati and Bhoja.

GODDARD, D. An American Indologist, whose chief works are: The Buddha's Golden Path and Buddhist Bible (1956).

GODE, P.K. A modern scholar, who has made original contributions to the Sanskrit studies in several volumes under the titles: Studies in Indian Literary History and Studies in Indian Cultural History; his chief studies are on the dates of the various commentators of the Vāsavadattā, on the Bharata and Ādi-bharata problem, on the date of the Bhāgavata and of the Kālikā-purāṇa. He compiled several descriptive catalogues of MSS. on Alaṅkāra, Saṅgīta, Nāṭya, Kāvya, etc.

GOETZ, HERMANN (1898-1976). A German Indologist, who was one of the pioneers in the field of Indian art and cultural history. He was born in Karlsruhe, where his father had founded a museum for applied art and handicrafts. After working as assistant in the Indian Department of the Berlin Museum for Ethnology and as a Conservator in the Kern Institute, Leyden, he came to India in 1936. In 1940 he worked on a special assignment of the Archaeological Survey of Chamba State. For a decade he was Curator of the Museum of Baroda, the Bulletin of which he edited from 1945-54. In 1953, Goetz was invited by the Indian Government to build up the National Gallery of Modern Art. In 1958, he was called by the Maharaja of Baroda to build up the Fateh Singh Museum. In 1961, he became Honorary Professor at the South Asia Institute of Heidelberg University; for 10 years he was Head of the Department of Art of South Asia.

Goetz pub. 30 books, 400 papers, and more than 100 book-reviews. His chief works are: Epochen Indischer Kultur (Epochs of Indian Culture; Berlin, 1930), Geschichte der Indischen Miniaturmalerei (History of Indian Miniature Painting; Leipzig, 1934), The Art and Architecture of Bikaner State (Oxford, 1955), The Early Wooden Temples of Chamba (Leiden, 1955), Geschichte Indiens (History of India; Stuttgart 1962). Goetz's book: Fuenf Jahrtausende Indischer Kunst (5000 Years of Indian Art) in the series "Art of the World" has been translated into 14 languages. An excellent view of style and way of studies may be had from the 16 essays which the South Asia Institute, Heidelberg compiled under the heading Studies in the History of Art of Kashmir and the Indian Himalaya (Wiesbaden, 1969), edited as a memory of Goetz's 70th birthday. He died in Heidelberg.

GOSWAMI, DANIEL JOHN (1792-1862). A Wesleyan missionary, whose chief works are:

tr. of portion of Khuddaka-pāṭha; tr. of Pāṭi-mokkha and ed. and tr. of Setubandha; his collected articles on Pali Literature have been pub. in two volumes, under the title Ceylon Buddhism, being the collected writings of Daniel John Gogerly (Colombo, 1908).

GOKHALE, BALKRISHNA GOVIND (1919-). A scholar, whose chief works are: The Story of Ancient India (1947), Buddhism and Aśoka, Ancient Indian History and Culture, Indian Thought Through the Ages, Samudra Gupta, Life and Times, Aśoka Maurya, Buddhism in Maharashtra—A History (1976), Bharatavarsha, A Political and Cultural History of India (1982) and Asian Studies (Pt. I, 1966 ; Pt. II 1971 ; the last work ed.). He has also written over 80 research papers. He is at present Professor of History and Director of Asian Studies Program, Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem, U.S.A.

GOKHALE, R.V. A modern Sanskrit writer, who rendered into Sanskrit the Persian classic, Gulistān under the title Pushpod-yāna (Belgaum, 1935, in two parts).

GOKHALE, V.V. (1901-). A modern scholar, who pub. fragments of the Sanskrit text of Asaṅga's Abhidharma-samuchchaya (1947), a work of the Yogācāra school. Jointly with D.D. Kosāmbī, he ed. Suhṛ̥ṣhita-ratna-kośa, which has been pub. in the Harvard Oriental Series.

GOKULA. See Utprekshāvallabha.

GOKULANĀTHA. A Sanskrit writer of Mithilā, who was patronised by king Fateh Sāha of Śrinagar (1615). He is the author of Amṛitodaya (a five-act allegorical drama depicting the progress of Jiva from creation to annihilation), Muditā-madālasā (in 7 acts on the marriage of Madālasā), Ekāvali (on metrics), Śivastuti (poem), Kundakādambari (a poem in memory of his daughter Kādambarī) and Rasamahārṇava (a comm. on Kāvya-prakāśa). He died at the age of 90 at Kāśī.

GOKULANĀTHA UPĀDHYĀYA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Vivaraṇa, a comm. on the Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.).

GOLDMAN, ROBERT PHILIP (1942-). An American Indologist, who is Professor of Sanskrit and Chairman: Department of South and Southeast Asian Studies, University of California, Berkeley. His chief works are: Gods, Priests, and Warriors: the Bhārgvas of the Mahābhārata (1977), Devavāṇi-praveśikā: An Introduction to the Sanskrit Language (Berkeley, 1980; with Sally J. Sutherland), The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki: An Epic of Ancient India, Bk. I: Bālakāṇḍa (1985), The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, Bk. II: Ayodhyākāṇḍa (1985), The Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, Araṇyakāṇḍa (Princeton University Press; in press); the last two Kāṇḍas are tr. by Sheldon Pollock and ed. by Goldman.

He has published some 15 research articles and about 10 book reviews. His articles are: "Vālmīki and the Bhṛigu Connection", "Matricide, Renunciation, and Compensation in the Legends of Two Warrior Heroes of the Sanskrit Epics" and "Issues in the Translation of Sanskrit Epic: The Case of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa". He is preparing a fully annotated new English translation of the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa of which he is the Director and General Editor.

GOLDSCHMIDT, S. A German Indologist, whose chief work is the ed. and German tr. of the Prakrit epic, Setubandha (Strassburg, 1880-84). The word-index was prepared by Paul Goldschmidt and the editor.

GOLDSTUECKER, THEODOR (1821-72). A German Indologist, who penetrated into the Mahābhāṣya without the help of Pandits and stressed the importance of indigenous traditions and learning. In 1851, he became Sanskrit Professor at the University College in London, a post he held till his death. His first work was a German tr. of the drama Prabodha-chandrodaya. H.H. Wilson entrusted him with the third edition of his dictionary; it was planned on a grand scale, but was never completed. At Goldstuecker's initiative a "Sanskrit Text Society" was founded; their first pub. was Goldstuecker's Jaiminiya-nyāyamālā-vistara (London, 1865-67). The ed. of the Mahābhāṣya, begun by Goldstuecker, appeared after his death in 1874. In 1861, he ed. Mānava Kalpasūtra, with a comm. of Kumārilsvāmin; preface to this work, Pāṇini, His place in Sanskrit Literature, appeared as a separate work (London and Berlin, 1861). He also studied Hindu Law and he was often consulted on legal matters by the British Government. He wrote: Sanskrit and Culture and made a study of the twin-gods, the Aśvins. After his death, two vols. Literary Remains of the late Theodor Goldstuecker appeared in London in 1879. His complete critical tr. of the Mahābhārata was unfortunately not published.

GOLF, SUSAN. An American Indologist, whose chief work is: Early Maps of India (New York, 1976).

GOMBRICH, RICHARD FRANCIS (1937-). An English Indologist, who is at present Professor of Sanskrit, University of Oxford. His chief works are: Precept and Practice: Traditional Buddhism in the Rural Highlands of Ceylon (Oxford, 1971), The Perfect Generosity of Prince Vessantara (joint author with Margaret Cone; Oxford, 1971), On Being Sanskritic: A Plea for Civilized Study and the Study of Civilization (Oxford, 1978), Buddhist Studies in Honour of Walpola Rahula (ed. jointly, 1980), The World of Buddhism (ed. jointly with Heinz Bechert, 1984), Buddhist Studies in Honour of Hammalava Saddhatissa (ed. jointly, 1984), Theravāda Buddhism from Ancient Benares to Modern Colombo: A Social History (in press). He has pub. more than 30 articles and many book reviews.

GOMMAṬA-SĀRA. Same as Pañchasaṅgaha (q.v.). A Jaina Prakrit work, so called, because it contains the essence (sāra) of the Jaina doctrine for Gommaṭarāya, i.e., Chāmṇḍarāya.

GONARDIYA (fl. probably 2nd cent. B.C.). Appears to have been an authoritative Sanskrit grammarian, whose name has been mentioned in the Mahābhāṣya (q.v.) several times. Some scholars are of the view that it was the name assumed by Patañjali himself, who belonged to the place called Gonarda.

GONC, KLARA. A modern Indologist of Yugoslavia, who has tr. Sūdraka's Mricchhakaṭika into Slovenian for the Croatian National Theatre.

GONDA, J. (1905-). A celebrated Indologist, who was born at Gouda, Netherlands. He is retired Professor of Sanskrit and Indian Culture, Utrecht University. He is now Editor of the History of Indian Literature (HIL) (Harrassowitz, Wiesbaden) and of the section India of Handbuch der Orientalistik (Brill, Leiden). Most of his publications are on Indian (mainly Vedic) religion, Indian linguistics and philology. His chief works are: Javanese Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa (2 vols., 1933), Javanese Bhīṣma-Parvan (1936), Remarks on the Similes in Sanskrit Literature (Leiden, 1949), Ancient Indian 'Ojas' 'Aujas' and the Indo-European nouns in -es/-os, Character of the Indo-European Moods, Elementary Grammar of the Sanskrit Language (in Eng. tr.), Remarks on the Sanskrit Passive (1951), La place de la particule Negative na dans la Phrase en Vieil Indien (1951), Sanskrit in Indonesia (Nagpur, 1952), Remarques sur la Phrase active—et Moyenne en Langue Sanscrite, Ancient Indian Kingship from the Religious Point of View (Leiden, 1966), Vishṇuism and Śivaism, Change and Continuity in Indian Religion (The Hague, 1965), and a paper 'Old Javanese Agastya Purāṇa'.

In the Vedic field, his works are : Maṇḍūkāsūkta in Ṛigveda (1948; in this he asserted that the original spirit of all Vedic words is mixed with magic and religion), Notes on Brahman (1950; study of the word Brahma), Four Studies in the Language of the Ṛigveda (study of four words), Eng. tr. of Ṛigvidhāna, Eye and Gaze in the Ṛigveda, Aspects of Early Vishṇuism (1954; study of the Vedic Vishṇu), Some Observations on the Relations between 'Gods' and 'Power' in the Veda, etc. (1957; discussion on Vedic deities), The religionen Indians-I-Veda unt Alterer Hinduismus (a collection of essays on Vedic religion), The Vedic God Mitra (1972), Vedic Literature (HIL, I, 1, Wiesbaden 1975), The Dual Deities in the Religion of the Veda (Amsterdam Academy, 1974), Loka, World and Heaven in the Veda, The Sarvañña, Stylistic Repetitions in the Veda, Epithets in the Ṛigveda, The Vision of Vedic Poets, the Meaning of Sanskrit term Dhāman, Triads in the Veda (1976), Medieval Religious Literature in Sanskrit (HIL, II, 1; 1977), The Ritual Sūtras (HIL I, 2; 1977), Hymns of the Ṛigveda not employed in the solemn rituals (Amsterdam Academy, 1978), Mantras in the Agnyupasthāna and Saut. Īmaṇi (1980), The Praugaśastra (1981), The Vedic Morning Litany (1981), and Pūshan and Sarasvatī (1985).

Gonda's Aspects of Early Vishṇuism is of very great value in elucidating benevolent traits of Vishṇu's nature by virtue of which he was destined to rise to the supreme position in Hinduism.

His editing of History of Indian Literature is a monumental work.

GOṆIKĀPUTRA. An ancient Sanskrit grammarian mentioned by Patañjali in his Mahābhāṣya (q.v.); some scholars identify him with Patañjali himself.

GOONERATNE, E.R.J. A Ceylonese Indologist, whose chief works are: Eng. tr. of Āṅguttara-nikāya (1913), ed. of Dhātukathā, Study of Pajjamadhu (1887), ed. of Telkaṣāhagāthā (1884) and ed. of Vimānavatthu (1886).

GOOSSENS, ROGER. A modern Belgian scholar, whose chief work is a thesis of Greek and Vedic mythology with special reference to Rudra-Śiva.

GOPADEVA. A modern Sanskrit scholar of Hyderabad, who tr. the Ṛigvedādi-bhāṣya-bhūmikā of Dayānanda, Sarasvatī (q.v.) into Telugu.

GOPĀL VEDĀLĀṆKĀR. A modern Sanskrit scholar of Hyderabad, whose special study is on Māgha and Bhāravi.

GOPĀLA BHATṬA (fl. 16th cent.). A South Indian Brāhmaṇa, a follower of Chaitanya and a prominent figure in the history of Bengal Vaishṇavism. One of the six Gosvāmins of Vṛindāvana, he is the author in Sanskrit of Haribhakti-vilāsa (q.v.); Satkriyāsāradīpikā, dealing with sacraments, is also attributed by some scholars to him.

GOPIĀLA BHATṬA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer (son of Harivaṁśa Bhaṭṭa) and author of Sāhitya-chūdāmaṇi (a comm. on Kāvya-prakāśa) and Rasa-taraṅgiṇī (a comm. on Rudra-bhaṭṭa's Śṛṅgāra tilaka).

GOPĀLA-CHAMPŪ. A Sanskrit work in mixed prose and verse by Jīva Gosvāmin (q.v.), which is based on the tenth canto of the Bhāgavata (q.v.). The work, completed in 1588, describes Kṛishṇa's early childhood and youth in a rhetorical style.

GOPĀLA CHARAṆA DĀSA ŚĀSTRĪ (1895-1978). A Sanskrit poet, whose chief work: Harivangvicharaṇa-kāvya, a Mahākāvya in 49 cantos (published in two volumes), gives a detailed account of Śrī Svāmi Nārāyaṇa's life and teachings and narrates the background for the rising of a new religion in Gujarat in about 1800 A.D. His style reminds one of the great Purāṇas.

GOPĀLĀCHARIAR, A.V. (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Śrīvaishṇava sect, who was a native of Tiruchirapalli. His Saṇḍeśadvaya-sarasvādini gives a detailed comparative study of the Megha-saṇḍeśa and the Harīsa-saṇḍeśa.

GOPĀLĀCHĀRYA UTGIKAR. A Sanskrit writer of Mahārāshṭra, who is the author in prose of the Pūrṇakathā-taraṅgiṇī (Part I, Bombay, 1917).

GOPĀLA DĀSA (fl. 16th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Vallabhākhyāraka treats of the life of Vallabhāchārya (q.v.).

GOPĀLA IYENGAR, A. See Yaduvriddha-sauhārda.

GOPĀLAKRISHṆA BHATṬA (fl. 14th cent.). Author of Rasendra-sāra-saṅgraha (q.v.), an Āyurvedic treatise in Sanskrit.

GOPĀLA KRISHṆA BHATṬA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Jhānsī-Lakshmībāī (Udupi, 1959) in 2 cantos treats of the heroic life of the Rani of Jhansi, who died fighting the British.

GOPĀLANĀRĀYAṆA BAHURA. See Uday-arāja.

GOPĀLA PILLAI, N. A Sanskrit writer of Kerala, who has tr. into Sanskrit Kumāraśān's Malayalam poem under the title: Sītā-vichāra-laharī (1979), which has a Sanskrit commentary by D. Dāmōdara Pisharoti.

GOPĀLA ŚĀSTRĪ. (fl. 20th cent.). A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Atirūpa-charita, a romance, was pub. in the Sahridayā, Śrīraṅgam.

GAPĀLA ŚĀSTRĪ DARŚANAKESARĪ (1892-1983). A Sanskrit scholar, who devoted all his life to the spread of Sanskrit language. A great exponent of Pāṇini's method of grammar, he wrote many works for easy learning of Sanskrit grammar. A teacher of grammar and philosophy at Kashi Vidyapith, Varanasi, he was Acharya for 12 years of the Badrinath Mahavidyalaya, Joshimath. He wrote many works, of which Pāṇinīya-prabodha and Pāṇinīya-nāṭakam (Varanasi, 1964) are important. In his Sanskrit drama, Darśanakesarī employs Bhojpuri in place of traditional Prakrit.

GOPARĀJU RĀMA. A Sanskrit scholar, who has ed. Kāvya-prakāśa (1976), Kāvya-prakāśa-darpaṇa (1979) by Viśvanātha and Haravijaya by Ratnākara (vols. I-II, 1982-83).

GOPATHA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

GOPENDRA TIPPA BHŪPĀLA (fl. 15 cent.). A scion of the Sāluva dynasty of Vijayanagara and author in Sanskrit of Tālādīpikā, a work on music (in three chapters) on Mṛga and deśī Tālas, and of a comm. on Vāmana's Kāvyalankāra-sūtra-vṛitti (q.v.).

GOPEŚVARA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit philosopher of the Śuddhādvaita school, who was honoured as 'Sarvajña', and who wrote the comm. Rasmi (on the comm. Prakāśa of Puruṣottama on Anubhāshya) and Bhaktimārtanḍa (analysing the doctrine of Bhakti).

GOPIKĀMOHAN BHATṬĀCHĀRYA (1930-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Studies in Nyāya Vaiśeṣhika, ed. of Jñāna-lakṣaṇā-vichārarahaṣya (a work on Indian logic), ed. of Meghadūta-ṭīkā of Kṛishṇapati, Some Problems of Indian Logic in Historical Perspective and Navya-Nyāya (1978).

GOPINĀTHA BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A modern scholar, who has ed. Annam Bhaṭṭa's

Tarka-saṅgraha and Dīpikā.

GOPINĀTHA CHAKRAVARTIN. (fl. c. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit dramatist and author of a Prahasana: Kautuka-sarvasva (q.v.), composed for the Durgā-pūjā festival of Bengal.

GOPINĀTHA KAVIRĀJA (1887-1976). An eminent scholar of Sanskrit literature, Indian philosophy and Tantra, who, despite heavy odds in life, was appointed Principal of Government Sanskrit College in 1923 and occupied this post for 14 years. He had also made a deep study of English, French and German literatures. Besides his 11 Bengali works, his works in English are: A Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts acquired for the Sanskrit College, Benares during 1918-1919, A Descriptive Catalogue of Mīmāṃsā Manuscripts in the Sanskrit College, Benares with Introduction (1923), Bibliography of Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika Literature (1961) and Aspects of Indian Thought (Burdwan University, 1966). His Hindi works are: Bhāratiya Sanskrit aur Sādhana (2 pts., 1963), Kāśī ki Sārvasvata Sādhana (1965), Tantrik Sanskriti, Tantrika Vāṇmaya meṁ Śāktiśiṣṭi (1965) and Tantrik Literature. He was awarded the titles of 'Mahāmahopādhyaya' and 'Padmavibhūṣaṇa'.

GOPINĀTHA RAO, T.A. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Elements of Hindu Iconography (2 Vols., Travancore, 1914).

GORRESIO, GASPARE (1808-91). An Italian Indologist, whose chief work is the ed. and tr. into Italian of the Rāmāyaṇa (1843-67).

GOŚRINAGARA-VARṆANA (Descript. of the City of Cochin). A descriptive Sanskrit poem by Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa (q.v.), in which the harbour city of Cochin with its tall spires and varied wares, the ships, the foreigners, the busy markets—is graphically described in enchanting expression.

GOSWAMI, BHAGABAT KUMĀR. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Bhakti Cults in Ancient India (Calcutta, 1922).

GOSWAMI, K.G. An Indian scholar, whose chief work A Study of Vaiṣṇavism (1956) deals with the chequered history of the Vaiṣṇava religion in the light of epigraphic, numismatic and other archaeological material.

GOTAMA (fl. c. 500 B.C.). Also called Gautama, he is the author of Nyāya-sūtra (q.v.), the earliest Sanskrit treatise on Nyāya philosophy.

GOTHONI, RENE (1950-). A Finnish scholar, whose special field of study is the Buddhist monastery.

GOTSHALK, RICHARD. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is: Bhagavadgītā (tr. and comm.; 1985).

GOUDRIAAN, T. A Dutch Indologist, who in collaboration with S. Gupta and D.G. Hoens, has pub. a book Tantrism (1978). He is at present working on 'Problems of Balinese Religious Literature in Sanskrit' and with S. Gupta on 'Tantric Literature'.

GOUGH, ARCHIBALD EDWARD. An Indologist, whose chief works are: The Philosophy of the Upanishads (London 1882) and Eng. tr. of Sarva-darśana-saṅgraha by Mādhava-Sāyaṇa (jointly with E.B. Cowell).

GOVARDHANA (fl. 12th cent.). Author of the Sanskrit lyric poem Ārya-saptasatī (q.v.), he was son of Nīlāmbara Somyajin, had a brother Balabhadra and a pupil Udayana. He enjoyed the patronage of king Lakṣmāṇasena of Bengal (r.c. 1185-1205). According to Jayadeva, whom he mentions in his Gita-govinda, none could match Govardhana in erotic compositions.

GOVINDA (fl. middle of 16th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, son of Keśava and author of Kāvya-pradīpa (q.v.), a work on poetics.

GOVINDA-BHĀSHYA. An original Sanskrit comm. by Baladeva Vidyābhūṣaṇa (q.v.) on the Brahma-sūtra (q.v.). The comm. was written because the followers of Rāmānuja, Nimbārka and Vallabhāchārya tauntingly said that while each of the older Vaiṣṇava sects had their special Bhāshyas on the Brahma-sūtra, the followers of Chaitanya had none. According to this work, the individual is different from God. It is one of those works, which furnish the philosophical basis for the Vaiṣṇavas of Bengal.

GOVINDA BHATṬA (fl. 17th cent.?). A Sanskrit writer, whose Rāmachandra-yaśah-prabandha describes the life of king Rāmachandra of Bikāner.

GOVINDĀCHĀRYA SVĀMIN. A. A modern scholar whose chief work is: Life of Rāmānujāchārya (Madras, 1906); he wrote also articles on Pañcharātra literature and on Vasudeva.

GOVINDADĀSA (fl. probably end of 16th cent.). Author of Bhaishajya-ratnāvalī (q.v.), an Āyurvedic work in Sanskrit.

GOVINDA DĪKSHITA (1554-1626). A Sanskrit poet, who was in the court of Raghunātha Nāyaka of Tanjore. He was a minister of this family of rulers for three generations. A true Brāhmaṇa, he is worshipped as a god in the form of Linga at Kumbhakonam and at Tiruvadi and as an image at Pattesvaram. His Sāhitya-sudhā describes the life and achievements of Raghunātha. He authored Harivaṃśa-chārītram in Sanskrit in 3 Parts. He also wrote several other works on Vedānta, sculpture and music (Sangīta-sudhānidhi). Also known as Ayyana, he was father of Venkaṭmakhi Dīkshita (q.v.). At Govinda Dīkshita's instance, numberless grants were made by his kings for construction of several maṇḍapas and bathing ghats on Kāverī.

GOVINDAJIT. See Sabhyāṅkaraṇa.

GOVINDĀNANDA (fl. between 1500 and 1540). A famous writer on the Smṛiti literature of Bengal. Son of Gaṇapatibhaṭṭa of Medināpura, he had the title 'Kavikānāchārya'. His works are: Dānakriyā-kaumudī, Śuddhi-kaumudī, Śrāddha-kriyā-kaumudī, Varshakriyā-kaumudī and Kriyā-kaumudī (qq.v.). He also wrote three comms.: Tattvārtha-kaumudī (on Śūlapāṇi's Prāyaścittaviveka), Artha-kaumudī (on Śrīnivāsa's Śuddhīdīpikā) and a comm. on Śrāddha-viveka of Śūlapāṇi. His works are of particular interest to historians on account of numerous authors and works quoted therein.

GOVINDA NĀTHA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Śaṅkarāchārya-charitam deals with the life of Śaṅkara. The author's time is not certain.

GOVINDAPRASĀD SHARMĀ 'DADHI-CHA'. A modern Sanskrit author of Bhāratetivṛttam (Kalyāṇī, Jaipur, II. 8 ff.), a drama, which presents in 3 Acts, respectively: ancient India, India under the British and Free India.

GOVINDARĀJA (fl. between 1080 and 1140). Son of Bhaṭṭa Mādhava and grandson of Nārāyaṇa, he is the author of a celebrated comm. in Sanskrit on Manu-smṛiti (q.v.) and also of the Smṛiti-mañjarī (dealing with all the topics of Dharmaśāstra). A Sahagamana-vidhi is also attributed to him.

GOVINDA RĀJANAKA (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who has brought up Rājatarānginī (q.v.) to modern times.

GOVINDA THĀKURA (fl. 1450-1500). A Sanskrit scholar, who was a native of Mithilā. His comm. on the Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.) is called Pradīpa, Kāvya-prakāśa-pradīpa or Kāvya-pradīpa; it holds a high place among commss. on Kāvya-prakāśa. The Pradīpa was also commented upon by Vaidyanātha Tatsat and Nāgojī Bhaṭṭa under the titles Prabhā and Udyota respectively. Govinda Tṛhākura wrote another comm.: Udāharāṇa-dīpikā on the illustrations quoted in Kāvya-prakāśa. The Udāharāṇa-dīpikā was also commented upon by Vaidyanātha Tatsat under the title: Udāharāṇa-chandrikā.

GOWEN, HERBERT H. An Indologist, whose chief work is A History of Indian Literature from Vedic Times to the Present Day.

GOYAL, S.R. A scholar, whose chief work is: A Religious History of Ancient India (Pre-Vedic, Jaina and Buddhist Religion; 1985); 2nd vol. 1986.

GRANTOVSKY, E.A. A modern Russian Indologist, who, in collaboration with G.M. Bongard-Levin, has in his Russian book 'From Scythia to India' (1974) examined some questions of the Ancient Indian Mythology connected with the problem of the origin of Indo-Aryans.

GRASSMANN, HERMANN GUENTHER (1809-77). A German Indologist, whose brilliant books on mathematical subjects were not understood by his contemporaries and he turned to Sanskrit as a diversion. He discovered the "Grassmann Law" in linguistics and brought out the first tr. of the Ṛigveda into German verse and a dictionary of Ṛigvedic terms. He became a teacher of mathematics at a school in Berlin and later in his home town Stettin, where he taught up to his death. He took up Sanskrit "for recreation" from 1849 onwards and compiled a dictionary for the Ṛigveda for his own use, which was pub. in Leipzig in 1873; reprint 1936. Grassmann discussed a phonetic law, which he discovered in his book Das Aspiratengesetz

(The Law of Aspirates; 1863); it says that in Sanskrit as well as in Greek one of two aspirates stops if a word is converted into a non-aspirate. Grassmann thereby proved that Sanskrit had undergone some changes and did not represent the original language of the Indo-Europeans, as the first scholars of comparative linguistics had thought.

Grassmann's tr. of the Ṛigveda appeared in two volumes (Leipzig, 1876, 1878) and he attempted to give a faithful rendering of the original text in German verse. His tr. was helpful in making the Ṛigveda known to the general public.

Although he devoted much time to the education of his eleven children, he found time to make two important discoveries in yet another field, Physics: these discoveries were rediscovered some years later by the physicists Helmholtz and Clausius.

GRAUL, KARL (1814-64). A German Indologist, who spent four years in studies overseas and learnt Tamil and Sanskrit in India. As a result of his studies, he pub. in German: "Journey to Eastern India via Palestine and Egypt" (5 vols., 1854-56); vols. III, IV & V deal with Western India, South Eastern India, as well as Ceylon. He published a number of works on Tamil grammar and literature.

GRAY, JAMES. A British Indologist, whose chief works are : ed. and Eng. tr. of Jinālaṅkāra (q.v.; London, 1894) and Ancient Proverbs and Maxims from Burmese Sources or the Niti Literature of Burma (London, 1886).

GRAY, LOUIS H. An American Indologist, whose chief works are : ed. and Eng. tr. of Subhandu's Vāsavadattā, (1917), of Ballāla's Bhojaprabandha and Indo-Iranian Phonology.

GREEK, TADIANA. A Russian lady scholar, who is working on the Asian material collected in the Hermitage in Leningard, one of the five great Museums in the West.

GREN-EKLUND, G. A modern Swedish Indologist, whose chief work is: A study of Nominal Sentences in the Oldest Upanishads (Uppsala, 1978). He is at present engaged in research on the problems of interpretation in the Upanishads.

GRIERSON, GEORGE ABRAHAM. The first Director of Linguistic Survey of India, constituted by the Government of India in 1894. He submitted after well over 33 years his report of the first Linguistic Survey of India in 1927, pub. in 11 volumes. It has become the source of practically all the major research in the field of Indian and General Linguistics. His other works are the pub. of different portions of Prākṛitakalpataru of Rāmatarakavāḷīśa, Modern Vernacular Literature of Hindustan, important articles: 'Rājasekhara on the Home of Paisāchī' (1921), 'Paisāchī and Chulikāpaisāchī' (1923), 'The Monotheistic Religion of Ancient India' (1909), 'The Bṛhatkathā in Mārkaṇḍeya' (1913), 'Apabhraṃśa according to Mārkaṇḍeya and the Dhakṛī Prakrit' (1913), 'The Prakrit Dhātvaśeṣas according to the Western and the Eastern Schools of Prakrit Grammarians' (Calcutta, 1924) and 'The Eastern School of Prakrit Grammarians' (Calcutta, 1925). He collected 82 songs of poet Vidyāpati from various singers; he wrote also articles on the Bhāgavata religion.

GRIFFITHS, JOHN. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is: The Paintings in the Buddhist Cave Temples of Ajanta (2 vols.).

GRIFFITH, RALPH T.H. (1826-1906). A celebrated English Indologist, who was Principal of the Government Sanskrit College, Varanasi for 17 years (1861-78). Griffith remained unmarried and his bungalow, which was in the campus of the College, was well-maintained and decorated to such an extent that when Griffith was out on his evening walk, people used to visit his residence. Himself a poet, he tr. the four Vedas in verse: Eng. tr. of Rigveda appeared at first in four volumes (1889-92; repub. in 2 vols. 1896-97; third ed. 1926), of Sāmaveda, a metrical one, in two parts (1893, 1907, new eds. 1916, 1926), of the Śukla Yajurveda (third ed. 1957) and of the Atharvaveda, with a popular comment in two volumes (1895-96; new ed. 1916); Griffith pub. the metrical tr. of all the four Vedas (1889-1899). He also tr. Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa in verse; the place where he did this rendering into English, is still shown to the visitors of Sanskrit College.

GRIHASTHA-RATNĀKARA. A huge Sanskrit Smṛiti digest in 68 chaps. by Chanḍeśvara (q.v.), dealing with the duties of a householder (Grihastha). Forming part of the author's Smṛiti-ratnākara (q.v.), it also prescribes duties of different castes.

GRIHYA-SŪTRA. A part of the Kalpa-sūtra (q.v.). See Vedāṅga (Kalpa-sūtra).

GRILL, J. A German Indologist, whose Hundert Lieder des Atharva-veda (Stuttgart. 1879-88) is a German tr. of 100 selected hymns of the Atharvaveda.

GRIMM, GEORGE (1868-1945). A German Indologist, whose chief works are: The Doctrine of the Buddha: the Religion of Reason and Meditation (1958) and Buddhist Wisdom: The Mystery of the Self.

GRINTSER, P.A. A modern Russian Indologist, whose important work in Russian on the classical epics of ancient India is: 'Ancient Indian Epics, Genesis and Typology' (1974), in which the theory of the oral origin of the ancient Indian epics has been elaborated and its correlation with other monuments of World Epic and mythological traditions es-established. His other contributions in this field are : 'Epic formulae in the Mahabhārata and the Rāmāyaṇa' in the 'Typological' Researches in Folklore' (1975), 'Karna in the Mahābhārata and Achilles in the Illiad' in 'Historical and Philological Researches' (1974) and 'Epic' in 'Culture of Ancient India' (1975). In the series 'Writers and Thinkers of the East', he is publishing a book: 'Bhāsa—An Outline of His Creative Work'.

GRISWOLD, H.D. An Indologist, whose chief works are : Religion of the R̥gveda (1923) and God Varuṇa in the R̥gveda.

GRONBECK, V. A Danish Indologist whose chief work Mystikerna i Europa og Indien (1925) contains a chapter on the Buddha.

GRONSET, R. (1885-1952). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : In the Footsteps of Buddha (1932) and Bṛihattara-bhārata (Marathwada University, Aurangabad, 1960).

GROSLIER. A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Indo-Chine, carrefour des Arts (Paris, 1960) and Angkor, etc. (Paris, 1956).

GRUENWEDEL, ALBERT (1856-1935). A German Indologist, who obtained a doctorate by the publication of a Pali text : "The sixth chapter of the Rūpasiddhi, ed. from three Sinhalese Pali manuscripts" (1879). In 1881, he joined the Berlin Museum for Ethnology; two years later he became Assistant Director. He published a number of books and articles on the art and iconography of Buddhism and the archaeology of Central Asia. Gruenwedel's chief work is : Buddhistische Kunst in Indien (Buddhist Art in India; 1893; 2nd ed. 1900, Eng. tr. 1901, rev. and enl. ed. by Burgess; reprint Varanasi, 1974). He gave a brief survey of Buddhist art in Bharhut and Sanchi and then discussed the art of Gāndhāra in detail, showing the Persian and Greek influence on the sculptures found in the North West of the subcontinent, and the influence these had in turn on the Buddhist countries further East, Java, Tibet, China and Japan. In Mythologie des Buddhismus in Tibet und der Mongolei (Mythology of Buddhism in Tibet and Mongolia; 1900), he discussed the iconography of the later phase of Buddhism.

He was head of two of the Prussian expeditions to Eastern Turkestan and he published reports on the expeditions, accompanying the description with sketches and plans of monuments. He also published several works based on his findings.

GUBERNATIS, ANGELO DE. An Italian scholar, whose Zoological Mythology (Eng. tr. London, 1873; originally written in Italian) deals with three categories of animals (of the land, of the mid-region and of water) in the Indo-European mythology, the starting point of the treatment always being R̥gveda. His other chief works are : Lecture sopra la Mitologia Vedica (Firenze, 1874; on the comparison of Vedic myths with Christian Concepts) and Fonti vediche dell' Epopea (Firenze, 1867), which characterises the R̥gveda as the Bible of the Aryans.

According to Gubernatis, mythology without war is unthinkable. Following this line of argument, he discusses the different representations of the heavenly war in all the Māṇḍalas of the R̥gveda, one after another. For him, Vasishṭha, Viśvāmitra, and Sudās are all mythical characters; even in the Rāmāyaṇa, Laṅkā is the cloud or the night; Rāma is Vishnu or Indra, that is, the Sun; Sītā is Ushas or the dawn; the monkeys are the rays of the Sun. He has written also a book (1878-82) on Botanical Mythology, as also a kind of cultural encyclopaedia of India.

GUENTERT, HERMANN. A German Indologist, whose chief work Der Arische Weltkönig und Highland (1923) discusses the Aryan mythology.

GUENTHER, HERBERT V. (1917-). An Indologist, who has made notable contribution to the study of Tibetan philosophy; his main works are : sGam-po-pā. Jewel Ornament of Liberation (London, 1959), The Life and Teachings of Naropa (Oxford, 1963), Treasures on the Tibetan Middle Way (Leyden, 1966), Yuganaddha (on the Buddhist Tantric life), The Royal Song of Saraha (Seattle, 1969), Buddhist Philosophy in Theory and Practice (London, 1972), The Tantric View of Life (1972), Tibetan-Buddhism in Western Perspective and Philosophy and Psychology in the Abhidhamma (Berkeley, 1976).

GUERINOT, A. A French Indologist, who ed. Jīvaichāra of Śāntisūri (1902) with a French tr.; wrote Repertoire d' epigraphie Jaina (Paris, 1908); and La religion D' Jainā (Paris, 1927); he is also the compiler in French of a bibliography of Emile Senart.

GUETH, ANTON WALTER FLORUS. See Nyānatiloka.

GUHADEVA. A Sanskrit scholar, who probably commented on the Taittiriya-saṁhitā of Yajurveda; his Bhāṣhya is no longer extant and his time is not certain. He is also called Rāhadeva.

GULIK, R.H. VAN. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Siddham (Nagpur, 1956).

GUMĀNI (fl. later than 12th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Upadeśa-śataka, which moralises on some myths and legends from the Epics and Purāṇas.

GUNABHADRA (fl. 9th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit writer, who wrote Ātmānuśāsana, a treatise in Sanskrit on religion, ethics and renunciation. It is a poem in 272 verses of different metres and has been tr. into many languages. He also wrote Jinadatta-charita, which deals with the life of Jinadatta. For his other works, see Jinasena.

GUNACHANDRA (fl. 1082). A Prākṛit poet and author of Mahāvīra-chariya (q.v.), a poem on the life of Mahāvīra. He was a pupil of Sumativāchaka and was patronised by Prasannachandra Sūri, a pupil of Jinchandra Sūri; he belonged to Chandrakulī-nagachchha.

GUNACHANDRA (fl. 1100-1175). A pupil of Hemachandra (q.v.) and joint author of the Sanskrit Nāṭya-darpaṇa (q.v.).

GUNĀDHYA (fl. prior to A.D. 400). A Prakrit poet and the author of the lost Bṛhatkathā (q.v.). According to one tradition, he was born at Pratiśṭhāna and became a favourite of king Sātavāhana. Another tradition makes him a resident of Mathurā enjoying the patronage of king Madana of Ujjayini. The legend goes that, as a result of losing a rash wager with his contemporary scholar, Sarvavarman (author of Kātantra grammar), he retired to the Vindhya forest, abjured the Sanskrit language and wrote in Paisācī Prakrit.

GUNARATNASŪRI. A Jaina Sanskrit writer of Hemachandra school of grammar. A pupil of Devasundarasūri, he is the author of Kriyā-ratna-samuchchaya (1409) on the use of conjugational peculiarities of the most important Sanskrit roots.

GUNAVISHṆU (fl. prior to A.D. 1100). A Sanskrit scholar, who wrote a comm. on the Sāmaveda-mantra-brāhmaṇa under the title Chhāndogya-mantra-bhāṣhya.

GUNDE RĀO HARKARE (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Gadwal, who has tr. into Sanskrit A Mid Summer Night's Dream and some Acts of Hamlet; he also tr. five chapters of the Korān into Sanskrit (1945).

GUNDERT, HERMANN (1814-93). A German Indologist, who came to India as a Christian missionary. He is known for his Malayalam-English Dictionary, Malayalam Grammar and a Malayalam Anthology, etc. He contributed a paper on the "Dravidian Elements in Sanskrit". He tried to show that a number of plant names of some industrial products in Sanskrit were derived from Tamil words, and he gave the rules governing the changes which these words underwent. His interest in India and her culture was transmitted to his children and grand-children. Among the latter is Hermann Hesse, one of Germany's best known poets of our times.

GUNE, PANDURANG DAMODAR. An Indian scholar, whose chief works are the study of the Jaina version of the legend of Pradyota, Udayana and Śreṇika (1920), ed. of Bhavisyavākya-thā (1923; jointly with Dalal), Brāhmaṇa Quotations in the Nirukta and studies in linguistics.

GUPTA, C.B. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Indian Theatre.

GUPTA, D.K. A modern Sanskrit scholar of Punjab University, Patiala, whose chief works are : A Critical Study of Dandin and His Works (1970), Society and Culture in the time of Dandin (1972) and Recent Studies in Sanskrit and Indology (ed.).

GUPTA, R.D. A modern Sanskrit scholar who has pub. A Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Vindāvan Research Institute (Pt. I, Vrindāvan. 1975).

GUPTA, S. A Sanskrit scholar, who has pub. tr. of Lakṣmī Tantra into Dutch (1972). He is at present preparing the work: 'The Philosophical and Ritual Concepts of the Pañcharātra'. See Goudriaan, T.

GUPTA, S.M. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Sūrya the Sun-God.

GUPTA, S.P. and LAL, B.B. Editors of the Frontiers of the Indus Civilization—Sir Mortimer Wheeler Commemoration Volume (1984).

GURNER, C.W. See Johnston, E.H.

GURUDUTT VIDYĀRTHĪ (1864-89). An Arya-samajist scholar, whose works are : The Vedic Texts, The Terminology of the Vedas and the European Scholars (1888) and comms. on the Īśa, Māṇḍūkya and Mundaka Upanishads. When at the World Religions Conference held at Chicago in 1896, Vidyārthi's comms. on the Upanishads were sent there, an American publisher on its own published those comms. from America. His works in English have been collected under the title : The Wisdom of the Rishis.

GURUGUṂA-RATNĀKARA. See Somacharitrangani.

GURUKKAL, V.K.K. A Sanskrit poet, whose chief work Śrīguru-gīta (Tellicherry, 1977) is a narrative poem in 200 verses on the life of Vāgbhaṭānanda.

GURUMŪRTI, S.V. A modern Sanskrit author of Bhāratiyam-sāmadrikṣam (Samvit, VII, 970-71), a Sanskrit drama, dealing with Indian unity.

GURUSWAMY SASTRIGAL, V.S.V. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief works are : Nalodanta and Kālidāsa Viśvamahākaviḥ (1981; a poem in several parts, interspersed with apt quotations from Kālidāsa and others; the main attempt here is to defend Kālidāsa from the attacks of many a modern critic).

GUSEVA, NATALYE. A senior Russian Indologist, who is now attached to the Institute of Ethnography. She is the author in Russian of "Hinduism, History of Formation, Worship Practice" (1977), "Hinduism: Mythology and its Roots'' and Problems of History (1973). She has recently (1984) selected 37 interesting episodes from the Mahābhārata and retold them in Russian in verse and prose. Her earlier studies on Hinduism were highly praised in the Soviet Union and foreign countries. Her studies of the Aryans, their origin and similarities of their language to the old Slavonic also evoked great interest. She is at present working on a book on Rajasthan, in which she proposes to give the life of Rajputs, their ethnography, language, literature and arts.

GUSSNER, ROBER. A modern American Indologist, whose chief study is on the Sto-tras of Śaṅkarāchārva.

GYANI, S.D. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Agni Purāṇa—A Critical Study (Benares, 1964); he has written also several articles on Purāṇic studies.

HAAS, ERNST (1835-82). A German Indologist, who studied Sanskrit in Bonn, Berlin and Tuebingen. He got his doctorate on the thesis in German: "Ancient Indian Marriage Customs according to the Gṛihyasūtra". In 1875, he became Professor of Sanskrit at the University College in London. He brought out a useful work Catalogue of Sanskrit and Pali Books in the British Museum. He worked with Eggeling (q.v) on a catalogue of classical Sanskrit manuscripts in London, but died before completing this work. He was one of the first to take an interest in Indian medicine and wrote a treatise in German as: "On the Origin of Indian Medicine with Special Reference to Suśruta".

HAAS, G.C.O. A modern scholar, whose chief work is the Eng. tr. of Daśarūpam of Dhanañjaya (New York, 1912), pub. in the Columbia University Indo-Iranian Series.

HACKER, PAUL (1913-79). A German Indologist, who obtained his doctorate on the early history of Advaita. In 1950 he went to Muenster University, where he was Reader in Indology. In 1954 he went to the Mithila Institute at Darbhanga as Professor. For 8 years (1955-63), he was Professor in Bonn and thereafter took over the newly founded chair of Indology at Muenster University. In 1971, he was guest Professor at the University of Pennsylvania.

Hacker's chief works (in German) are: "Examinations into early Advaita Texts. 1. Śaṅkara's Disciples" (1951), "Vivarta. Studies in the history of illusionistic cosmology and Indian theory of cognition" (1953), "Śraddha" (1963), Dharma im Hinduismus (1965) and Vrata (1973). He also compared Indian concepts with those of European thinkers. In 1968 was published "Śaṅkara the Yogin and Śaṅkara the Advaitin" in which he discussed the development of Śaṅkara's ideas. He also studied the history of Indian religion, contemporary Hinduism, and the syntax of Indo-Aryan vernacular, especially Hindi. In his "Prahlaḍa, History and Development of a Prototype" (1959), he made use of 1. versions of the story of Prahlaḍa found in the Purāṇas and he discussed the historic development of this story. By comparing passages common to several texts, the original version can be reconstructed and by tracing these legends in later literature, their development in the history of religion may be studied. For Hacker, Hinduism was not an object of historical research but a living religion. In his opinion, representatives of modern Hinduism like Vivekānanda and Rāmakoṣṇa were strongly influenced by Western thought. Neo-Hinduism, he says, implies a re-interpretation of traditional Hinduism. In 1958, he published a treatise "On the functions of some auxiliary verbs in Hindi". He also wrote a number of papers on Christian church history as also a book on Martin Luther.

HACKMANN. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Buddhism as a Religion.

HAERTEL, H. A German scholar, who is Director of the Museum of Indian Art in Berlin. He has done archaeological research at Sonkh in Mathura district for several seasons. Along with J. Auboyer, he has published "India and Southeast Asia" (in German; Berlin, 1971).

HAHN, MICHAEL. A modern German Indologist, who ed. and tr. Chandragomin's Lokānanda-nāṣaka (Wiesbaden, 1974) and pub. Haribhaṭṭa and Gopadatta—Two authors in the succession of Āryaśūra (Tokyo, 1977).

He takes interest in Buddhist Sanskrit and Tibetan texts.

HAJEK LUBOR(1921-). A Czech art critic, who studies Indian art at the National Gallery, Prague.

HĀLA. See Gāthā-saptaśatī.

HALĀYUDHA (fl. 10th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Kavirahasya (q. v.), the lexicon Abhidhāna-ratnamālā (q.v.) and of a comm. Mṛitasāñjivini on Piṅgala's Chhandasūtra. The comm. was composed in honour of king Muñja Vākpati of Dhārā between 974 and 995.

HALĀYUDHA (fl. c.1185-1205). A well-known Sanskrit writer in the history of the Smṛiti digests of Bengal. Son of Dhanañjaya and a Dharmādhyaksha (Chief Judge), he was a contemporary of king Lakshmaṇasena (c. 1185-1205). Brāhmaṇa-sarvasva (q.v.) or Ka-mopadeśinī is his only work, discovered so far; a Saṁvatasara-pradīpa attributed by Raghunandana (q.v.) to him, is not accepted his work by some scholars. Two other works, Dviṇa-nayana and Śrāddha-paddhati-ṭīkā are associated with a Halāyudha, whose identity with the present writer is not beyond doubt. In the Introduction to the Brāhmaṇa-sarvasva, Halāyuddha claims to have written the following four works: Mīmāṃsā-sarvasva, Vaiṣṇava-sarvasva, Śaiva-sarvasva and Pañḍita-sarvasva.

HALĀYUDHA-KOŚA. Another name of Abhidhāna-ratnamālā (q.v.).

HALBFASS, WILHELM. A modern American Indologist, who teaches in the University of Pennsylvania. His field of specialization is Indian philosophy, Buddhism, Jainism, etc.

HALDER, J.P. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Early Buddhist Mythology.

HALE, W. EDWARD. A modern foreign Indologist, whose chief work is: Asura: In Early Vedic Religion.

HALEN, HARRY (1943-). A Finnish Indologist of Helsinki, who is preparing a thesis on the Mongolian tr. of the Lalitavistara. He has pub. Handbook of Oriental Collections in Finland: Manuscripts, etc. (1978) and is now compiling a register of the persons at present engaged in extra-European studies in Finland, with bibliographies.

HALHED, NATHANIEL BRASSEY (1751-1830). An English Indologist, whose chief work is A Code of Gentoo Laws (London, 1776), which is an Eng. tr. of the Persian version of the Vivādārṇava-setu (q.v.), a compilation of Indian law of inheritance, family law, etc.

HAMILTON, ALEXANDER (1762-1824). An English Indologist, whose chief works are : ed. of Hitopadeśa (1811), A Treatise on Sanskrit Grammar and A Key to Chronology of the Hindus (Cambridge, 1820).

HAMM, FRANK-RICHARD (1920-73). A German Indologist, who, after having been discharged from an American POW camp after World War II, obtained a doctorate on a Jaina text. He studied the Jaina Rāmāyaṇas in Sanskrit, Prakrit, and Apabhramśa. From 1952-54, he worked at the International Academy of Indian Culture, Nagpur, where Dr Raghuvīra asked him to publish the Tibetan version of Pravrajyavastu, the first of the Vinayavastu of the Mulasarvaśtīvādins, which he did. From 1954-64, he was assistant at the Indological Seminar in Hamburg. In 1964, he went to Berlin and a year later he was appointed Professor at Bonn. While at Bonn, he worked on the edition and tr. of Milaraspa's and Atiśa's works and brought out the first ed. and re-translation of the "Hundert thousand songs" (mgur 'bum) of Milaraspa. He was also interested in Theravāda Buddhism and wrote a paper "On some recent editions of the Pali Tipitaka". He wrote Buddhismus und Jainismus (1964), made a study of Chhāndogya-upanishad and wrote other papers.

HAMMĪRA-KĀVYA. A Sanskrit historical poem by the Jaina writer, Nayachandra (fl. 15th cent.). The work in 14 cantos is the result of a revelation made to him in a dream by king Hammīra himself.

Hammīra tried to uphold the independence of his race and was for a time well successful. In the third year of his reign, Allauddin demanded the extradition of a Mughal nobleman who had taken refuge with Hammīra, but it was refused. The capital of Hammīra was besieged and in defending the capital, the king fell and his women perished on the funeral pile. The poem describes the heroic deeds of Hammīra; king Jaitrasimha's advice to his son Hammīra on politics is very informing.

HAMMĪRA-MADA-MARDANA. A Sanskrit

drama in 5 Acts, composed by Jayasimha Suri (q.v.) between 1219 and 1229.

The drama is full of intrigues and incidents and, though purported to commemorate the victory of king Viradhavala over the Muslim ruler, Hammīra (Amir Shikār or Sultan Šams-ud-dunya), in reality it eulogises the king's two ministers, Vastupāla and Tejapāla, describing Vastupāla's skill in diplomacy and repulsion by him of the Muslim invasion of Gujarat. There are several comms. on the play. (Hammīra in this drama is different from the Hindu king Hammīra).

HAMMĪRA-RĀSO. Traditionally an Apabhramśa poem by Śārṅgadhara (q.v.), which is no longer extant. It treats of the grim battle between Hammīra, the Mahārāṇā of Raṇathambhor and Alauddin.

HAMŚARAJA. A Sanskrit scholar, whose Vaidika-Kośa (1936) is a dictionary of those Vedic words, whose meanings or explanations have been given in the Brahmanas; the Brahmaṇa portion is also tr. into Hindi.

HANAYAMA, S. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Bibliography of Buddhism (Tokyo, 1961).

HANDIQUI, KRISHṆA KĀNTA (1898-1982). A scholar, whose chief works are: the critical eds. of Naishadhīya-charita, Setubandha and Yaśastilaka-champū (qq.v.), with an Eng. tr. and critical notes (Lahore, 1934), of the first work.

HANDURUKANDE, RATNA (1932-). A Sanskrit scholar, who is Professor of Sanskrit, University of Peradeniya, Peradeniya, Sri Lanka. His chief works are: Contributions to the first 3 vols. of Encyclopaedia of Buddhism (pub. by the Government of Sri Lanka), critical ed. of Mañichūḍavadana and Lokānanda: tr. and a comparative study (pub. by the Pali Text Society in the Sacred Books of the Buddhists Series, London, 1967), articles in the Critical Pali Dictionary, The Mañichūḍa Study (1976), and several research articles on Buddhist Studies published in journals of repute. He has also published reviews and has made contributions to 'Annals'.

HANSA RĀJA (b. 1888). An Arya-samajist Vedic scholar, whose chief works are: Vaidika Kośa (1926; based on the Brāhmanas published before 1925). Science in the Vedas, etc.

HANS RAJ AGARWAL. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose chief works are Saṃskṛita-sāhityetiḥāsa (2 Vols., 1951), Saṃskṛita-nibandhapradīpa (1955) and A Short History of Sanskrit Literature (revised ed. 1963).

HANSEN, OLAF. A modern German Indologist, who is a student of Schubring; his main interests are comparative Vedic and Iranian studies.

HANUMANNĀṬAKA. A unique Sanskrit drama, known as the work of Hanumān, but which was for a long time lost. There are many legends current about this play but they all agree to this that is now extant is only a recast or reconstruction of the original. It exists in two principal recensions, viz., West Indian (in 14 Acts and 548 verses) redacted by Dāmodara Miśra, and East Indian (Bengali), arranged by Madhusūdana in 10 Acts (720 verses). The former is styled Hanumannāṭaka and the latter Mahānāṭaka. It is said that Hanumān wrote an account of the life of his deity in the form of a drama. When he came to know that Vālmiki was writing the epic, he thought that his composition would eclipse the sage's work and therefore cast it into the sea. At the instance of king Bhoja of Dhārā (q. v.), the play was recorded on the rocks in fragments, was recast and was made available. The chronology of these two versions is hard to fix with any definiteness. It is clear, however, that in its present form the work contains verses not only from the Rāmāyaṇa and the Hitopadeśa, but also from the Bāla-rāmāyaṇa and the Anargha-rāghava (qq. v.) and is in its turn drawn upon by Subhaṭa of the 13th cent. A great portion of this work, however, must be much older, as is suggested by the legends, and also by the fact Ānandavardhana (q. v.) refers to it.

In Act I after the brief Nāndī, there being no prologue, a narrative follows down to the arrival of Rāma at Mithilā for winning Sītā by breaking Śiva's bow; this part of the action is in the form of a dialogue between Sītā, Janaka, Rāma, and others. Narratives lead up to Sītā's marriage and to the scene with Paraśurāma. Act II describes Sītā's love for Rāma and is undramatic. Act III is mainly descriptive and carries the story down to the departure of Rāma and Lakshmaṇa in chase of Mārīcha in deer shape. Acts IV-VII treat of Rāma's return to the deserted hut; Rāma's search for Sītā and departure of Hanumān for Lankā; Hanumān's consolation of Sītā and return; the crossing of the ocean by apes. Act VIII shows Aṅgada's mission to Rāvaṇa. The remaining Acts describe the conflict, conquest and return of Rama's party to Ayodhyā.

The Hanumannāṭaka is not a Nāṭaka in the exact sense of the term; it is described something between an epic and a dramatic composition. It is also described as a Chhāyā-nāṭaka (shadow-play). According to Subandhu, this is a Samagra type of dramatic composition which combines in itself all the different characteristics of all the types of Nāṭaka, but these terms are not found acceptable. The only statement, therefore, that we may safely make about this play for the present, is that it is a literary drama, a play never intended to be acted, as seems to be shown by the several peculiar features such as the prevalence of verse over prose, absence of Prakrit, the large number of characters, the omission of the Vidushaka, and its plagiarisms from earlier Rāma dramas.' HCIP, IV, 182.

HANUMATPRASĀDA ŚĀSTRĪ. A Sanskrit writer, whose chief work is Kāśmīretihāsaḥ (a history of Kashmir, 1969).

HANXLEDEN, J. E. A German Jesuit Father, who worked in Malabar from 1699 to 1732. His Grammatica Granthamia seu Samscrdumica was the first Sanskrit grammar, written by a European; it was not printed, but was used by Bartholome (q. v.).

HARACHARITA-CHINTĀMAṆĪ. A Sanskrit Mahākāvya in 32 cantos, by Jayadratha (q. v.; fl. early 13th cent.); the printed text is incomplete and runs upto the 45th verse of the 32nd canto.

It is not really a Mahākāvya but a Māhātmya since it is a storehouse of Śaiva myths, practices and beliefs. It relates many legends connected with Śiva and his various Avatāra; eight of these legends are localised at well-known Kashmirian Tirthas; the local names as recorded by Jayadratha, agree closely with those of the Rājatarāṅginī. The importance of the work lies in this that it embodies some old and new Śaiva practices and legends.

HARADATTA. A Sanskrit grammarian, son of Padmakumāra and a resident of South India. He composed the Pada-mañjarī (q. v.), a valuable comm. on the Kāśikā; his date is uncertain.

HARADATTA. (fl. 1150-1300). A South Indian Sanskrit writer and author of the comm. Ujjvalā on the Āpastamba-dharma-sūtra, of Anākulā on the Āpastamba-tilhya-sūtra, Anāvīlā on the Āśvalāyana-grihyasūtra and the Mitāksharā comm. on the Gautama-dharmasūtra; Pada-mañjarī (q. v.) is also ascribed to him. His works are models of ideal commentaries HARADATTA. (fl. early 18th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, son of Jayaśaṅkara of the Gārgya gotra and author of Rūghava-naishadhiya, a poem in two cantos, simultaneously narrating the stories of Rāma and Nala.

HARADATTA. See Vrajarāja Dikshita.

HARAKELI-NĀṬAKA. See Viśaladeva Vighraharāja.

HĀRA-LATĀ. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Aniruddha (q. v.), intended for the Sāmavedins; it deals with impurity consequent upon birth and death and also with acts allowed or forbidden during the period of impurity.

HARA, M. A noted Japanese scholar, whose special field of study is epic-purāṇic literature. A pupil of Tsuji. Nakamura and D. Ingalls, he was appointed to hold the chair of Sanskrit in the Imperial University of Tokyo in 1960.

HARAPRASĀDA ŚĀSTRĪ. A celebrated Indian scholar, whose chief works are: ed. of Saundarānanda, discovery of the material represented by Baudha Gān O Dohā, collection of material from Nepal, subsequently ed. by B.T. Bhaṭṭāchārya in Sādhana-mālā (2 Vols., 1925 and 1928) and Catalogue of Nepal Palm-Leaf MSS. By making a thorough and critical examination of the contents of the Purāṇas, he has divided them into six groups in accordance with their subject-matter; he is also of the view that the original number of the Purāṇas was four, which was raised to ten and then to the traditional number eighteen.

HĀRĀVALĪ. A Sanskrit lexicon by Puru-shottamadeva (q. v.), including synonyms and homonyms. Like the author's Trikāṇḍaśeṣha, it contains a rich store of very rare terms, many of which are from Buddhist texts.

HARA-VIJAYA. A Sanskrit Mahākāvya in 50 cantos by Rājānaka Ratnākara (q. v.), which treats of the story of the destruction of the demon Andhaka by Śiva. Though born blind, the demon had obtained sight by hard penance whereupon he became a source of trouble to gods; hence killed by Śiva. In spite of the presence of some good stanzas, the work betrays a deplorable lack of proportion and shows excessive fondness for Yamakas. The last few cantos of this poem are held to be spurious on the ground that Alaka, the author's pupil, has written comm. upto the middle of the 46th canto.

HARDY, EDMUND. A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Die vedische-brahmanische periode der Religion des alten Indiens (Munster, 1893), Indische Religions-geschichte (Leipzig, 1898), ed. of Netti-pākaraṇa, ed. of Paramattha-dīpanī and Notes for ed. of Peta-vatthu. His treatment of the Vedic religion is of the nature of a straight-forward statement rather than of a critical exposition.

HARDY, R. SPENCE (1803-68). A Wesleyan missionary, who pub. several works based on Sinhalese sources; his works are: Eastern Monachism (London, 1850), Manual of Buddhism in its Modern Development (1860) and The Legends and Theories of the Buddhists (1866).

HARE, E.M. (1893-1955). An English Indologist, whose chief works are tr. of Anguttara-nikāya (1934-35) and of Suttanipāta (1945).

HARIBĀBĀ PURĀṆIKA. See Bhayalikar, Annāji Rāmachandra.

HARIBHADRA (fl. 2nd half of 8th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit and Prakrit writer, who, originally a Brāhmaṇa, was the outstanding personality among the Jaina writers of his period. He describes himself as the son of Mahattarā Yākinī, who, an ordinary nun, had become instrumental in his conversion to Jainism according to tradition; a pupil of Jinabhaṭṭa, he was known also as Virahāṅka. He is the earliest Sanskrit commentator of the Jaina canonical literature in Prakrit (a tendency followed by others) and his contributions to Jaina logic are outstanding. His Sanskrit comms. on the Jaina canon contain illustrative stories drawn from the mass of Prakrit story literature. His Sanskrit works are: Shaṅḍarśana-samuchchaya (a brilliant exposition of the different systems of philosophy of the day), Lokatattva-nirṇaya, Yogaśrīṣṭi-samuchchaya, Yoga-bindu and Dharma-hindu; a comm. Abhisamayālaṅkāra-loka on Abhisamayālaṅkāra-kārikā (q.v.) is also attributed to him. He inaugurated a new era in Yoga literature by employing new terminology and an extraordinary and descriptive style. His principal Prakrit works are: Samarāditya-kathā (Samarāichcha-kahū) and Dhūrtākhyāna (qq.v.); his Dhūrtākhyāna is a remarkable satire in Indian literature. Haribhadra is the first great Prakrit writer of this period.

HARIBHADRA. Haribhadra, supposed by some to be identical with Harichandra (q.v.), is the author of the Sanskrit Jīvandhara-champū.

HARIBHADRA (fl. 12th cent.). A Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa poet, who is the author of the Neminātha-chariū (Neminātha-charita; q.v.) in Apabhraṃśa and Mallinātha-charita (giving the life of the 19th Tīrthāṅkara) in Prakrit. He completed his first work in 1159 on the day of conversion of king Kumārapāla to Jainism. There is also a reference to his having composed the Chandra-prabha charita in 8,000 verses in Prakrit.

HARIBHAKTI-VILĀSA. A Sanskrit work in 20 chapters by Gopālabhaṭṭa or by Sanātana Gosvāmin (qq.v.), which is regarded as the most authoritative work on the rites and practices of Vaishnavas of Bengal. The work, in verse, is replete with quotations from the Purāṇas.

HARICHANDRA (fl. after 900). A Sanskrit author of Jivandhara-champū (q.v.), who had earned the title of 'Sarasvatī-putra'. A Digambara Jaina, son of Ādradeva and Rādā, he is mentioned by Rājaśekhara in his Karpūrumañjarī (q.v.). He may or may not be identified with Harichandra, author of the Dharmaśarmābhilyudaya (q.v.).

HARICHANDRA. A Sanskrit poet, whose verse occurs in Subhāshitāvalī (q.v.).

HARICHANDRA. A Sanskrit poet, who is mentioned in the Sadukti-karṇāmṛita (q.v.).

HARICHANDRA, BHATṬĀRA. Author of a Sanskrit prose work as mentioned in Harsha-charita (q.v.).

HARICHARAṆA BHATṬĀCHĀRYA (b. 1879). A Sanskrit writer, who was Professor of Sanskrit in Metropolitan College, Calcutta. His Kapāla-kunḍalā (Calcutta, 1926) is a Sanskrit tr. of Bankim Chandra's Bengali novel of the same name. He also tr. Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam into Sanskrit; his poems are: Karṇadhārā and Rūpasunirjhara.

HARICHARITA-KĀVYĀ. See Chaturbhuja.

HARIDĀSA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Kokiladūta, a poem on the model of Meghadūta. (q.v.).

HARIDĀSA CHAUDHURĪ. A modern iter, who, along with Spiegelberg (q.v.), has ed. a volume called the Integral Philosophy of Aurobindo; he runs along with Svāmī Kriyānanda, a Centre in San Francisco for Universal Religion.

HARIDĀSA SIDDHĀNTA-VĀGĪŚA (b. 1876). A Sanskrit writer of Bengāl, who was professor of Sanskrit at Nakipura. His chief works are: Saralā (a novel), Virāja-sarojinī, Vaṅgīya-pratāpa (plays), Rukmiṇi-haraṇa (poem) and comms. with historical introduction on Naishadha-charita, Kādambarī, Daśakumāra-charita, Sāhitya-darpaṇa and on the poems and plays of Kālidāsa and Bhavabhūti (most of them printed at Calcutta):

HARIDATTA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Ṛikmaṇimālā, Ṛigveda-bhāṣhya-bhūmikā and Saṁskṛita-Kāvyakāra.

HARIHARA (fl. prior to 1250). Author of a Sanskrit comm. on Pāraskara-grīhya-sūtra.

HARIHARA. (fl. c. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit dramatist and author of Bhartṛhari-nirveda (q.v.), a drama, in glorification of Hathayoga system of Gorakshanātha and of Saṅkha-parābhava-vyāyoga; another play, Prabhāvatī-Pariṇaya is also attributed to him.

HARIHARA ŚARMĀ, P.V. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose Śrī Gopālakṛishṇa-sūtra (1982) narrates the story of Kṛishṇa in the form of a Suprabhāta. This stotra was published serially in the Sanskrit journal "Saṁskṛita Śrī".

HARIHARA SVARŪPA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, who in his Kāśmīra-yātrā describes the beauty of Kashmir.

HARIKAVI (or Bhānubhaṭṭa). A Sanskrit poet, who was a Brāhmaṇa from the Deccan but had settled in Surat. His works are: Śambhurāja-charita (a biography composed in 1685, of Shambhujī, the son of Shivājī, which exists in fragments) and Haihayendra-charita (a mythical poem dealing with the story of, Kārtikeya, but the story is spun around the life of his patron, Shambhujī himself).

HARIKṚISHṆA ŚĀSTRĪ, GOSVĀMĪ. A Sanskrit writer, whose Lalitakathā Kalāpa (Varanasi, 1976-77) is a collection of short and long stories in prose.

HARINĀMĀMṚITA-VYĀKARAṆA. A Sanskrit grammatical work by Jīva Gosvāmin (q.v.), in which not only illustrations but definitions also contain the names of Rādhā, Kṛishṇa, Viṣṇu and their deeds. A San̄kshepa (or Laghu) Harināmāmṛita-vyākaraṇa on similar lines was earlier written by Rūpa Gosvāmin (q.v.). Such works, sectarian in character, were meant for the propagation of Vaishṇaviṣṇ and are at present in use among the Vaishṇavas of Bengal.

HARINĀTHA, MAHĀMAHOPĀDHYĀYA. (fl. between 1250 and the last quarter of the 14th cent.). A Smṛiti writer, perhaps of Mithilā, whose Sanskrit Smṛiti-sāra (q.v.) or Smṛiti-sāra-samuchchaya is an authoritative Smṛiti digest. He is quoted by Śulapāṇi, Mīsarū Mīśra, Vāchaspati Mīśra, Raghunandana, Kamalākara and later writers on Smṛiti.

HARĪ RĀM ĀCHĀRYA. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : Āgamatīrtha (poetic Hindi tr. of Prakrit Jaina Sūtras) and a critical study of Hāla and his anthology.

HARIPRASĀDA (fl. 1st half of 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, son of Gaṅgeśvara and author of Kāvyaśloka (in seven Prakāśas) and Kāvyaṛthagumpha.

HARIŚAṆKARA JOSHI. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Vaidī'ṇ Viśva-darśana (3 Pts., 1966, 1968 ff.) and Vaidika Yoga-sūtra (a comm. in Hindi, 1967).

HARIŚARAṆA SIDDHĀNTĀLAṆKĀR (1902-). A Vedic scholar, who commented in Hindi on the Sāmaveda (Delhi, 1974).

HARISATYA BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Jain Moral Doctrine.

HARIŚCHANDRA VIDYĀLAṆKĀR (b. 1903). A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are Hindi trs. of Sāmaveda (1955) and of Ṛigveda.

HARISHENĀ (fl. c. 350). A Sanskrit author of the Allahabad Stone Pillar Inscription in honour of the Gupta king Samudragupta.

HARISHENĀ (fl. 10th cent.). An Apabhraṁśa poet, who himself describes that he was originally a resident of Chitor in Mewār and belonged to the Dhakkaḍa family but migrated to Achalpur (probably in Amraoti District), where he studied metrics and rhetorics and composed his poem Dhamma-parikkhā (q.v.) in 987.

HARISVĀMĪ (fl. 538-639). A Sanskrit commentator on the Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa, who declared himself to be a disciple of Skandasvāmi (q.v.).

HĀRĪTA (fl. before 6th cent.) Author of a Dharmasūtra in Sanskrit; his verses appear to have been widely known long before the 6th cent. A.D.

HĀRĪTA (fl. A.D. 400-700). One of the twenty traditional writers on original Smṛiti and author of a metrical Smṛiti on legal matters.

HARIVAMŚA. Regarded as supplement (khila) to the Mahābhārata, it contains 16,374 ślokas in Sanskrit; it does not, however, appear to be the work of one poet or of one compiler, and is also of much later date than the epic. The text is also a mass of legends and myths, collected together for the glorification of Vishṇu. Occasionally, it is called Harivamśa-purāṇa, yet it is not counted among the Purāṇas. Vaiśampāyana, the reciter of the Mahābhārata to Janamejaya, is also considered as to have recited the Harivamśa. In contents, the Harivamśa is no more in common with the Mahābhārata than the Purāṇas. The work is divided into three sections :—

Bk. I (Harivamśa - parva; Genealogy of Hari). Like other Purāṇas, it contains an account of the Creation and mythological narratives, such as of Dhruva, Dakṣha and his daughters, Vena and Prithu. Many legends, such as those of Viśvāmitra and Vasishṭha are worked into the genealogy of the solar dynasty. The genealogy of the lunar dynasty contains the legends of Pururavā and Urvaśī, Nahusha, Yayāti, Yadu, Vasudeva and Kṛishṇa.

Bk. II (Vishṇu-parva) deals exclusively with Kṛishṇa : all the stories of the births and childhood; the heroic deeds and love adventures of the cowherd-god are related here in greater detail.

Bk. III (Bhavishya-parva; Section of the Future) contains prophecies regarding the coming of Kali and Kṛita ages, two different accounts of the Creation, stories of Varāha, Nṛsiṃha and Vāmana Incarnations of Vishṇu, hymns for the harmony of Vishṇu-Śiva-worship, the slaying of Pauṇḍra by Kṛishṇa, a longer legend of the two Śiva-worshippers Haṃsa and Dimbhaka, who are humiliated by Kṛishṇa-Vishṇu and lastly the merits and religious gains of reading the Mahābhārata and the Harivamśa.

The Harivamśa is useful in throwing light on the history of the Mahābhārata.

HARIVAMŚA KOCHHAR (1905-). A modern Apabhraṃśa scholar, whose chief works are: Apabhraṃśa Sāhitya-kā-Itihās (in Hindi, 1956) and ed. of Vaitāla-pañcha vimśatī.

HARIVAMŚA-PURĀṆA. See Riṣṭhanemi-chariu.

HARIVAMŚA-PURĀṆA. An Apabhraṃśa poem consisting of 122 Sandhis, equalling 18000 ślokas, composed by Dhavala (q. v.). The legends of the original Harivamśa in Sanskrit have been adapted to suit Jaina doctrine. For example, the descendants of Dhritarāshtra and Karna are shown to have embraced Jainism, the reason being the expiation of the sins incurred by their ancestors. The five Pāṇḍavas, at the end of the Mahābhārata war, instead of going to heaven, took to asceticism and attained Nirvāṇa.

HARIVAMŚA-PURĀṆA. An unpublished work by Raidhu (q. v.).

HARIVAMŚA-PURĀṆA. A Jaina adaptation in Prakrit of the Mahābhārata (q. v.) in 66 cantos by Jinasena, composed in 738; also called Bṛihad-harivamśa-purāṇa. Many changes have been effected to glorify Jainism: Kauravas and Karna are said to have been converted to Jainism and that the Pāṇḍavas are stated to have become ascetics and attained Nirvāṇa.

HARIVAMŚA-PURĀṆA. A Sanskrit poem in 39 cantos by Sakalakīrti (1464) and his pupil, Jinadāsa (fl. 2nd half of 15th cent.); the first 14 cantos were written by Sakalakīrti, the rest by Jinadāsa, though according to another version only Jinadāsa is mentioned as the author.

HARIVILĀSA. A Sanskrit poem by Lolimbarāja (q. v.), which describes in 5 cantos the early exploits of Kṛishṇa upto his slaying Kamsa, the subject affording some opportunity of erotic flavour and lyric fluency.

HARLE, J. C. A British Indologist, whose chief work is Gupta Sculpture (Oxford, 1974).

HARMATTA, JANOS. A modern Hungarian Indologist, who is Professor of the Chair of Indo-European Linguistics in the University of Budapest. He wrote introductory studies to Ervin Baktay's work and to the new ed. of Schmidt's Pañchatantra (Budapest, 1959). In Vol. I of the "Anthology of the World" (Budapest, 1952) in Hungarian, he shows the most excellent works of Old Indian literature as well as their authors. His special field of study is the Kushāṇa period.

HARSHA. Same as Śrīharsha (q.v.).

HARSHA-CHARITA. A Sanskrit prose work of Ākhyāyikā type by Bāṇa (q.v.), written in 8 Uchchhvāsas (chapters).

Beginning with an autobiography where Bāṇa traces his descent from Dadhīcha and Sarasvatī and from Vatsa, a son of Dadhīcha's brother, he names his immediate ancestors of some generations with veneration due to their piety and learning. He gives an account of his early life and his sojourn at the royal court. Next comes the history of king Harsha : in the city of Sthānviśvara in the country of Śrīkaṇṭha, there lives a king Pushpabhūti. In the remaining chapters, he gives an account of Prabhakaravardhana, born in the line of Pushpabhūti. Prabhakaravardhana, who is of great prowess, has two sons: Rājyavardhana and Harshavardhana and a daughter Rājyaśrī, who marries the Maukharī prince Grahavarman. On the death of Prabhākara-vardhana, Rājyavardhana refuses the throne, but before he can instal Harsha in his stead, news reaches them that the king of Mālwa has slain Rājyaśrī's husband and carries her away to his capital. Rājyavardhana attacks the Mālwa prince and kills him but he himself is treacherously murdered in his camp by a Gauḍa prince. Upset by this calamity, Harsha marches against the Gauḍa prince but hearing on the way that Rājyaśrī has escaped from prison and is rescued by a Buddhist monk from her resolve to ascend the funeral pyre, he searches for her. With the meeting of Harsha and Rājyaśrī, the book ends and is obviously incomplete.

The cause for the discontinuance of the work is not known; there are many suggestions but nothing definite can be said. The work is valuable for settling the chronology of the poets who preceded Bāṇa as in the introductory verses to this work are mentioned the poets, dramatists and works which Bāṇa admired.

HARSHANĀTHA MISHRA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief studies are 'on Chāndra-vyākaraṇa (1974) and Paribhāshenduśekhara (1978).

HARSHE, R. G. A modern scholar, whose chief studies are 'Vedic Names in Assyrian Records', 'Mount Meru : The Homeland of the Aryans', on Bhavabhūti (Eng. tr. : Observations on the Life and Works of Bhavabhūti, done by J. B. Khanna) and on Purāṇas.

HART, GEORGE L. A Sanskrit scholar, whose A Rapid Sanskrit Method (new ed. 1984) is quite popular in American colleges for learning Sanskrit.

HARTEL, HERBERT (1921-). A German Indologist, whose chief works are: ed. of the Sanskrit Karmavachana text in the Turfan fragments, Indische Skulpturen I (1960), Indische Zentralasiatische Wandmalereien (1959) and Propylaen-Kunstgeschichte, Vol. 16 (1971).

HARTMAN, CARL GUSTAV (1922-). A Finnish Indologist, whose chief works in Finnish are a thesis on the Particles in the Upanishads (1966), a book on the goddess Kālī (1969) and another on Śakti/Viśvagarbhā (Helsinki, 1973).

HASTĀMALAKA. A Sanskrit work in fourteen verses by Śaṅkarācārya (q.v.), which plays on the refrain that the self as the eternal apprehension is all in all.

HASTIMALLA (fl. between 900 and 1300). A Sanskrit writer, son of Govinda of Śrīvatsagotra, who was converted to Jainism and was a remote disciple of Guṇabhadra. He was called 'Hastimalla' because he fought with an elephant; for this act of prowess, he was eulogised by the Pāṇḍya king in a hundred verses in open assembly. Besides the poems Ādipurāṇa, Puru-charita and Udayana-rājā-kāvya, he wrote eight dramas of which the known are Vikrānta-kaurava (also called the Sulochanā-nāṭaka), the Subhadra-haraṇa, the Maithilī-kalyāṇa and Añjanā-pavanañjaya.

HASTINGS, W. See Vivādārṇava-setu.

HASTIPĀLA. See Mṛṇṭha.

HASTYĀYURVEDA. A Sanskrit treatise on the diseases of elephants, which is in the form of dialogue between Romapāda, king of Aṅga, and the sage Pālakāpya. The work is a huge treatise and is also called Gaja-sāstra. Some scholars assign it to fifth or even sixth cent. B.C., but others regard it as of much later date; the work was probably known to Kālidāsa. Divided into four Sthānas, each Sthāna being sub-divided into several chapters, the first and second Sthānas deal with major and minor elephant diseases and their treatment; the third deals with surgery relating to elephants, where 10 kinds of surgical instruments are mentioned and the last with food and drink of elephants, flow of ichor, construction of elephant-stalls, description of various kinds of elephants, etc.

HĀSYACHŪPĀMAṆI. A Sanskrit Prahasana by Vatsarāja. See Vatsarāja.

HĀSYĀRṆAVA. A Sanskrit Prahasana in two Acts by Jagadīśvara (q.v.: fl. later than 15th cent.).

It brings the rogues and rakes together in the house of the bawd Bandhurā, which the king Anaya-sindhu 'Ocean of Misrule' visits to study the character of his people, as they are drawn there by the beauty of Bandhurā's daughter Mṛigāṅkalekhā. The work is disfigured by vulgarity of words and acts.

HATTHA-VANAGALLA-VIHĀRA-VAMSA. A Pali work in 11 chapters; while the first eight give an account of king Sirisaṅghabodhi, the last three describe the mansions built as memorials and for the performance of religious rites, in the place where the king spent the latter part of his life.

HATTORI MASAOKI. A modern Indologist, who tr. into English the first chapter of the Pramāṇa-samuchchaya under the title Diināga: On Perception (Cambridge, Mass., 1968).

HAUER, JAKOB WILHELM (1881-1962). A German Indologist, who came to India as a missionary and taught at a mission school in India from 1907 onwards. Confronted with Hinduism, he became interested in this religion. He studied Indology and History of Religions at Oxford and obtained a doctorate in Tübingen in 1917. In 1925, he was appointed Professor of Sanskrit in Margburg and in 1927 he went to Tübingen as Professor. He wrote several books on Yoga. His chief works (in German) are: "The Beginnings of Yoga Exercises" (1922), "The Vratya, a study of ancient Indian heresy and its mysticism" (1927), "The Lankavatara Sūtra and Sāṅkhya" (1927) and "Yoga as a means of Salvation" (1932). Hauer considered Yoga a means for psycho-analysts to get away from studying sick people and to help mankind attain a new goal. According to Hauer, the main trend of Yoga was not within the fold of orthodox Brahmanism, but within a heretical group, which developed Sāṅkhya-Yoga as philosophy and Śiva-Rudra worship. He also wrote History of Indo-Germanic Religions and a German tr. of a part of Atharvaveda. According to Hauer, the Indians invaded India about 2,000 B.C. and prior to it, they must have lived together with the Iranians as the Aryan people. Towards the end of his life in 1958, Hauer wrote another book on Yoga "Yoga, the Indian way to Self-realization".

HAUG, MARTIN (1827-76). A German Indologist, who studied Iranian languages and Sanskrit in Germany. He is considered one of the greatest authorities on Iranian languages and co-founder of Iranian philology. Besides his many works on Zendavesta, he ed. and tr. the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa (2 vols., 1863) into German. He had gained insight into Vedic rituals through his friendship with pandits in India, which proved to be of great value when engaged on this work. He also wrote a treatise on "Brahma and the Brahmins" (1871) and on the "Value of Vedic Accent" (1873). He maintained that Vedic accent is not a word accent, but a song accent. This theory is based on the present-day recitation of the Vedas. In 1868, he was appointed Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology at Muenchen. He lectured on many subjects in the field of Sanskrit philology, linguistics, and Oriental studies, and young scholars from India (including R.G. Bhandarkar) and England came to his classes.

HAUSCHILD, RICHARD (1901-72). A German Indologist, who obtained his doctorate on Śvetāśvatara-upanishad in 1926.). He became Professor of Sanskrit in 1951 in Jena. Besides his papers on the "Pali Manuscripts Aśoka, as a Buddhist and a progressive man, and on god Agni, his greatest achievement is the revised and enlarged edition of A. Thumb's Handbuch des Sanskrit (3 vols., 1953-59). He compiled an index to the Grammar of J. Wackernagel and A. Debrunner, which appeared in 1964. He ed. and pub Ashṭāvakra-gītā, a philosophical poem.

He also wrote (in German) "The Indo-European people and languages of Asia Minor". In 1972, after his retirement in 1967, Hauschild wrote "The Missionary Father Heinrich Roth and the first European Sanskrit Grammar".

HAVELL, E. B. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are: Ancient and Mediaeval Architecture of India (London, 1915), Indian Architecture (London, 1913), Ideals of Indian Art (1911) and Indian Sculpture and Painting (1908).

HAWLEY, JOHN STRATTON. A modern American Indologist, who along with Donna Marie Wulff, in The Divine Consort (Rādhā and the Goddesses of India; 1982, ed.) discusses the Hindu conception of God as Woman. Hawley's other works are: At Play with Kṛishṇa: Pilgrimage Dramas from Brindāvan (1981; with Shrivastava Goswami; also Paper back edition 1985), Kṛishṇa, the Butter Thief (1983) and Sur Das: Poet, Singer, Saint (1984). He has written a number of articles, mainly on Kṛishṇa and allied topics. He is Professor, Department of Asian Languages and Literature, University of Washington.

HAYAGRĪVA-VADHA. A Sanskrit poem by Menṭha (q. v.), the first verse of which is quoted by Rājaśekhara in his Kūvya-mīmāṃsā (q. v.) and by Kshemendra in his Suvṛitta-tilaka (q. v.); the work is not extant. It describes the killing of the demon Hayagrīva by Viṣṇu for stealing the Vedas.

HAYASHIYA TOMOJIRO. A modern Japanese scholar, who has done much work in studying the catalogues of translations of Chinese renderings of Buddhist canon.

HAZĀRILĀLA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Indirā-vijaya-praśasti-śataka (1971-72) eulogises Indirā Gāndhī, the third Prime Minister of India.

HAZRA, R. C. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are: Studies in Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs (1940; reprint 1975); Studies in Upapurāṇas (Vol. I, 1958, Vol. II, 1963). He has made an exhaustive study of Purāṇas and Upapurāṇas and in this field is considered as an authority. With S. K. De, he has pub. Anthology of the Epics and Purāṇas (Sahitya Akademi, 1959).

HECKER, H. (1923-). A German Indologist, whose chief work is: Die Ethik des Buddha (Buddhist ethics). In his Der Pali Kanon, Ein Wegweiser (Hamburg, 1965), he has listed German trs. of the Pali Canon.

HEESTERMAN, J. C. A modern Dutch Indologist, who is working on the development of the Vedic ritual system out of an original complex of collective ceremonies.

HEILER, FRIEDRICH (1892-1967). A German Indologist, who in 1920 became Professor of Comparative Religion at Marburg University. In 1919, he was invited to Sweden as a visiting Professor. He took keen interest in Buddhism and Hinduism. His comparative studies on Hinduism and Christianity were aimed at understanding and synthesis. He wrote his thesis (in German) "Prayer, A study on the history and psychology of religion; 1918"; five editions of this book appeared. He wrote another thesis on Buddhist meditation, 1918. 2nd ed. 1922. It was Heiler's wish to find a synthesis between meditation and prayer, between mystic religion and prophetic religion. This seems to have led him to a study on Sadhu Sunder Singh. 1924. 4th ed. 1926. Sadhu Sunder Singh had been born a Sikh; study of the Bible induced him to convert to Christianity. In spite of this, he remained an Indian nationalist, who envisaged an Indian Christian Church free from any foreign influence. His other works are: "Mysticism of the Upanishads" (1925), "Christian faith and Indian thought" (1926) and "Christian Missions in India" (1931).

HEIFETZ, HANK. An American Sanskrit scholar, who teaches in the Department of South Asian Studies, University of Wisconsin-Madison, U.S.A. He has authored The Origin of Young God (California, 1985; a tr. of Kālidāsa's Kumārasambhava, with annotation and Introduction).

HEILMANN, LUIGI. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief studies are on Śaṅkara's Gītābhāṣya, Sanskrit prosody and linguistic problems of Modern Indo-Aryan.

HEIMANN, BETTY. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is: Significance of Prefixes in Sanskrit Philosophical Terminology (London, 1951); she has contributed hundreds of articles on topics of Indian philosophy including study on the god Varuṇa.

HEIN, NORVIN. A modern American Indologist, who worked in Mathurā area on religious and folk dramatic arts and is the author of The Miracle Plays of Mathurā (Oxford, 1972).

HELLER, LUDWIG (1866-1945). A German Indologist, who in 1893 submitted his thesis on Māyāyudha's Kavirahasya (q.v.); the Introduction was pub. in 1894 and the text in 1900 in Greifswald. In 1897, he wrote in German as "The Indian Rules on the Formation of Denominatives" and the same year he was appointed Professor of Sanskrit in Greifswald. He wrote a number of papers on grammatical subjects and gave a lecture on 'Pāṇini's System of Thought'. He went on teaching in Greifswald till his death.

HEMACHANDRA (1088-1172). A celebrated polymath, originally named Chāṅgadeva, who bore the title 'Kālikāla-Sarvajña'. Son of Chachiga and Pahini and pupil of Jinadatta, he was born at Dhunduka or Dhandukā (in Ahmedābād) of Anhilvād, and became a Jaina monk. He was patronised by Chālukya king Jayasīṃha Siddharāja and was responsible for the conversion to Jainism of his successor, king Kumārapāla. His Sanskrit kāvyas are : Bālabhārata (an epitome of the Mahābhārata in 19 cantos), Kumārapāla-charita (q. v.; partly in Sanskrit and partly in Prakrit, in honour of Kumārapāla), Trishashīśālākāpurusha-charita (q. v.) and Saptasandhāna, a poem, having seven applications, but no longer extant. He is the author also of the philosophical work Pramāṇa-mīmāṃsā and of the grammar entitled Siddha-hemachandrābhīdhasvopajñā - śabdānuśāsana, popularly known as Śabdānuśāsana (q.v.). He wrote also Kāvyānuśāsana (a work on poetics), Abhidhāna-chintāmāṇi (a lexicon), Laghu-Arhanṇī (on polity) and Chhandanuśāsana (a work on metres; qq.v.). His exclusive works in Prakrit are Bhava-bhāvanā (q.v.) and Deśi-nāmamālā (q.v.).

HEMACHANDRA. A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of Neminātha-charita (a biography of Neminātha, a Tīrthāṅkara, in 5,000 Gāthās). He was an elder contemporary of famous Hemachandra, and belonged to the Maladhāri-gachchha.

HEMĀDRI (fl. 13th cent.) A great figure in the Smṛiti literature of South India. Son of Kāmadeva and grandson of Vasūdeva, he was well-versed in Pūrva Mīmāṃsā and was a minister of Mahādeva (r. 1261-71), the Yādava king of Devagiri. His Sanskrit Chaturvarga-chintāmāṇi (q.v.) is an encyclopaedic Smṛiti digest. A voluminous writer, he is said to have written a comm. on Śaunaka's Praṇavakalpa; Kaivalya-dīpikā, a comm. on the Muktāphala of Bopadeva (the author of Mugdhabodha grammar), Śrāddha-kalpa according to the rules of Kātyāyana, and Āyurvedarasāyana, a comm. on the Ashṭāṅga-hiḍaya of Vāgbhaṭa. Hemādri's name is associated with numerous temples built in a peculiar style of architecture (called Hemāḍapantī), and he is said to have invented the Moḍī script current in Mahārāshṭra.

HEMĀDRI A Sanskrit writer in Āyurveda and author of Śataśloki (q.v.). Some scholars are of the view that the real author of Sataśloki was Vopadeva (q.v.) and that Hemadri was his patron.

HEMAHARISAVIJAYA GAṆI. A Sanskrit writer on grammar, who belonged to the Hemachandra school. He put together a collection of about 140 Paribhāṣās or maxims of interpretation used in Hemachandra's grammar and wrote a comm. on them, entitled Nyūyārtha-mañjushā (completed 1405) at Ahmedābād.

HEMAKUMĀRA-CHARITRA. Same as Kumārapāla-pratibodha (q.v.).

HEMAVIJAYAGANI (fl. 17th cent.). A Jaina monk and author of Kathā-ratnākara (q.v.), a book of tales.

HENDRIKSEN, HANS (1913-). A Danish Indologist, whose chief work is Syntax of the infinitive verb-forms of Pali (Copenhagen, 1944); he also ed. the Critical Pali Dictionary. His other works relating to Himachali studies are : Reflections on Phonematic Analysis with special regard to a Himachali Dialect (1968), Himachali Studies (Vol. I: Vocabulary, 1976; Vol. II, 1980). He is Director of the Institute of Indian Philology in the University of Copenhagen and is mainly interested in linguistic studies and the philological interpretation of texts.

HENRY, VICTOR. A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Bouddhisme et Positivisme (1901), Precis de Grammaire Pali (1904), Grammar of Sanskrit and Pali, tr. of Mālavihāgnimitra, and a work on Agnishtoma, jointly with Caland (Paris, 1906-7); he has written an article "Vedic antithesis and its utility for Vedic interpretation". He also pub. a French tr. of Kāṇḍas VII-XIII of Atharvaveda with a commentary (Paris, 1891-96).

HENSGEN, HANS. A modern Indologist, whose chief study is on the cosmographical contents of the Brahmāṇḍa, Vāyu and Matsya Purāṇas.

HERDERS, J.G.V. (1744-1803). A German Indologist, whose chief work is the critical analysis of Kālidāsa's Śakuntalā.

HERMAN, ARTHUR L. A modern American Indologist, whose field is religion and philosophy; his paper on Māyā was published in Vedānta and the West (No. 173, Hollywood).

HEROLD, ERICH. A Czech Indologist, whose chief work is on Group-marriage in Vedic society (1955).

HERTEL, JOHANNES (1872-1955). A German Indologist, who made a deep study of Pañchatantra as well as the Veda and Avesta. He obtained a doctorate on "Text and author of Hitopadeśa" and was Windisch's successor on the chair of Indology at Leipzig in 1919. After a careful study of the Pañchatantra manuscripts, he came to the conclusion that the Kashmirian version came closest to the original text. In 1914, was published his Das Pañchatantra, seine Geschichte und seine Verbreitung (The Pañchatantra, its history and its diffusion), which discusses the spread of Indian fables not only to the West but also to the East and South. In his opinion, Buddhist missionaries, wandering bards, and gypsies were instrumental in spreading these tales abroad. In 1921, he brought out Bharatuka-dvātrimśikā, a collection 32 popular tales. Hertel assumed that the author was a Jaina writer of the 14th century. He also tr. the Muttavilāsa Prahasana (q.v.) which is ascribed to 7th century.

When Hertel was appointed Professor in Leipzig, he took up the study of the Ṛigveda. From 1924 onwards, he published a Journal (in German) "Indo-Iranian Sources and Research", in which his paper on Vedic and Avestan subjects appeared. He intended to give a proper interpretation of the Veda and Avesta, which he considered should be studied together, not separately. According to Hertel, fire, sun, and light play an important role in both Veda and Avesta; they are symbols of what is considered good and beautiful in Iranian and Vedic languages. The original home of Aryan people must therefore have been in a cold country. The fact that Indian flora and fauna find no mention in the Veda corroborates this fact in Hertel's opinion. In the Vedic field, his works are : Die Methode der Arischen Vorschung and Die Arische Feuerlehre (1925). He wrote a large number of articles and book reviews; he tr. some Indian poems and stories into German. He also studied Jaina literature and wrote Literature of Śvetāmbaris of Gujarat. Among his study of the fairy tales are the German tr. of Kathāratnākara (1920), Story of Pāla and Gopāla and the Kathāratnākara.

HERA-TANTRA. A Buddhist Sanskrit Tantra of the 8th cent., which contains rituals for mastery over a young woman; it is an invocation of Vajra.

HILGENBURGE, LOUISE. A German Indologist, whose chief work is Die Kosmogrophische Episode in Mahābhārata und Padma-purāṇa (Stuttgart, 1934).

HILLEBRANDT, ALFRED (1853-1927). A German Indologist, who is best known for his research on Vedic mythology and ritual literature; he also devoted his attention to the Arthaśāstra. In 1875, he obtained his doctorate on a thesis "On the goddess Aditi". He was of the opinion that Aditi is the immortal daylight. To qualify as university professor he wrote another thesis Varuṇa und Mitra (1877). In 1885, he was appointed full Professor in Breslau. Twice he was Vice-Chancellor of Breslau University. His major contribution to Vedic studies is his Vedische Mythologie (Vedic Mythology; 1st vol. on the god Soma, 1891, 2nd and 3rd vols. 1899 and 1902; smaller ed. 2 vols. 1910; new ed. 1927; Eng. tr. by S.R. Śarmā); in this he discussed Soma, Uśas, Agni, Indra and the remaining gods. He found several sun and moon gods in the Vedic pantheon and he attributed this to the fact that the gods of the different tribes had been incorporated in the pantheon. Hillebrandt's lectures on Indian cultural history were published in a book : Altindien (Ancient India).

His works on ancient rituals are : "Indian new and full moon sacrifice" (1889), in which he based his studies on the Śrautasūtras. He also ed. Śāṅkhāyana Śrautasūtra "Bibliotheca Indica" (Calcutta, 3 vols. 1888, 1891, 1897). In a paper : "Solstice festivals in ancient India" (1897), he showed that this custom was an Indo-European one. He contributed a book Ritualliteratur to the "Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research", in which he described the whole of Vedic ritual literature. He also wrote a treatise in German : "Voluntary death through fire and Soma initiation" (1917).

Hillebrandt prepared a critical ed. of Mudrārākṣhaśa, which led him to the study of Kautilya's Arthaśāstra. He published his study as "Politics in Ancient India" (1923). In 1921, he wrote a monograph Kālidāsa and brought out Aus Brāhmanas und Upanischaden, containing translations. A reprint, ed. by Glasenapp appeared under the title Upanischaden, Altindische Weisheit (Upanishads. Ancient Indian Wisdom; 1958/64).

HINBUER, OSKAR VON (1939-). A German Indologist, whose chief work Studien zur Kasussyntax des Pali, besonders des Vinaya-piṭaka (München, 1968) is on the syntax of the cases in Vinaya-piṭaka. He devotes his interest to the study of Gilgit manuscripts. We wrote a thesis on Saṅghatavāṭra (1980).

HIRAKA. See Mathurā Nātha

HIRĀLĀL JAIN. A celebrated Jaina scholar, who is responsible for the pub. of the early Digambara Āgama texts, like the famous comm. Dhavalā by Virasena on the Sūtras, called Śaṭkhaṇḍagama by Pushpadanta and Bhūtabali (16 Vols., completed 1959), the Mahābandha, its last part (7 Vols., 1953-58), and another large comm. Jayadhavalā on the text called Kāśhyapahṇḍa (in several vols.). The texts, dealing with the Karma doctrine, are accompanied with Hindi tr. and Introduction. He ed. also Saṃyadhammadohā attributed to Devasena (1932). Rāmasiṃha's Pāḥḍa-dohā (1933), Kanakāmara's Karakaṇḍa-charu (1934), Pushpadanta's Nāya-kumāra-charu (1933), with necessary information. His Bharatīya Saṃskṛiti meṃ Jaina Dharma kā Yogadāna (in Hindi, Jabalpur, 1962) deals with the contribution of Jainism in the cultural history of India.

HIRĀLĀL SHUKLA. A Sanskrit writer, whose works are : Ādhunika Saṃskṛita Sāhitya (Allahabad, 1971) and Contemporary Indian Literature (1968).

HIRANYAKEŚIN-GRĪHYA-SŪTRA. See Ved-āṅga (Kalpasūtra).

HIRANYAKEŚIN-ŚRAUTA-SŪTRA. See Ved-āṅga (Kalpasūtra).

HIRIYANNA, M. (1871-1950). A Sanskrit scholar, who authored such works as Outlines of Indian Philosophy, Essentials of Indian Philosophy, Quest After Perfection, Popular Essays in Indian Philosophy, Art Experience and Sanskrit Studies. He was Professor of Philosophy and Sanskrit at the Maharaja's College in Mysore.

HIRT, H A German Indologist, whose grammatical work 'Indogermanische Grammatik' (5 vols.; 1921-24) was published from Heidelberg.

HIRZEL, B. A German Indologist, whose chief work is Gleichnisse und Metaphorn in Rīgveda, etc. (Eng. tr. by S.B. Velankar). He also tr. Śakuntalā episode of the Mahābhārata into German (1833).

HISTORY AND CULTURE OF THE INDIAN PEOPLE. See Majumdar, R.C.

HITOPADĒŚA. A Sanskrit work by Nātāyaṇa, which is the Bengal version of the Pañchatantra (q.v.), though with additions and alterations in the original work. The number of the books has been reduced from five of the original Pañchatantra to four. See Pañchatantra.

HJORTSHOJ, ERIK PIHLKJAER. A modern Danish Indologist, whose special field is the study of Indian and Greek sources of the history of the Maurya period, he has pub. articles on Aśoka's inscriptions and is working at a collation of a Nepalese manuscript of Śakuntalā.

HOCK, HANS HENRICH (1938-). A German (U.S. citizenship by naturalization) scholar, who is Associate Professor in the Department of Linguistics, University of Illinois, Urbana. His relevant articles are : "Historical Change and Synchronic Structure: the case of the Sanskrit vocative singular of ā-stems" (1972), "Historical Change and Synchronic Structure : the case of the Sanskrit root nouns", "On the Indo-Iranian accusative plural of consonant stems", "On the non-automatic relationship between Vedic ablaut and accent" (1974), "Substratum influence of (Rig-Vedic) Sanskrit ?" (1975), "Sanskrit in the pre-Islamic context of South Asia" (with R. Pandharipande ; 1978), "Retroflexion rules in Sanskrit", "Archaisms, morphophonemic metrics, or variable rules in the Rīgveda", "Sanskrit Causative Syntax : a Diachronic Study" (1981), "Subhāshita-saṃskṛitas-yādhunikīsthitiḥ". (The present-day status of spoken Sanskrit : in Sanskrit) (1981), "The Sanskrit passive : synchronic behaviour and diachronic change". "Pre-Rigvedic Convergence of Indo-Aryan with Dravidian : Another look at the evidence" (1984), "Transitivity as a gradient feature : synchronic and diachronic evidence from Indo-Aryan, especially Sanskrit" (1985), etc.

HODGSON, BRIAN HOUGHTON (1800-94). An English Indologist, whose chief works are: Essays on the Languages, Literature and Religion of Nepal and Tibet, Illustration of the Literature and Religion of the Buddhists and Buddhism in Nepal; in 1837 he sent from Kāthmandu 88 manuscripts of Sanskrit Buddhist texts to the Société Asiatique

HOEFER, ALBRECHT (1812-83). A German Indologist, who was appointed in 1847 as University Professor at Greifswald. Earlier in 1836, he got his doctorate on the thesis : "Two Books on the Prakrit Dialect". His major work in German was : "Contributions to the Etymology and Comparative Grammar of the Chief Languages of the Indo-European Family of Languages; vol. I on Phonetics". He tr. Kālidāsa's Urvaśī and other Indian poems into German and worked on Vararuchi's grammar of Prakrit. He was the first to report on Setubandha "a pure old Prakrit poem". He studied Prakrit, the language of the Jainas. He wrote a paper on the grammar of the Veda. Hofer's syntactical study was : "On the Infinitive, particularly in Sanskrit. An etymological-syntactical discussion as specimen of a Sanskrit syntax" (Berlin, 1840).

HOERNLE, AUGUST RUDOLFFRIEDRICH (1841-1918). A German Indologist, who was born in Sikandria near Agra, where his father was a missionary. After studying with Goldstuecker in London, he became Professor of Philosophy in Jai Narain's College in Benares and was appointed Principal of the Cathedral Mission College, Calcutta in 1877. From 1881-99, he was Principal of the Madrasa in Calcutta. He died in Oxford.

His works are : A Comparative Grammar of the North Indian Vernaculars (1880), ed. of a Prakrit Grammar, Chanda's Prakṛita Lakṣhaṇa (in Bibliotheca Indica, 1880), ed. of Uvasgadasa, being the seventh Aṅga of the Jains, ed. in the original Prakrit with the Sanskrit Commentary of Abhayadeva and the English translation with Notes (Bibliotheca Indica, 1889-90), A Comparative Grammar of the Bihari Language (with Grierson, 1885-89; it could not be completed), ed. of Jain Pattavali's list of teachers, compiling a list of the Indo-Greek kings from their coins and some 30 papers on Indian numismatics.

Hoernle's decipherment of the Bakshali manuscript (found in the village Bakshali near Peshawar) proved to be of importance for the study of Indian mathematics; his treatise on this manuscript was published (Indian Antiquary, 1883, 1888). His work on the Bower manuscript (found by Lt. H. Bower, in 1890 in old stupa near Kaschgar in Central Asia) is on medicine and was printed under the title : The Bower Manuscript, Facsimile Leaves, Nagari Transcription, Romanised Transliteration and English translation with notes (Calcutta, 1893-1912). In the course of working on this manuscript, Hoernle acquired knowledge of Indian medical literature and he wrote Studies in the Medicine of Ancient India (1907); he also wrote several other articles on Indian medicine. He wrote Manuscript Remains of Buddhist Literature found in Eastern Turkestan (1916). He also compiled a List of MSS. (Pali) in British Museum (1883). While in Benares, he had several meetings with Dayānanda Sarasvatī (q v.).

HOFFDING, H. A modern Danish Indologist, whose chief work is Religions Filosofi.

HOFFMANN, HELMUT (1912-). A German Indologist, who has pub. several works on pre-Buddhistic religion of Tibet, the chief being The Religion of Tibet (Eng. ed., 1961); he has also pub. a study on Sanskrit Buddhist Canon (1939).

HOFFMANN, KARL (1915-). A German Indologist, who has done special study in Vedic ritualism, philology and linguistics; his chief work is Injunctive im Veda (1967).

HOFINGER, MARCEL. A Belgian Indologist, whose chief work Etude sur le concile de Vaiśālī (Louvain, 1946) is a thesis on the Vaiśālī Buddhist Council.

HOHENBERGER, A. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is the study of Indian flood-legends and the Matsya-purāṇa. He also pub. a study on the Bhaviṣhya-purāṇa.

HOLT, CLAIRE (Mrs.). An American scholar, whose Art in Indonesia (1967) deals with the dance-drama arts of Indonesia, their literary bases : the Mahābhārata and the Rāmāyaṇa, and the Indian influences.

HOLTZMANN, ADOLF SR. (1810-70). A German Indologist, who studied Sanskrit and German in Muenchen and later in Paris. In 1852, he was appointed Professor in Heidelberg. After writing his treatise : "On the Greek origin of the Indian zodiac" (1841), his "Rama, an Indian poem by Valmiki" (in German) appeared in 1843. A small text edition from a Paris manuscript was entitled "Indravaja, an episode from the Mahābhārata". His major work was Indische Sagen (Indian Legends; 1845, 1846, 1847). The first and third parts of this work are episodes from the Mahābhārata, e.g., the story of Nala; the 2nd volume contains the chief part of the great epic up to the end of the great battle. The epic is condensed, but most of the verses are literal trs. from the original. According to Holtzmann, the Mahābhārata contains an ancient part and many later additions and interpolations, and he tried to reconstruct the original. Although he was very often subjective, he did initiate critical Mahābhārata studies. After his death, his nephew Adolf Holtzmann Jr. (q.v.) continued his uncle's work in a more philological-descriptive manner.

HOLTZMANN, ADOLF JR. (1838-1914). A German Indologist, who, following the example of his uncle, Adolf Holtzmann Sr. (q.v.) made a deep study of the Mahābhārata. In 1908, he became full Professor for Sanskrit and Comparative Linguistics in Freiburg. Among his works are: "Agni, according to the Mahabharata; 1878), "On the Grammar of the Mahābhārata; 1884) (both in German), Das Mahābhārata und seine Teile (The Mahābhārata and its components, 4 vols., 1892-95; reprint 1970). Critics have objected that his volumes are not clearly arranged and the summaries of contents leave out long passages which he seemed to consider spurious. In Holtzmann's opinion, the original poem was retouched by a person with Vaishnava, pro-Pāṇḍava tendencies.

HOOYKAAS, C. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Old-Javanese Rāmāyaṇa (Amsterdam, 1958).

HOPKINS, EDWARD WASHBURN (1857-1932). A modern Indologist, whose chief works are: The Religions of India (Boston, 1895), The Great Epic of India (New York, 1901), The Mutual Relations of the Four Castes, Gods and Saints of the Great Brāhmaṇas, and Epic Mythology (Strassburg, 1915; reprint 1974). His The Religions of India is larger than that of Barth's book of the same title but his treatment of Vedic gods is conservative and cautious so far as the different schools of Vedic interpretation are concerned; as regards Kṛishna he considers Kṛishṇa originally the patron-god of the Pāṇḍavas, a polyandrous wild tribe located north of the Ganges, who attacked the stronghold of Brāhmanism in the holy land about the present Delhi and overthrew the old Brāhmanic Aryan race of the Kurus.

HOPPE, M. A modern German Indologist, whose chief work is The Buddha His teachings, etc.

HORĀŚĀSTRA. A Sanskrit work on astrology by Bhaṭṭotpāla, which is in 75 verses.

HORNER, I. B. (Miss). A modern English Indologist, whose chief works are: Early Buddhist Theory of Man Perfected (1934), ed. of Papañchasūdanī, ed. of Madhuratthavilāsinī, Eng. tr. of Majjhima-nikāya (under the title The Middle Length Sayings, 1954), and Milindapañho, Living Thoughts of Gotama, the Buddha (with A. Coomaraswamy; 1948), Basic Position of Sila (1950), The Jātaka Stories (Pali and English facing; 1954), Some Aspects of Buddhism (1962), Eng. tr. of Section on elders in Buddhist texts through the Ages by F. Conze (1964), Eng. tr. of Vinaya-piṭaka (under the title The Book of Discipline, 1938), Women under Primitive Buddhism (1973), new tr. of Vimānavatthu (1974) and new tr. of Buddhavaṇisa and Chariyapiṭaka (1975).

HORSCH, PAUL (1925-72). A German Indologist, who was more of a philosopher than a linguist and devoted himself to Vedic and Buddhist studies. He obtained his doctorate in 1951 on a thesis: "The Concept of Upādhi in Śāṅkara's Philosophy". The next five years he spent in Cambridge and in Shantiniketan. At Lausanne and Marburg, he worked on the Dharma theory in Buddhist Philosophy (1959). From 1967 onwards, he was Assistant Professor in Zuerich. He visited India in 1972 and was drowned at Mahābalipuram (near Madras) when he attempted to save his wife. Starting from Śāṅkara's Advaitavāda, Horsch followed the sources into the past from the Upanishads to Brāhmaṇas and the Vedas. In his German book "Vedic Gatha and Śloka Literature; Bern, 1966", the few remainders of Vedic secular knowledge have been collected. He published a paper on the Vedic cosmic order as he intended to write a book on it. The book was almost ready for print when Horsch died. As editor of "Asiatische Studient", Horsch wrote a large number of papers (in German) on the problem of individuation in Indian philosophy (3 Pts.), secular knowledge in Vedic Literature (1961), Buddha's first meditation (1964), sociological elements in ancient Indian names (1965), Hinduism and tribal religion (1968), symbolism of oriental religions (1970), and precursors of the Indian doctrine of transmigration (1971). In his paper "Buddhismus and Upanishaden" (Pratidānam, 1968), he discussed the relation of Buddhism and primitive Sāṅkhya philosophy.

HOUSEHOLDER, FRED W. An American Indologist, whose special field of study is Sanskrit literature and who at present teaches in the Indiana University.

HOUSTON, G.W. A foreign Indologist, whose chief work is : The Cross and the Lotus : Christianity and Buddhism in Dialogue (1985; ed.).

HOWARD, WAYNE. A modern foreign Indologist, whose chief work is : Veda Recitation in Varanasi (1985).

HRISHIKEŚA ŚĀSTRĪ. A Sanskrit writer, who is known for his collection of essays : Prabandhamāñjarī (1928).

HU, FERNANDO. A French Indologist, whose chief work is French tr. of Dhammapada (Paris, 1878).

HUBER, E. A modern Indologist, who tr. Sūtralāṅkāra (Paris 1908) into French.

HULIN, MICHFL. A French Indologist, whose chief study in French is on the notion of Ahamkāra (1978).

HULTZSCH, EUGEN (1857-1927). A German Indologist, whose works are on Indian epigraphy. His ed. of the Inscriptions of Aśoka is his most outstanding contribution. In 1886, he was appointed as epigraphist to the Government of Madras, Examiner of Sanskrit and Fellow of the University of Madras, a post he held upto 1903, when he returned to Germany. He accepted a professorship in Halle and stayed there till his death.

While in India, he devoted his time to the search for and to the examination of manuscripts. Every year he pub. papers on epigraphy and occasionally numismatics. He pub. three Reports on Sanskrit Manuscripts in Southern India (Madras, 1895-1905). As Assistant editor of "Epigraphia Indica", he brought out South Indian Inscriptions (3 vols., Madras, 1890-1903). His Inscriptions of Aśoka appeared in 1925, though the manuscript was ready for print already in 1914. He also ed. Pārijāta-māñjarī (Leipzig, 1906), ed. Śiṃharāja's Prākṛita-rūpavatāra (London, 1909), Kālidāsa's Meghadūta with Vallabhadeva's commentary (London, 1911), German tr. of Māgha's Śiśupālavadha (1927), Extracts from Kalhaṇa's Rājatarāṅgiṇī (1889, 1890). Earlier, Hultzsch had pub. an ed. of the Baudhāyana-dharma-śāstra (Leipzig, 1884, 2nd ed. 1921). He also studied Buddhist texts : Aśvaghosha's Buddhacharita and Saundarānanda; he was able to show that Brahmin legends referred to by Aśvaghosha often differ from the version known from the Mahābhārata or the Rāmāyaṇa. He also tr. Annambhaṭṭa's Tarka-saṅgraha into German (Berlin, 1907), Laugākṣhi's Tarka-kaumudī and Viśvanātha Tarkapañchāna's Bhāṣā-parichchheda, all Nyāya works.

HUMBACH, HELMUT (1921-). A German Indologist, whose chief works are : Die Gathas des Zarathustra (2 vols., 1959) and studies on Kanishka (1960) and Aśoka (1974): his specialization is in Zoroastrianism and history of relations between India and Iran. He also discussed the Aramaic inscriptions from Taxila (Wiesbaden, 1969).

HUMBOLDT, WILHELM VON (1767-1835). A German philologist, who was a diplomat, and a man of letters. While Minister of Education in Prussia, he had been instrumental in obtaining the chair of Sanskrit for Franz Bopp (q.v.) and Bopp was the first Professor of that subject. Humboldt himself had studied Sanskrit with Bopp and wrote an essay entitled : On an episode of the Mahābhārata known under the name of Bhagavadgītā in the Memoirs of the Royal Prussian Academy 1825, 1826, 1827. He also contributed two papers on Sanskrit grammatical subjects to A.W. von Schlegel's "Indische Bibliothek". About the Gītā, Humboldt wanted to give "a complete and faithful account of this poem, and particularly the philosophical doctrines contained in it" to readers who do not know Sanskrit.

HUME, ROBERT ERNEST. An English Indologist, whose chief work is The Thirteen Principal Upanishads (Eng. tr., Oxford, 1921).

HUMPHREYS, C. (1901-). An English scholar, whose chief work is The Buddhist Way of Life (1969).

HUNT, E. S. A modern English Indologist, whose chief works are: Vademecum, Buddhist Stories for Children, The Buddha and His Teachings, An Outline of Buddhism, How to Meditate, Essentials and Symbols of the Buddhist Faith, ed. Hawaiian Buddhist Annual, Gleanings from Soto Zen and Buddhist Sermons.

HUNT, MABLI. An English Indologist, whose chief work is Index to Putisambhidā-magga (1908).

HUNTINGTON, SUSAN L. (1943-). An American Indologist, who is at present Associate Professor of History of Art, The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, U.S.A. Her works are : The "Pala-Sena" School of Sculpture (Leiden, 1984; with 282 photos) and The Art of Ancient India : Buddhist, Hindu, Jain (Tokyo, 1985; with 757 illustrations). Her ed. works are : Archive of Mathura Art, Kushāṇa Period (1975), Archive of Gāndhār Art (1979), Archive of Bihar and Bengal Art (2 Pts., forthcoming; all pub. or to be pub. from Leiden). She has pub. about 10 articles on sculpture and art and has reviewed so far 10 important publications on allied subjects.

HURVITZ, LEON. A modern Buddhist scholar, whose Scripture of the Lotus Blossom of the Fine Dharma is an Eng. tr. from the Chinese Kumārajīva (New York, 1976).

HUTH, GEORG (1867-1906). A German Tibetologist, whose knowledge of Sanskrit enabled him to study Tibetan Buddhism in the context of Asian culture. In the Sanskrit field, his thesis in German was "The Period of Kālidāsa" (Berlin, 1890). He pub. the Chhandoratnākara of Ratnākaraśānti in 1890 and discussed the Tibetan version of Naiṣargikapṛāyaśchittika-dharmas (1891). He accompanied Gruenwedel (q.v.) on the first expedition to Turfan in 1902. He also wrote a number of works on Tibetan Buddhism.

HÜTTEMANN, W. An Indologist, in whose chief work Jñāta Stories (1907), the stories are summarised with parallels from other literatures.

INDRA. A great Sanskrit grammarian, who is referred to by Pāṇini in his Aṣṭādhyāyī (q.v.) by the word Prāchām. He is believed to have been the founder of the Aindra school of grammar.

INDRABHŪTI. Supposed author of Āvassaya (q.v.).

INDRANĀTHA VANDYOPĀDHYĀYA. A Sanskrit writer, whose Gauruchandra, a novel, using a historical episode, was pub. in the Sanskrita Sāhitya Parishat Patṛika (1932-33), Calcutta.

INDRA VIDYĀVĀCHASPAṬI (1889-1960) A celebrated graduate of Gurukula Kangri, who was son of Swāmi Shraddhānanda. He was also Vice-Chancellor of Gurukula Kangri, Hardwar. His Sanskrit work Bhāratetihāsa (Vol. I; 1970) brings the account of India upto the end of the Epic Age; the survey has been made from a fresh point of view. He wrote also a comm. in Hindi on Itopaniṣad.

INDU (Indumitra). A Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Anuṇyāsa, a comm. on Jinen-drabuddhi's Nyāsa (q.v.). The author may have flourished earlier than Maitreya-rakṣita (q.v.).

INDU RASTOGI. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is the ed. and Eng. tr. of Śuklayajuh prātiśākhya.

INGALLS, DANIEL H.H. A modern American Indologist of Harvard University, who studied Navya Nyāya (neo-logic) at Calcutta. His chief work, Materials for the Study of Navya Nyāya shows how Indian Navya Nyāya had anticipated mathematical logic by several centuries; this work was pub. as Vol. 40 of Harvard Oriental Series. His another pub. in this Series, Subhāshita-ratnaśa (Eng. tr. of the anthology with a comprehensive Introduction) has brought Sanskrit poetry to the West in an attractive manner. He has made also studies on Purāṇic literature. He has written an article on Kālidāsa: 'Kālidāsa and the Attitudes of the Golden Age', JAOS 96.1 (1976).

INSLER, STANLEY, A modern American Indologist, who teaches in the Yale University. His field of specialization is Indo-Iranian studies, the Vedas and Pāṇinian grammar.

IRĀVATI KARVE. A modern scholar, whose chief study is on the Paraśurama Myth.

IRUPAGA DANḌĀDHDINĀTHA. See Bhāṣakaṛa.

ĪŚĀVĀSYA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

ISIDĀSĪ. A Therī, whose songs are included in the Therī-gāthā (q.v.).

ISIMANḌALA. An eulogy in Prakrit by Dharmaghosha, of the ancient Jaina preceptors Jambasvāmi, Sayyambhava, Bhadrabāhu, etc. There is a comm. on it by Padmamandira, written in 1496.

ĪŚVARADATTA. Author of the Sanskrit play Dhūrta-ṛiṭa-saṃvāda (q.v.).

ĪŚVARAKRISHṆA. Author of the celebrated Sanskrit Saṅkhyā-kārika (q.v.); sometimes identified with Vindhyavāsa, who corrected his master's views as expressed in Shashṭi-tantra in a set of seventy verses which Vasubandhu (q.v.) criticized in his Parmartha-saptati. He was earlier than Vasubandhu, who is assigned to the 4th or 5th cent. A.D.

ĪŚVARA-PRATYABHIIJĪ Ś-SŪTRA. See Utpaladeva.

ĪŚVARA-PRATYABHIIJĪ Ā-VIMARŚINĪ. Briefly called Vimarśinī or Laghvī Vimarśinī, it is a Sanskrit comm. by Abhinavagupta, on Utpalācharya's Īśvara-pratyabhijñā-uttra.

ĪSVARASIDDHI. A Sanskrit work by Utpala (q.v.) on the Śaiva philosophy of Kashmir.

ĪSVARASYA-SARVAVĀKYAM. A Sanskrit tr. of The New Testament of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, pub. in three volumes by Christian Missionaries at Serampore in 18th century.

ITI HĀSA-DĪPIKĀ. A Sanskrit work in five chapters, which brings the account of the British rule up to the wars with Tipu Sulṭān and the Mahratta kingdoms.

ITI HĀSA-TAMOMANĪ. A Sanskrit work (1813), which gives an account of the conquest of India by the English; its author is unknown.

ITIVUTTAKA. A part of the Khuddaka-nikāya. See Sutta-piṭaka.

IVANOV, V.V. A modern Russian Indologist, whose article, 'An Interpretation of the Ancient Indian ritual and mythological terms derived from aśva (horse)' discusses Vedic mythology and cosmogony. See Toporov, V.N.

IVEKOVIC RADA. A modern Indologist of Yugoslavia, who has pub. in Slovenian: tr. of R.C. Pandeya's The Problem of Meaning in Indian Philosophy (Zagreb, 1975) and 'The Early Buddhist Thought' (Sarajevo, 1977).

IWAMOTO, YUTAKA (1910-). A Japanese Indologist, who is Professor of Sanskrit and Indo-Asian Culture at the Soko University in Tokyo. Earlier, he had taught Sanskrit at the Kyoto University. He has translated 16 books on Indian culture from Sanskrit into Japanese and has written 20 books. His translations include the Upanishads, a part of Kathāsaritsāgara, Śūdraka's Mṛichchhakaṭṭika, Āśmasūtra, etc. His important works are: "Studies on Buddhist Narratives", "An Introduction to Buddhism", "Indian Narratives", "Selections from Buddhist Sacred Scriptures" and "Dictionary of Japanese Buddhist Terms in Japanese Literature". He is at present engaged in the Japanese tr. of Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa; he has already pub. the first two Kāṇḍas, while the third one would be ready soon. He is also studying the different versions of the Rāmāyaṇa as prevalent in Asian regions including Indonesia, Thailand, etc. He believes Hinduism is no religion but as a symbol of Indian life, manners and customs.

IYENGAR, M.S.R. A scholar, whose chief work is Studies in South Indian Jainism (jointly with B. Sheshgiri Rao; Madras, 1922).

IZUMI, HOKEI. A Japanese scholar, who tr. the Vimala-kīrtinirdeśa from Chinese into Japanese (1922-28); the work was tr. into Chinese by Kumārajīva in A.D. 406.

JAAVALLAHAM. Another name of Vaijālagga (q.v.).

JACKSON, A.V. WILLIAM. An American Indologist, who was Professor of Indo-Iranian Languages from 1895 to 1935 at Columbia University. His chief works are : An Avestan Grammar in Comparison with Sanskrit (New York, 1892), A Beginner's Grammar for Sanskrit and joint tr. (with G.K. Nariman) of Harsha's play Priyadarśikā.

JACOB, COL. G.A. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are : the ed. of Mahānārāyaṇa-upanishad, of Naishikarmyusiddhi, of Eleven Ātharvaṇa Upanishads, A Manual of Hindu Pantheism and Concordance to the Principal Upanishads and Bhagavadgītā (1931; an important work).

JACOBI, HERMANN (1850-1937). A celebrated German Indologist, who had earned the reputation of a "Śāstrajña". He obtained his doctorate on thesis (in German) : "On the origins of Indian astrology's term Horā". He visited India in 1873-74 and accompanied Georg Buchler on his journey through Rajasthan, where the latter was collecting Jaina manuscripts. In 1876 he became Associate Professor at the University of Muenster. In 1885 he became Professor in Kiel, and in 1889 he went to Cologne, from where he retired in 1922.

Jacobi ed. many Jaina texts and tr. them into German; his text editions are : Zwei Jainastotras (1876), The Kalpasūtra of Bhadrabāhu edited with an Introduction, Notes and a Prakrit-Sanskrit Glossary (Leipzig, 1879), The Kālakāchārya-Kathānakam (ed. and tr., 1880), The Āyārāṅga Sutta of the Śvetāmbara Jains (London, 1882), The Sthaviravali-chariṭa or Parivśiṣṭa-parvan by Hemachandra (1883, 2nd ed. 1932). Jacobi tr. the Āchārāṅgasūtra and the Kalpasūtra for the "Sacred Books of the East" (1884), and the Uttarādhyāyana-sūtra and Sūtrakṛitāṅga-sūtra in the same series (1895). He also tr. Suyagadaṅga (in German) and Eng. tr. of Uttarajjhayana (ed. Charpentier, Uppasala, 1922) and Der Buddhismus und seine Geschichte in Indien (tr. from Dutch, Leipzig 1882-84).

Jacobi's "Selected Stories in Mahārāshṭri" (in German: Leipzig, 1886), to which he appended a grammar and a glossary, are a landmark for the study of Prakrit. From 1901-14, the Upamitibhava-prapañcha Kathā of Siddharsi, a story in prose and verse, appeared in Bibliotheca Indica. In 1908, he ed. the story : Samaraichcha Kahā by Haribhadra (2nd ed. 1926). In 1914, he brought out the Paumachariya of Vimalasūri, a Jaina version of the Rāmīyaṃ in Māharāṣṭri, which he ascribed to the 2nd or 3rd cent. A.D. In 1913-14, he was invited by Calcutta University to lecture on Indian poetics and an honorary doctor's degree was conferred upon him. In India, he discovered two texts in Apabhraṃśa, a language hitherto only known from quotations by grammarians; he pub. the texts : Bhavisatta-kahā (1918) of Dhana-vala and the Neminātha-charita or Sunat-kinnāra-charitam (1921). Jacobi also wrote numerous papers on Jaina subjects and he thus became a pioneer, together with his teacher, A. Weber (q.v.) in Jaina studies. He proved that Mithāvira and Pārśva were historical personalities and Jainism was not an offshoot of Buddhism. He also wrote Studies in Jainism. Jacobi was awarded the title 'Jaina Darśana Divākara' (Sun of Jaina Doctrine) by the Community.

Jacobi's interest in mathematics and natural science had been expressed in his doctoral thesis. He brought out Methods and tables for verifying Hindu dates, tithis, eclipses, nakshatras, etc. (Bombay, 1888, Kiel, 1891) and wrote three papers : The Computation of Hindu Dates in the Inscriptions (1882), Tables for Calculating Hindū Dates in true local Time (1894) and The Planetary Tables (1912) (all appeared in Epigraphia Indica).

On account of astronomical calculations, he dated the extant collections of hymns to about 4,500 B.C. He took up this question again in a paper On the Antiquity of Vedic Culture (1908); his theories caused a lot of controversy among scholars.

Jacobi wrote on Prakrit grammar and linguistics as well. His work (in German) as "Compound and Subordinate Clauses. Studies in the Development of Indo-European Language" appeared from Bonn in 1897. In the Sanskrit epics and poetry, he wrote (in German) "The Ramayana, history and contents with a concordance of the printed recensions" (Bonn, 1893; reprint, 1976); E.

Frauwallner ed. the reprint. A corresponding book on the Mahābhārata appeared in 1903. He tr. Ānandavardhana's Dhvanyaloka (Leipzig, 1903) and wrote on the early history of Alaṅkāraśāstra (1930).

Jacobi contributed several papers (in German) on Nyāya, Vaiśeṣika, Sāṅkhya, and Yoga systems of philosophy, e.g. "The Indian Logic" (1901), "The Origin of Buddhism from Sāṅkhya-Yoga", "On the original system of Yoga", etc. A book on philosophy (in German) as "Light from the Orient" appeared in 1922. In his book (in German) "The development of the concept of god among the Indians and their proofs of his existence" (1923), Jacobi gave a survey of the concept of god from the Veda to the philosophical systems. His articles in "Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics" on Jaina topics are all results of his mature study and sympathetic understanding of Jainism. A commemoration volume ed. by Kirfel for Jacobi's 75th birthday in 1925 contains a bibliography of Jacobi's works.

JADUNĀTH SINHA. See Sinha, Jadunāth.

JAESCHKE, HEINRICH AUGUST (1817-83).

A German Indologist, who in 1856 went to Khyelang and Leh in Ladakh and became well versed in the Tibetan language. He wrote A Short Practical Grammar of the Tibetan Language with special reference to the Spoken Dialects (1865), a Romanized Tibetan-English Dictionary (1866) and the Introduction to the Hindi and Urdu Languages for Tibetans. All these works were published in Khyelang. He published on return to Germany, a Dictionary of the Tibetan Language in German, which he tr. into English and pub. in 1881 in London as : Tibetan-English Dictionary (3rd. ed., 1949). His Tibetan Grammar was reprinted in 1954. He contributed papers on the pronunciation and phonetics of the Tibetan and tr. some of the songs of Milaraspa into German. His tr. of the New Testamen.

in classical Tibetan appeared in a revised reprint in 1971.

JAGADDEVA (fl. 12th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Svapna-chintāmaṇi, an independent work on dreams. He also completed Samudra-tīlaka, a work on cements, begun by his father Durlabharāja in A.D. 1160.

JAGADDHARA (fl. 15th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit poet, son of Ratnadhara and author of Sūkti-kusumāñjali, consisting of 38 hymns in praise of Śiva. He commented on Sarasvatī-kaṇṭhībharana, Mālatī-Mādhava, Mudrārākṣasa (qq. v.) and on other plays and wrote Śivastotra, Saṅgīta-sarvasva and Vasantotsava.

JAGADEKAMAILA PRATĀPACHAKRA-VARTIN (fl. 12th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Saṅgīta-chūḍāmaṇi, a work in five chapters dealing with music and dancing.

JAGADIŚA TARKĀLANKĀRA (fl. middle 16th cent.). Son of Yādava Tarkavāgīśa, great-grandson of Sanātana Miśra, father-in-law of Chaitanya and a prominent figure in the Bengal school of Navya-nyāya, who flourished at Navadvīpa. He is the author in Sanskrit of Śabda-śakti-prakāśika (q.v.), and Mayūkha (comm. on Tattva-chintāmaṇi of Gaṅgeśa); Tarkāṃṛita is also ascribed to him. He also commented on the Dīdhi of Raghunātha Śiromaṇi.

JAGDISH CHANDRA JAIN. A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Life in Ancient India as depicted in the Jaina Canons (Bombay, 1947), Prākṛita Sāhitya-kā Itihāsa (in Hindi; Varanasi, 1961) and ed. of Vāsudevahinḍī.

JAGDISH KĀSHYAP. A modern scholar, whose chief works are the Hindi tr. of the works of Tipiṣaka from Pali and Pāśchātya-tarkaśūtra (2 Pts.). See Tipiṣaka.

JAGADIŚVARA (fl. later than 15th cent.). A Sanskrit dramatist and author of Hāsyārṇava (q.v.), a Prahasana.

JAGDIŚVARĀNANDA SARASVATĪ (1931-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is the Hindi tr. of Vālmīki-Rāmayaṇa.

JAGADIŚVARA ŚĀSTRĪ, V (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who composed hymns on Ramana Maharshi under the title Ramana-stotrāvalī, pub. from Tiruvannamalai.

JAGADRĀMA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer of Hoshiarpur, who has introduced popular Hindi tunes of today in his Saṅgīta-rāmayaṇa; his Chhatrasāla-vijaya is a prose fiction.

JAGAḌU-CHARITA. See Sarvānanda.

JAGAJYOTIRMAILA. A ruler of Bhaktapura (r. 1617-33) and a tributary of the king of Nepāl. His chief works in Sanskrit are: Saṅgīta-sāra-sarvasva (a treatise on music), Hara-gaurī-vivāha (an opera play on the popular theme of the marriage of Śiva and Pārvatī), a comm. on Padmīśi's Nāgara-sarvasva (on erotics) and Śloka-saṅgraha (collection of verses on 33 subjects).

JAGANNĀTHA (Lived between 1575 and 1674). An outstanding Sanskrit scholar, poet and author of Rusa-gaṅgadhara (q.v.), a celebrated work on poetics. Son of Peru Bhaṭṭa and Lakshmī, pupil of Kṛishṇaśeṣha, he was a Tailanga Brāhmaṇa and flourished in the courts of Rājputs, the Mughals and the ruler of Kāmarāpa. He appears to have received the title of 'Pandita-rāja' from Shāh Jahān (1628-58). He was patronised by Dārā Shukoh but when his patron was murdered in 1659, he retired from the court. His other chief works are: Chitramīmāṃsā-khaṇḍana (on poetics), Bhāminī-vilāsa (an erotico-didactic poem; q.v.), three eulogies: Āsapha- vilāsa (of Āsaf Khān, brother of Nur Jahān), Jagadābharaṇa (of Jagatsimha of Udaipur), Prāṇābharaṇa (of king Prāṇanārāyaṇa of Kāmarūpa), Piyūshalaharī or Gaṅgūlaharī, Amṛitalaharī, Karunālaharī, Lakṣmīlaharī, Sudhālaharī (in praise of Gaṅgā, Yamunā, Viṣṇu, Lakṣmī and Sūrya respectively), Manoramākucha-mardinī (a grammatical work directed against Bhaṭṭoji's comm. Praughā-manoramā on the Siddhānta-kaumudī; q.v.). A large number of stray verses too are ascribed to him. After criticising the views of earlier writers including those of Appayya Dikshita (q.v.), he defines poetry as a linguistic composition, which brings a charming idea into expression.

JAGANNĀTHA. Author of the Sanskrit Varṇakrama-lakṣaṇā (a comm. on the Rik-prātiśākhya); his date is uncertain.

JAGANNĀTHA. Author of the Sanskrit Sāra-prudīpikā (a comm. on the Surasvata-vyakaraṇa; q.v.); his date is uncertain.

JAGANNĀTHA (fl. A.D. 1773). Son of Rudra Tarkavāgiśa of Bengal, called Jagannātha Tarkapañchānana, he is the author in Sanskrit of a huge Smṛiti digest called Vivada-bhaṅgārnava (q.v. : 1773).

JAGANNĀTHA. A Sanskrit poet, son of Śrīnivāsa of Kāvāla family, who was patronised by king Sarphoji (r. A.D. 1711-28) of Tanjore. His poem, Sarubharāja-vilāsam, composed in 1722, describes the life of Sarphoji. His other works are : Anaṅga-vijaya (a Bhāṇa) and Śringāra-taraṅgiṇī.

JAGANNĀTHA. A Sanskrit writer, who was son of Bālakṛiṣṇa, a minister in the court of king Sarphoji (r. 1711-28) of Tanjore. His dramas are: Rati-Manmatha (on the marriage of Rati and Manmatha) and Vasumatī-pariṇaya (on the marriage of Vasumatī).

JAGANNĀTH AGRAWĀL (1906-). A Sanskrit scholar, who has contributed articles to Comprehensive History of India (Vols. II, III and IV), planned by Indian History Congress and to Cambridge History of India (Vol. II).

JAGANNĀTHA MIŚRA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose Kathā-prakāśa is a collection of tales and episodes from various sources.

JAGANNĀTHA MISHRA. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Bhārati-śabari-mahākāvya (1984) is a poem (dealing with the well-known episode of Śabari in the Rāmāyana) in lucid Sanskrit.

JAGANNĀTHA PĀṬHAK. A Sanskrit scholar, who has ed. Dhvanyāloka (with Lochana and Hindi gloss), Padyarachanā by Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa (1979), Kāvya-prakāśa (1976), Ratimanmatha-nāṭakam (1983) by Jagannātha and Kāpiśāyini (1980; a collection of original Sanskrit poems on the glorification of love in its mundane and transcendental aspect). His Mṛidvika (1983), a collection of 700 verses, as in his previous poetical work, uses the Persian imagery following the Rubaiyāt of Omar Khayyām; here also the poet glorifies love.

JAGANNĀTHA TIRTHA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit scholar of Dvaita school, whose Bhashyadīpikā explains every word of the Madhvabhāṣya (see Madhvāchārya). He also wrote Sūtradīpikā, giving the Madhva interpretation of the Brahmasūtras (q.v.).

JAGANNĀTHA-VALLABHA. See Rāmānanda Rāya.

JAGANNĀTHA VEDALAṆKAR. A Sanskrit scholar of Pondicherry, whose chief works are : Agni-mantra-mālā (Pondicherry, 1976; a Sanskrit tr. of Aurobindo's Hymns to Sacred Fire) and Kuntāpa-sūkta-saurabham, an exposition of Kuntāpa-sūktas of Atharvaveda (XX. 127-136).

JAGDISH CHANDRA JAIN. A modern Jaina scholar, whose chief works are : Life in Ancient India as Depicted in Jaina Canon and Commentaries (2nd rev. ed. 1984) and Prakrit Narrative Literature, Origin and Growth (1981).

JAGDISH PRASAD SHARMA An Indologist, who is Professor of History and Chairman, South Asian Studies, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu, Hawaii, U.S.A. His chief works are : Republics in Ancient India, C. 1500-500 B.C. (1968), Dream-Symbolism in the Shramanic Tradition (with Lee Siegel : 1980), Individuals and Ideas in Modern India (1982), 10 research articles and 20 book reviews, published in international journals. He is at present engaged on three books : Myth & Memory of the Jinas Five Hemachandrian Studies, Jaina Heroes and Jainism (both to be pub. in India & the U.S.) and Individuals and Ideas in Traditional India Ten Interpretative Studies (ed.).

JAGGU VAKULABHŪSHANA. A modern Sanskrit writer of Mysore, whose original name was Jaggu Alwar Aiyangar. His chief works are: Prasanna-kūyapīya (Mysore, 1951; a drama, in which Dushyanta, Śakuntalā, along with young Bharata, pay a visit to Kaṇva's Āshram) and Jayantikā (a romance of exquisite beauty on the lines of Kādumbarī).

JAGGU VENKATACHARYA (fl. c. 1873). A Sanskrit writer of Melukote near Mysore, whose chief works are : Yādavagirimāhātmya-saṅgraha, Kāveri Mahimādarśa, Divyasūri-vaiḥbhava, Bhaṭṭanātha-charitam and Kākānvokti-mālā, Divyasūri-vaiḥbhava (1873) is a eulogy of the Vaishnavite Alvars of Tamil Nadu. Rinavimochana is a play of his in 10 Acts, dealing with Kṛṣṇa's intervention to save Draupadī from indignity at the court of Duryodhana. Other members of the Jaggu family like Singararya and Alvar Ayyangarya have also distinguished themselves as Sanskrit authors, their works being Yuhūśaila-champū and Vakulabhūshana respectively.

JAI DEV (1941-). A scholar, whose chief works in Hindi are on the contribution of Maharshi Dayānanda to World Philosophy (1977) and a study on Upanishads (1980).

JAIDEV VIDYALANKAR (1925-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Vedic Sāhitya; he has also contributed several research papers to journals. He is at present Head, Department of Sanskrit, Maharshi Dayanand University, Rohtak.

JAIMINĪ (fl. 4th cent. B.C.). A Sanskrit writer, to whom Mīmāṃsā-sūtra (q.v.) is attributed.

Jaiminī-bhārata is a Sanskrit work by Jaiminī, which describes the story of Horse-sacrifice after the Mahābhārata War.

JAIMINĪYA-ĀRSHEYA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

JAIMINĪYA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

JAIMINĪYA-GṚHYA-SŪTRA. See Udāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

JAIMINĪYA-MĀLĀ-VISTĀRA. A Sanskrit work by Mādḥava (q. v.), which is an exposition of the Mīmāṃsā system in verse accompanied by a prose comm. entitled Nyāya-māla-vistāra. The original work is divided into several Adhyāyas, sub-divided into Pādas, each Pāda consisting of Adhikaraṇas.

JAIMINĪYA-SAMHITĀ. See Veda (Sāma-veda).

JAIMINĪYA-ŚRAUTASŪTRA. See Śrauta-sūtra.

JAIMINIYA-UPANISHAD-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

JAIN, C. L. A writer, whose chief work is Jaina Bibliography (Calcutta, 1945).

JAIN; C. R. A scholar, whose chief works are: Key of Knowledge (Arrah, 1915) and Practical Path (1917), both dealing with Jainism.

JAIN, G. R. A scholar, whose chief work Cosmology: Old and New (Gwalior, 1942) deals with Jainism.

JAIN, K. P. A scholar, whose chief work in Hindi is Hindi Jaina Sāhitya-kā Saṅkshipta Itihāsa (Benares, 1917), a concise history of Hindi Jaina Literature.

JAIN, S. A. A scholar, whose chief work Reality (Calcutta, 1960) deals with Jainism.

JAINA MAHĀBHĀRATA. Same as Śubha-chandra's Pāṇḍava-purāṇa (q. v.).

JAINA-RĀJATARAṅGIṆĪ. A continuation in Sanskrit by Śrīvara (q. v.) of Dvītiya-rājatarāṅgiṇī (q. v.), covering the period 1459-86. It is also called Tṛtītiya- (third) rājatarāṅgiṇī.

JAINENDRA (fl. 7th cent. ?). A Sanskrit grammarian, who was the founder of one of the schools of Sanskrit grammar. His grammar, Jainendra-vyākaraṇa (q. v.), however, is nothing but Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī and Kātyāyana's Vārttikas thereon, condensed as much as possible with a number of ingenious shifts. Though ascribed to Jainendra, the real author of this work is Devanandin, also known Pūjyapāda Devanandin, who probably composed it in 678.

JAINENDRA-VYĀKARAṆA. A Sanskrit grammatical work; traditionally ascribed to Jina (Mahāvīra), who is said to have revealed it to god Indra; hence the title : Jainendra. As a matter of fact, the work appears to have been written by one Devanandin (q.v.), also known as Pūjyapāda Devanandin. Probably written in the 7th cent., the work exists in two versions: the shorter one in 3000 Sūtras and the larger one in 3700 Sūtras. The work aims at simplification of Pāṇini's grammar and the 14 Śivasūtras, the Vedic portion of it having been omitted. The Pañchavastu is a recast of the Jainendra grammar to facilitate its study by beginners.

JAINI, J. L. A scholar, whose chief works are Eng. tr. of Tattvārthasūtra (Arrah, 1920) and Outlines of Jainism (Cambridge, 1916, 1940).

JAINI, P. S. A scholar, whose chief work is the critical ed. of Abhidharmadīpa (Patna, 1959).

JAIPĀL VIDYĀLĀṆKAR (1932 -). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Svapnavāsavadattā, with notes.

JALHAṆA (fl. 13th cent.) A Sanskrit writer, who was son of Lakshmīdhara. He is mentioned by Minkha with admiration as a minister at the court of Rājapurī, the capital of king Somapāla. On the history of that king he wrote a poem Somipāla-vilāsa, on which Rājānaka Ruchaka commented. On the model of Subhāshitāvalī (q.v.), he compiled Sūktimuktāvalī (1257, q.v.); he was later on minister of the Yadava king Kṛishṇa. He is also the author of the Mughopadeśa (q.v.).

JĀMBAVATĪ - VIJAYA. A Sanskrit Kāvya, though lost, is ascribed to Pāṇini (q.v.), by a Rājasekhara, in a verse quoted in Jalhaṇa's Sūkti-muktāvalī. A fragment from the kāvya is preserved by Rayamukha in his comm. on the Amara-kośa.

JAMBHALADATTA. Author of a Sanskrit version of Vetāla-pañchaviṃśatikā (q.v.).

JAMBUDDĪVA-PANNATTI. See Uvaṅga.

JAMBŪDĪVA-PRAJÑAPTĪ. See Jambuddiva-pannatti.

JAMBŪSVĀMĪ CHARIU. An Apabhraṃśa poem by Vīra (fl. 1019), which describes in 11 Sandhis the life of Jambū Svāmī, the last Jaina Kevali. The poem, completed in 1 year describes how Jambū Svāmī, despite entreaties of his mother and his wives, decides to renounce the worldly life and is initiated into the Jaina order by Sudharmā Svāmī. The poem fulfills all the requirements of a Prabandha-kāvya.

JAMBŪ SVĀMĪ RĀSU (CHARIYA). An Apabhraṃśa poem (1207) by Mahendra Sūri (q.v.) in 41 verses. The story is the same as in Jambūsvāmī Chariu (q.v.).

JAMBUVIJAYA, MUNI. A Jaina scholar, who has ed. the Āchāraṅga-sūtram and Sūtra-kṛitāṅga-sūtram with appendices JĀNAKĪ, S.S. (1929-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Ruyyaka's Alaṅkārasarvasva (1965) with the comm. of Vidyāchakravartin and A Critical Study of Gadya Kaṇḍamṛita. Since 1983, she is Director of the Kuppaswami Śāstri Research Institute, Madras.

JĀNAKĪ-HARAṆA. A Sanskrit Mahākāvya by Kumāradāsa (q. v.), in 20 cantos, though from a Sinhalese comm., the original work appears to have consisted of 25 cantos. Based on the Rāmāyaṇa story, the subject matter goes beyond Jānakī-haraṇa (abduction of Sītā). From the Ceylonese source, the poem appears to have dealt with the incidents upto Rāma's coronation. The poem gives charming pictures of sunset, various seasons and even the sports in water and is largely influenced by Kālidāsa in style as well as in subject; the author adopts the Vaidarbha form and develops in a marked degree the love of alliteration.

JANAMEJAYA VIDYĀLAṆKAR (1903-). A Sanskrit scholar, who in Sanskrit articles (Viśva Saṃskṛitam, 8) has emphasized the value of Charaka Saṃhitā (q.v.) as a work of Kāvya, Dharmaśāstra, Nītiśāstra and Itihāsa.

JANĀRDANA PĀṆḌEYA. A modern scholar, who has ed. Goraksha-saṃhitā of the Nāth Sampradāya.

JANERT, KLAUS LUDWIG (1922-). A German Indologist, whose works are: Das Wort dhāsi im Rīgveda und Avesta (1956), Studies in Aśokan Inscriptions (Part I-XI, 1959-73) and preparation of several catalogues of Indian and Nepalese Manuscripts.

He has brought out a catalogue of Indian manuscripts (1962) and has also pub. An Annotated Bibliography of the Catalogues of Indian Manuscripts (Wiesbaden, 1965) in which he lists 339 titles.

JANI, ARUNODAY NATVARI AL (1921-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: A Critical Study of Śrīharsha's Naishadhiya-charitam (pub. by M.S. University of Baroda in their M.S. University Research Series, 1957), critical ed. of Śrikunḥa's Rasakaumudī (1963), critical ed. of Saptaśatī and of Kalikā-purāṇa.

JARMANĪ-KĀVYA. See Śyāmkumāra Tagore Rājā.

JAROCKA, MARJA LUDWIK (1939-). A Mexican Indologist, who is wife of Juan Miguel de Mora (q.v.). Her publications, in collaboration with de Mora are: El Rīgveda (at r. of 126 hymns and analysis thereof; 2nd ed. 1981), Uttararāma-charita of Bhavabhūti, tr. from Sanskrit into Spanish; 1984), tr. from French and English into Spanish of India and

JAYACHANDRA VIDYAI.ĀṆKĀR (b. 1898). A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Geographical Basis of Indian History (1926), Bhārata Bhūmi Aur Usake Nivāsī (in Hindi, 1930) and Bhāratīya Itihāsa ki Rūparekhā (also in Hindi, 1933). He was the first to recognise the real value and purpose of the Janapada states in the political and cultural set-up of ancient India.

JAYADATTA SŪRI (fl. later than 16th cent.).

A Mahā-sāmanta, son of Vijayadatta and author in Sanskrit of Aśva-vaidyaka (q.v.), a medical work on horses.

JAYADATTA UPRETI. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work in Hindi is : Veda men Indra (Indra in Veda; 1985). He is Head, Department of Sanskrit, Kumaon Vishwa-vidyalaya, Nainital.

JAYADEVA. A Sanskrit writer on metres, whose work Jayadeva-chhandas or Chhandas-sūtra has been pub. in 1947 with Harshaṭa's comm.; his work is roughly assigned to the 2nd or 3rd cent. A.D. He closely follows the plan of Piṅgala, giving the Vedic metres in the first three chapters, and then the Mātrā Vṛttas (Chap. 4), Vishama and Ardhasama Varṇa Vṛttas (Chap. 5), the Sama Varṇa Vṛttas (Chaps. 6 and 7) and lastly the six Pratyayas (Chap. 8) but differs from him also. As contrasted with Bharata, Jayadeva has introduced economy by making the definition itself serve the purpose of illustration.

JAYADEVA (fl. 12th cent. A.D.). A Sanskrit lyric poet and author of the Gīta-govinda (q.v.), who was born at Kindubilva (Kenduli) on the banks of the river Ajaya in the Birbhum District of Bengal. He was son of Bhojadeva and Rāmādevī (or Vāmādevī or Rādhādevī); Mithila and Orissa, however, also claim Jayadeva. He was a poet of the court of Lakshmanasena, the Vaidya king of Bengal whose Gayā inscription is dated A.D. 1116 and whose capital was Lakshmāvati.

A rambler in early life, he visited Mathurā and Vṛndāvana and was directly influenced by the enchanting scenery and traditional tales of Rādhā and Kṛishṇa. He became a missionary of that cult of Vaishṇava faith. He visited Jagannātha and there his life was destined for a change. There a Brāhmaṇa, inspired by his dream, left a beautiful girl in his presence and went away. Jayadeva had no choice and married her; she was of his temperament and his regard for her devotion is expressed in his Gīta-govinda, in that "to the accompaniment of his songs, she dances on her feet". He died at Kenduli in happy retirement about A.D. 1120.

The Gīta-govinda was held in much esteem in Orissa. It was ordered to be sung in temples by king Pratāparudradeva, and king Purushottamadeva (1470-97) himself composed Abhinava-Gīta-govinda. Jayadeva was a master of Sanskrit diction who in his work attained to very great heights the Sanskrit lyric poetry.

JAYADEVA. A Sanskrit dramatist and author of the Prasanna-rāghava (q.v.), a drama. "The author is to be distinguished from several other Jayadevas, known to literary history, by his self-description that he was the son of Mahādeva of Kuṇḍinya Gotra and Sumitrā. His date is uncertain, but he can be assigned roughly to the 13th century. Although in 1.18 he refers to his proficiency in logic, as well as in poetry, his identity with the logician Jayadeva Pakshadhara of Mithilā lacks proof, but he is certainly the author of a popular text-book on rhetoric, known as Chandrāloka, from which he probably took the surname of Piyūsha-varsha." ---De, HSL. 462.

JAYADEVA. A Sanskrit author of a kāvya, called Śṛṅgāra-mādhaviya-champū.

JAYADEVA (fl. 16th cent. A. D.). A Sanskrit author of Rati-mañjarī, a work on erotics

JAYADEVA-CHHANDAS. See Jayadeva.

JAYADEVA MUNI (fl. c. 10th-13th cent.). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, who was a disciple of Śivadeva Sūri, a Jaina Muni. Jayadeva composed Bhāvanā Sandhi Prakaraṇa (q.v.), a didactic poem. In his poem, he has made a reference to Muñja (fl. 997), the Mālav king and as such he must have flourished after 10th century.

JAYADEVA ŚARMĀ (1892-1961). A Vedic scholar, whose chief works are : Hindi tr. of all the four Vedas (1928 ff), a history of Dhanurveda, Atharvaveda aur Jādu-ṭonā, (proving that there are no magic formulae in the Atharvaveda), Kyā Veda meṃ Itihāsa Hai? (refutation of Sātavalekar's theory that there is history in the Vedas), Mādhavānukramaṇi (tr. of Ṛgvedanukramaṇi as prepared by Venkaṭa Mādhava), tr. of Īsopanishad exposition of 'Yama-Yamī-Sūkta' of Ṛgveda and Purāṇamata-Paryālochana (a criticism of 18 Puraṇas; written in collaboration with Āchārya Rāmadeva). He died at Ajmer.

JAYĀDITYA. See Kāśikā-vṛitti.

JAYADRATHA (fl. early 13th cent. A.D.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit poet, whose elder brother Jayaratha wrote a comm. on the Alaṅkārasarvasva, called Vimarśinī, which was quoted and criticised by Jagannātha. His great-grand-father's brother, Śivaratha was a minister of king Uchchhala (1101-1111), while his father Śṛṅgāra was a minister of Rājārāja or Rājadeva (1203-26). Jayadratha was a pupil of Sughaṭadatta, Śiva and Śaṅkhaḍhara. In addition to the Huracharita-chintāmaṇi (q.v.), he composed the Alaṅkāra-vimarśinī and the Alaṅkāroddharṇa, the last two being works on poetics.

JAYAKĪRTI. A Sanskrit and Prakrit writer and author of Chhandonuśāsana (in Sanskrit on metres; q.v.) and Silovesa-mālā (a Prakrit didactic poem; q.v.). His date is uncertain but he flourished well before 1337. The only manuscript of Jayakīrti's Chhandonuśāsana is lying at Jaisalmer and is dated Samvat 1190. Jayakīrti was a Digambara Jaina and probably hailed from the Kannaḍa districts in the South.

JAYAMAṄGALĀ. See Yasodhara and Kama-sūtra.

JAYĀNAKA. See Prithivīrāja-vijaya.

JAYANTA (fl. end 9th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit writer on Nyāya and author of the Nyāya-maṇjarī (q.v.; an independent comm. on the Nyāya-sūtras) and of Nyāya-kalikā (q.v.).

JAYANTA-VIJAYA. A Sanskrit poem in 19 cantos, by Abhayadeva (q.v.), composed in 1221.

It treats of the birth and life of Jayanta, a king in the family of Vikramasimha and contains elaborate descriptions of the seasons, sunrise, sunset, sports, and expeditions.

JAYANTILĀL BHAT. A modern Sanskrit writer, who is known from his dramas : Gīta mānasa-maṅgalam and Mānasa-śākuntala (1983).

JAYA-PARĀJAYAM (Victory and Defeat). A Sanskrit version (1966) of a story of Rabindra Nath Tagore.

JAYAPURA-RĀJA-VAṢṢĀVALĪ. See Rāma-nāṭha Nanda.

JAYAPURA-VAIBHAṬĪ. A Sanskrit work (1947) by Bhaṭṭa Mathurānātha Śāstrī (q.v.), which is an account of modern Jaipur, its ruling house and the Sanskrit scholars and scholars' families settled in Jaipur.

JAYARĀMA (fl. before 987). A Prakrit poet and author of Dharma-parīkshā in Gāthā metre, which is not yet available. Evidently the work was in Prakrit verses and it became the source of similar works in Apabhraṃśa and Sanskrit.

JAYARĀMA (fl. prior to 1250). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is a comm. on Paraskara-gṛhya-sūtra under the title of Sajjana-vallabha.

JAYARĀMA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who wrote in prose Parṇāla-parvata-grahaṇā-khyāna, which is an account of the capture by Śivāji of the Parṇāla hill-fort at Poona.

JAYARĀMA PĀṆDE (fl. early 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Rūdhāmādhava-vilāsa-champū, which is based on the Bhāgavata-purāṇa but also gives an account of the poets assembled at the court of Shāhji, the father of Shivāji.

JAYARĀMA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose Śrī-Javāharīlāla-Yasanta-Sāmrājyam in 5 cantos deals with the life of Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru, the first Prime Minister of India.

JAYARATHA. See Śobhākara.

JAYASĪMHA SŪRI (fl. early 13th cent.). A Sanskrit dramatist and author of the Hamīra-madu-murdana (q.v.), a drama composed between 1219 and 1229, culogising the two ministers (Vastupāla and Tejahpāla) of Vīradhavalā of Gujarat. Jayasīmha Sūri, who was the priest of the temple of Muni-suvrata at Broach, composed a panegyric, Vastupālapraśasti, of which a copy has been preserved along with his drama, but wrote, to please Jayantasīmha, son of Vastupāla. This praśasti gives an account of Chālukya genealogy from Mūlarāja I and is of historical value. His poetry is charming and abounds in choice similes.

JAYASWAL, K. P. A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Hindu Polity (1924), History of India (Lahore, 1933) and articles on Vaishnavism and Puranic studies.

JAYA-TIHUJANA-STOTRA. A Prakrit hymn

by Abhayadeva (q.v.), composed in 1054. The composition of this stotra is said to have cured the author of his incurable malady.

JAYATĪRTHA. A Sanskrit scholar, who was a distinguished exponent of Mādhava School of Philosophy and wrote his Ṛg-bhāṣya-ṭīkā (1365-88) on Ānandatīrtha's comm. on the Ṛgveda.

JAYAVALLABHA (fl. 11-12th cent.). A Prakrit poet and author of Vujjālagga (q.v.).

JAYAWICKRAMA, N. A. A modern Indologist, who has pub. new ed. of Buddhavaṃsa and Chariyūpiṭaka (1974) and new ed. of Vimānavatthu and Petavatthu (1977).

JEANNINE AUBOYER. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Daily Life in Ancient India (tr. into English from French by S. W. Taylor; London, 1965).

JENSEN, HANS. A modern German Indologist, who taught Sanskrit regularly in Rostock and is known for his history of writing.

JHA, M. A writer, whose chief work is Māgadhi and its Formation (Calcutta, 1967).

JHĀLĀ, G. C. A Sanskrit poet and scholar, whose chief works are: Sushmā (Bombay, 1955; a short collection of satires, elegies and descriptive verses), ed. of Sundara-kāṇḍa in the critical ed. of Rāmāyaṇa, pub. by the University of Baroda (1966), and Asvins in the Rigveda and other Indological Essays (1978).

JHALAKĪKARA, V. (fl. end 19th cent.). A Sanskrit scholar, who, besides his Nyāya-kośa (q.v.) wrote Bālabodhini, a comm. on Kāvya-prākāśa (q.v.); in this comm. the author made use of 19 commentaries written on Kāvya prakāśa during recent times.

JHANJHURĀMA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar of Punjab, who has written an extensive history of Sanskrit literature, but it has not yet been published.

JHAVERI, H. L. A scholar, whose chief work is First Principles of Jaina Philosophy (London, 1910).

JIMŪTAVĀHANA. A Pāribhadriya Brāhmaṇa of Bengal and a noted Smṛiti writer, whose Sanskrit works are : Kālaviveka, Dāya-bhāga (qq. v.; these two appear to have been parts of a larger treatise called Dharma-ratna) and Vyavahāra-māṭṛikā (q. v.). The Dāya-bhāga was, for centuries, of paramount authority in Bengal in the matters relating to inheritance and succession. Jimūtavāhana has been variously placed from the 11th to the 16th cent., but he most probably fl. in the first half of the 12th century.

JINABHADRAKSHMĀ-ŚARMAṆA, A Jaina Prakrit author of Viśeshāvaśyaka-bhāṣya, composed at Valabhi in 609.

JINACHANDRA GAṆIN (fl. 1015). A Jaina Prakrit writer and author of a Sanskrit comm. on Navapaya (a Prakrit work of scholastic interest) and Navatattva-prakaraṇa (q.v.: a treatise in Prakrit on the nine fundamental truths of Jainism).

JINA-CHARITA. A Pali kāvya in 500 verses, believed to have been composed by Vanaratna Medhaṅkara (fl. 2nd half of 13th cent.; q.v.). It narrates the life of Buddha, mostly on the basis of Nidāna-kathā (q.v.), but betrays the influence of Aśvaghosha's Buddha-charita and is also influenced by Kālidāsa. The language is simple and natural.

JINADĀSA. See Harivaṁśa-purāṇa.

JINADATTA CHARIU (Jinadatta Charitra). An Apabhramśa poem by Lakkhaṇa

(Lakshmaṇa; q.v.), which still remains unpublished. It describes in 11 Sandhis (cantos) the life of Jinadatta. The work was composed under the patronage of Śrīdhara.

On seeing the beauty of Vimalavati in a portrait, Jinadatta is attracted towards her and finally marries her. On his sea-voyage, he reaches the Simhala island, where he marries princess Śrīmatī and they return with abundant riches. A sea-storm overtakes them and they are separated, but by a frisk of good luck, they are united.

The work is noted for its charming geographical and Nature descriptions and delineation of female beauty in a language which is highly ornate. Though tinged with religious fervour, the work is essentially a love-poem.

JINADATTA SŪRI (1075-1154). A Jaina Apabhramśa poet, who was a contemporary of Hemachandra. A disciple of Jinavallabha Suri, he is the author of the Upadeśa-rasāyana-rasa, Kāla-svarūpa-kulaka and Chachcharī (qq.v.).

JINADHARMA-PRATIBODHA. Same as Kunārapāla-pratibodha (q.v.).

JINAKĪRTI. See Pālu-gopāla-kathānaka.

JINĀLANKĪRA. A Pali poem in 250 stanzas, ascribed to Buddhārakkhita, Kassapa Buddhārakkhita or Buddhadatta (qq.v.). Composed in brilliant rhythmical cadences and elegant language, it describes the life of the Buddha till he attains the highest knowledge. There are stanzas with internal rhymes, alliterations and other rhetorical devices exhibiting the bombastic kāvya style and artificiality in constructions. There is a great controversy among scholars as to the authorship and date of the poem.

JINĀNANDA, B. A scholar, whose chief work is the critical ed. of Abhisamācharikā (Patna, 1969).

JINAPADMA (fl. 1325-44). A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of Shad-bhāṣā-vibhūṣita-Śāntinātha-stavana (q.v.).

JINAPADMA SŪRI (fl. 14th cent.). An Apabhraṃśa poet, whose Siri Thūli Bhadda Phāgu describes the story of a Jaina Muni Sthūli Bhadra, who goes to the house of a courtesan named Kośā but remains unaffected even by her advances. For story see Sthūli-bhadra Kathā.

JINAPRABHA (fl. c. 1300). A Jaina Sanskrit writer, who was pupil of Jinasiṃha of Laghukhrataragachchha, and was honoured by Emperor Sahi Muhammad at Delhi. There was not a day when he did not compose new stotras, of which there are now 700, such as Gautamastotra, Pārśvanāthastava, Śrīvīrastava, Śāradāstotra, etc.; his Dvyāśraya-kāvya (A.D. 1300) is on the life of Śreṇika. He composed also a comm. on Dharmadāsa's Vidagdhamukha-maṇḍana (q.v.).

JINAPRABHA SŪRI (fl. 1328). A Jaina Sanskrit scholar and saint who visited the court of Muhammad-bin Tughluq at Delhi in 1328. The king treated him with respect, seated him by his side and a procession arranged in his honour, escorted by Maliks. He composed several hymns as also the Chaturvīṃśati-Jinastuti, consisting of devotional stotras.

JINASENA. A Jaina Sanskrit poet, who was a disciple of Kīrtisena. He composed in 783 the Harivamśa-purāṇa (q.v.), one of the earliest Jaina versions of the Mahābhārata.

JINASENA (fl. 9th cent. A.D.). A Digambara Jaina Sanskrit poet, who was the pupil of Virasena. Jinasena and his guru converted the Rāshṭrakūṭa king Amoghavarsha into Jainism and the king abdicated in favour of his son in A.D. 875. Jinasena composed the Pārśvanāthastava, a poem in 4 cantos, describing the story of Pārśvanātha, the 23rd Tīrthāṅkara; in this work are preserved the entire 120 stanzas of the Meghadūta of Kalidāsa. Jinasena composed also Triśaṣṭi-lakṣaṇa-mahā-purāṇa "the Great Purāṇa of 63 Excellent Men", also named briefly Mahā-purāṇa, which consists of the Ādi-purāṇa in 47 chapters: the first 42 chapters by Jinasena, and a chūlikā, comprising 5 chapters, added by the author's own pupil Guṇabhadra, who also composed the Uttarapurāṇa, a continuation of Ādipurāṇa, giving the lives of the Tīrthāṅkaras after Ṛishabha. The Ādi-purāṇa or the 'first Purāṇa' contains the story of Ṛishabha, the first Tīrthāṅkara and of the first Chakravartin; the Uttara-purāṇa contains the life-stories of all the remaining "Great Men", including that of Jivandhara. Lokasena added a further continuation in 898. Jinasena is the author also of a famous comm. entitled Jayadhavalā.

"Jinasena's poetry is of a higher order and often equals if not surpasses the beauty of Kalidāsa's expressions."-- Krishnamachariar, CSL, 159.

JINAVALLABHA. See Ullāsikkama-thaya.

JINAVIJAYA MUNI (1888-). A famous scholar, whose original name was Kīṣana Sīṃha Parmār. Born at Rupaheli village near Chittorgarh, he became a Jaina sadhu at an early age. He came in contact with Mahatma Gandhi, Rabindra Nath Tagore and participated in the freedom movement. He was Director of Rajasthan Oriental Institute, Jodhpur and founded "Hindustan House" in Germany. His chief works are the editions of Jinadattācāryānadvayam (two versions of the story of Jinadatta), Haribhadra's Dhūrtākhyāna, Jīneśvara's Kathākośaprakaraṇa, Jayasīṃha's Lhaimapadeśamālā, Guṇapāla's Jambhūcharita, of Saṇḍesarāsaka (Bombay, 1945; in collaboration with Bhayani) and wrote Prākṛita-kathāśaṅgraha (collection of Jaina legends; Ahmedabad, 1921). He also compiled Catalogue of Sanskrit and Prakrit Manuscripts in the Rajasthan Oriental Research Institute (several parts).

JINENDRABUDDHI (fl. c. 700). A Buddhist Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Kāśikā-vivaraṇa pañchikā or Nyāsa (q.v.). Some scholars identify him, not on adequate grounds, with Pūjyapāda Devanandin (q.v.), author of the Jainendra-vyākaraṇa.

JINEŚVARA (fl. c. 1092). A Jaina Sanskrit writer, pupil of Vardhamāna and author of Kāthakośa, a work containing short religious stories.

JITA-KALPA. See Jiyakappa.

JITENDRIYA (fl. c. 1000-1050). A Bengali Sanskrit writer on Smṛiti, whose extensive work on Dharmaśāstra was completely eclipsed by the learned treatise of Jimūtavāhana (q.v.). He is known only from frequent references in the works of Jimutavāhana, Raghunandana and Sūlapāṇi (qq v.).

JIVĀBHIGAMA. See Uvanga (III).

JIVA GOSVAMIN (1523-1618). A Sanskrit poet and a prominent figure in the history of Bengal Vaishnavism. Son of Anupama and a nephew of Rūpa Gosvāmin (q.v.), he became an ascetic when he was twenty years old and became head of a Gosvāmī matha at Vṛindāvana. A versatile scholar, he was a prolific writer. His chief works are: Sarva-saṁvādinī (on Vaiṣṇava philosophy), Gopāla-champū (q.v.), Mādhava-mahotsava (q.v.), Gopāla-virudāvalī (Vaiṣṇava kāvya), Durgama-saṁgamaṇi (on Rasa-śāstra; a comm. on Rūpa Gosvāmin's Bhakti-rasāmṛita-sindhu), Harināmāmṛita-vyākaraṇa (q.v.; a Vaiṣṇava grammar); Stavamālā is a collection made by Jiva Gosvāmin of 60 stotras and gītas composed by Rūpa Gosvāmin. He also wrote a comm. on the Bhāgavata-purāṇa. Influenced by the Chaitanya movement, all his works are permeated with Kṛishṇa-bhakti.

JĪVANA MANAḤKARAṆA SAMĪLĀPA KATHĀ. An Apabhraṃśa verse-story, which is a part of Kumārapāla-pratibodha (1185; q.v.), a Prakrit work. In this poem, the soul, mind and senses have been made characters and through their dialogues the didactic element has been stressed.

JĪVANAMUKTI-VIVEKA. A Sanskrit work by Madhvacārya (q.v.) on Advaita Vedānta, in vindication of Śaṅkarachārya's views.

JĪVĀNANDA VIDYĀSĀGARA. (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit Paṇḍita of Bengal, whose chief works are comms. on: Melutī-Mādhava, Uttara-rāmacharitra, Bāla-rāmāyana, Viddha-śala-bhañjikā.

JIVANANDA VIDYĀSĀGARA. A Vedic scholar, who ed. Sāmaveda with Sāyaṇa Bhāṣya (2 Pts., 1892) and ed. the Gopatha-brāhmaṇa (1872; alongwith Rajendralāl Mitra) with an analytical introduction, he has brought out also texts of several Purāṇas from Calcutta

JIVANDHARA-CHAMPŪ. A Sanskrit work by the Jaina Haribhadra, perhaps identical with Harichandra. The work is based on the Uttarapurāṇa of Guṇabhadra and deals with the legend of Jīvaka or Jivandhara, a prince, whose father was murdered by his treacherous minister Kāshṭhāṅgaraka, and he himself was born on a cremation ground. After several adventures, in which the prince marries eight damsels, he kills Kāshṭhāṅgaraka, regains the throne but one day when he meets a Jaina monk, he takes the monastic vow upon himself. his mother and wives becoming nuns.

JĪVAṆ NYĀYATĪRTHA. A Sanskrit dramatist of Calcutta, who has about 20 plays

(all farces) to his credit. His chief works are : Purusha-ramaṇīyam (Calcutta, 1948; on the change of sex), Kshuta-Kshem (1955, in which a niggard, who has amassed black-market money, cheats even Yama and obtains a fresh lease of life), Chanḍatāṇḍava (in which Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini are portrayed as having failed to enter India, the land of religion and spirituality) and Vidhiviparyāsa, a drama dealing with the social problem of dowry.

JIVARĀMA YĀGNĪKA. A Sanskrit dramatist, whose Murari-vijaya (probably composed in 1485) describes in 5 Acts the early life of Kṛishṇa as related in the tenth canto of the Bhāgavata-purāṇa.

JĪVA-VĪYĀRA. A Jaina Prakrit poem in 51 stanzas by Śānti Sūri (d. 1039), which discusses the nature of beings after dividing them into various classes, subjects like Botany, Ethnology, Theology, Science of animals, etc. have been dealt with in this work.

JĪYAKAPPA. See Chheya-sutta.

JÑĀNĀMṚITA-SĀRA-SAMHITĀ. A Sanskrit Tantric work written at the beginning of the 16th cent., which is exclusively devoted to the glorification of Kṛishṇa and Rādhā; it is pub. under the title Nārada-pañcharātra.

JÑĀNAPAÑCHAMĪ-KATHĀ. A religious Prākṛit tale by Maheśvara Sūri (fl. latter half of the 10th cent.), a pupil of Sajjana. The poem consists of about 2,000 Gathās and describes the religious importance of Jñāna-pañchamī, a name given to the fifth day in the first half of the month of Kārttika.

JÑĀNĀRṆAVA-TANTRA. A Sanskrit work, which deals with various Tantric rituals and meditation on the various forms of Devī; Kumārīpūjā or the worship of young maidens is described as the highest sacrifice.

JÑĀNA-SIDDHĀNTA-CHANDRIKĀ. A Sanskrit tr. of Berkeley's Principles of Human Knowledge, which was pub. in the Paṇḍit (OS, VIII, IX, X) in the middle of the 19th century.

JÑĀNASUNDARĪ (d. c. 1910). A Sanskrit poetess of Kumbhakoṇam, of whose several works, only one Hilasya-champū in 6 Stabakas has been traced. A dancing girl, remembered for her discourses, dancing and recitals, she visited the Mysore court and there received the title 'Kaviratna'.

JÑĀNENDRA SARASVATĪ (fl. first half of 18th cent.). A pupil of Vāmanendra Sarasvatī, he is the author in Sanskrit of the famous Tattva-bodhinī (q.v.), a comm. on Bhaṭṭojī's Siddhānta-kaumudī (q.v.).

JÑĀTĀDHIARMA-KATHĀḤ. See Nāyā-dharmakathā.

JÑĀTĀRI-DHARMA-KATHĀṆGA. See Nāyā-dharmakathā.

JOG, K.P. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Vimalodaya-mālā of Jayantasvāmī and several monographs on Vedic subjects.

JOGALEKAR, S.A. A scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Gāthā-saptasatī (Poona, 1956), with a Marathi tr. and Introduction.

JOGARĀJA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, patronised by Mahādji Sindia, and author of Aśva-phala-prakāśa, a work on veterinary science.

JOGASĀRU. An Apabhraṃśa poem of Joindu (q.v.), in which the subject-matter is very much similar to that of Paramātmā-prakāśa (q.v.).

JOGENDRA NATH BHATṬACHĀRYA. A scholar, whose chief work is : Hindu Castes and Sects (1972).

JOGIRĀJA BASU. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is India of the Age of the Brāhmanas (1969).

JOHNSTON, F.H. (1885-1942). An Indologist, who pub. excellent editions and trs. of Aśvaghoṣa's Saundarananda (Calcutta, 1928-32) and of Buddha-charita (jointly with Gurner; Calcutta, 1936); he has also ed. Nāgārjuna's Vigrahavivartanā with the author's comm. as also Ratnagotravibhāga, the main work of the Faṭhagatagārbha school, which has been tr. by J. Takasaki under the title A Study on the Ratnagotra-vibhāga-Uttaratantra (Roma, 1966). His trs. of Aśvaghoṣa's works are based upon critical editions and an extensive study of Buddhist literature in Sanskrit and Pali. He wrote also two important research papers: 'Two Notes on Ptolemy's Geography of India' and 'Ctesias on Indian Manna'.

JOHNSON, HELIN M. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is the Eng. tr. of Trishasṭi-salāka-purusha-charita (Vols. I-VI).

JOHRAPURKAR, V.P. A scholar, whose chief works are: Bhaṭṭāraka Sampradāya (in Hindi; Sholapur, 1958) and ed. of Viśvatattva-prakāśa (Sholapur, 1964; with a Hindi Introduction containing bibliographical review of Jaina Nyāya literature).

JOINDU (fl. 6th cent.). A Jaina Apabhramśa poet and author of Paṇamappayāsu, Jogasāru, Dohā-pāhuḍa and Śrāvakāchāradohaka (qq.v.). These works have been composed in Dohā metre. Some scholars are of the view that he belonged to the 11th century.

JOKI, AULIS J. (1913-). A Finnish scholar, who has pub. a monograph dealing with the Aryan loanwords in the Fenno-Ugric languages (1973).

JOLLY, JULIUS (1849-1932). A German Indologist, who contributed to two fields of special studies, Indian law and Indian medicine. He was appointed Professor in Wuerzburg in 1877 and continued till retirement in 1922. He visited India in 1882/83 as Tagore Professor of Law in Calcutta and delivered 12 lectures which were published under the title : Outlines of an History of the Hindu Law of Partition, Inheritance and Adoption (1885). For the German "Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research," he contributed a volume on Recht und Sitte (1896); this book was revised by Jolly and tr. by Bhaṭṭakṛishṇa Ghosh in 1928 under the title Hindu Law and Custom. Jolly ed. the law books of Viṣṇu, Nārada and Manu and tr. the former two for the "Sacred Books of the East". He also contributed numerous papers on Indian law to journals. He brought a critical ed. of Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra in collaboration with R. Schmidt in 1923/24. In 1901, Jolly contributed a book on Indian Medicine to the Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research. This is one of the most complete and reliable studies on the history of Indian medical literature. In the 1st chap. he discusses the medical literature from recent times back to the hymns of the Atharvaveda, the magic rites of the Kauśika-sūtra, Greek, Persian and Arab influences, the introduction of quicksilver and opium due to Arabs, and translation of many Indian medical treatises into Arabic. The 2nd chap. deals with doctors and therapy, folk medicine, herbal medicines and a correct diet. The third part deals with theories about illness; the fourth with theories of evolution and gynaecology; the last three chapters deal with various types of diseases, physical and mental, and their treatment. His book on Indian medicine was tr. into English by C.G. Kāshikar. The Viṣṇu-smṛiti was tr. as The Institutes of Vishṇu and Nārada and Brihaspati Smṛitis as The Minor Law Books.

Jolly was made an honorary doctor of medicine of Goettingen University and of Oxford University.

JONARĀJA (fl. 15th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit author of Dvitiya-rājatarāṅgiṇī (q.v.), a continuation of the Rājatarāṅgiṇī (q.v.), which was left incomplete on Kalhana's death. His patron was Sultan Zain-ul-Ābidin (1420-70).

JONES, CLIFFORD. An American art critic, who, assisted by his wife, is the author of a book on Kathakali (California, 1970) and has pub. articles on the Temple Theatre in Kerala (Sanskrit Ranga Annual VI, Madras, 1972).

JONES, J.I. A modern Indologist, whose tr. of the Mahāvastu (London, 1949 under Sacred Books of the Buddhists) is based upon Senart's ed. and upon a comparison with parallel texts in the Pali Tipiṭaka.

JONES, SIR WILLIAM (1746-94). Pioneer of Oriental studies in India and also nicknamed "Oriental Jones", his chief works are: Eng. tr. of Śakuntalā (1789), ed. of Ritu-saṁhāra (1792, the first printed work in Sanskrit), Institutes of Hindu Law or the Ordinance of Manu (Calcutta, 1794; Eng. tr. of the Manu-smṛiti; a German tr. of the work appeared in 1797 in Weimar), of Hitopadeśa and of Gītāgovinda. As early as 1793, he included in his programme the preparation of an "Ancient Indian Geographical Dictionary". He also recognised the importance of the Purāṇas. He wrote an article as well on the Christian influence on Kṛishṇa cult and was of the view that not only the name of Kṛishṇa but also the general outline of his story were long anterior to Christ.

After the foundation of the Asiatic Society of Bengal in 1786, Sir William Jones opened up a new vista in the study of the culture and civilization of India. The Asiatic Researches, a journal, started writing extensively and sympathetically about aspects of Indian culture, which attracted wide attention, both in India and abroad. His works have been pub. in 13 Vols. by Lord Teignmouth under the title 'The Works of Sir William Jones'.

JONG, J.W, DE. A Dutch scholar, whose chief works are: Buddha's World in China (Canberra, 1968), two papers: 'The Problem of the Absolute in the Mādhyamika School' and 'Emptiness' and A brief History of Buddhist studies in Europe and America (Varanasi, 1976).

JORDENS, J.T.F. An Australian Indologist, who is Professor in the Australian National University, Canberra. His works are: The Generational Gap and Australian-Asian Relations (ed.), Dayānanda Sarasvatī, his Life and Ideas (Oxford, 1978) and Svami Shraddhānanda, his Life and Causes (Oxford, 1981). He has published a number of articles mainly on Hinduism, Arya Samaj and Dayananda Sarasvati. His articles: "Gandhi and the Gita" and "Dayananda Sarasvati's Interpretation of Christianity" are in press.

JOSEPHSON, I. A Swedish scholar, whose chief work is: The Function of the Sentences, Particles in Old Middle Hittite (Uppsala, 1972). His chief interest of study is on particles in Indo-European languages.

JOSHI, GOPAL HARI (1935-). A Sanskrit scholar of Maharashtra, who has published several research papers and has contributed articles regarding Sanskrit literature to 'Marathi Encyclopaedia'.

JOSHI, J.R. A modern Vedic scholar, whose Some Minor Divinities in Vedic Mythology and Ritual has been pub. from Poona.

JOSHI, L. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work Vaidika Saṃskṛitikā Vikāśa (1957) is on the development of Vedic culture.

JOSHI, S.D. A Sanskrit scholar of Poona University, whose chief works are ed. of Patañjali's Vyākaraṇa-Mahābhāṣya (in several parts; some parts jointly with J.A.F. Roodbergen) and of The Sphoṭanirṇaya of Kaṇḍa Bhaṭṭa. He tr. a Marathi play into Sanskrit under the title Sanḡita-Śāradam (1979) and with Vighnahari Deo tr. Shakespeare's Hamlet as Chandrasena (1980; in the tr. the cultural imagery and idiom of English have been transformed into genuine classical Sanskrit).

JUGDER, CH. A modern Mongolian Indologist, who is studying Buddhist philosophy, logic and in particular philosophical heritage of the mediaeval Mongolian thinkers. He pub. a book in Mongolian—the Mongolian Buddhist philosopher (1978) and wrote in Tibetan a three-volume work on the history of Buddhist philosophy.

JULIEN, STANISLAS (1797-1873). A Professor of Chinese at the College de France, who tr. into French the life of Hsuan-tsāng and his Hsi-Yü-chi; his works are: Historie de la vie de Hiouen-thsāng et de ses voyages dans l'Inde (Paris, 1853) and Mémoires sur les Contrées occidentales de Hiouen-thsāng (Paris, 1857-58). He was responsible for making known important texts for the history of Buddhism in India.

JUMARANANDI. The most famous writer of Jaumara school of grammar, who probably fl. in the 14th century. Sometimes wrongly regarded as the founder of this school, he revised the Sanḡshipta-sūra (q.v.) and wrote a comm. Rasavatī on it. He also revised the Pāṇin.ya Dhātupāṭha for this school.

JUNG, RALPH. A modern German Indologist, whose work on economic history includes ancient India but his main emphasis is on the modern period.

JUURIKKA, TUULA (1947-). A Finnish scholar, who is working on drama and religion in South India.

JVALĀPRASĀDA. A Sanskrit writer of Amarāvati, whose chief work Tattva-darsana (Text and gloss, 1950), composed in Sūtra style and supplemented by a gloss, attempts to adjust Indian philosophy to modern scientific ideas.

JVĀLĀPRASĀDA MIŚRA. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work Ashṭādaśa-purāṇa-durpaṇa (in Hindi, Bombay, 1906), gives contents of the Purāṇas.

JVĀLĀPRASĀDA SHARMĀ. A Vedic scholar, whose ed. of Vājasaneyi-saṃhitā of Śukla Yajurveda (2 Vols.) was pub. along with a Hindi tr. in 1903, while his ed. of Sāmaveda, with a Hindi tr. (2 Pts.) was pub. earlier in 1890-91.

JWALĀPRASĀD SINGHAL. A modern scholar, in whose chief work The Sphinx Speaks (Delhi, 1963) he compares the information collected from the Purāṇas with Western historians and comes to the conclusion that Panjab was the home of the Aryans and that the great flood was the first great landmark in Purāṇic history.

JYOTIRGAṆITA. An astronomical Sanskrit work by Venkaṭeśa Ketakar (q.v.), which seeks to make up-to-date the astronomical knowledge of the Hindus by utilizing the researches of such western astronomers as Leverrier, Hansen and Newcomb.

JYOTIRĪŚVARA KAVIŚEKHARA. A Sanskrit dramatist and son of Rāmeśvara, who under Harasimhadeva (c. 1320) of the Karṇāṭa dynasty of Mithilā, composed a Prahasana, Dhūrta-samāgama (q.v.). His Pañ-chasāyaka epitomises in five parts all that is said in the standard works on Kāmaśāstra (erotics). Mundita-prahasana, a farce in 3 Acts and Raigasekhara (on erotics) are also attributed to him.

JYOTIRVIDĀBHARAṆA. A Sanskrit work on astrology. attributed to Kālidāsa, but perhaps originated not before the 16th century. It is the source of the tradition of the Nine Jewels in the court of Vikramāditya.

JYOTISHA. One of the six Vedāṅgas (q.v.), dealing with astronomy.

JYOTISHA-VEDĀṆGA. See Vedāṅga (Jyotisha)

K

KACHCHĀNA (fl. early Christian era). A Buddhist Pali writer and author of the Netti and of the Peṭakopadeśa (qq.v.); he is to be distinguished from the celebrated grammarian of this name.

KACHCHĀYANA. A Buddhist Pali writer, who according to a Buddhist tradition, is identical with Mahākachchāyana, a disciple of the Buddha, while some think that he was the same as Kātyāyana (3rd cent. B.C.), the noted author of the Vārtika-sūtras (q.v.). Others take him as later than Buddha-ghosha and place him earlier than the 12th century.

He is the author of Kachchāyana-vyākaraṇa or Kachchāyana-gandha (q.v.), the earliest extant Pali grammar. The other grammatical works attributed to him are: Mahānirutti-gandha, Chullanirutti-gandha, Vañṇanīti-gandha and Susandhikappa.

KACHCHĀYANA-GANDHA. A Pali grammatical work, also called Kachchāyana-vyākaraṇa, attributed to Kachchāyana (q.v.). Comprising eight sections and about 687 rules, it is the earliest extant Pali grammar and is said to be based on the earlier work Sandhikappa of the Kachchāyana school. Its major portion is based on the Kātantra- vyākaraṇa (q.v.); the author appears to have utilized also the Kāśikā-vṛitti (q.v.). The chief defect of the Kachchāyana grammar is that it ignores the historical relation of Pali to Sanskrit and gives an exposition of Pali wholly by itself; the linguistic material is not also exhaustively treated. The work is said to have been introduced in Burma in the fifth century. According to some sources, the rules are by Kachchāyana, the comm. by Saṅghanandin and the illustrations by Brahmadaṭṭa.

KACHCHĀYANA-VYĀKARAṆA. See Kachchāyana-gandha.

KADACHĀ. See Chaitanya-charitāmṛita.

KĀDAMBARĪ. A unique Sanskrit prose romance of Kathā type by Bāṇa (fl. 630-45; q.v.), which deals with the love-story of Chandrapīḍa and Kādambarī; parallel to this story runs the love-affair of Puṇḍarīka and Mahāvetā. It contains some biographical account of the author in the beginning.

A Chāṇḍālā damsel of exceptional beauty brings before king Śudraka of Vidiśā a parrot, and after persuasion the parrot tells its sad story. In its infancy, it loses its mother and is brought up by its father; the young parrot is taken by Hārīta to the hermitage of his father, Jābālī, who remarks that the bird is reaping the fruits of past misconduct. On entreaty, Jābālī narrates the tale, which the parrot repeats. There is Tārāpīḍa of Ujjayinī, his queen Vilāsavati and his minister Śukanāsa. Tārāpīḍa is blessed with a son, named Chandrāpīḍa, while Śukanāsa with a son, named Vaiśampāyana. Chandrāpīḍa, when sixteen years old, receives a wonderful steed, Indrāyudha and a maiden Pattralekhā, a captive daughter of the king of Kulūta. The young prince, with Vaiśampāyana and Pattralekhā, enters on a campaign of world conquest lasting three years and captures the Kirāṭa's stronghold on Hemakūṭa. Once losing his way, Chandrāpīḍa arrives at the lake Achchhoda where Mahāśvetā, a maiden, practises asceticism in a hermitage. On his persuasion, she tells her sad tale. She is the daughter of a Gandharva king Haṁsa and an Apsarā Gaurī; she had seen a beautiful ascetic boy, Puṇḍarīka and his friend, Kapiñjala. She learnt that the former was the mind-born son of the goddess Lakshmi and the ascetic Śvetaketu. She had loved him, but too late to prevent his death from unfulfilled longing. She had decided to die on his beloved's funeral pyre, but a majestic figure descended from the sky, took up Puṇḍarīka's body and promised her reunion if she lived. So far Kapiñjala was concerned, he had been cursed by a semi-divine being to become a horse. As Chandrāpīḍa falls ill, Mahāśvetā takes him to the palace of her friend, Kādambarī, the daughter of king Chitraratha of the Hemakūṭa mountain and Apsarā Madirā; there Chandrāpīḍa and Kādambarī fall in love. Chandrāpīḍa's father summons him home and leaving Pattralekhā with Kādambarī, he hurries on, bidding Vaiśampāyana bring back his army. He is received with joy at Ujjain, but is tormented by love, and gladly hears of his beloved from Pattralekhā; at this point Bāṇa's work ends and his son, Bhūslāga's continuation begins.

When Vaiśampāyana does not return, Chandrāpīḍa is despatched to seek his comrade; he proceeds to the lake and finds Mahāśvetā in even more profound grief than before. She tells him that Vaiśampāyana had fallen in love with her; she, true to Puṇḍarīka, had repulsed him, and wearied with his parrot-repetitions of love, had cursed him to become a parrot, whereupon he had forthwith died. The news breaks Chandrāpīḍa's heart and he dies straightway; Mahāśvetā mourns him; Kādambarī resolves on death and as she prepares the pyre, a voice from heaven tells Mahāśvetā that Puṇḍarīka's body is incorruptible in heaven, while Kādambarī is to guard Chandrāpīḍa's body until the curse which killed him, is over. Pattralekhā springs on Indrāyuddha, dashes into the lake whence emerges Kapiñjala, who tells the maidens the truth; Chandrāpīḍa is an incarnation of the Moon, Vaiśampāyana is Puṇḍarīka, and Indrāyuddha Kapiñjala. Mahāśvetā, Kādambarī, Tārāpīḍa and Śukanāsa wait beside the body of Chandrāpīḍa; here ends Jābālī's tale. From Jābālī's narrative, the parrot recognises its true self as Puṇḍarīka-Vaiśampāyana and it flies off to seek Chandrāpīḍa. It is, however, caught by a Chāṇḍāla, who gives it to his queen. The queen is no other than the Chāṇḍāla maid, who has brought the parrot before king Śūdraka. The Chāṇḍāla maiden reveals herself as Lakshmi, mother of the parrot; questioned by Śūdraka, she reveals to him that the king is no other than Chandrāpīḍa in previous birth; saying this she disappears. As the king dies, Kādambarī finds Chandrāpīḍa reviving in her arms. Similarly, when the parrot dies, Puṇḍarīka descends from the sky; finally all are united and the nuptials are celebrated. Chandrāpīḍa places Puṇḍarīka on the throne; he spends his time partly at Ujjayinī, partly at Hemakūṭa and partly in the Moon, his own abode, while Patralekha is revealed as Rohiṇī, best beloved of the queens of the Moon.

As the story was left unfinished by Bāṇa, his son, Bhūṣaṇa Bhaṭṭa completed it, but the son was unquestionably inferior to father. Bhūṣaṇa prolongs the description of Kādambarī's love-lorn condition out of reason while he is deficient in his father's fertile imagination.

Kadambarī is remarkable for "long involved constructions, unusual words, use of epithets after epithets with the verb held back for pages together, unusually long compounds, and fondness for details and descriptions, even to the neglect of the main narrative and action."

KĀDAMBARĪ-KAIYĀNA. See Narasimha.

KĀDAMBARĪ-KATHĀSĪRA (Sanskrit) A versified abridgement in eight cantos of Bāṇa-bhaṭṭa's Kādambarī (q.v.), composed by Abhinanda (q.v.). The work is marked by artificialities found in the works of the age of decadence.

KAEGI, ADOLF. A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Der Rig-Veda die älteste litteratur der Inder (Leipzig, 1878-79; a kind of general introduction to Rigveda) and Seventy Hymns of Rigveda (German tr., jointly with Geldner). According to Kaegi, the majority of the Rigvedic hymns are invocations and glorification of deities, which are personifications of natural phenomena. They are prayers to the Eternal Ones and constitute perhaps the best specimens of vigorous primeval poetry.

KAELBER, W.O. An Indologist, whose research article 'Tapas, Birth and Spiritual Birth in the Veda' appeared in the History of Religions, Vol. 15 (1976).

KAHRS, E. A modern Swedish Indologist, whose chief interest of study is on the hermetical tradition of India.

KAIKINI, V.M. See Śivakaivalya-charita.

KAILĀŚANĀTHA (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Nāṭya-kathā-mañjarī (Lahore) is a summary of well-known Sanskrit dramas.

KAIYAṬA (fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit grammarian, who was son of Jaiyyaṭa. Probably a native of Kashmir, he composed the Pradīpa (also called Mahābhāṣya-pradīpa), a comm. on the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali.

KĀKACHAṆḌEŚVARĪMATA. A Sanskrit work on Tantra, which is important in the history of the medical science and chemistry in India; its time is not certain.

KĀLAKĀCHĀRYA-KATHĀNAKA. A Prakrit poem in prose and verse, composed in c. 10th cent. by an anonymous author. It gives an account of the initiation of prince Kālaka to Jainism and his elevation to the highest rank in his sect.

KĀLAKĀCHĀRYA-KATHĀNAKA. A Prakrit poem : 90 to 102 verses by Bhavadeva Sūri. There are several other Prakrit works bearing this title.

KĀLANĀTHA (fl. prior to 1175). A Sanskrit scholar, whose Yajurmañjarī is a comm. on about 250 selected mantras of the Yajurveda; his comm. is little more than an abridged version of Uvvaṭa's Bhāṣya.

KALĀNĀTHA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, who has rendered Urdu poet Ghalib's poems into Sanskrit. He has also written humorous and satirical essays. He has traced the threads of folklore in Vedic and Classical Sanskrit literature as well.

KĀLA-NIRṆAYA. A Sanskrit Smṛiti work by Mādhavāchārya (q.v.), which is a comprehensive treatise in five chapters. It deals with time and its nature, year, seasons, months, intercalary months, and religious acts allowed and forbidden in intercalary months, disquisition on tithi, nakshatra, yoga, karāṇa, saik-rānti, eclipses, etc.

KĀLA-SĀRA. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Gadādhara (q.v.), which prescribes the auspicious time for various rites and observances.

KĀLA-SVARŪPA-DVĀTRIMŚIKĀ. Same as Kāla-svarūpa-kulaka (q.v.).

KĀLA-SVARŪPA-KULAKA. An Apabhraṃśa didactic poem in 32 stanzas by Jinadatta Sūri (q.v.).

KĀLĀ-VILĀSA. A Sanskrit poetical work by Kshemendra (q.v.). Consisting of 10 cantos and written in the form of instructions given by Mūladeva to one Chandragupta, it describes the various modes of deceit practised by people in different walks of life, such as wandering singers, doctors, goldsmiths and astrologers.

KĀLA-VILĀSA. A famous Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Jimūtavahana (q.v.), which discusses appropriate seasons, month and time for the performance of religious rites, duties, festivals, etc.

KALĀPA. See Kātantra.

KALF, M.R. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose editions of the works of Kālidāsa, Bhāsa and other Sanskrit writers are quite popular. He is also the author of Higher Sanskrit Grammar.

KALGHATGI, T.G. A Jaina scholar, whose chief works are: Some Problems in Jaina Psychology (Dharwar, 1961), Jainism Through Prakrit Sources (1978) and Jainism and Karnāṭaka Culture (ed., 1977).

KALHAṆA (fl. middle 12th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit poet, chronicler and author of the Rājataranginī (q.v.). His father, Champaka was a minister of king Harsha of Kashmir (r. 1089-1101). After Jayasimha came to the throne, Kalhaṇa became his court-poet. Kalhaṇa had admirable literary gifts, being well-versed not only in Sanskrit literature, but also in the legendary lore of his country. Though a Brāhmaṇa by birth and devoted to Śiva, he was free from the narrow sectarian outlook.

According to Kashmir tradition, he composed a poem Jayasimhābhīyudaya, apparently a history of the achievements of king Jayasimha.

KĀLIDĀSA. The greatest poet and dramatist of Sanskrit as also of India, but very little is known about his life, and time when he flourished. There are numerous legends and anecdotes which represent Kālidāsa as an idiot in early life, who later became a great poet through the grace of goddess Kālī, and died in Ceylon at the house of a hetæra. He is reputed to be one of the nine Jewels (nava-ratnas) of the court of king Vikramāditya (or king Bhoja of Dhāra), but the scholars who are referred to as his associates could not all have been his contemporaries. Most scholars regard as a historical fact his association with king Vikramāditya of Ujjain, and the deliberate change in the name of the Vikramorvaśīya from Purūravas to Vikrama lends colour to it. Some regard this Vikramāditya as the ruler, who, according to well-established traditions, defeated the Śakas in 58 B.C. and founded an era—the well-known Vikrama Samvat—to commemorate this fact. Most modern scholars, however, do not believe that there was any king Vikramāditya in 58 B.C., or that Kālidāsa flourished at so early a period. The general opinion seems to be that he lived at the court of a Gupta Emperor, most probably Chandragupta II, who was also known as Vikramāditya, and, having defeated the Śaka satraps, could well lay claim to the title Śakāri, which is associated with the Vikramāditya of tradition. The safest course, however, is to hold that Kālidāsa flourished some time between 100 B.C. and A.D. 450.

The writings of Kālidāsa reveal that he was a pious Brāhmaṇa of Ujjain, was a liberal Śaiva by belief and had acquired a knowledge of the various branches of Brahmanical learning. He had also gathered vast experience by travelling far and wide throughout India. He shows his familiarity with the whole range of Vedic literature, the philosophical system, especially the Sāṅkhya and Yoga, the various works on Dharmaśāstra, the Kāmasūtra, Nāṭyaśāstra, Vyākaraṇa, Jyotiṣa-śāstra and even fine arts like music, drawing and painting. His versatile genius, his acquaintance with court etiquette, his shrewdness, his modesty, not without a due sense of self-respect, and his poetic talent are very well reflected in his works, which are: Mālavikāgnimitra, Vikramorvaśīya, Abhijñāna-śākuntala (dramas) and poems: Raghuvamśa, Kumārasambhava and Meghadūta (q.v.).

Among the other poems of Kālidāsa, the Ritusamhāra (q.v.) is now generally accepted as his first work, though some have recently expressed doubts about his authorship of it. Nearly a score of other Kāvya are traditionally attributed to Kālidāsa, the well-known among them being: Nalodaya, Pushpabhāna-vilāsa, and Śringāra-tilaka; many later poets assumed the name of Kālidāsa, e.g., Abhinava-Kālidāsa, Ākharīya-Kālidāsa, etc. The versified work on prosody, called Śrutabodha, is also ascribed to Kālidāsa.

Kālidāsa is 'unquestionably the finest master of Indian poetic style', and his inimitable skill in the use of the 'simile' has become proverbial (Upamā Kālidāsasya). Both in drama and poetry, Kālidāsa stands not only unsurpassed but even unrivalled.

KĀLIDĀSA (fl. end of 4th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who is quite different from the celebrated Kālidāsa (q.v.). Disciple of Mūkaśaṅkara, who adorned the seat of Kāmakoṭi from 397 to 436, Kālidāsa had a style of expression, which earned the title of 'Kālidāsa' for him from his master. The author had a number of devotional lyrics to his credit, among which are : Śyāmalā-daṇḍuka, Ghaṭastava, Ambāshaka, etc. His poetical works include the Ritusamhāra, Śringāra-tilaka, Śrutabodha, Rathāṅgadūta (modelled on the Meghadūta), Kavikaṇṭhapāṣa, Rākshasa-kāvya and Pushpabhāna-vilāsa. It is a fact that Kālidāsa of eternal fame in Sanskrit poetry had acted as the inspiration for this Kālidāsa.

KĀLIDĀSA VIDYĀVINODA (fl. 19th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who composed Śivāji-charitram on the life and exploits of Shivāji, the Maratha hero.

KALIHARADĀSA VASU (fl. 1st half of 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, who has written on lives of Śrī Chaitanya and his elder contemporary Advaita Āchārya in Sanskṛita Sāhitya Parishat Patrika, Calcutta (1928-29 ff. and 1938-39 ff.).

KĀLIKĀ PRASĀDA SHUKLA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who is Head of the Grammar Section at the Varanaseya Sanskrit Vishva-vidyalaya, Kāśī. He is known for his editing of Yogeśa Śāstri's Haimavatī (1975) and Nāgeśa's Vaiyākaraṇa Siddhānta-maṇjushā (1977), with scholarly Introductions.

KĀLIKĀ-UPAPURĀṆA. Containing about 9000 Sanskrit stanzas in 98 chapters, it is the only work of the series which describes the consort of Śiva in her various forms as Girijā, Devī, Bhadrā-Kālī, Kālī, Mahāmāyā and deals with animal and human sacrifices to he offered to her. It belongs to the Śākta modification of Hindu belief, or the worship of the female powers of the deities. This Purāṇa explains the origin of Pīṭhasthānas where the different limbs of Sati were scattered and where Liṅgas were consequently erected. Peculiarly enough, it contains very prolix descriptions of a number of rivers and mountains in Kāmarūpa tirtha in Assam, the home of Tantrika and Śākta. The Purāṇa also contains a chapter on politics. See Upapurāṇa and Purāṇa.

KALI KUMĀR DATT. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Bengal's Contribution to Sanskrit Literature (1974).

KĀLIPADA TARKĀCHĀRYA, MAHĀMAHOPĀDHYĀYA (1888-1972). A Sanskrit poet and doyen of Calcutta Sanskrit scholars and writers, who in his Yatkiñchit Samayochitam (Praṇavupārijāta, XIII. 4) laments on the atrocious Naxalite destruction in West Bengal, and the all-round degradation into which things fell there. He also composed Āśutoshāvadānam, which is a biography of the renowned educationist of Bengal and distinguished Vice-Chancellor of Calcutta University, Sir Ashutosh Vasishṭha Mukherji.

KALI RAṄGĀCHĀRYA (fl. end of 19th and early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Śrīvaiṣṇava sect, who flourished at Pudukottah court. He composed a number of hymns embodying philosophical doctrines and an epitome of the three schools of Vedānta: Mata-traya-saṅgraha.

KĀLIVILĀSA-TANTRA. A Sanskrit Tantra of the Śāktas, in which a few chapters are devoted to Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā; the latter is identified with Goddess Kālī.

KALKI-UPAPURĀṆA. An Upapurāṇa in Sanskrit, dealing with the deeds of Viṣṇu's future incarnation in the form of Kalki at the close of the Kali-yuga. See Upapurāṇa and Purāṇa.

KALLAṬA (fl. 9th cent.). A Sanskrit writer on Śaivism, whose Spanda-kārikā (q.v.) in 51 verses, composed on the basis of instructions imparted by his preceptor Vasugupta (q.v.), is an important work of the Kashmirian, Spandaśāstra school. Kallaṭa flourished in the reign of Avantivarman (A.D. 854).

KALLINĀTHA (fl. 15th cent.). Also called Chatūra Kallinātha, he is the author in Sanskrit of Saṅgīta-ratnākara-kalānidhi, a well-known comm. on Śārṅgadeva's Saṅgīta-ratnākara (q.v.). Son of Lakṣmīdhara and Nṛayaṇī and a native of Karṇāṭa in South India, he wrote his work at the instance of Immadi Devarāya, alias Mallikārjuna, king of Vijayanagara (1446-65), of whose court he was a poet.

KALPASŪTRA. See Vedāṅga.

KALPASŪTRA. Eighth section of Prakrit Āyāra-dasāo (q.v.), which contains three texts united to form one book, popularly known as Kalpasūtra of Bhadrabāhu: Section I contains Jina-Charitra (biographies of Jinās, the main portion being the biography of Mahāvīra); Section II contains Therāvalī, a list of schools (gaṇas), their branches and heads of schools (gaṇadharas), while Section III contains Sāmācharī (rules for ascetics for the rainy season). According to a tradition, these three, not contained in the original canon, were added to the Siddhānta (q.v.) later by Devardhi. The old genuine Kalpasūtra is the fifth Chheya-sutta (q.v.). There are numerous comms. on Bhadrabāhu's Kalpasūtra.

KALPĀVATAMSIKĀḤ. See Kappāvaḍamśiṅḡo.

KALPNĀ-MANḌITIKĀ. A Sanskrit collection of tales, in prose and verse, which is preserved in a fragmentary condition. Ascribed to Kumāralāta (q.v.) or Āśvaghoṣa, it inculcates the Buddhist faith.

KALUPAHANA, DAVID J. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Buddhist Philosophy: A Historical Analysis (Honolulu, 1976).

KALYĀṆAMALLA (fl. 16th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Anaṅgarāṅga or Anaṅga-mañjarī, a work on erotics.

KALYĀṆAMANDIRA-STOTRA. See Siddhasena Divākara.

KALYĀNARĀMA ŚĀSTRĪ, P.K. (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Tanjore, whose Kanakalatā, written in fine prose, is a romance based on Shakespeare's Lucrece; it was published in Sahridaya, Śrīraṅgam.

KALYĀṆA SUBRAHMANYA (d. c. 1820). A Sanskrit author of Alaṅkāra-kaustubha, dealing with Arthālaṅkāras only; he illustrates the figures of speech by verses in praise of the sovereign or his family deity, Śrī Padmanābha. He was patronised by the king Rāmavarma (r. 1785-98) and later by Rānī Lakshmi of Travancore. He also enjoyed the patronage of Cranganore Rājās till peace returned to Travancore with the accession of Rānī Lakshmi.

KALYĀṆAVARMAN. A Sanskrit writer on Mathematics and author of Sārāvalī. He is variously dated in the last quarter of the 9th cent. and in the 7th cent.: his work was revised by Bhaṭṭotpala (q.v.).

KALYANOV, V.I. A modern Russian Indologist, whose noteworthy production is the Russian tr. of some parvas (including that of Udyogaparva; Leningrad, 1976) of the Mahābhārata, a work, which is now continued by his pupils like S.L. Neveleva and Y.V. Vasilkov, who have jointly done the Vana-parva of the Epic; S.L. Neveleva has also done a thesis on the mythology and anthropology of the Vana-parva. The tr. of the Mahābhārata into Russian commenced in 1950 and in a few years the tr. of the whole of the Mahābhārata is likely to be printed. See Erman.

KĀMĀKSHI (widowed 1871). A Telugu Brāhmaṇa lady of Māyavaram, who was proficient in Śāstras. Her Sanskrit works, which are glosses on Tarka and Advaita Vedānta texts, are: Nilakaṇṭhiya-vishayamālā, Advaita-dīpikā and Smṛiti-ratna-prakāśikā.

KĀMĀKSHYĀMMALĀ (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Mayuram of the Tamil area, whose interests lay in Śāstras. Advaita and Nyūya. She ed. Tryambaka Śāstrī's Śruti-ratna-prakāśa and Śrutumatoddya with her notes (1910), and wrote in Tarka the Nyūya-bodhini-Nilakaṇṭhiya-vishayamālā (1912) and an independent Advaitic work, the Advaita-dīpikā (1910).

KAMALĀKARA BHATṬA (fl. 1st half of 17th cent.). Son of Rāmākṛishṇa Bhaṭṭa and grandson of Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa, his literary activity, according to P.V. Kane, was between 1610 and 1640. His chief work is Nirṇaya-sindhu (q.v.) on Smṛiti. Of his other works, mention may be made of the Śūdra-kamalākara.

KAMALESH NĀTH MISHRA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who has ed. Bhojī's Sarasvatī-kaṇṭhābharaṇa.

KAMALESHWAR BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A modern writer, who has tr. into Eng. Nāgārjuna's Vigrahavyāvartanī (1972).

KĀMANDAKA (fl. 1st half of 8th cent.). Author of Nīti-sāra (q.v.), a Sanskrit work on Arthasāstra.

KĀMAṆḌAKĪ. A Pali work by an unknown author on metrics, perhaps written between 11th and 13th centuries.

KĀMAṆḌAKĪYA-NĪTISĀRA. Same as Niti-sāra (q.v.).

KĀMASŪTRA (Art of Love). The earliest extant Sanskrit work on erotics, composed by Vātsyāyana (fl. 4th or 5th cent. A.D.; q.v.). Consisting of 1250 verses divided into seven Adhikaraṇas, 14 Prakaraṇas and 36 Adhyāyas, the Adhikaraṇa-wise contents are: (1) General principles; (2) Sexual union; (3) Courtship and marriage; (4) Wife; (5) Wives of other people; (6) Prostitutes; and (7) Secret love or extraneous stimulation.

From the introduction of this work, it appears that this subject was previously dealt with by a number of authors, but whose works are altogether lost. The work treats of the subject of sexual love in a comprehensive manner and throws much revealing light on the manners and customs of society. As such, the work is important also from the viewpoint of sociology and medical science. The 64 arts, particularly to be learnt by women are mentioned; these include dance, music, art of decoration, skill in household, etc. The prostitutes have been divided into various classes. The style is between Sūtra and Bhāṣya and would have been partly unintelligible but for the excellent comm. Jayamaṅgalā by Yaśodhara (q.v.; 13th cent.).

KĀMEŚVARA NĀTHA MIŚRA. A modern scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Tattva-prakāśa with the comm. of Aghoraśivāchārya.

KAMPTZ, KURT VON. A German Indologist, whose chief work Über die vom sterbenden handelnden älteren Paṇṇa's des Jainakanons (Hamburg, 1929) is a notable work on Jaina canonical literature.

KAMSAVADHA. A Sanskrit drama mentioned in Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya, but is not extant.

KAMSAVAHO. A Prakrit Kāvya in four cantos by Rāmapāgīvāda (q.v.); it is partly in mātrā-vṛtta and partly in varṇa-vṛtta. The work deals with the killing of Karmāsa.

KANĀDA (fl. probably 6-5th cent. B.C.). Supposed author of Sanskrit Vaiśeṣhikā-sūtra (q.v.); his real name appears to have been Kāśyapa, but he is also called Kaṇabhuj or Kaṇabhaksha (atom-eater). See Vaiśeṣhikā-sūtra.

KANAKALEKHĀ. See Vāmana Bhaṭṭa Bāṇa.

KANAKĀMARA (fl. 11th cent.). A Jaina Apabhraṁśa poet and a Brāhmaṇa of the Chandra-ṛishi gotra, who got converted to the Digambara Jaina faith on account of a feeling of renunciation. He was a disciple of Paṇḍita Maṅgaladeva or Buddha Maṅgaladeva. He composed his Karakaṇḍa-chariū (q.v.) at Āsāiya, which has been identified somewhere in Bundelkhaṇḍ.

KANAKASENA VĀDIRĀJA (fl. prior to 950). A Digambara Jaina Sanskrit poet, a resident of South India and author of Yaśodhara-charita (q.v.); his pupil Śrīvijaya flourished in about 950. See Jasahara-chariū and Yaśastilaka-champū.

KANBE, BAK. A Sanskrit scholar, who ed. with English tr. Bālacharita (1968), Avimāraka (dramas of Bhāsa) and Amaruśaśa-līlā. He also authored Kathāratnākara (The Ocean of Stories; 1971; 2 vols.); the work has been modelled on Kathāsaritsāgara and Bṛhatkathāmañjarī (qq.v.).

KĀNCHANĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit dramatist and son of Nārāyaṇa of the race of Kappimuni. Patronised by king Jayadeva of Kanoj, who flourished in the 12th cent., his drama Dhananjaya-vijaya (q.v.) was staged before an assembly of the learned, presided over by Gadādhara Miśra.

KANDARPA-CHŪḌĀMAṆI. A Sanskrit work on erotics, composed in 1577 by king Virabhadra of the Vaghela dynasty. It is an amplified metrical exposition in seven sections of Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra (q.v.).

KĀṆE, A.V. A blind modern Sanskrit poet, whose Gāndhī-gītā is an exposition of Mahātma Gāndhī's teachings in 41 long verses; his Kāvyaśarit is a collection of poems on modern subjects. 'Chandram-gato-mānavah' is a poem on the landing of man on the Moon.

KĀṆE, PĀṆDURĀṄGA VAMANA, the late (fl. 1930-50). A celebrated Sanskrit scholar, whose monumental work is History of Dharmaśāstra (5 vols., 1930-46); he has pub. History of Sanskrit Poetics as also several important research papers on Puranic studies. He ed. also Vyavahāra-mayūkha of Nilakaṇṭha Bhaṭṭa. He is regarded an authority on the Dharmaśāstra. For use of students of Sanskrit, he prepared a Primer : Sanskrit Gadyāvali; in this work, the author retold episodes from the Itihāsa and Purāṇas, the numerous fables and popular tales.

KANGLE, R. P. A modern scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra (3 Pts., 1963-77) and Manu and His Laws.

KANHAPĀ (KṚISHNAPĀDA; fl. 8th-10th cent.). One of the 84 Siddhas, who holds an important place among them. He was born in a Brahmin family in Karnataka and was called 'Kanhapā' or 'Krishnapāda' for his dark complexion; according to another version, he was born in a family of weavers. He wrote six works on philosophy and some 74 works on Tantra; out of these two works : Kāṇhapāda-gītikā and Dohakośa are in Apabhramśa. A disciple of Jālandharapāda, he condemns the study of Vedas, Purāṇas, etc. and instead glorifies devotion to Guru.

KANJURĀMAN VAIDYAR, V.C. A Sanskrit writer, who tr. into Sanskrit Kumāran Āśan's Malayalam poem as Chintāviśṭā Sītā (1978).

KAN̐KHĀ-VITARANĪ. A Pali comm. by Buddhaghosha, on the Pāṭimokkha (q.v.), written between 410 and 432. Containing much new information on the later development of Buddhist monastic life, it is marked by restraint and mature judgment. B.C. Law ascribes, however, this work to another Buddhaghosha.

KANTAWALA, S.G. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Cultural History from the Matsya Purāṇa (Baroda, 1964).

KĀṆVA-SAMHITĀ. See Veda (Yajurveda).

KAPAḌIA, H.R. A Prakrit scholar, whose chief works are: Canonical Literature of the Jainas (1941) and a small English-Prakrit Dictionary (1941). He ed. also a number of MSS. on Jaina literature and philosophy.

KAPĀLI ŚĀSTRĪ, T.V. (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and scholar, who was a pupil of Kāvyaṇṭham Vāsishṭha Gaṇapati Śāstrī of Gokarna, on whose Ramaṇa-gītā, he wrote a gloss. He later came to Aurobindo Ashram at Pondicherry and pub. Sanskrit renderings of select poems of Aurobindo under the title Kavitāñjali (1946). He wrote Bhārati-stava (1949, in which the very image of the Supreme Mother Goddess is seen in Bhārata Mātā), the Sādhana-sāmrājya (1952 ; in 25 verses on the place of Sādhana in Aurobindo's Yoga), Āhnika-stava (1954 ; a collection of hymns) and his magnum opus, the new Sanskrit comm. Siddhānjanā on the Rigveda (Pondicherry, vol. I 1950-51 ; vol. II 1976-77 ; with Eng. tr.), which expounds the esoteric interpretation as suggested by Aurobindo. He also composed Vāsishṭha-valbhavam (Mysore, 1944), which in its two sections describes the life of his Guru, one of the foremost scholars of Veda, Dharmaśāstras and Āyurveda.

KAPILA. A sage, supposed to have been the founder of the Śāṅkhya system of philosophy and believed to have flourished several generations before the Buddha. He is the author in Sanskrit of Tattva-samāsa (q.v.); Śāṅkhya-pravachana-sūtra (q.v.) is also traditionally ascribed to him.

KAPILA DEVA DWIVEDI. A Sanskrit writer, whose Parivartana (1949), a drama, contains songs in place of verses. His Saṁskṛita-nibandha-satka (3rd ed., 1984) is a collection of 100 essays in chaste and lucid Sanskrit on topics ranging from Vedic and philosophical to literary and cultural.

KAPIL DEV SHĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Gaṇapātha ki Paramparā and Laghu-siddhānta Mahājūshā.

KAPILĀ VĀTSYĀYANA. A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Classical Indian Dance in Literature and the Arts (1977), The Square and the Circle of the Indian Art and Dance in Indian Painting. She holds a senior post in the Ministry of Education, Government of India.

KAPINĀM UPAVĀSAH (The Monkeys' Fast). A Sanskrit story in 31 Upajāti verses by D.T. Tātāchārya (1892-1973) of Tirupati. It is a hit against the fickle-minded people, who pretend to observe austerities. A monkey-chief calls an assembly of monkeys and orders that like human beings, they should observe a fast the following day. The monkeys readily agree to observe fast and start the next day with early baths and meditation. But seeing a Jambu tree nearby, they find nothing wrong in going near the tree. As the winds blow and the ripe fruits fall down, they decide that there is nothing wrong in keeping the fruits in their cup-like cheeks. One can imagine what happens to the fruits in the mouths. The language is simple idiomatic Sanskrit and the monkeyish actions are depicted graphically.

KAPISHṬHALA-KAṬHA-SAMHITĀ. See Veda (Yajurveda).

KAPISTHALAM DEŚIKĀCHĀRYA (fl. end of 19th and early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Śrīvaiṣṇava sect, whose chief works are: Adhikaraṇa-ratnamālā and Siddhānta-traya saṅgraha. He was an authority on dialectics and philosophy.

KAPISTHALAM KRISHṆAMĀCHĀRYA (1883-1933). A Sanskrit writer and son of Rāṅgāchārya of Tirupati, whose romance Mandāravati (Madras, 1929) is based on one of the stories in the Bṛhatkathā-mañjarī. His second novel, Rūpavati (printed in Telugu characters) is a simple narrative in verse and is about Rūpavati, daughter of king Chanda-vikrama and queen Indumati. His other works are: Vilāpa-taraṅgiṇī (poem) and Rasārṇava-taraṅgiṇī (bhāṇa).

KAPOOR, O.B.L. A modern scholar, who has pub. a book on Chaitanya's philosophy in the background of Hare Kṛishṇa Movement.

KAPPA. See Chheya-sutta.

KAPPĀVAḌAMSIĀO. See Uvaṅga.

KAPPHANĀBHYYUDAYA. A Sanskrit epic in 20 cantos, by Śivasvāmin (q.v.), describing how Kapphaṇa, the king of Dakṣiṇāpatha, makes an attempt to attack king Prasenañjit of Śrāvastī and how in the end his attack results in his own conversion into Buddhism without any battle being waged with Prasenañjit. The work is based on a tale in the Avadānasataka (q.v.) and treats of the subject in full epic manner, manifestly under the influence of Kirātārjunīya and Śiṣupālāvaha (qq.v.). The poem gives charming pictures of seasons, the sports of the army with women in the water, amusements with drinking bouts, sunset and moonlit nights and the mysteries of love.

The poem is marked with the artificialities found in the works belonging to the age of decadence.

KARAKAṆḌA-CHARIU (Karakaṇḍa-charita). An Apabhraṃśa poem by Kanakāmara (q.v.; fl. 11th cent.).

The poem, consisting of 10 Sandhis, describes in easy and lucid style, the life of king-sage Karakaṇḍa who is recognised as a Pratyekabuddha by both the Jainas and the Buddhists.

Rājā Dadhivāhana of Champāpurī once goes to Kusumapura where he falls in love with a maiden, who, in fact, is princess Padmāvati but has been deserted owing to her inauspicious birth; the Rājā marries her. While she is pregnant, she expresses a wish to go around the city on an elephant. Arrangement is made, but the elephant carrying the Rājā and the Rānī flees away towards the forest. She presses the Rājā to save his life but she keeps sitting on the elephant. The elephant enters a tank and the Rānī jumps down and takes her way towards the forest, which at once turns green. The forester takes Padmāvati home considering her as his sister but the jealousy of his wife gets her turned out of the house. The Rānī goes to a cemetery where she gives birth to a son, named Karakaṇḍa. The child is lifted by Mātāṅga, a Chāṇḍāla, who, before his curse, was a Vidyādhara. He is to be redeemed from curse only if he can make the boy a rājā. When the Rājā of Dantipura dies, Mātāṅga secures the boy the vacant throne; later on the boy marries princess Madanāvalī of Girinagara.

Once Dadhivāhana sends a messenger to Karakaṇḍa to accept his supremacy; this infuriates Karakaṇḍa and he attacks Champā.

There is a fierce battle but Padmāvati arranges a truce between the father and the son. The father is overjoyed to find that he has a son; he installs his son as his successor and retires to the forest. Karakaṇḍa expands his empire but he is still to conquer Chola, Chera and Pāṇḍya kingdoms; the Rājā attacks those kingdoms as well.

On the way, Vidyādhara, disguised as an elephant, runs away with Madanāvalī; a Vidyādhara, however, assures Karakaṇḍa of his union with Madanāvalī. The Rājā approaches Siṃhala where he marries the Siṃhala princess, Rativegā. To kill an alligator, the Rājā jumps into the sea; he is successful but cannot catch the boat. Rativegā, reaching the coast, starts bewailing but she is consoled by Padmāvati; the Rājā is abducted by a Vidyādhari, who makes him her husband. Later on the Rājā with her newly-wed wife joins Rativegā. The Rājā defeats the Dravidian kings but he happens to see the cast of Jinas in their crowns; the Rājā feels repentant, and returns to Terāpura where the Vidyādhara restores Madanāvalī to him. They lead a peaceful life thereafter at Champā; at Munirāja Shilagupta's advice, the Rājā makes his son Vasupāla his successor and retires to forest with his many queens.

In the main plot there are nine stories which are fitted in at various places; the chief stories are of Naravahanadatta and Madanamañjūshā found in the Bṛihatkaṭha (q.v.) and of a parrot, which reminds one of Vaisampāyana in the Ādumbarī (q.v.). The hero's campaign in the south gives occasion to the description of the Jaina caves at Terapur, identified with the existing caves at Dhārāśiva near Osmānābād.

The Karakaṇḍa-chariu is a religious kāvya where much importance has been given to events than to the poetic excellence.

KARAKAṆḌANUYOGA. Prakrit works, belonging to the secondary or substitute canon of the Digambara Jainas; these include cosmological works, viz., Sūrya-prajñapati, Chandra-prajñapti and Jayadhavalā.

KĀRAṆḌA-VYŪHA. A Buddhist Mahāyāna sūtra in Sanskrit, which exists in two versions, the earlier one in prose and the later in Ślohas; the full title of the work is: Avalokiteśvara-guṇa-karaṇḍa-vyūha.

KARĀNJIA, R.K. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Kundalini Yoga.

KARAPĀTRĪ, SVĀMĪ (1907-82). An eminent Sanskrit scholar, who was born at Bhaṭṭ in Pratapgarh district. His original name was Haranārāyaṇa. In 1924, a daughter was born to him but he preferred to lead the life of a recluse. Accordingly, leaving his old parents, young wife and the daughter, he went to Narvar and then to Bhṛigukshetra for studies. Thereafter he came to Varanasi and established a Dharma Sargha. He became famous for his opposition to Hindu Code Bill. As a scholar, his magnum opus is Vedārtha Pārijāta (Pt. I, 1979 ; Pt. II, 1980; in Sanskrit), which seeks to justify the traditional interpretation of the Vedas as against the interpretations given by Dayānanda Sarasvatī (q.v.) and by some other Indian and Western scholars. His earlier chief works in Sanskrit are : Veda-svarūpavimarśa, Vedaprāmāṇya-mīmāṃsā, Śrīvidyāratnākara and Bhakti-rasārṇava.

KĀRIKĀ-VALI. Another name of Bhāshā-parichcheda (q.v.).

KARKA (fl. prior to 10th cent.). A Sanskrit scholar, whose comms. are available on Pārasakara-gṛhiya-sūtra (the earliest comm.) and on Kātyāyana-srauta-sūtra.

KARMĀNUSHṬHĀNA-PADDHATI. A Sanskrit digest by Bhavadēva Bhaṭṭa (q.v.), which discusses the procedure of ten principal rites and ceremonies to be performed by Sāmaveda followers; the work is also called Daśa-kurmapaddhati, Daśakarma-dīpikā, Samśkāra-paddhati or Chhāndoga-paddhati.

KARMARKAR, A.P. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who has written several research papers on Purāṇic studies; he has written also a work on Kālidāsa.

KARMARKAR, R.D. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: the ed. of Śrībhāṣya of Rāmānuja (3 Pts., 1959-64), of Kāvya-prakāśa. Gauḍapāda-kārikā, Vedānta-kalpa-latikā, Jñānadīpikā (comm. on Mahābhārata) and ed. of Āśvamedhika-parvan in the critical ed. of the Mahābhārata, pub. by the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona.

KARMASTAVA. A Prakrit work by Devendra Sūri (q.v.) on the doctrine of Karman.

KARMAVIPĀKA. A Prakrit work on Karman, containing some 60 verses by Devendra Sūri (q.v.) of the 13th cent. A.D. There are several works bearing this title by various authors.

KARMOPADEŚINI. See Brāhmaṇa-sarvasva.

KARṆABHĀRA. A Sanskrit drama in one Act by Bhāsa (q.v.), based on a scene from the Mahābhārata.

Karṇa, while preparing himself for his fight with Arjuna, tells Śalya of the trick by which he won his armour from the Brāhmaṇa sage, Paraśurāma. Śalya reminds him of Paraśurāma's curse that the arms should fail Karṇa in the hour of his need. The curse proves to be true, for Indra comes disguised as a Brāhmaṇa and obtains from Karṇa his armour and ear-rings. Karṇa and Śalya start for the battle and the noise of Arjuna's chariot is heard.

KARṆA-PRAKĀŚA. An astronomical Sanskrit work by Brahmadeva (q.v.), which follows the work of Āryabhaṭa I with corrections suggested by Lalla; the author flourished in the latter half of the 11th century.

KARṆAPŪRA (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who is the author of Pārijāta-haraṇa-mahākāvya.

KARṆA-SUNDARĪ. A four-act Sanskrit drama by Bilhaṇa (q.v.), which celebrates the marriage of his patron Chālukya Karṇadeva Trailokyamalla of Aṇhilvād (1064-94) with a princess. Written in the guise of a romantic story, it is, however, a poor recast of the Ratnāvalī and Viddhaśāla-bhañjikā (qq.v.).

KARṆĀVATAMSA. A Sanskrit poem, which gives an eulogistic account of the rule of Karṇasimha (fl. 16-17th cent.) of Bikaner and contains names of Muslim patrons of Sanskrit; it is attributed to Hoshitakabhaṭṭa.

KARPŪRA-CHARITRA. A Sanskrit Bhāṇa by Vatsarāja. See Vatsarāja.

KARPŪRA KAVI (Rūplal Kapoor). A modern well-known journalist of Hindi, English and Urdu, whose Navarasa Sāmañ-jasyam Mātrakāvya (1981) is a humorous work in Sanskrit.

KARPŪRAMAÑJARĪ. A drama in four Acts by Rājaśekhara (q.v.); it is in Prakrit, none of the characters speaking Sanskrit.

A magician displays a damsel named Karpūramañjarī, to the king Chaṇḍapāla of Kanauj and his queen and the queen takes her as an attendant. The king and maiden, however, fall at once in love; in a letter the maiden avows her passion, but the queen finds out the love. She imprisons the maiden, but the king makes a subterranean passage giving access to her prison. In Act III, the maiden and the king enjoy a flirtation in the garden, when the queen again discovers them. Act IV shows that the end of the passage opening on the garden has been blocked, but another passage has been made to the sanctuary of Chāmuṇḍa, the entrance being concealed behind the statue. Thus the prisoner can play a game of hide-and-seek with the queen and this enables her to carry out a clever ruse invented by the magician to secure the queen's blessing for the wedding. The queen is induced to demand that the king shall marry a princess of Lāṭa, by whom her husband will be a paramount monarch. She is still at her home, but the magician will fetch her to the palace. The wedding goes on merrily, but the princess is no other than Karpūramañjarī, the princess of Lāṭa and a cousin of the queen; the queen has unwittingly accomplished the lovers' desire.

Produced at the request of Rājaśekhara's wife, the story is similar to the one of the Vatsa king and Vāsavadattā. According to Keith, the author is devoid of power to create character, the heroine is without merit, the intrigue is poorly managed and the confusion of exits and entrances is difficult to follow and is unsuitable for acting.

The Prakrit used in the play has been variously termed as Avantī, Śaurasenī or mixed Śaurasenī and Māhārāṣṭrī.

KARSAY, GYORGY. A modern Hungarian Indologist, who has written his doctoral thesis on the dramas of Kālidāsa.

KĀRTIKEYA, SVĀMĪ (fl. early centuries of Christian era). A Digambara Jaina Prakrit poet (also called Kumāra) and author of Kattigeyānupekka (q.v.), which prescribes snapping the ties of the action.

KARUNA KUSALASAYA. A modern Thai Indologist, whose tr. of the whole of the Mahābhārata into Thai is in progress. He has already tr. the Buddhacharita (Cantos I and II) into Thai.

KĀŚAKRITSNA. An ancient Sanskrit grammarian and philosopher referred to in Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya; his grammar is called Kāśa-kṛtsna.

KĀSHIKAR, CHINTĀMANI GAṆESH. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Eng. tr. and ed. of Bhāradvāja Śrauta-sūtra, Āyurvedic-padārtha-vijñāna, A Survey of Śrautasūtras and ed. of Rigveda Samhitā with Sāyaṇa's Commentary (5 vols.. with N.S. Sontakke).

KĀSHINĀTH ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern scholar, whose chief work Vīra-śaiva-ratna deals with Śaivism.

KĀŚICHANDRA (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit Paṇḍita, whose Uddhāra-chandrikā advocates taking back into the orthodox fold those persons, who had crossed the seas.

KĀŚIKĀ-VIVARAṆA-PAÑJIKĀ. See Nyāsa.

KĀŚIKĀ-VRITTI. A famous Sanskrit grammar (c. 650), a comm. on Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya (q.v.) and greatly utilized by Chinese scholars for studying Sanskrit at the time of I-tsing's visit to India in the last quarter of the 7th century. Bks. I to IV appear to have been composed by Jayāditya (of Kashmir; d. 660); after his death, the work was completed by Vāmana. Jinendrabuddhi, a Buddhist scholar, wrote his comm. called the Nyāsa (q.v.) on the Kāśikā. Māgha, in his Śiśupāla-vadha, makes a definite reference to this Nyāsa which may, therefore, be dated c. 700.

KĀŚI KRISHṆAMĀCHĀRYA. A modern Sanskrit writer of Āndhra, whose chief work Vālmiki (Guntur, 1957) is in easy prose, introducing a number of anecdotes, subsidiary stories and other interesting literary features. His Bhārati-saptaka-traya, a poem, is on the lamentable condition of the Sanskrit muse.

KĀŚI LAKSHMAṆA. A Sanskrit writer and author of Shāharāḍiyam, which simultaneously sings the merits of Shāhji, king of Tanjore (r. 1687-1711) and illustrates the Alaṅkāras.

KĀŚINĀTHA ŚĀSTRĪ (1853-c. 1938). A learned scholar, who was born at Chhātā village in Balia district. For higher studies in grammar, he came to Vārāṇasi, where he taught for some time. He was then Professor of Sanskrit at the Gurukula Kangri Vishwavidyalaya, Hardwar for 12 years and then at Jwalapur Mahavidyalaya for 10 years. In 1931, when Madan Mohan Malaviya went to England, he sought Śāstrī's blessings. Śāstrī's prominent disciples were : Indra, Jayachandra, Padmasingh Śarmā, Sūryakānta Śāstrī, etc. He had two sons : Harinātha Śarmā and Raghunātha Śarmā (q.v.), the latter has been given the Sanskrit Bharati Award. Śāstrī's works are comm. on Anubhūti-prakāśa by Vidyāraṇya, Mahāvākya-ratnāvali Vyākhyā (comm. on Tailanga Svāmī's original work), ed. of Chitsukhi and Pañchadaśī Vyākhyā (not yet published ; its manuscript is available in Sarasvatī Bhavan Library).

KĀŚINĀTHA UPĀDHYĀYA (died 1805). A Sanskrit writer, whose chief works on Dharmaśāstra are: Dharma-sindhu (also known as Dharma-sāra) and Prayāścittenduśekhara, called Viṭṭhala-Rik-mantra-sāra-bhāṣya to prove that the cult of Viṭṭhala is based on the Veda. He belonged to Mahārāshtra.

KĀŚIPATI KAVIRĀJA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, son of Ramāpati, and author of Mukundānanda, a mīṣṭabhāṣa wherein the erotic adventures of the Viṭa alludes obliquely to the sports of Kṛishṇa. The play was enacted at the festival at Bhadrāgiri, Bhadrāchalam. His Saṅgīta-gaṅgādhara is a treatise on music.

KĀŚI ŚESHA VENKATACHALA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit author of Abdhi-nau-yāna-mīmāṃsā (Bombay, 1903), which is a polemical work on the subject of sea-travel.

KASSAPA (fl. between 5th and 11th cent.). A Buddhist Pali writer; the Gandhavarṇsa (q.v.) ascribes the Anāgatavarṇsa ('History of the Future One, i.e., Future Buddha') to Kassapa, the author of Buddhavarṇsa (q.v.) and its Ṭikā (Anāgatavarṇsa-aṭṭhakathā) to Upatissa. But as there have been several Kassapas and Upatissas during various periods, the date of Anāgatavarṇsa cannot be fixed with certainty. Winternitz states that it 'perhaps belongs to an earlier period', though many regard Anāgatavarṇsa as a spurious work. Malalaseker believes Upatissa's Ṭikā to have been based on a much earlier work. Some scholars doubt whether Kassapa, the author of the Anāgatavarṇsa, is identical with the author of Moha-vichchhedanī, Vimati-chchhedanī and Bodhivarṇsa (qq.v.) though the Gandhavarṇsa ascribes these works to a single author. The Moha-vichchhedanī is a treatise on the Abhidhamma-piṭaka (q.v.) and the Vimati-chchhedanī is on the Vinaya-piṭaka (q.v.).

KASSAPA BUDDHARAKKHITA. See Jinā-laṅkāra.

KASTŪRI RAṄGĀCHĀRYA (1864-1906). A Sanskrit writer of Mysore, whose Samudrayāna Mīmāṃsā is a polemic against Perisvāmī Tirumalāchārya, who had earlier authored a book on Voyages. He joined the Oriental Library in Mysore in 1891 and edited several texts for publication with the help of manuscripts available there. He was also the author of some 30 works in Sanskrit, chief among which are Bhāṭṭadīpikā-vyākhyāna, Prātiśākhya-bhūmikā and Vachas-sudhatatvam. Many of his works are still in manuscript form.

KĀŚYAPA. A Sanskrit grammarian, who was a Ceylonese Buddhist monk. He is the author of the Bālāvabodha, a popular recast of the Chāndra grammar; his date is uncertain but he probably fl. in the 12th century.

KĀŚYAPA-SAMHITĀ. A Sanskrit treatise on Āyurveda, which is also called Vṛiddhajivakiya-tantra.

KĀTANTRA (KĀLĀPA). A celebrated Sanskrit grammar by Śarvavarman, which may have been very old in its origin, but is no longer extant. Originally of four books, it appears with supplements in the Tibetan translation and in Durgasiṃha's comm. which is the oldest comm.; Ugrabhūti (c. 1000) also composed a comm. viz., Śiṣyahiṭanyāsa. The school of Kātantra spread over Bengal and Kashmir; among the Kashmirian writers may be mentioned Bhaṭṭa Jagaddhara (author of Bālābodhinī) and Chhichubhaṭṭa (author of Laghuvṛitti), both about 1000. In Bengal, during the 13th and 16th centuries, a host of comms. and supplementaries were written on Kātantra grammar. The Kātantra deeply affected the Pali grammar of Kachchāyana and the Dravidian grammarians. A Tibetan tradition alleges that the author of Kātantra used the grammar of Indragomin. Appearing to be an abridgement of the Ashṭādhyāyī, it omits many rules of Pāṇini, totally ignores the Vedic portion of the Ashṭādhyāyī and modifies many of its rules. A legend goes that it was composed to make king Śātavāhana proficient in Sanskrit within a short period.

KĀTANTRA-VṚITTI. A Sanskrit comm. by Durgasiṃha (q.v.) on the Kātantra (q.v.).

KĀTANTRA-VṚITTI-PAÑJIKĀ. A Sanskrit grammatical comm. by Trilochanadāsa (q.v.) on Durgasiṃha's comm. Kātantra-vṛitti (q.v.).

KĀṬAYAVEMA (d.c. 1416). A celebrated Sanskrit commentator, who married the daughter of Anapola, the Reddi king of Konda-vidu and was at the helm of administration during the reign of Anapola's son Komāragiri (r. 1381-1403). At the instance of Komāragiri, he wrote comms., called Komāragirirājīyam on the plays of Kālidāsa viz., Abhijñāna-Śākuntala, Mālavikāgnimitra and Vikramorvaśīya. A great warrior as Kāṣayavema was, Komāragiri bestowed on him the sovereignty of Rājamahendrapuram in appreciation of his services to the state.

KATHĀ-KAUTUKA. A Sanskrit poetical work in 15 cantos by Śrīvara (q.v.), which is an adaptation in 15 cantos of Yūsuf wa Zuleikha by Jāmī in Persian and is probably the earliest instance of the utilization of Persian literature. It was composed in 1550 for the edification of the author's patron Muhammad Shāh of Kashmir. Composed in easy Sanskrit, the romantic Persian love-lyric has been amalgamated with the Indian Śaiva faith, its last canto being dedicated to Śiva.

KATHĀ-KOŚA. An Apabhraṃśa poem by Śrīchandra (q.v.) in 53 sections, each of which contains a separate story intended for moral and religious instruction; there appears to be the influence of Bṛīhatkathā (q.v.) on it.

KATHĀ-KOŚA. An anonymous work in Sanskrit, with verses in Prakrit. Composed perhaps in 11th cent., it contains 27 popular tales illustrating the usual fruits of human actions.

KATHĀ-KOŚA. A Jaina Sanskrit work of Jineśvara (c. 1092), which contains short religious stories. There are several other works bearing this title by different authors, in both Sanskrit and Prakrit KATHĀ-MAHODADHI. A collection of 126 Jaina Sanskrit stories in prose by Somachandra (q.v.), written in 1488.

KATHĀMĀÑJARĪ. A collection of 11 Sanskrit stories (1957), which were originally written by the Mother of the Aurobindo Ashram in French. Like the stories in the Yogavāsiṣṭha, the stories are instructive and teach self-control, simple life and truth.

KATHĀ-RATNĀKARA. A Sanskrit collection of popular tales, by Hemavijayagaṇi (q.v.), a Jaina monk, who seeks to teach the Jaina doctrine. A prose collection, diversified by verses in Sanskrit, Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa, there are 258 miscellaneous short tales, fables and anecdotes, mostly of fools, rogues and artful women.

KĀTHAKA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

KĀTHAKA-SAMHITĀ. See Veda (Yajurveda).

KATHĀRŪPA. See Śivadāsa.

KATHĀSARITSĀGARA. The most famous of the versions of the Bṛīhatkathā by the Kashmirian Somadeva (q.v.; fl. 11th cent.), consisting of 18 books of 124 sections (Taraṅgas) and 24,000 verses, while according to Speyer's estimate, the complete work contained 21,388 verses.

Composed to divert the mind of Suryamati, the wife of Ananta, king of Kashmir, it was the aim of the author to narrate the substance of the work and at the same time to produce a unified effect and maintain the flow of the narrative. Somadeva, in the course of his narration, tells much more than what Kshemen-dra and Buddhasvāmin (qq.v.) do, for there are numerous stories of faithful and adulterous women, of fools and rogues, thieves and gamblers, false ascetics and forest tribes. Wonderful events and feats of adventure are met in abundance, and magic and witchcraft are a matter of daily routine. In spite of the vast material contained in the book, the author has succeeded well in narrating the stories in an easy and flowing style. From the point of view of sociology, the work is a mine of information about ancient customs and manners.

The earliest largest collection in Sanskrit of stories extant in the world, it is the source of many tales in the Thousand and One Nights and through them, supplied ideas not only to Persian and Turkish authors but also to the West through Boccaccio, Chaucer, La Fontaine and others. In the Preface, Soma-deva gives an account of the contents of the work, naming its various chapters and lays down the wonderful origin of the tale. See Pañchatantra.

KATHA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

KATHĀVATE, A.V. A modern scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Kīrtikau-mudī and of Dvyāśrya-kāvya.

KATHĀ-VATTHU. See Abhidhamma-piṭaka.

KATICIC, RADOSLAV. An Indologist of Yugoslavia, who has pub. in Slovenian : The Ancient Indian Literature (Zagrab,).

KATRE, SUMITRA MAṆGEŚA (b. 1906). A well-known Indian linguist, whose chief works are : A New Approach to the Study of Middle and Modern Indo-Aryan (1940), Materials for a Dhātupāṭha of Indo-Aryan (1939), Prakrit Languages and their Contribution to Indian Culture, Formation of Koṇ-kani and Historical Linguistics in Indo-Aryan.

KATS, J. An Indologist, whose chief works are: Het Javansche Tooneel, I (Batavia, 1923) and Het Rāmāyaṇa of Javansche Temple-reliefs (Leiden, 1925).

KATTIGEYĀNUPEKKHĀ. A Prakrit kāvya by Kārtikeyasvāmin (q.v.) in 489 gāthās.

Divided into 12 chapters, it lays down the 19 anuprekṣhās (meditations) and other practices to be adopted by Jaina ascetics and others in order to snap the ties of action. The topics discussed are: the transience of worldly objects, sufferings associated with rebirths, the independence of the soul, the impurity of the body, doctrine of Karman, purification of soul through austerities, etc.

KĀTYĀYANA (fl. 3rd cent. B.C.) A Sanskrit grammarian after Pāṇini and author of Vārttika-sūtra; he is identified with Vararuchi and seems to have flourished in South India. During the period between Pāṇini and Kātyāyana, some forms recorded by the former had become obsolete and some other new forms had come into vogue. In the form of his Vārttika-sūtras, Kātyāyana notes all these changes in the spoken language, the object being to explain and support the Sūtras of Pāṇini and also to amend and supplement them wherever necessary. Such supplementary rules, Vārttika-sūtras have now been included in Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī (q.v.).

KĀTYĀYANA. Author of the Kātyāyana-prakarana, a Pali grammar, composed in Pali language. The author shows a close acquaintance with the Kaśika-vṛtti, Pāṇini's Aṣṭādhyāyī and the Kātantra grammar. The Kātyāyana-prakarana is, however, not mentioned by Buddhaghosha in the 5th cent. A.D. and may have been composed much later.

KĀTYĀYANA. One of the twenty original Smṛiti writers, mentioned by Yājñavalkya, who is supposed to have fl. sometime between the 4th and 6th cent. A.D. Besides a metrical Smṛiti work, the other works attributed to him are: Gṛhyi-sūtra, Śrāddha-sūtra, Sulva-sūtra, Snāna-sūtra, or Snāna-vidhi-sūtra. A Kātyāyana-smṛiti-saroddhāra, compiled by P.V. Kane, has been published.

KĀTYĀYANA. A Sanskrit author, to whom is attributed Rigveda-sarvānukramanī, which is a celebrated work and is very useful to Vedic scholars.

KĀTYĀYANA-PRAKARANA. See Kātyā-

jana.

KĀTYĀYANA-SMṚITI. See Smṛiti.

KĀTYĀYANA-ŚRAUTASŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

KĀTYĀYANA-ŚULVASŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

KAUMUDĪ-MAHOTSAVA. A Sanskrit drama ascribed to Vijakā, who has been identified with Vijaya-bhattacharya, wife of Chandrāditya, the eldest son of Pulakesin II and brother of Vikramāditya I. Various dates, ranging from the fourth to later than the eighth century A.D. have been assigned to the play, which appears to belong to our period.

The drama describes how the cursed Chandrasena, an adopted son of Sundaravarman, king of Magadha, and the commander of his army, allied himself with the barbarian Lichchhavis and got possession of Magadha by defeating and killing the king, his adoptive father. The work has been described as a mediocre production.

KAUMUDĪ-MITRĀNANDA. A Sanskrit drama in 10 Acts, by Rāmachandra (q.v.; fl. 12th cent.).

The theme is the elopement of Mitrānanda, son of a merchant, with Kaumudī, the wordly-wise daughter of a sham-ascetic, from an imaginary island of Varuṇa, and their subsequent adventures in Sindhala and other places, including the subsidiary story of the hero's friend Makaranda, who is married to Sumitrā, daughter of a merchant. The story resembles those of Daṇḍin's Daśakumāra-charita (q.v.). The drama is in the form of a modern pantomime, being the play of a number of Kathā incidents and wholly undramatic.

KAUNḌA BHATṬA (fl. 17th cent.). A reputed Sanskrit grammarian, who was son of Rangoji and nephew of Bhaṭṭoji. He is the author of Vaiyākaraṇa-bhūṣaṇa (an extensive gloss on Vaiyākaraṇa-siddhānta-kārikā), Vaiyākaraṇa-bhūṣaṇa-sāra (a sort of abridgement of Vaiyākaraṇa-bhūṣaṇa), Vaiyākaraṇa-siddhāntadīpikā and Sphoṭa-vāda.

KAUSHĪTAKI-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

KAUSHĪTAKI-GRIHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

KAUSHĪTAKI-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

KAUŚIKA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

KAUTHUMAS-SAMHITĀ. See Veda (Sāmaveda).

KAUṬILYA (VISHNUGUPTA). A Sanskrit writer, whose Arthaśāstra (q.v.) is regarded as the most authentic treatise on politics and state craft. The author is also styled Chāṇakya, who is reported to have been the Prime Minister of Chandragupta Maurya (4th cent. B.C.); some scholars express doubt about the authorship of the Arthaśāstra by the Prime Minister of Chandragupta.

KAUTSA. An ancient Sanskrit scholar, who boldly declared that the Vedic mantras conveyed no sense. Yāska (q.v.) refuted Kautsa's arguments one by one, ridiculed his gross ignorance about the Vedic lore and finally established his (Yāska's) own viewpoint.

KAUTUKA-SARVASVA. A Sanskrit Prahasana by Gopīnātha Chakravartin (q.v.; fl. c. 15th cent.).

It describes in two Acts the wicked pranks of king Kalivatsala, who is addicted to the hemp-juice and is fond of other men's wives. He proclaims free love, becomes involved in a dispute over a courtesan, whom every one wants to oblige, and ends by banishing all the Brāhmaṇas from his realm. Although less vulgar and more amusing, the work is of little merit and possesses no greater appeal in its plot and characterisation.

KAVI, M.R. See Rāmakṛṣṇa Kavi, M.

KAVIDARPAṆA. A work on metres by an unknown author, who closely follows Hema chandra (q.v.) and at times quotes him. It is composed in the Prakrit language, except the fourth chapter which deals with the classical Sanskrit metres and is written in Sanskrit. The only known manuscript of this work is accompanied by an exhaustive comm. again of an unknown author, who vastly quotes from Hemachandra. The Kavidarpaṇa is alluded to by Jinaprabha Sūri in Saṃvat 1365, in his comm. on Nandisena's Ajita-śānti-stava (q.v.).

KAVIKALPADRUMA. A Sanskrit metrical Dhātupāṭha by Vopadeva (q.v.). It not only gives the roots and their meanings but also contains certain other information about the roots from the grammatical point of view and their usage.

KAVI-KANṬHĀBHARAṆA. A Sanskrit work on poetics by Kshemendra (q.v.), which discusses the "possibility of becoming a poet, borrowing from others, the propriety of doing so in the case of the epic and similar works, the charm of poetry with illustrations of its ten aspects, the defects and excellences pertaining to sense, sound or sentiment, the various arts with which a poet should be conversant".

KAVIKARṆAPŪRA (b. 1524). A Sanskrit writer whose real name was Paramānanda Sen. Son of Śivānanda and a disciple of Chaitanya, he was born near Naihati in Bengal. His works are: Chaitanya-charitāmṛta (kāvyā), Chaitanyachandrodaya (1543, a drama) (qq.v.), Kṛṣṇādhnikā-kaumudī (kāvyā) and Ānandavṛndāvana-champū (on the early life of Kṛṣṇa at Vṛndāvana). He is the author also of the Alaṅkāra-kaustubha (q.v.), a work on poetics. Gaurāṅga-gaṇoddesha-dīpikā, also attributed to him, traces Chaitanya's followers to their prior births.

KAVIKUṢṬHĀRA (fl. 10th cent.?). A Sanskrit writer, whose Rājasekhara-charita or Sabhāraṇa-janaprabandha (Pleasing the Assembly) is a poem inculcating good conduct by means of short episodes and anecdotes.

KĀVILĪYAM. Chapter VIII of Prakrit Uttarajīhayana (q.v.), ascribed to Kapila and regarded as an independent poetical discourse; it describes admonitions to monks to renounce everything, to abjure hate, joys of life and injury to living things.

KAVINDRĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit poet, whose poem Jugadvijayachhandas eulogises the achievements of Emperor Jahāṅgīr (r. 1605-27)

KAVĪNDRA PARAMĀNANDA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, a contemporary of Shivāji and author of Anubhārata or Śivabhārata, dealing with the life and achievements of Shivāji. The poem was further continued by his son, Devadatta, and grandson, Govinda to cover the period of Shambhujī. All these three compositions are collectively known as Paramānanda-kāvyam and are valuable sources of Maratha history.

KAVĪNDRA-VACHANA-SAMUCHCHAYA. See Subhāṣita-ratnakōśa.

KAVIPUTRA. A Sanskrit dramatist, mentioned by Kālidāsa in the prologue to Mālavikāgnimītra (q.v.).

KAVI-RAHASYA. A Sanskrit grammatical poem by Halāyudda (q.v.). Serving also as an eulogy of the Rāshtrakūṭa king Kṛṣṇa III (c. 939-67), it illustrates the models of formation of the present tense of Sankrit roots.

KAVIRĀJA (fl. 1190). A Sanskrit poet, whose personal name was probably Mādhavabhaṭṭa; he was patronised by king Kāmadeva (1182-97). He calls himself as a master of figurative expression (vakrokti) and seeks for himself a place by the side of Bāṇa and Subandhu. He is the author of two poems: Rāghavapāṇḍaviya and Pārijātaharaṇa (qq.v.).

KAVISĀRA-PAKARAṆAM. A Pali work on metrics, probably identical with Dhammānanda's comm. on Vuttodaya (q.v.).

KAVISĀRA-ṬIKĀ-NISSAYA. A Pali work on metrics, which appears to be the same as Kavisāra-pakaraṇam. (q.v.).

KĀVYĀDARŚA. A celebrated Sanskrit work on poetics in three chapters by Daṇḍin (q.v.), which has exercised great influence on subsequent writers. The work deals with the following topics: definition and division of Kāvya, the two Mārgas (Vaidarbha and Gauḍa) and the ten Guṇas pertaining to them and the essential requirements of a good poet (Chap. I); definition of Alaṅkāra, enumeration and description of 35 Arthālaṅkāras (Chap. II) and elaborate treatment of Śabdālaṅkāras (Chap. III). The work defines the body of Kāvya as a number of words conveying the intended sense. The soul of the Kāvya, composed in Vaidarbha style, is stated to be the ten Guṇas. The most authoritative commentator of the Kāvyaadarśa is Taruṇavāchaspati.

KĀVYAKAṆṬHAM GAṆAPATI ŚĀSTRĪ. See Gaṇapati Śāstrī, Kāvyaakaṇṭham.

KĀVYA-KAUTAKA. See Bhaṭṭa Tauta.

KĀVYĀLAṆKĀRA. Also called Bhāmahālaṅkāra, it is a celebrated Sanskrit work on poetics in six chapters by Bhāmaha (c. A.D. 700), and has exercised great influence on subsequent writers. Bhāmaha's date was probably later than Daṇḍin (q.v.); in his definition of poetry, Bhāmaha has accorded equal status to 'word' and 'import', though he has devoted more attention to the former.

The importance of this work lies in the fact that for the first time, a definite scheme of poetics is systematically elaborated and authoritatively established.

KĀVYĀLAṆKĀRA. See Rudraṭa.

KĀVYĀLAṆKĀRA-SĀRA-SAṆGRAHA (or Kāvyaṅkāra-saṅgraha). See Alaṅkāra-sāra-saṅgraha.

KĀVYĀLAṆKĀRA-SŪTRA. A Sanskrit work attributed to Yāska, which deals with poetics in an aphoristic style. See Yāska.

KĀVYĀLAṆKĀRA-SŪTRA-VṚITTI. A Sanskrit work on poetics by Vāmana (q.v.), which consists of Sūtras and Vṛitti. The topics discussed in its five Adhikaraṇas or parts are: Śārīra, Dosha-darśana, Guṇa-vivechana, Alaṅkārika and Prāyogika. According to Vāmana, Rīti or particular arrangement of words is the soul of poetry. He declared this for the first time before Dhvanikāra and Ānandavaradhana (qq.v.). See Vāmana.

KĀVYĀLOKA. Another name of Dhavanāloka (q.v.).

KĀVYĀLOKA-LOCHANA. Same as Lochana (q.v.).

KĀVYAMIMĀNSĀ. A Sanskrit work on poetics by Rājasekhara (q.v.). Written in 18 chapters, this work may be said to be a practical handbook of a poet, for instead of dealing with the Rāsas, Guṇas and Alaṅkāras directly, it treats of various topics which are very useful to the poet. From the introductory chapter it appears that the extant work is only the first part of what was originally planned by the author. The extant portion was very popular with such eminent writers as Kshemendra, Bhoja, Hemachandra and younger Vāgbhaṭa (q.v.).

KĀVYĀNUŚĀSANA. A Sanskrit work on poetics composed in 13th cent. by Vāgbhaṭa (q.v.), which is written in the form of Sūtra with a running comm. and covers in five chapters most of the topics of poetics. The object is to present a popular and easy epitome of the subject, without adhering to any particular school.

KĀVYĀNUŚĀSANA. A Sanskrit work in 8 chapters on poetics by Hemachandra (q.v.), which is in the form of Sūtra and Vṛitti, along with its comm., called Viveka, and covers all the topics of poetics with a brief reference to dramaturgy. The work, however, displays hardly any originality or independence of judgment. The author borrows freely from his predecessors named Bharata, Ānandavardhana, Abhinavagupta, Mammaṭa and Rājaśekhara (q.v.). The Sūtra, Vṛitti, and comm. are respectively called Kāvya-śāstra, Alaṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi and Viveka.

KĀVYA-PRADĪPA. A Sanskrit work on poetics by Govinda (q.v.), which, though usually considered as a comm. on Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.) is in fact a distinct comm. on the Kārikās of the Kāvya-prakāśa.

KĀVYA-PRAKĀŚA. A celebrated Sanskrit work on poetics by Mammaṭa (q.v.), which seeks a synthesis of the doctrines of the different schools of Poetics that preceded it. The work has been so popular that more than 70 comms. on it have been written, the prominent commentators being Ruyyaka, Viśvanātha, and Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa (q.v.). Combining fullness of treatment with conciseness, it treats of the entire field of Poetics, except dramaturgy, in 142 Kārikās or Sūtras. The work comprises the Kārikā, Vṛitti, and Udāharaṇas and is divided into ten Ullāsas or chapters. A late addition, mostly obtaining in Bengal, imputes the authorship of the Kārikās to Bharata and of the prose Vṛitti to Mammaṭa, but this is not considered authentic. The earliest known commentator of the Kāvya-prakāśa, Māṇikyachandra (1159-60) and an early MS. of the work dated 1158, refer to the joint authorship of the Kāvya-prakāśa by Mammaṭa and Alaka, and later comms. follow them. It appears, however, that the joint authorship related only to the seventh and tenth Ullāsas. A.D. 1000 appears to be the probable date of the composition of Kāvya-prakāśa.

KĀVYA-PRAKĀŚA-KHAṆḌANA. A Sanskrit work in 10 chapters, written by Siddhi Chandra Gaṇi (fl. 16th cent.), which contradicts the poetic theories as propounded in the Kāvya-prakāśa.

KAYE, G.R. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is the ed. of The Bakshālī Manuscript (Calcutta, 1927).

KEDĀRA BHATṬA (fl. c. 12th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Vṛitta-ratnākara (q.v.), a famous work on prosody.

KEDĀRANATHA SHĀSTRĪ (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Sindhu-sabhyatā, a book on archaeology, dealing with the Indus Valley Civilization.

KEGL, SANDOR. A Hungarian Indologist, who pub. tr. of Bhagavadgītā (1887).

KEITH, ARTHUR BERRIEDALE (1879-1944). A celebrated Eng. Indologist, whose chief works are Eng. tr. of Taittiriya-saṁhitā of Ṛishṇa Yajurveda (2 Vols., 1914, under Harvard Oriental Series Nos. 28-29), Eng. tr. of Aitareya and Kaushītaki Brāhmaṇas of Rig-veda (1920); in HOS 15), with a useful introduction and indices, ed. of Śāṅkhya-āraṇyaka, Vedic Index of Names and Subjects (1917).

dictionary of devatās, ṛishis and important Vedic words with important references, in which Anukramaṇis, Bṛihaddevatā have been used; 1912, jointly with Macdonell; new ed. 1958), Catalogue of Sanskrit and Prakrit MSS. in India Inst. Library (Oxford, 1903), The Sāṅkhya System (London, 1918), Buddhist Philosophy of India and Ceylon (Oxford, 1923), The Religion and the Philosophy of the Vedas and Upanishads (2 Vols., 1925, in the HOS), A History of Sanskrit Literature (Oxford, 1920), Sanskrit Drama (Oxford, 1924), Indian Logic and Atomism (1921) and The Karma Mīmāṃsā. He has also carried out in his usual thorough manner, a detailed examination of the possible relations between the Pañchatantra of Pūrṇabhadra, the Pañchāṅgyānodahara of Meghavijaya and the Tantrākhyāyikā.

On the very close affinity of the language of the Rigveda and the oldest portions of the Avesta, Kieth concludes 800 B.C. as the date for the completion of the Rigveda and holds that the beginning of the Vedic period, therefore, cannot be very far removed from this date; he is also of the view that the point of dispersal of the Indo-Iranians was the region of the Pamir. He has written articles 'The Relation between Hittite, Tocharian and Indo-European', 'Mitanni, Iran and India' (1930) and 'Plotinus and Indian Thought' (1936) and upholds the Varuna-Ouranos-skygod theory.

He questions the identity of Devakiputra-Kṛishṇa of the Chhāndogya-upanishad and Vāsudeva-Kṛishṇa of the later literature and thinks that Kṛishṇa was developed out of one of the vegetation gods that were widely worshipped in all the countries of the world. Regarding Purāṇas, he is of the view that there is no reasonable possibility of any of the existing Purāṇas antedating A.D. 300 and very probably no one is at all as old as this; he also does not think that Śiva-worship is non-Aryan.

KENA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

KENJU, K. (1852-83). A Japanese scholar, whose chief work is Dharma-saṅgraha (An Ancient Collection of Buddhist Technical Terms; 1885).

KENNEDY, J. An American Indologist, whose chief articles are: 'The Prehistoric Aryans and the Kings of Mitanni' (1909), 'The Indian in Armenia, 130 B.C.—300 A.D.', 'The Child Kṛishṇa, Christianity and the Gujars' (1907) and articles on the Purāṇic histories of the early Aryans and the Aryan invasion of northern India. He draws a distinction between the Kṛishṇa of Dwārakā and the child Kṛishṇa, the former a great semi-agricultural, semi-solar, atmospheric god of immemorial antiquity, the latter having been introduced at Mathura in the 5th or 6th cent. A.D. as a result of meeting at that town of lax Buddhists and eager Hindus with Northern nomads who brought a child-god and a Christian festival. He thinks that the Gujars were responsible for introducing the idea of the child-god.

KENNEDY, MELVILLE, T. An Indologist, whose chief work is The Chaitanya Movement (Oxford, 1925).

KENNEDY, VANS. An Indologist, whose chief work is Ancient and Hindu Mythology (1831).

KERALAVARMA VALIYA KOIL TAM-PURĀN (1845-1915). Consort of Mahārāṇī Lakshmibāyī of Travancore; he was one of the greatest of modern poets and was held in high esteem. Called 'Kerala-Kālidāsa', he composed 37 works in Sanskrit. When king Āyilyam Tirunāl interned him, he gave vent to his feelings of dislike against the king in many pieces, and after release composed Viśākha-vijaya, a 20-canto Mahākāvya on Viśākham Tjrunāl. His other chief works are: Kaṁsa-vadha-champū, Śrīṅgūra-māñjarī, Kṣhamāpaṇa-sahasra, Yamapraṇāma-śataka, and Victoria-charita-saṅgraha (1889).

KERALODAYA. See Ezhuttachchhan, K.N.

KERBAKER, M. (d. 1916). An Italian poet, whose renderings in verse of the Mahābhārata episodes were pub. through the Italian Academy in five volumes; he produced also poetic renderings of Vedic hymns, from Kālidāsa and Śūdraka.

KERN, H. (1833-1917). A Dutch Indologist, whose works are: tr. of Nidāna-kathā, of Jātaka-mālā, History of Buddhism in India, first pub. in two volumes in Dutch (1882 and 1884), Geschiedenis, etc. I (1882), Verspreide Geschriften, etc. (1929), ed. and Eng. tr. of Saddharma-puṇḍarīka-sūtra (1908-12, in the Sacred Books of the East Series), Introduction to Bṛīhat-saṃhitā (Calcutta, 1865) and Manual of Indian Buddhism (1896). Kern has shown close relations between the Vedic language and the Bacrian language, indeed he characterises the latter as a dialect of the former.

KESHA CHANDRA DAS. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Śītala Trishnā (1984), a story, deals with a couple with differing ideas and objectives in life. Pratipad is a long story on the present-day social life and its problems. The writer is a Lecturer in Jagannath Sanskrit University, Puri.

KESAVADEVĀ ĀRYA (). A Sanskrit scholar of Andhra Pradesh, who got published the Yajurveda Bhāṣya of Dayananda into Telugu.

KEŚAVA MENON, Y. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Mind of Ādi Śaṅkara.

KEŚAVA MIŚRA (Probably fl. 13th or 14th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Tarkabhāṣā (q.v.), a work on philosophy.

KEŚAVA PAṆḌITA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Rājārāma-charita, describing in 5 cantos an incomplete story of Shivāji's son, Rājārāma; the struggle for Maratha independence in the Carnatic is well depicted here. The work, however, contains a reference to his journey to Gingee. Keśava Paṇḍita wrote also a Smṛiti digest. He served Shivāji and rose to be Daṇḍādhyakṣa under Shambhūji.

KEŚAVA ŚAMBHU BHATṬA (fl. 1st half of 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Kerala, whose chief work Sāttvika-svapna (Trichur, 1921), a play, describes an imaginary assembly of animals and birds, parodying modern political meetings, some of the members displaying their loyalty to the British and some agitating against the British.

KEŚAVA ŚARMĀ. A modern Sanskrit writer, who rendered Shakespeare's Tempest into Sanskrit (pub. in Divyajyotis, July-August, 1967 ff.); he also rendered into Sanskrit G.B. Shaw's Apple Cart (Divyajyotis, Feb., 1970 ff.).

KEŚAVAN NAIR, K. A Sanskrit poet, whose Naivedyam () is a collection of 18 short poems on various themes.

KEŚAVASVĀMIN (fl. 12th cent.). A Sanskrit lexicographer, whose patron was Rājārāja, son of Kulottuṅga. His Nānārthārnava-saṅkṣepa, the biggest homonymous lexicon known so far, contains about 5800 stanzas, which are divided into six Kāṇḍas according to the number of syllables. In each Kāṇḍa, words are arranged after the initial letters. Incidentally, two or three persons of the author's namesake are known during the 12th and 13th centuries.

KEVALĀNANDA, SVAMĪ. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Aitareya-brāhmaṇa ranyaka-kośa (1952; a collection in alphabetical order of the sentences of Aitareya-brāhmaṇa and Āraṇyakas) and Mīmāṃsā-kośa.

KHABAĀDĀR, A.F. A well-known Gujarati poet, who has given Sanskrit versions for a good number of hymns in his New Light on the Gāthās of Holy Zarathushtra (Bombay, 1951).

KHĀDIRA-GRĪHYASŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

KHANDAKAS. See Vinaya-piṭaka.

KHAṆḌAKHĀDYA (Khaṇḍakhādyaka). An astronomical Sanskrit work by Brahmagupta (q.v.), composed in c. 665. Its eight chapters are: Tīthyadhikāra, Grahādhikāra, Tripraśnādhikāra, Chandra-grahāṇādhikāra, Sūrya-grahāṇādhikāra, Udayāstādhikāra, Śṛiṅgonmatya-dhikāra and Grahaṇyadyadhikāra.

KHAṆḌANAKHAṆḌAKHĀDYA. The greatest Sanskrit work on Advaita dialectics by Śrī-harsha (q.v.), the poet. It establishes that all objective knowledge is vain and that the doctrine of Śaṅkara is, therefore, unassailable. It also points out the vanity of philosophy as the human mind is unable to compass those exalted objects which are suggested as worthy of pursuit by its speculative ingenuity.

KHEMAĀCHĀRYA (fl. 10th cent.). A Buddhist Pali writer of Ceylon and author of the Khema-ppakaraṇa (q.v.), also called Paramattha-dīpa; in Ceylon the work is appropriately called Nāma-rūpa-samāsa.

KHEMA-PPAKARAṆA. A Pali work, also known Paramattha-dīpa, by Khema (q.v.). The work contains: short descriptions of the Chitta, definitions of Kusalā and akusalā dhammā and a list of 28 mnemonic verses, briefly giving the meaning of some abhidhamma terms. With its short disquisitions on various subjects concisely written in simple, easy style, the work serves as a little handbook for the study of Abhidhamma. In Ceylon, it is known by the name of Nāma-rūpa-samāsa and was held in high esteem. Vāchissara Mahāsāmi of Ceylon wrote a comm. on it in the 13th century.

KHOT, SKANDA SHAṆKAR. A modern Sanskrit dramatist, whose chief works are: Mālā-bhaviṣayam (on a quack-astrologer), Lūlavai-dyam (on a quack-doctor), Dhruvāvatāra and Hā Hanta Śārade; the first two farces have been played in Nāgpur.

KHRISHṬA-DHARMA-KAUMUDĪ-SAMĀLO-CHANĀ. A Sanskrit work (Calcutta, 1894) by Brajalāla Mukhopādhyāya, which was a critique of Dr Ballantyne's criticism of Hinduism from the Christian standpoint.

KHUDDAKA-NIKĀYA. See Sutta-piṭaka.

KHUDDAKA-PĀṬHA. A part of the Khuddaka-nikāya (q.v.). See Sutta-piṭaka.

KHUDDAKA-SIKKĪ. A Buddhist Pali work, mostly in verse (a few passages being in prose interspersed here and there), attributed to a Ceylonese Dhammasirī (q.v.), though Burmese tradition makes Mahāsāmi, its author. It is a compendium relating to Vinaya-piṭaka (q.v.) and was composed nearly 900 years after Buddha's demise, though language and style indicate a much later period.

KĪCHAKA-VADHA. A Sanskrit poem in five cantos by Nitivarman (q.v.), composed earlier than 11th century.

Based on an episode in the Mahābhārata, it deals with the story of Kīchaka's assault on Draupadī and Bhīma's killing Kīchaka and his followers. The work is one of the earliest specimens of Ślesha (one canto has been written in Ślesha) and Yamaka and similar devices used in poetry. It has been quoted by grammarians, rhetoricians, and also lexicographers, the earliest being Nami-sādhū, who composed his comm. on Rudraṭa's Kāvyaṅkāra in 1069.

KIELHORN, FRANZ (1840-1908). A German Indologist, who studied with Benfey in Goettingen, Stenzler in Breslau and Weber in Berlin and worked with Monier-Williams (1862-65) in London, helping him in the compilation of the Sanskrit-English Dictionary. While in India, Kielhorn was Superintendent of Sanskrit Studies in the Deccan College, Poona. For 8 years, he was in-charge of the College as Principal. Together with Buehler, he founded the "Bombay Sanskrit Series". Kielhorn and Buehler worked together on the edition of the Pañchatantra. After Buehler's death in 1898, Kielhorn took over the editorship of the "Encyclopaedia of Indo-Aryan Research".

In India, Kielhorn continued his studies of Sanskrit grammar with the help of the best pandits. He had already ed. Santanava's Phitsūtra (Leipzig, 1866). He ed. Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa's Paribhāṣendu-sekhara (1868, Eng. tr. 1874). At the request of the Bombay Government, he wrote a Sanskrit Grammar, which ran through four editions. In 1876, he pub. Kātyāyana and Patañjali, dealing with Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya. He then pub. a critical ed. of the Mahābhāṣya (3 vols. in the Bombay Sanskrit Series, 1880-85; 2nd ed. 1892-1909). He also wrote Jātakas and Sanskrit Grammarians and ed. Navāhnikī. From 1886, Kielhorn devoted himself chiefly to epigraphical work. He ed. a large number of inscriptions from all parts of India from the classical age in Epigraphia Indica and "Indian Antiquary". He contributed a lot to the history and chronology of India. His Lists of Inscriptions of Northern and Southern India are useful tools for studying the history of India from the 4th century onwards. His papers have been ed. by Wilhelm Rau (2 vols., 1969) containing a complete bibliography of Kielhorn's works as well. On return to Germany in 1881, he was appointed Professor of Sanskrit at Goettingen University and he retained that post till his death.

KILA BARDHANABADYA. A modern Thai scholar, who has tr. into Thai the Sanskrit work, Dvātriṃśatputtalikā-simhāsana.

KIMURA, TAIKEN. A Japanese scholar, who made extensive research (1922) on the question of Vasubandhu's date; he also explored and expounded 'History of Indian Philosophy' (1914-15). See Takakusu, J.

KING, W.L. (1907-). An American Indologist, whose chief works are: Buddhism and Christianity, In the Hope of Nirvāṇa and Nature and Process of Religious Knowledge.

KINSLFY, DAVID. A Canadian scholar who is Associate Professor in the Department of Religious Studies at McMaster University, Hamilton, Canada. His works are The Sword and the Flute: Kāṇ and Kṛṣṇa, Dark Visions of the Temple and the Sublime in Hindu Mythology (California, 1975) and Hindu Goddesses (California, 1975).

KIRANĀVALI. A well-known Sanskrit comm. by Udayana (q.v.) on Praśastapāda's Pañārtha-dharma-saṅgraha (q.v.), a work on Vaiśeṣika philosophy.

KIRĀTARJUNĪYA. One of the five famous Sanskrit Mahakāvya, composed by Bhāravi (q.v.) in 18 cantos. The story, which is based on the Mahābhārata (III. 25-42), describes the combat between Arjuna and the god-Śiva, the latter in the garb of a Kirāta; this theme Bhāravi expanded and illustrated with all the resources of a refined and elaborate art.

The story opens with the deposed Pāṇḍavas in a forest. A spy, whom Yudhiṣṭhira has sent to report on the deeds of Duryodhana, brings the unwelcome news that the king is leading a virtuous life and captivating the hearts of his people. Draupadi, apprehensive of the future, taunts Yudhishthira and urges swift battle (i); Bhīma adds his support; Yudhishthira has scruples of honour (ii), but seeks counsel from the sage Vyāsa, who admits that there must be war, but since the enemy is so strong, suggests that Arjuna, by penance in the Himālayas, should win Indra's aid; a yaksha appears to lead Arjuna on his way (iii). The yaksha leads Arjuna on; a brilliant picture is drawn of the autumnal scene, partly in narrative and partly in the mouth of yaksha (iv). Then follows (v) the description of the Himālaya; yaksha disappears; Arjuna's penance on Indrakila terrifies the Guhyakas, who appeal to Indra to aid them, and he sends Gandharvas and Apsarases to disturb Arjuna's asceticism (vi); the celestial army reaches Indrakila and their elephants merit special description (vii). The Apsarases wander in the forest; the river Ganges invites them to the bath, and the bathing scene is described with much charm and beauty (viii). Night comes; the Apsarases and the Gandharvas drink and seek the pleasures of love (ix). The Apsarases, aided by the six seasons, try in vain their charms on the young ascetic (x); finally Indra reveals himself and bids Arjuna to win the favour of Śiva (xi). Arjuna continues his penance; a demon Mūka in boar form plans to slay him; therefore Śiva bids his host follow him to guard the ascetic (xii). The boar falls pierced by the arrows of Arjuna and Śiva; Arjuna advances to recover his arrow, but is challenged by a kirāta who claims it in his master's name (xiii). Śiva launches his army against Arjuna but in vain (xiv); the army is rallied from flight by Skanda, and Śiva himself begins a deadly battle of arrows with Arjuna (xv). Śiva and Arjuna fight with magic weapons, the hero is beaten (xvi), but grasps again his bow, and with sword, mighty rocks and the trunks of great trees, attacks Śiva, but all in vain (xvii). They box, at last they wrestle; Śiva reveals his true form, and the hero, humbled at last, praises the greatness of god and prays to him for strength and victory; Śiva and other gods accept his devotion and give him the Pāsupata weapon that he craves.

The poem "displays vigour of thought and language and lofty eloquence of expression. At the same time it evinces Bhāravi's attempts at the artificialities of the Chitrakāvya, and also several mannerisms which—unfortunately—are freely and zealously copied by later poets".—HCIP, III, 311. The poet gives charming pen-pictures of seasons and scenes as also of the sports and incidents of love, thus revealing his powers of observation and feeling; like Kālidāsa, he feels the sublimity of the Himālayas. Bhāravi is praised by Indian critics for depth of expression (artha-gaurava) in his kāvya but modern critics, especially of the West, denounce him as laboured and guilty of errors of taste.

KIRĀTĀRJUNIYA. A Sanskrit Vyāyoga by Vatsarja (q.v.).

KIRFEL, WILLIBALD (1885-1964). A German Indologist, who obtained a doctorate for his thesis (in German): "Contributions to the history of nominal compounds in the Upanishads and in the Epics". He worked on the Brahmin, Jaina and Buddhist concepts of cosmography and published Kosmographie der Inder (Indian Cosmography; 1920, reprint 1967). He was then appointed Professor in Bonn. Kirfel studied the Purāṇas extensively and pub. Das Purāṇa Pañchalakṣhaṇa (1927), in which he compared the 'Pañchalakṣhaṇas' in various Purāṇas and grouped them according to their relationship. He came to the conclusion that most of the Purāṇas have certain passages in common which belong to the oldest strata of this literature. In the course of over 30 years, he pub. many articles on Puranic subjects (in German), e.g., on the story of Kṛishṇa's childhood in the Purāṇas (1926), Bhārata-varsha, textual history of two geographical Purāṇa texts together with a translation (1931), the Purāṇa of the universe, Bhuvana-vinyāsa (1954), on the eschatology of world and life (1959).

Kirfel wrote books on the symbolism of Hinduism and Jainism (1959) and of Buddhism (1959). In his "The three-headed deity" he showed that three-headed deities are found in India and Mediterranean area. Together with his disciple, Hilgenburg, he tr. into German the Aṣṭāṅga-hṛdaya-Saṃhitā, a medical treatise. He also wrote Die welt des Orients (1947) and Das Purāṇa von Weltgebaude (Bonn, 1954). He inspired Hilgenburg to make a comparative study of the geographical material in the Mahābhārata and the Padma Purāṇa (pub., Stuttgart, 1933). Kirfel, who had been Professor of Indology in Bonn for 40 years, also wrote articles on his predecessors.

KĪRTIKAUMUDĪ. See Someśvaradatta.

KĪRTILATĀ. A poem in Pūrvi Avahattha (the latest stage of Apabhraṃśa) mixed with Maithili, by Vidyapati (q.v.). Divided into four sections, called Pallavas, and written in mixed prose and verse, it gives an account of the life and activities of the poet's patron, king Kīrtisinha (c. 1379) of Tirhut; the poem indicates the advent of modern linguistic tendencies. The poet appears to have been influenced by Sanskrit prose and erotic Sanskrit poems.

KĪRTI-PATĀKĀ. An Apabhraṃśa poem in dohās by Vidyapati (q.v.), describing the life and love of king Śivasinha of Mithilā.

KĪRTIRĀJA. A Jaina Sanskrit poet, whose poem, Neminātha-mahākāvya narrates the life of the Tirthankara Neminātha in 12 carṇas; the poem is replete with exquisite descriptions of the seasons, marriage, etc. He is the author also of a Prasasti, engraved in Parāvajinālaya in Jessalmir temple in 1417.

KITTEL, FERDINAND (1832-1903). A celebrated German Indologist, who is known for his monumental Kannada-English Dictionary (1894). He came to India as a Christian missionary. In the Sanskrit field, his works are : Knowledge of the Supreme Spirit (1863), Survey of the Vedic Polytheism and Pantheism (1868), A Tract on Sacrifice (1872) and On the Origin of the Liṅgam Cult (1876).

KIYOTA, M. An Indologist, whose special field of study is introduction to Buddhism and Buddhist Doctrinal Systems; he at present teaches in the University of Wisconsin, U.S.A.

KLATT, J. A modern Indologist, who ed. and tr. into German the Ṛishabha-pañchāsikā, a Jaina work; his Onomasticon (Specimen of a literary-biographical Onomasticon), Leipzig, 1892) was never completed.

KLEIN, JARED S. A modern American Indologist, who specialises in the Vedic and Classical Sanskrit. He at present teaches in the University of Georgia. He has written articles as "The Diachronic Syntax of the Particle u in the Ṛigveda", JAOS 98.3 (1978).

KLEIN, KURT. A German Indologist, who ed. only the first Prāpaṭhaka of the Shadvīṇṣa-brāhmaṇa, with extracts from Sāyaṇa's comm. and a German tr. in 1894.

KLOPPENBORG, M. A modern Dutch Indologist, who is working on Buddha Maṭreya in early and in Theravāda Buddhism and on a Pali comm. on the Anāgata-vaiṣṇava, the Amṛita-rasa-dhārā.

KNAUER, F. A German Indologist, who pub. for the first time Manava-srautasūtra (St. Petersburg, 1900 ff.); pub. with German tr. Gobhila-grihyasūtra (1884-86) and the Manava-grihyasūtra (1897).

KNIFE, D. An American Indologist, whose special field of study is the religions of India, studies in the Vedic tradition, Jainism, Vedic myths and rites; he at present teaches in the University of Wisconsin.

KNIZKOVA, HANA (1930-). A Czech art critic, who studies Indian art at the Neprstek Museum, Prague.

KOBAYASHI, TAKESHI. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is : Nara Buddhist Art : Todai ji.

KOCHCHUNNI TAMPURAN. See Goda Varma Yuvarāja.

KOEHLER, H.W. A modern German scholar, whose field of specialization is Indian history.

KOHALA. Traditionally a son of Mataṅga and an immediate disciple of Bharata (q.v.), he, according to Nāṭya-śāstra (XXVIII. 18) was to write a treatise on Prastāratānta; his Kohala-ruhasya and Saṅgītā-meru are on music. From a fragment Tūlādhyaya, which exists in manuscript form, it appears that though following Bharata generally, Kohala improved upon the Nāṭya-śāstra in details of classification. Cited by Abhinavagupta and commentators on Śārṅgadeva, the Abhinaya-śāstra, attributed to Kohala, may be part or an abridgement of his original work.

KOHALA-RAHASYA. A Sanskrit work on music by Kohala (q.v.), of which only the thirteenth chapter is extant; according to Krishnamachariar a complete manuscript exists.

KOHL, J.K. A German Indologist, who ed. the astronomical work, Sūryaprajñapti (Stuttgart, 1937); he gave the text in comparison with that of Jambudvīpa-prajñapti.

KOKILA-SANDEŚA. A Sanskrit poem by Uddanḍa (q.v.; fl. 14th or 17th cent.).

It is the message of a lover to his beloved at Calicut and is a very fine imitation of Meghadūta of Kālidāsa. The poem is said to have been composed in reply to a similar poem named Bhṛīṅga-sandeśa or Bhramara-dūta by Vāsudeva, another poet at Mānavikrama's court.

KOKILA-SANDEŚA. A Sanskrit poem by Varada (q.v.) or Nāyaṇāchārya.

KOKKAKA. See Kukkoka.

KOLHATKAR, Y.V. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Bhāgavatādarśu (in Marathi; Poona, 1921).

KOLLURI RĀJAŚEKHARA (fl. 1840). A South Indian Sanskrit writer, son of Venkaṭeśa, whose chief works are: Alaṅkāra-mukaranda (on Alaṅkāra with illustrations in praise of Rameśvara, ruler of Manna in Guntur District) and Sāhitya-kalpadruma (a work on poetics in 81 stabakas).

KOLVER, BERNHARD (1938-). A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Tulu Texts with Glossary (Studien zur Rājatarangiṇi des Kālhaṇa () and Verschiffene Präfixe im Altindischen (Wiesbaden, 1976).

KONOW, STEN (1867-1948). A Norwegian Indologist, who held positions in Germany and India. His chief works are: ed. and Eng. tr. of Karpūramañjarī (with C.R. Lanman), Corpus Inscriptionum Indicarum, Vol. II, Pt. II: Kharoshthī Inscriptions, with the exception of those of Aśoka (Calcutta, 1929), Excavations at Sarnāth (with John Marshall, 1908), The Aryan Gods of the Mittani People (1921), ed. and tr. in German, with notes, the Shāḍ-vimśa-brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda (1893), tr. into Eng. the Sāmavidhāna-brāhmaṇa (1893), also of the Sāmaveda, Religions of India

(Copenhagen, 1946; in collaboration with Tuxen) and a paper 'Home of Paisāchi (1910). He has admirably dealt with the problems of the Chronology of the Śakas. In the Vedic field, he is of the view that Vedic Indians must have destroyed the Indus Valley people about 3000 B.C., which must therefore be the date of a major portion of the Ṛigveda.

KOOIJ, K.R. VAN. A Dutch Indologist, who has pub. tr. of Kālikā-purāna (54-69; 1972) into Dutch; the work is on the worship of the goddess, Kālī. He is at present working on the 'Iconography of Hinduism and Buddhism in Nepal'.

KOPACKOVA, REGINA (1924-). A Czech art critic, who studies Indian art at the National Gallery, Prague.

KOPP, H. A modern Indologist, who has pub. Index to Samantapāsādikā (1977).

KORĀN. See Śrī Guṇḍe Rao Harkare.

KOSĀMBĪ, D.D. (1876-1947). A modern scholar, who along with V.V. Gokhale ed. Subhāshita-ratnakōśa, which has been pub. in the Harvard Oriental Series. See Woods. Kosāmbi has also produced a standard ed. of the Śatakatraya of Bhartṛhari as also an Eng. tr. of Avimaraka (with J.L. Masson); he wrote also introduction to History. He has laid the foundation of Pali studies in India; his scholarly activities in Calcutta, Poona, Ahmedabad, Benares are reflected in the series of pub. in Marathi, called Dharmānanda Smāraka Sahitya (Bombay, 1919 ff.).

KOSKENNIEMI, SEPPO. A Finnish Indologist, who, along with Asko Parpola and Simo Parpola, has made an extensive study of the Indus Script (Helsinki, 1973).

KOTSCHETOW, A.N. A Russian scholar whose chief study is 'Die buddhistische Forschung in der USSR' (Buddhist Yearly, Halle 1967).

KOTSHERGINA, V.A. A modern Russian Indologist, whose Sanskrit-Russian dictionary is coming out soon.

KRACHKOVSKY. A Russian scholar, who pub. the Russian tr. prepared by V.R. Roser of the Arabic version of the legend of the Balauhar and the Buddhasaf, under the title Povesti o Barlaame i Iosafe (Moskva-Leningrad, 1947).

KRAMADĪŚVARA (fl. 12th or 13th cent.). A grammarian and author of the Sanskrit grammar Saṅkshiptasāra (q.v.), the eighth and the last chapter of which is devoted to the treatment of Prakrit grammar. He was the founder of the Jaumara school of grammar and his Saṅkshiptasāra was revised by Mahārājadhīraja Jumarānandī, the most celebrated writer of the Jaumara school. Kramadīśvara was son of Chakrapāṇi and grandson of Śrīpati and was a native of West Bengal; he was styled Vādīndīa-chakra-chūḍāmani.

KRAMRISCH, STILLA. A well-known Indologist whose chief works are: Indian Sculpture (Calcutta, 1933), A Survey of Painting in Deccan (1937), Hindu Temples (2 Vols., 1947), The Art of India (London, 1954), Indian Sculpture (1960, describing the whole collection in the University of Pennsylvania Museum) and The Art of India Through the Ages; she also possesses privately a rare and choice collection of pieces of stone, bronze and paintings.

KRĪTĪ-ĪRANAM-ADBHUTAKATHĀH. A Sanskrit work in prose, which deals with the exploits of the heroes of 1857 freedom struggle, the work was pub. in Madhuravāṇī (Dhārwar).

KRAUSE, C. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Ancient Jaina Hymns (Ujjain, 1952).

KRETCHMER, P. A modern Indologist, who, on the basis of the Mitanni records thinks that Mitanni must have been the seat of Ur-Indians, and that several things must have been borrowed by them from the Hittites, and the Mitannians; Kretschmer considers in his works Indra and Varuṇa as the development of gods of the Ur-Indians; his works in German are: Zum Urserung des Gottes Indra and Indra und der Hettitische Gott Inaras.

KRICK. A modern Austrian Indologist, who is working at a project of studying and editing Richakas of the Kaṭha school.

KRIPĀRĀMA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Navya-dharma-pradīpa, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

KṚISHI-PARĀŚARA. A unique Sanskrit work on agriculture, ascribed to the sage Parāśara; the work is also called Kṛishi-saṅgraha, Kṛishi-paddhati or Kṛishi-tantra. It is perhaps the only work of its nature.

KṚISHṆABHAṬṬA. A Sanskrit poet, whose Īśvara-vilāsa-mahākāvya is a historically interesting poem dealing with the life of Sawai Īśvarasimha of Jaipur (r. 1723-52).

KṚISHṆABHAṬṬA ARDE (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Gadādharaṅkikā, a work on Nyāya philosophy.

KṚISHṆA CHAITANYA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Sanskrit Poetics (Bombay, 1965), A New History of Sanskrit Literature (comprehensive as well as critical, 1962), A Profile of Indian Culture and The Mahabharata : A Literary Study.

KṚISHṆACHANDRA TARKALĀṆKĀRA (fl. 18th cent. 'A.D.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Chandradūta, a poem on the model of Meghadūta (q.v.).

KṚISHṆA-CHARITA. See Agastya.

KṚISHṆACHITTĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit scholar, whose Brahma-vijñāna-bhāskara (Jamnagar, 1976-77) is a work on Kṛishṇa-bhakti according to the Nimbārka school.

KṚISHṆA DĀSA KAVIRĀJA (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, whose Govinda-līlāmṛita describes the life of Kṛishṇa and the legend of Rādhā.

KṚISHṆADATTA (fl. middle 18th cent.). A Sanskrit poet-dramatist of Mithilā, son of Sadārāma and Ānandadevi and author of Rādhā-rahasya (a poem in 22 long cantos, depicting the amours of Rādhā and Kṛishṇa), Gīta-gaṇapati (a poem imitating Gīta-govinda), Kuvalayāśvīyam (a seven-act drama depicting the love of Kuvalayāśva and Madālāsā), Purañjana-vijayam, also known as Purañjana-charita (based on the Purañjana-upākhyāna of the Bhāgavata) and Sāndrakutūhalam, a farce.

KṚISHṆADEVARĀYA (r. 1509-29). A Sanskrit dramatist, who was son of Narasa and Nāgāmba and brother of Vīranarasimha, of the Tuluva dynasty of Vijayanagar. He ascended the throne in succession to his brother and left behind a name in Indian history. He was a fine sportsman, graceful artist and versatile scholar. All South India was under his sway and under him were his feudatory chiefs, dispersed throughout his territories. Of his military exploits in wars against Ādilshāh, there are glorious accounts in contemporary chronicles. A great patron of art and literature, he was a great writer in Telugu and Sanskrit. His Sanskrit works are: Jāmbuvatī-kalyāṇa (a five-act drama on the story of Kṛiṣṇa's recovery of Syamantaka jewel, his victory over Jambuvant, and his marriage with the latter's daughter, Jambuvatī) and Ushā-pariṇaya (a drama on Ushā-Aniruddha episode). Other works mentioned in his Telugu poems are: Madhulasā-charitra, Satyavadhū-sāntvanā, Sakala-kathā-saṅgraha, Rasumañjarī (perhaps by a poet of his court) and Jñāna-chintāmaṇi.

KṚISHṆADHVARIN (fl. 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of Naishadha-pārijata, a poem dealing at one and the same time with the stories of Nala and Pārijata-harāṇa; his Raglanatha-bhīpalīya is on poetics, with illustrations in praise of his patron.

KṚISHṆAKĀNTA VIDYAVĀGIŚĀ (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Nyāya-ratnāvalī, Upanishad-chintāmaṇi-tikā and Śabdasaṅkīrti-prakāśikā-tikā, works on Nyāya philosophy.

KṚISHṆA-KARĀ ĪMRĪTA A Sanskrit poem by Kṛiṣṇa-līlāśuka or Bīlvamaṅgala (q.v.), which is a collection of devotional lyric stanzas in praise of Krishna. It exists in two recensions: the southern and western in three sections of more than 100 verses in each and the Bengal recension in one section with 112 verses.

KṚISHṆĀ KAUR. A Sanskrit poetess, whose Śravaṇa-kāvya (Lahore, 1935) deals with the early history of Sikhs. It is a long poem consisting of 16 cantos.

KṚISHṆA KAVI (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poet of Kerala, whose Bhārata-charita in 12 cantos deals with the well-known story of Śakuntalā. He has introduced a few innovations like a magic mirror, through which the hero can see any object in any part of the world and also make himself seen by anyone he wants. This acts as substitute for Kālidāsa's signet ring and it is through this that Dushyanta and Śakuntalā come to know each other.

KṚISHṆA KUMĀR (1925-). A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are a study in Hindi of Ambikādatta Vyasa, histories in Hindi of Vaidika-sāhitya and of Alaṅkāra-śāstra and ed. of some Sanskrit works; his latest pub. in Sanskrit is Udayana-charita (1981).

KṚISHṆA KUMAR DHAWAN. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work in Hindi is: Upanishadon mein kavya-tattva (poetic element in the Upanishads).

KṚISHṆA LĀL (1933-). A Sanskrit scholar, who is Professor in the Department of Sanskrit, Delhi University. His chief works are : Śiñjārava (1966), Urvāśvana (both collections of his original Sanskrit poems), Śatadala (a centum of free verses), Chamatkārah (a collection of nine Sanskrit Rīpakas; 1985), Anantamārga (Sanskrit short stories), Vandanā (a comm. in Hindi on 45 Vedic mantras; 1985), some essays in Sanskrit, Grihyamantra aur Unakā Vinīyoga (Hindi, research), Vaidika-saṅgraha (an anthology of Vedic hymns with critical notes), and a Survey of Vedic Studies in Hindi.

KṚISHṆA LILĀ. A Sanskrit poem by Madana (q.v.), composed in 1624.

It describes Kṛiṣṇa's separation from the Gopīs in 84 stanzas in yamaka style of Samasyā-pūrṇa type, taking one foot from Ghatakāpara (q.v.) in each stanza.

KṚISHṆA LILĀŚUKA See Līlāśuka.

KṚISHṆAMBHAJĪTA, S. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief work, Gāndhī-saptaka was pub. in the Amṛitavāṇī (1945), Bangalore.

KṚISHṆAMACHARIAR, M. A modern

Sanskrit scholar, whose monumental work History of Classical Sanskrit Literature (Madras, 1937) is an exhaustive work, surveying classical Sanskrit literature upto 1937.

KRISHNAMACHARLU, C.R. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Cradle of Indian History (Adyar, 1947).

KRISHNAMĀCHĀRYA (b. 1839). A Sanskrit writer, who hailed from Hosadurga in Chitradurga district of Karnataka. He was educated at Parakāla Mutt in Mysore, of which he became the Head in 1885. His best known work is Parakāla-guru-vijaya, a Champū named after his Guru. His works are more than 50 in number, among which are 10 works in the Champū style, a work each on astrology, grammar and rhetorics, three plays and a few works on Viśiṣṭādvaita philosophy. He was also the author of devotional panegyrics.

KRISHNAMACHĀRYA, R. (1869-1924). A Sanskrit writer, editor of Sahridayā, Śrīraṅgam and author of two monographs: Raghu-varṇa-vimarśa (1908) and Meghasandesa-vimarśa (1915; both literary criticisms); his critiques on Kālidāsa's poems are unique and well-known. He also pub. Vasantikā-svapna (Kumbhakoṇam, 1892), a rendering into Sanskrit of A Midsummer Night's Dream. Among his prose pieces are Pāṭivratya, Pūṇi-graṇa and Varuruchi. His Suśilā is a romance inculcating social morals on the standards of Hindu ethics.

KRISHNAMACHĀRYA, R.V. (b. c. 1874). A Sanskrit writer, who was in the Government College, Kumbhakoṇam. Editor of Sahridayā, Śrīraṅgam, he wrote comms. on Vāsavadattā, Priyadarśikā, Ratnāvalī, and on others, of which his comm. on Vāsavadattā has evoked much praise. He wrote Introductions to the Vāṇi Vilāsa editions of Meghasandesa, Kāvya-lankāra-sūtravṛtti, etc. and epitomised many others: Kādambarī, Harsha-charita and Tilaka-maṇjarī. Besides several works on grammar and logic, he prepared anthologies, composed rhetorical works, glosses on many works and wrote poems. His Vāṇi-vilāpa (Kumbhakoṇam, 1926) is a poem on the lamentable condition of the Sanskrit muṣe.

KRISHNAMANI TRIPĀTHI. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Purāṇa-paryālochana (2 Pts.); this collects together the 'Pañchalakṣhaṇa' from all the Purāṇas.

KRISHNAMISRA (fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit dramatist and author of the celebrated Prabodha-chandrodaya (q.v.), the earliest known allegorical drama. An ascetic of the Hamsa order, he was a follower of Śaṅkara and missionary for the propagation of Advaita doctrines. With the apparent exterior of erotic ideas, it dramatises the supreme truth of Advaita Vedānta and ridicules the tenets of other schools of philosophy; the characters are personifications of abstractions. The prologue to the play mentions the victories of king Kīrtivarmaṇ of the Chandel dynasty and his general Gopāla over the armies of Chedi king Karpadeva: Kīrtivarmaṇ ruled between 1049 and 1100 and his victory over Karpadeva was about 1065. The play was written at the instance of Gopāla.

KRISHNAMOORTHY, K. (1923-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are critical editions of unpublished Sanskrit literary works : Yaśodhara charita by Vādirāja, Subhāṣita-sudhānidhi by Sāyaṇa and Eng. tr. with ed. of Dhvanyāloka and Vakroktijīvita. His other works in English are : Dhvanyāloka and its Critics (1968), Essays in Sanskrit Criticism (1964) and Studies in Indian Aesthetics and Criticism (1979). He also wrote two monographs on Kālidāsa and Bāṇabhaṭṭa.

KRISHNAMŪRTI (fl. 19th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who composed only one verse in Anuṣṭup metre called Kaṅkaṇa-bandha-rāmāyana, which conveys 64 meanings if read in a particular order. These meanings had to be explained by the poet himself.

KRISHṆAMŪRTI, G. A. Bezwādā lawyer, who tr. into Sanskrit the Constitution of Free India, as passed by the Constituent Assembly upto 8-1-1949.

KRISHṆAMŪRTI ŚĀSTRĪ, K.S. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief works are: Prakṛiti Vilāsa (Madurai, 1950; including several descriptions of Nature) and an elaborate poem on Mahātma Gāndhī, entitled Bhārata-bhāgya-viparyaya (serially published in the Madhurvāṇī, Dharwar).

KRISHṆAMŪRTI ŚĀSTRĪ, K.V. A modern Sanskrit poet of Poona in whose Śunakadūta (1956), a thief in jail pleads with a dog to go as a messenger to his beloved; he also composed Matkunāṣṭaka; eight verses on the bug.

KRISHṆAN NAIR, P.V. A modern Sanskrit writer, who rendered into Sanskrit the Rubāiyat of Omar Khayyam under the title Madirotsava (Trichur, 1945).

KRISHṆĀNANDA (fl. 13th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, whose Sahṛidayānanda in 15 cantos treats of the story of Nala-Damayanti.

KRISHṆĀNANDA ĀGAMAVĀGĪŚA. A native of Navadvīpa in Bengal, who flourished some time after 1577. He is the author of the celebrated Tantra-sāra (q.v.), a digest on Tantra. He is the greatest figure in the history of the Tantra literature of Bengal and his work is considered as an authority in the whole of northern India.

KRISHNA PRASADA ŚARMĀ GHIMIRE.

A Sanskrit poet of Kathmandu, Nepal, whose Śrīrāma-vilāpa (1983) is a short poem, divided into two sections containing 81 and 89 verses respectively. This charming poem deals with the lamentations of Rāma on his separation from Sītā in the forest.

KRISHṆAN TAMPY, V. (1890-1938). A Sanskrit dramatist of Kerala, who was Principal of Sanskrit College, Trivandrum. His three plays in Sanskrit (Pratikriyā, Vanajyotsnā, Dharmasya-sūksmāgati), pub. from Trivandrum in 1924 take historical romantic themes of Rājput-Muslim times. These plays of contemporary and social interest are expressive of new trends in theme and form. See Unni, N.P.

KRISHṆARĀMA (fl. 1900). A Sanskrit poet of Jaipur, whose chief works are: Jayapura-vilāsa, Kachchhavanīśa (both on the greatness of the rulers of Jaipur), Sāra-śataka (a poetic epitome of several important Sanskrit works), Lulandu-śataka (a century of verses on Onion) and Chhandaśchatāmardana (on metrics).

KRISHNA RAO, M.N.V. A modern scholar, whose chief work is : Indus Script Deciphered.

KRISHNA RAO, C.R. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Śrī-Mādhva: Life and Teachings, pub. from Madras.

KRISHNA ŚARMĀ, E.R. A Sanskrit scholar, who has edited the catalogue (2 vols., 1976-77) of the collection of palm-leaf MSS. numbering about 3,000 presented to the Adyar Library, Madras by Shantiniketan.

KRISHNA ŚĀSTRY, HOSAKOTE (1877-1928). Editor of Epigraphia Indica, he was expert in Numismatics also. He also authored a book on the images of deities in South India.

KRISHNA UNNI, N.D. A modern Sanskrit writer, who has rendered into chaste Sanskrit the Jñānappana, a classical Malayalam philosophical poem of the 16th cent. poet, Pīnthanam. He has also tr. into Sanskrit two important Malayalam works : Harināma-kīrtanam ascribed to Tunchat Ezuttachhan and Ātmopadeśa-śataka of Śrī Nārāyaṇa Guru.

KṚISHṆA VALLABHĀCHĀRYA. A modern scholar, whose chief work Tattvaprabhāvali is on the Swami Nārāyaṇa School.

KṚISHṆA VARIER, A.V. A Sanskrit author of Mālā (Trichur, 1949) on the Mahārāja of Cochin, who was a distinguished Sanskrit scholar.

KṚISHNA WARRIER, A.G. A modern Sanskrit scholar of Kerala, whose chief works are : God in Advaita and Keraliya-Sanskrit-sāhitya-darpana (The Mirror of Sanskrit Literature of Kerala) which makes a brief survey of the stotra literature in Kerala.

KṚISHNAYYA, V. A Sanskrit scholar, who ed. the Rigveda with a Canarese tr. (1913-15).

KṚITYA-CHINTĀMAṆI. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Chanḍeśvara (q.v.), which deals with auspicious times for the performance of religious ceremonies and sacraments.

KṚITYA-CHINTĀMAṆI. A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest by Vāchaspati Miśra (q.v.), which deals with festivals celebrated during the year.

KṚITYA-KALPATARU. An extensive Smṛiti digest by Lakshmīdhara (q.v.), divided into 14 Kāṇḍas and was probably composed in the first quarter of the 12th century.

The work occupies a unique position among digests and exercised considerable influence over the early Smṛiti writers of Mithilā, Bengal, and Northern and Western India. Composed according to a well-conceived plan, no other digest attempts such a logical and comprehensive presentation of the Smṛiti material.

The fourteen Kāṇḍas are: (1) Brahmachāri (duties of the boy upto the end of his student-ship); (2) Gṛihastha (duties of a householder); (3) Āhnikā (on daily ritual); (4) Śrāddha (on offerings to the manes); (5) Dāna (encyclopaedic treatment of gifts); (6) Pratishṭhā (consecration of images); (7) Pūjā (on worship); (8) Tirtha (on pilgrimage to holy places); (9) Vrata (on various vows); (10) Śuddhi (on purificatory rites); (11) Rājadharmā (on duties of kings); (12) Vyavahāra (civil law and procedure); (13) Śānti (on attaining peace of mind), and (14) Vīramitrodaya (dealing with moksha).

KṚITYA-RATNĀKARA. A voluminous Sanskrit Smṛiti digest in 22 chapters or Taraṅgas by Chanḍeśvara (q.v.), which forms part of his Smṛiti-ratnākara (q.v.). The work deals with the performance of Vratas.

KṚIYĀ-KAUMUDĪ. A Sanskrit Smṛiti work of Govindānanda (q.v.), mentioned in the Āhnikā-tatva of Raghunandana (q.v.); its incomplete manuscript is available.

KRÖHN, SVEN ILMARI (1903-). An eminent Finnish Indologist, who was Professor of Philosophy, Turun Yliopistor (1966-70). He is Emeritus Professor of Philosophy at the University of Turku. His chief works are : Der Logische Empirismus (vol. I, 1949, vol. II, 1950), Definitionsfrage und Wirklichkeitsfrage (1953), "The Problem of the Validity of Values" (1954), Die Normative Wertethik (1958), Totuus, arvo ja ihminen (Truth, Value and Man ; 1967), Ihminen, luonto ja logos (Man, Nature and Logos ; 1981) and articles on Indian philosophy among others : "The Problem of Reality in the Upanishads, Buddhist Philosophy" (1952), "Śāṅkaran Advaita-vedānta" (1964), "Main Schools of Indian Philosophy" (1966), "Radhakrishnan" (1966) and "Arkseläjan" (1976). All his works and articles have been written in Finnish. For World Perspectives on Swami Dayananda Saraswati (ed. Ganga Ram Garg), he wrote: "Jivatman in the Context of Dayananda".

KROM, N.J. (1883-1945). A Dutch Indologist, who revealed Indian cultural achievements in Indonesia; his works are : Archaeological Description of Barabudur (2 Vols., The Hague, 1927), Inleiding Tot de Hindoe Javaansche Kunst (revised 3 Vols., 1923) and The Life of Buddha on the Stupa of Barabudur (The Hague, 1926).

KSHAMĀDHARA SIMHA SARMĀ. A Sanskrit poet, whose Surata-charitam (1967) deals with the life of a Puranic character.

KSHAMĀ RĀO, MRS. (1890-1953). A Sanskrit poetess, whose works on Mahātmā Gandhi are : Satyāgraha-gītā (Paris, 1932), Uttara-satyāgraha-gītā (1949), and poems on Jñāneśvara, Tukārāma, Rāmādāsa, and Mīrā (Mīrā-laharī), describing their lives (1944-53). Śaṅkara-jīvanākhyāna (Bombay, 1939) is a verse biography of her father, the distinguished Sanskrit research scholar Śaṅkara Paṇḍuranga Paṇḍita. Kathā Pañchaka (1933) in Anuṣṭubh verses, is a collection of five stories; originally written in English and then tr. by her into Sanskrit, her themes are social reform, child-marriage, early widowhood, etc. Her stories are written in the modern western technique, yet are based on Indian life and the problems of the day. She also wrote essays, e.g., 'Vichitra Parishad Yātrā' (Journey to a Curious Assembly), which are noted for their forceful language and practical outlook. The Kathāmuktāvalī (Bombay, 1954) is a collection of 15 stories of hers, pub. after her death; her Grāma-jyoti presents three stories of Gujarat villages during civil disobedience days. She wrote also some social reform plays, e.g., Bāla-vidhavā (pub. 1955; in three Acts on the young widow) and Katuvdaipāka (pub. 1955) on the sacrifice during Satyāgraha days.

KSHAṆABHAṆGA-SIDDHI. A Sanskrit work on Nyāya philosophy by the Buddhist philosopher Ratnakīrti (q.v.), which, as the title indicates, seems to establish the momentariness of things.

KSHATRACHŪPĀMAṆI. A Sanskrit poem by the Jain poet Oḍeyadeva (q.v.), which treats of the Uttarapurāṇa legend of Jivandhara in 11 chapters, mostly in Śloka metre. The poem is said to be, in most places, a Sanskrit rendering of the Tamil work, Jīvaka-chintāmaṇi.

KSHEMAKARANA DĀSA TRIVEDI (1848-1939). A Vedic scholar, who was born at the village Shahpur in the Aligarh district of Uttar Pradesh. His chief works are the Hindi trs. of Atharvaveda (1912-21) and of Gopatha-brāhmaṇa (1924).

KSHEMAṆKARA (fl. early 14th cent.). A Sanskrit author of the Jaina recension of Simhāsana-dvātrimśikā (q.v.), which is a prose version, with verses at the beginning and end.

KSHETRA RĀJA (fl. 11th cent.). A Kashmiri-Sanskrit writer, pupil of Abhinavagupta and author of Pratyabhijñā-hṛidaya, a comm. on the Śiva-sūtra of Vasugupta. See Spandakārikā.

KSHEMENDRA (surnamed Vyāsādāsa, fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, son of Prakāśendra and grandson of Sindhu. He was a polymath and a court-poet of king Ananta of Kashmir, but his literary activity extended also to the period of Kalaśa, son and successor of Ananta. He composed the Bhārata-mañjarī and Rāmāyaṇa-mañjarī (qq.v.; epitomes of the Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaṇa), Padya-Kādambarī (metrical rendering of Bāṇa's Kādambari). His Daśavatāra-charita (q.v.) describes the ten incarnations of Viṣṇu, while Chitrabhārata, no longer extant, is a drama. His Bṛihatkāthā-māñjarī (q.v.) is a metrical version of the Bṛihatkāthā. His two works on poetics are the Kavi-kaṇṭhābharana and the Auchitya-vichāra-charchā (qq.v.; the latter being more well-known). His work on prosody is called Suṣṛitta-tilaka (q.v.), while Chaturvarga-saṅgraha (q.v.) is a poetical work in four chapters. Among his satirical and didactic works, the noteworthy ones are: Kalā-vilāsa, Deśopadeśa, Samaya-māṭrikā, Sevya-sevakopadeśa, Avadāna-kalpa-lavā, Naramamālā, Darpa-dalana and Chāru-charyā (qq.v.). Several works of his, referred to in his works, have not yet been discovered.

KSHEMENDRA (fl. probably 16th cent.). A Sanskrit author of a comm. on the Sārasvata (q.v.) vyākaraṇa.

KSHEMISVARA. A Sanskrit dramatist and author of the Chāṇḍakaśika and the Naishadhānanda (qq.v.). According to a verse in the Prologue, the Chāṇḍakaśika was composed under king Mahipāla, who is sometimes identified with Mahipāla of Bengal, but who in reality was Mahipāla Bhuvanaikamalla of Kānyakubja (9th-10th cent.). The dramatist's grandfather also was a learned man.

KSHEMRESHCHANDRA CHATTOPĀDHYĀYA. A modern Vedic scholar, whose chief works are pub. under different titles, of which the first one is entitled Studies in Vedic and Indo-Iranian Religion and Literature. Subsequently, two Volumes appeared, the 1st Volume relating to Vedic Religion and Vedic History and the 2nd dealing with Vedic Chronology and Indo-Iranian Studies; both these vols. are ed. by Vidya Niwas Mīśra. Chattopādhyāya holds that the Rigveda contains material from the oldest to the latest Vedic period and that Indra was originally only a god of war and victory. He discussed also a number of Vedic words. On the basis of Vedic, epic and Purāṇic texts, Chattopādhyāya has shown that Vedic orthodoxy looked upon suicide with abhorrence, which was considered meritorious by non-Vedic ascetics. Later on, Vedic orthodoxy compromised with the common culture of the land and approved of the religious suicide at Prayāg.

KSHETRA-TATTVA-DĪPIKĀ. A Sanskrit work on geometry, written in 1823 by Ilattur Ramasvāmī Śāstrī.

KSHETRA-TATTVA-DĪPIKĀ. Name of a similar work (1828) by Yogadhyāna Mīśra

KSHIRASVĀMIN. Author of the oldest and most important Sanskrit comm. Amaraśodhāṇa on the Amara-kośa (q.v.). A native of Central India, he appears to have flourished in the second half of the 11th cent., but according to some, he was son of Śvaraśvāmin and flourished in Kashmir in the 8th century. He is the author of Dhātuvṛtti, a comm. on Pāṇiniya Dhātupāṭha as also appears to have commented on a few other grammatical works; Avyayavṛtti, Nipātavyayopasarga and Kṣhīra-taraṅgiṇī (a sort of comm. on Dhātupāṭha of Pāṇini) are also attributed to him.

KUBER NĀTH SUKUL. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who is known for his work : Vārāṇasi Vaibhava (1977; a work in Hindi on the glory of Kashi.)

KUBEROPĀDHYĀYA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Dattaka-chandrikā, a work on Dharmaśāstra.

KUHN, ADALBERT (1812-89). A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Zur ältesten Geschichte der-Indo-germanischen Völker

(1845), Die Herabkunft des Feuers und des Göttertranks (Gutersloh, 1859; tracing among the various Indo-European peoples, of a common pantheon of gods and on common mythology), Mythologische Studien (2 Vols., Gutersloh, 1886-1912). Kuhn believes that as the Indo-European peoples had a common language, they also had not a few religious and mythological concepts (as also customs and manners) in common. He seems to think of the Vedic mythology not as an 'Indian' mythology, but merely as an aspect of the boundless Indo-European mythology. All that the Vedas do for him is to provide materials for comparison.

KUHN, ERNST (1846-1920). A German Indologist, who was son of Adalbert Kuhn (q.v.). Ernst Kuhn was Professor of Indology at Muenchen. He specialized in linguistics and took an interest in Buddhist and Christian legends. In 1875, he published Beiträge zur Pali Grammatik (Contributions to Pali Grammar), which was considered a standard work for several decades. In 1893, he brought out (in German) "Barlaam and Josaph. A Study in Bibliography and Literary History", in which he discussed the relationship between Buddhist and Christian legends and compared versions with each other, to show how legends were taken over by Western tradition. He contributed many articles to the "Journal for Comparative Linguistics", which his father had edited for many years. Among the articles are the oldest Aryan vocabulary in Singhalese, origin and language of the trans-gangetic peoples and contributions to the linguistics of Further India.

KUIPÉR, F.B.J. A Dutch Indologist, whose chief work is Proto-Munda Words in Sanskrit (1948); he specialises in Vedic linguistics and Vedic and Iranian comparative studies. He is at present working on a structural interpretation of Vedic mythology.

KUKKOKA. See Rati-rahasya.

KULACHŪPĀMANI. A celebrated Sanskrit Tantric work of the Kaulas, in which Devī proclaims doctrines and Siva listens as a pupil.

KULĀRṆAVA-TANTRA. A principal Sanskrit Tantric work in 17 chapters and consisting of over 2000 verses. Probably composed before 1000, it teaches that there are six forms of conduct (āchāra), which are only an introduction to Kulāchāra and that release from suffering and attainment of the highest salvation can only be achieved through Kulāchāra or Kula-dharma. The work belongs to the Kaulas, the most advanced of the Śāktas.

KULAŚĒKHARA (fl. c. 925). A Sanskrit poet and author of the Mahāśūdamālā (q.v.), a hymn in honour of Viṣṇu. The author very probably is different from the patron of Vāsudeva (q.v.), the author of the Yudhishṭhira-vijaya.

KULĀŚĒKHARA. A Sanskrit dramatist and a king of Kerala, whom De places between the first half of the 10th and first half of the 12th centuries. He composed the Tapatī-saṁvāna (a drama dealing in 6 Acts with the legend of Kaurava king Saṁvarana and Tapatī the daughter of the Sun-god) and Subhadra-dharmāñjaya (a drama in 5 Acts dealing with the marriage of Arjuna and Subhadra).

KULKARNI, C.M. A Sanskrit scholar, who has edited Rājavyavahāra-kośa (1911), a Persian-Sanskrit dictionary compiled by Dhundhirāja Vyāsa at the instance of Śivājī.

KULKARṆI, DIGAMBARA MAHĀDEVA. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief work Dhārayaśo-dhārāh (Satara, 1952) is a poem on the glories of the capital of Bhoja, which was one of the cultural centres of ancient India.

KULKARNI, V.M. A scholar, whose chief study is the Introduction to the second ed. of Paumachariya (Varanasi, 1962).

KULKE, HERMANN (1938-). A German Indologist, who ed. Hermann Goetz's Studies in the History, Religion and Art of Classical and Mediaeval India (1974); his other work is Jagannātha-Kult und Gajapati-Königtum, -- .

KULLŪKA BHATṬA (fl. between 1150 and 1300). Son of Divākara Bhaṭṭa, he was a native of Varendri in Bengal and was the author in Sanskrit of Manvartha-muktāvalī (q.v.), the most famous of the comms. on the Manu-smṛiti (q.v.). Some scholars think that he also wrote Smṛiti-sūgara, a Smṛiti digest.

KUMĀRA. Same as Kārtikeyasvāmī (q.v.).

KUMĀRADĀSA. Also known as Kumāra-bhaṭṭa or Bhaṭṭakumāra, he was a Sanskrit poet, was a great admirer of Kālidāsa and very freely imitated him in manner as well as in general treatment of the subject. He was probably earlier than Māgha, who seems to echo a verse of his. According to a Ceylonese tradition, he was a king of Ceylon (c. 517-26); some scholars think that he flourished between c. 675 and 775. He is the author of the Jānakī-haraṇa (q.v.), a poem describing the story of the abduction of Sītā by Rāvaṇa. See Swāmināthan, C.R.

KUMĀRALĀTA (fl. probably 2nd cent.). A Sanskrit author of Kalpanā-maṇḍitikā (q.v.) or Sūtrāṅkārā, which according to some, is the work of Aśvaghoṣa.

KUMĀRAPĀLA-CHARITA. A historical kāvya, dealing with the life of Chālukya king Kumārapāla of Anhilvāḍ (Anahilapāṭaka) including his encounter with Mallikārjuna. The poem is also entitled Dvyāśraya-kāvya, either because it is written both in Sanskrit (cantos i-xx) and Prakrit (cantos xxi-xxviii) or because the work, besides being a history, also serves the purpose of illustrating the rules of author's grammar: Siddha-hemachandra-śabdānuśāsa; there are several Apabhraṁśa verses in it. It gives an account of the rulers of Anhilvāḍ, bringing it down to the time of Kumārapāla and is valuable for the history of Chālukyas of Gujarat. The last two chapters of the work are written in various Prakrit dialects like Śauraseni, Māgadhī, Paisācī and Apabhraṁśa. See Hemachandra.

KUMĀRAPĀLA-CHARITA. A Prakrit poem by Somaprabhāchārya (q.v.).

KUMĀRAPĀLA-PRATIBODHA. A Prakrit champū by Somaprabhāchārya (q.v.), written in 1185. Consisting of five sections called Prastāva, it enumerates various kings of the Chālukya dynasty and contains a dialogue between king Kumārapāla and his teacher Hemachandra on the precepts of Jainism which led to initiation of Kumārapāla to Jainism. Some parts of the work are written in Sanskrit and Apabhraṁśa; other titles of the work appear to be Jinadharmā-pratibodha and Hemakumāra-charitra.

KUMĀRASAMBHAVA. A Sanskrit Mahākāvya by Kālidāsa (q.v.) in eight cantos, in which the finest gems of poetry are found.

It describes the circumstances that led to the birth of Kumāra who led the celestial forces and defeated the demon Tāraka. The poem begins with a brilliant piece of description of the Himālaya, the abode of Śiva; Śiva, sunk in deepest meditation, sits and on him with other maidens waits Umā (Pārvatī), born of the mountain-god himself, plucking flowers to offer to him, and fetching water and grass for his service. Canto ii shows us that oppressed by the demon Tāraka, the gods seek the aid of Brahmā, who directs them to bring about the marriage of Śiva and Pārvatī which will result in the birth of a son to kill the demon; Indra then seeks the aid of Kāma, god of love, to win Śiva's heart for Umā. Canto iii shows Kāmadeva ready and willing to effect the end desired if Spring will be his comrade as well as his own wife, Rati; Kāma approaches Śiva but the sight of Śiva quails his heart. But Umā with her friends appears, and Śiva is begged to hearken to their devotions; he feels himself strangely moved, and glancing sees Kāma on the point of discharging at him his deadly arrow; one fiery glance from the god's eye reduces him to ashes. Then follows (iv) the lament of Rati for her dead husband; she will not accept the consolation urged on her by Spring; instead she bids him heap the pyre so that she may follow him in death. But a voice from on high assures her of reunion with her husband when Śiva shall have relented and taken Umā to spouse. In sorrowful hope, Rati continues her life.

Despite her disappointment, Umā determines to perform severe asceticism until she wins her desire; as she is engaged in these acts, a hermit appears and questions her; from her sighs he learns that she loves, and from her maids who that lover is. He proceeds to depict in appalling colours the god of her desire, but she fiercely and bitterly rebukes his attacks; delighted he reveals himself as Śiva incarnate (vi). The Seven Seers themselves with Arundhatī come as wooers from Śiva to seek the maiden's hand (vi); the wedding follows, described with rich abundance of detail (vii). Then follows (viii) the description of the joys of the wedded pair.

It is held that owing to the criticism levelled against Kalidāsa for having described the pleasures of the divine pair, he did not write beyond the eighth canto. An attempt was made by a later writer, who found the title inadequate as applied to the eight cantos, and composed nine more cantos in continuation of the eight cantos. They tell of the god Agni's approach, first in dove shape, then in his proper person, to Śiva, begging his aid, as he prolongs for centuries the joys of dalliance. From the seed of Śiva, cast in the Ganges and shared by the six Kṛittikās, Kumāra or Kārtikeya is miraculously born. But the gods are in terror as the city of the gods is dismayed through Tāraka; Indra comes to demand help; Śiva grants his prayer and assigns Kumāra to the task. The great host of Tāraka is described in Canto xiv; then are described the portents which warn him not to go to war (xv). Blinded by pride he refuses; the demon bids his young opponent go back to his father and mother rather than fight, assails him with his whirlwinds and magic fire, until pierced to the heart by Kumāra he falls dead. Commentators like Mallinātha have commented only on the first eight cantos of the poem, and one of them has recorded the belief that the poem was left incomplete owing to the curse of Pārvatī whose anger was provoked by the descriptions in Canto viii.

The poet "has displayed considerable skill in delineating the main characters and the poem contains several passages of enchanting beauty, such as the Rati-vilāpa, the conversation between Umā and Śiva in the guise of a Jaṭila, the description of the Himālaya in Canto i, and of the sudden advent of spring in Canto iii. The poet, however, has exposed himself to criticism at the hands of rhetoricians like Ānandavardhana by indulging in what may be called sacrilegious description in the eighth Canto".—HCIP III, 305-6.

KUMĀRASAMBHAVA. A Sanskrit poem by Udbhaṭa (q.v.), which is extant only in illustrations quoted in his Alaṅkāra-sāra-saṅgraha (q.v.).

KUMĀRA TĀTĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit writer of Tirupati, rājaguru of Raghunātha (r.1600-32) and his son, Vijayarāghava Nāyaka of Tanjore and author of Pārijāta-haraṇa (a drama in five Acts on bringing celestial flowers by Kṛishṇa from Indra's heaven).

KUMĀRA-VYĀKARAṆA (Kaumāra-vyākaraṇa). Another name of Kātantra (q.v.).

KUMĀRILA BHATṬA (fl. 7th cent.). A South Indian Sanskrit writer, founder of the Bhaṭṭa school of Mīmāṃsā and author of Śloṭa-vārtika, Tantra-vārtika and Tupṭikā (qq.v.). All these works form his comm. on the Śabara-bhāṣya of Jaimini's Mīmāṃsā-sūtra (q.v.). A great Mīmāṃsā philosopher and representative of Brahmanical orthodoxy, he attacked the Buddhist and Jainistic logicians, including the prominent teachers Samantabhadra and Akalanka (qq.v.) whilst Prabhāchandra and Vidyānanda (qq.v.) defended their co-religionists against Kumārila.

KUMBHA (or Kumbhakarṇa). Ruler of Mewar at Chittorgarh (acc. 1433), whose chief works in Sanskrit are: Saṅgīta-rāja (q.v.) and Rasika-priyā (comm. on Jayadeva's Gita-govinda; q.v.).

KUNĀRAVĀḌAVA. An ancient Sanskrit grammarian referred to by Patañjali in his Mahābhāṣya (q.v.).

KUNDAKANDA (fl. early centuries of the Christian era). The most celebrated of the Digambara Jaina authors, who belonged to Koṇḍakunda, a place in South India. His original name was Padmānandī, but he was called Kundakanda after the name of the place he lived. Other traditional names given to him are: Elāchīrya, Vakragriva, etc.; he was pupil of Bhadrabāhu. His Pañchās-ikāya and Pravachana-sāra are systematic compositions of Jaina ontology and epistemology; his Samayasāra (q.v.) is full of spiritual fervour. He is said to have written as many as 83 or 84 works called Pāhudas (Prābhṛitas) of which, Shatprabhṛitas is important. All these works have been composed in the Jaina Śaurasenī Prakrit and are in the usual Gāthā metre.

KUNDAMĀLĀ. A Sanskrit play in six Acts, dealing with the exile of Sītā, her discovery and reunion with Rāma; it appears to be of earlier than 5th cent. A.D. The play has been variously attributed to Dhiranāga (q.v.), Dīn-nāga, Viranāga, Ravināga and Nāgayya.

KUNDAN LAL SHARMĀ (d. 1983). A Sanskrit scholar of Muzaffarnagar (U.P.), who had a plan to publish a comprehensive history of Vaidika literature in Hindi. So far two works under this project have been published; these are Kalpasūtra (1981) and Vedāṅga (1983).

KUNHAN RĀJA, CHITTENJORE (d. 1963). A famous Sanskrit scholar, who was Director of the Adyar Library, Madras. His chief works are: Survey of Sanskrit Literature (comprehensive and critical; 1963), Sanskrit renderings of Rāmapāṇivāda's two Prakrit poems: Kaṁsa-vadha and Ushāniruddham, ed. of Rāmapāṇivāda's comm. on Vararuchi's Grammar (Adyar, 1946; jointly with K.R. Sharma), a study on Kālidāsa, Indian Philosophy, Sanskrit Literature of Mohamed Dāra Shukoh (1943), Sāṅkhya-kārikā (ed., 1963), Kādambarī (ed.), Poet-Philosophers in the Rigveda (1963), Quintessence of the Rigveda (1964), and Asya Vāmasya Hymn (a study of this Sūkta). He also ed. a comm. of Mādhva (different from V. Mādhava) on the Rigveda, as far as it has become available and ed. Sāmveda with the comms. of Mādhav and Bharatsvāmin (Adyar, 1941). His Bhārata-rāshṭra-saṅghaṭana (1948) is a draft tr. in Sanskrit of some sections of the Constitution of free India.

KUNHEN VARIER. See Rāmavarmā-vijaya.

KUÑJUNNI RĀJĀ, K. See Rājā, K. Kuñjunni.

KUÑNIKKUṬṬAN TAMPURĀN (1865-1913). A Prince of Cranganore, he is famous as 'Kerala Vyāsa' since he tr. the whole text of the Mahābhārata into Malayalam in a short period. He is author of several Sanskrit dramas, stotras and lyrics of extraordinary charm. He wrote also in Sanskrit a biography of Śaṅkarācārya.

KUNST, ARNOLD. A modern Polish Indologist, who has ed. Nāgārjuna's Vigrahavyāvartanī with the author's comm. (Mélanges chinois et bouddhiques, 9, 1951). On the problems of Indian logic, he has pub. Probleme der buddhistischen Logik in der Darstellung des Tattvasaigraha (1939).

KUNTALA or KUNTAKA (fl. latter half of the 10th cent.). A Kashmirian Sanskrit author and perhaps the mightiest of the critics of the Dhvani school of Ānandavardhana (q.v.). He is the founder of a new theory called Vakrokti (striking or charming mode of expression), which he held as the essence of poetry. His Vakrokti-Jivita (q.v.) explaining his theory, is in four parts. Kuntaka quotes Ānandavardhana, Rudraṭa, and Rājasekhara, and is himself quoted by Mahimabhaṭṭa.

KUPPUSWAMI, A. (1911-). A Sanskrit scholar of Tiruchirapalli, whose chief works are : Bhagavatpāda Śaṅkarācārya (1972; a research biography in English), critical ed. of Saundaryalaharī of Śaṅkarācārya (with 9 Sanskrit comms. and notes, 1976), "South Indian Mahāmahopādhyayas" (in Tamil; 1977), and ed. of Bhagavat Gītā (with the 21st of commentaries; 1982, in English). He is Secretary of the Sanskrit Sahitya Parishad.

KUPPUSWAMI SASTRI, S. (b. 1880). A well-known Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Śrī Bhagavatpāda Śaṅkarācārya, a commentary on Dhvanyāloka, Hindu Philosophy with Special Reference to the Nyāya Vaiśeṣika Systems, Indian Epistemology, Methods and Material of Literary Criticism, The Prabhākara School of Karma-mīmāṃsā, Indian Theism, The Philosophy and Exegetics of the Mīmāṃsā System, Highways and Byeways of Sanskrit Literary Criticism and Purāṇism in Indian Thought. The Kuppuswami Sastri Research Institute, Madras is named after him.

KŪRMA-(KAURMA-) PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

KURRUKKAL, M.A. A Sanskrit writer of Kerala, who has tr. into Sanskrit Kumāraśān's Malayalam poem as Chintāviśhṭā Sītā (1979).

KUSUMADEVA (fl. 13th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of the Drishṭānta-śataka, which derives its title from the fact that every stanza illustrates a particular maxim. The work is cited by Vallabhadeva in his Subhāshitāvalī (q.v.) and is simple and unpretentious.

KUSUMĀṆJALĪ. Same as Nyāya-kusumāṇ-jalī (q.v.).

KUSUMA RAKSHMANI (Mrs.). A modern Thai Indologist, who has done her research on the Southern version of the Tantropākhyāna.

KUṬADANTA-SUTTA. Fifth Sutta of Dīghanikāya (q.v.).

KUTTAMATHU KUNJAMPU KURUP (1856-1911). A Sanskrit writer, who in his Indrasabhā (Assembly of Indra), a champu, satirizes the life of the people in Modern Kerala. It is in the form of a discussion among Indra, Bāli, Nārada and Bṛihaspati.

in the celestial assembly.

KUṬṬANIMATA. A Sanskrit poem by Dāmodaragupta (q.v.), which is erotic-comic and satiric. A highly interesting small didactic work, it is a sort of a manual for the guidance of the hetaerae. The book shows how a young girl should win gold for herself by the use of all the arts of flattery and feigned love, while preserving throughout a mere desire for wealth.

A courtesan in Benares, failing to attract lovers, seeks the advice of an experienced bawd. The latter instructs her to ensnare a rich young man and describes in detail the cunning act of winning love and gold. The work is full of stories in illustration and is a practical treatise in the art; the whole story of the Ratnāvalī is summed up here.

KUVALAYAMĀLĀ. A Prākṛit religious tale (Dharmakathā) in champū (778) by Uddyotanasūri (q.v.), also called Dākṣiṇyachihna, pupil of Tattvāchārya. The principal Prākṛit employed in the work is the Māharāshṭrī, but short and long passages, usually of a descriptive nature, are also found in Apabhraṁśa and even in Paisācī languages. The Gāthā is chiefly employed but Dvipadī, Dohā and Daṇḍaka metres are also used. The work takes its name from its heroine; an abridged version of this story in Sanskrit was made in the 14th cent. by Ratnaprabhasūri.

KUVALAYĀNANDA. A Sanskrit work on rhetorics by Appayya Dīkshita (q.v.). It bodily incorporates the Kārikās of Chap. V of Jayadeva's Chandrāloka (q.v.) and adds a running prose comm. by Appayya. It is, therefore, in a sense a comm. on the Arthalaṅkāra chapter of Chandrāloka.

KUVERA (fl. before 16th cent.) A Sanskrit writer, to whom is attributed Dattaka-chandrikā (q.v.).

KWELLA, PETER. A German Indologist, whose chief work is: Flaussyüberschreitungen im Ṛigveda (Wiesbaden, 1973).

KYACHVĀ. King of Burma (15th cent.) and author of a Pali work Sadda-bindu, a grammatical treatise.

LABER, J. An Indologist, whose chief work is ed. of Jayavallabha's Vajjālugga (q.v.; 1914), included in the Bibliotheca Indica.

LACHHAMIDHARA SHĀSTRĪ (d. 1954). A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Home of the Aryas and Birth Place of Kālī-dāsa.

LACOMBE, OLIVER. A French Indologist, whose chief works are on Vedānta, Viśiṣṭādvaita, Buddhism and a French tr. of Brahma-sūtra, with Viśiṣṭādvaita commentary (1938).

LACOTE, FELIX (1873-1925). A French Indologist, who ed. and tr. into French. Bud-dhasvāmin's Bṛihat-kathā-śloka-saṅgraha (Paris, 1908-29), which added a new dimension to the study of the famous Bṛihat-kathā.

LAḌAHACHANDRA. A Sanskrit poet, whose elegant stanzas voicing forth the condition of the lover at various situations, are found in an anthology; his date is uncertain.

LADDU, S.D. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Evolution of the Sanskrit Language from Pāṇini to Patañjali (1974).

LADDU, T.K. An Indologist, who, in his dissertation Prolegomena zu Trivikram's Prakrit Grammatik (Halle, 1912), gives an analysis of Trivikrama's grammar, and proved his authorship of both the Sūtras and of the Vṛitti.

LADNER, M. (1890-1963). A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Existence and Deliverance and Gotama Buddha.

LAGADHA (fl. 900 B.C., 3rd cent. B.C. or 5th cent. A.D.). The first man to systematise astronomy and author of Sanskrit Vedāṅga-jyotiṣa (q.v.).

LAGHU-JĀTAKA. A Sanskrit work on the Hc; section of astrology by Varāhamihira (q.v.).

LAGHU-ŚABDENDUŚEKHARA. A celebrated Sanskrit comm. by Nāgeśa on Siddhānta-kaumudī (q.v.), a grammatical work.

LAGHUSIDDHĀNTA-KAUMUDĪ. A Sanskrit grammatical work by Varadarāja (q.v.). Popularly called Laghu-kaumudī, it is a primer based on the Siddhānta-kaumudī (q.v.).

LAGHV-ASHANNĪTĪ. A Sanskrit work by Hemachandra (q.v.), which is only an abridged form of his big work in Prakrit. Written in a metrical form, it deals with such topics as war, punishments, law, and penances. In his treatment of law he generally follows the Manu-smṛiti; the work contains an interesting theory of the origin of rājanīti, which ascribes its creation to the mythical prophet-king Rishabha.

LAKHAMADEVA (Lakshmaṇadeva; fl. c. 1453). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, who was son of Rayaṇa (Ratnadeva) and was born at Goṇanda in Malwā. He is the author of Nemināha-chariṇi (Neminātha-charita, q.v.), a poem in four cantos, describing the life of Neminātha, a Jaina Tīrthāṅkara.

LAKKHANA (LAKSHMANA; fl. 1218-56). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, who lived at Rāyavaḍḍiya on the Yamunā (modern Raibhā near Firozābād in Agra district), which was also the residence of his patron, Kaṇha, the great minister of Āhavamalla of the Chauhāna family. Lakkhana was son of Sāhula and Jaitā of the Jāyasa (Jayaswal) family; he was the author of Anuvaya-rayana-paiṇi (Anuvratā-ratna-pradīpa; 1256), a poem in 8 cantos, dealing with the religious vows of Jaina householders; the work throws light on Chauhāna rulers near Agra in the 13th century. His another work, Jinadatta Chariṇi (q.v.) or Jinadatta Charita was composed in 1218.

LAKSHANĀVALI. A Sanskrit work on Vaiśeṣika philosophy by Udayana (q.v.).

LAKSHMAN SARŪP. A Vedic scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Rīgārtha-dīpikā of Venkaṭamādhava (4 Vols., Lahore, 1939; covering the first seven maṇḍals of the Rigveda), ed. and Eng. tr. of Nirukta and of Nighaṇṣu. Like Konow (q.v.), he is of the view that Vedic Indians must have destroyed the Indus Valley people about 3000 B.C., which must, therefore, be the date of a major portion of the Rigveda.

LAKSHMAṆA. See Lakkhana.

LAKSHMAṆA ĀCHĀRYA. See Chañḍī-kucha pañchāśikā.

LAKSHMAṆA BHĀSKARA (fl. c. 14th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Matāṅga-bharata, the major part of which deals with dancing.

LAKSHMAṆA DEŚIKA (fl. 11th cent.). Author of the Sanskrit Śāradā-tilaka (q.v.).

LAKSHMAṆA DEVA. See Lakhamadeva.

LAKSHMAṆA GAṆI. A Jaina Prakrit poet and author of a poem entitled Supāsanāha-chariya in 8,000 Gāthās, composed in 1142; it contains 68 Apabhraṃśa verses. The work narrates the life of the 7th Tīrthāṅkara as also various stories to illustrate the vows of Jainism.

LAKSHMAṆA KAVI (fl. 11th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, who was son of Gaṅgādhara and Gaṅgāmbikā and lived in Sanagara village, probably in the Circars. He completed Bhoja's Rāmāyaṇa-champū, which extended only up to the Kishindhā-kāṇḍa. He wrote also Bhārata-champū-tilaka, on the story of the Mahābhārata; Lakshmaṇa's father wrote a champū Madra-kanyāpariṇaya and his grandfather, Dattātreyā the Dattātreyā-champū.

LAKSHMAṆA MĀNIKYADEVA. A Sanskrit poet and a patron of letters, who was ruler of Noakhali during the reign of Emperor Akbar (r. 1556-1605). Out of his several dramas, only two are available and these are : Kuvalayāśva-charita (on the love of Kuvalayāśva and Madālasā) and Vikhyāta-vijaya (in six Acts depicting the battle between Nakula and Kauravas).

LAKSHMAṆA ŚĀSTRĪ (fl. c. 1714-80). A Sanskrit author of Guruvaṃśa-kāvya, a mahākāvya on the life of Śaṅkarāchārya.

LAKSHMAṆA SHĀSTRĪ TELANG. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Supta-prabudham (pub. in Sūryodaya, 1967) in 410 verses is a rendering into Sanskrit from the Arabian Nights; his other Sanskrit work is Sindhuvāḍavṛttam (a novel).

LAKSHMAṆASENA. See Adbhuta-sāgara.

LAKSHMANA SŪRI (1859-1919). A Sanskrit poet of Rāmnad district of Tamilnadu, who was Professor of Sanskrit at the Pachiyappa College in Madras. Kṛishṇa-līlāṃṛita is his Mahākāvya, while Vipra-sandēśa and Mānava-sandēśa are his smaller poems. The Delhi Durbar of George V provided him with the subject matter for the play Delhi-Sāmrājya. His drama Pulastya-vadha is based on the Rāmāyaṇa, while Bhīshma-vijaya, extolling the ideal of virtue and discipline, as in the life of Bhīshma, the great Kaurava warrior, is a prose work. His play, Ghoshāvātrā in 4 Acts was staged in Madras in 1917. His Bhārata-saṅgraha and Rāmāyaṇa-saṅgraha are easy epitomes in prose of the Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaṇa.

LAKSHMĪ AMMAL, V.R. A Sanskrit poetess, whose Bhāratagītā (1950) deals with the glory of Mother India, her fall and her inspiring message to her children.

LAKSHMĪ DĀSA (fl. 14th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit poet, whose Śuka-sandēśa lists the towns, temples, mountains and rivers between Rameshwaram and Guṇapura on the west coast.

LAKSHMIDHARA (fl. 12th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, also called Bhaṭṭa Lakshmiṇāra, who was son of Bhaṭṭa Hṛidayadhara. He was well-read in Smṛitis, Purāṇas, Mīmāṃsā and all branches of Vedic learning and was a critical and conscientious compiler who evaluated his sources and selected the correct text. At the instance of Govindachandra, the Gahadavāla or Rathor emperor of Kanauj (A.D. 1114-56), he wrote Kṛityakulpatūru (q.v.), a celebrated Smṛiti digest. He exercised great influence on the Smṛiti writers of Mithilā, Bengal and of northern India in general.

LAKSHMIDHARA. Author in Sanskrit of Advaita-makaranda (q.v.); his date is uncertain.

LAKSHMIDHARA. A Prakrit writer and author of a grammatical work Shat-bhāshā-chandrikā; his date is uncertain.

LAKSHMINARASIMHA SVĀMĪ, PARAVASTU. See Chālukya-charita.

LAKSHMINĀRĀYAṆA. A court-musician of Krishnadevarāya of Vijayanagara (r. 1509-29) and author in Sanskrit of Sangīta-sūryodaya, which deals in five chapters with Tāla, Vṛtta, Svaragīta, Jāti and Prabandha.

LAKSHMINĀRĀYAṆA SHANBHOGUE (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose chief work Rāshṭra-sabhāpati-gaurava (Bombay, 1938) describes all the Congress Presidents, has a special poem on Subhas Bose, and commemorates the 1935 Jubilee Session of the Indian National Congress.

LAKSHMINĀTHA ŚĀSTRĪ (fl. early 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Jaipur, whose Bhāratavṛtta-sūtra is a history of India.

LAKSHMĪPATI (fl. 13th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, whose Abdulla-charita deals with the life of Abdulla, the Kingmaker of the Mughal Court during the 18th century.

LAKSHMĪPURAM ŚRINIVĀSĀCHĀRYA (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose chief philosophical work, Darśanodaya is written with the avowed object of reducing sectarianism and promoting understanding:

LAKSHMI RĀJŪ (fl. c. 1890). A princess of Kaṭattanāḍ royal house and a Sanskrit poetess, whose works are: Santāna-gopāla-kāvya (describing how Kṛishṇa brought back to life all the ten dead children of a brāhmaṇa; the third, which is the last canto displaying Yamakas) and Bhāgavata-saṅkshēpa (abridged Bhāgavata).

LAL, B.B. See Gupta, S.P.

LĀLĀ PAṆḌITA (fl. 2nd half of 19th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Kāshmir and author of Praśna-ratnāvalī, a work on Jyotisha.

LALITA-MĀDHAVA. A Sanskrit drama by Rūpa Gosvamin (q.v.), which in its ten Acts depicts Kṛishṇa's līlā at Vṛindāvana and Dvarkā. The author has made considerable alterations in the old legend.

LALITAVIGRAHARĀJA-NĀṬAKA. See Soma-deva.

LALITA VISTARA. An Avadāna work, which describes in detail the 'sport' of the Buddha, and is written in prose with long metrical passages in mixed Sanskrit in the style of Purāṇas. The author of this work is not known and his date is uncertain.

LALLA (fl. probably after 6th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, son of Bhaṭṭa Trivikrama and author of a comm. on Khaṇḍakhādya (q.v.) and an original work Dhīvriddhi-tantra (on astronomy), variously called Śiṣhyadhīvriddhida or Mahātāntra (q.v.).

LALOU, MARCELLE (1890-1967). A French Indologist, whose chief work is on Bibliographie bouddhique, which analyses exhaustively all publications relating to Buddhism during the years 1928 to 58 (Vols. I-XXXII, Paris, 1930-1967); she has catalogued Tibetan MSS.

in Paris and London, under the title Inventaire des Manuscrits tibétains de Touen-bouang (I, Paris 1939, II, 1950, III, 1961). In collaboration with C. Repamy, she has worked on the revised ed. of Kāraṇḍavyūha, utilizing the material left by Przyluski.

LAMB, BEATRICE PITNEY (Mrs.). An American writer on India, whose book India—A World in Transition (1963) gives a panoramic view of India from the earliest times to the present.

LAMBERT, H.M. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Introduction to the Devanāgarī Script (London, 1953).

LAMOTTE, ETIENNE (1903-). A modern Belgian Indologist, who was most famous pupil of La Vallée Poussin, the French scholar. He pub. French trs. of Sandhinirmochana (Louvain, 1935), of Vasubandhu's Karma-siddhi-prakaraṇa (Mélanges chinois et bouddhiques, IV, 1936) and of Asaṅga's Mahāyāna-saṅgraha (2 tomes, Louvain, 1938-39) but his tr. of Mahāprajñā-pāramitā-śāstra or Prajñāpāramitopadeśa is the greatest work ever undertaken by a Buddhist scholar in the West; the notes, which take up much more space than the tr. itself, constitute a treasure-house of learning in all things Buddhist, unequalled in Western Buddhist studies; so far four volumes have been pub. under the title of Le traité de la grande vertu de sagesse de Nāgārjuna (I, 1944, II, 1949, III, 1970, IV, 1976). Lamotte's Histoire du bouddhisme indien, I (Louvain, 1958) is a comprehensive work on Indian Buddhism from its beginning to the end of the first cent. A.D. and gives evidence of the author's great knowledge of the Buddhist scriptures and their historical background. Lamotte also tr. the Vimalakīrtisūtra from the Tibetan and Hsüan-tsang's Chinese version (1962) and another important text, the Sūrangama-smādhi-sūtra (1965).

LANG, D.M. A modern scholar, whose chief works are The Wisdom of Balahvar (London, 1957) and The Balavariani (1966) give the two Georgian versions of the legend of Josaphat and the Buddha.

LANGLOIS, S.A. (1788-1854). A French Indologist, whose chief works are : Harivaṃśā (Fr. tr., London, 1834), Rigveda ou livre des Hymns, traduit (Fr. tr. of Rigveda, 4, vols 1848-51; re-edited in one vol. in 1870) and Monumens littéraires de l'Inde (Paris, 1827). The tr. has been described as ingenious and arbitrary.

LANĀVATĀRA. A famous Mahāyāna Sanskrit Sūtra, which teaches Vijñānavāda, a modification of Śūnyavāda; also called Saddharma laṅkāvatāra. Though denying the reality of the external world, it accepts that the phenomena of consciousness have a subjective reality.

LANMAN, CHARLES R. (1850-1941). An American Indologist, whose chief works are a study of Karpūramañjarī, Pali Book Titles and their Designations (1909) and ed. of the Eng. tr. of Atharvaveda with critical and exegetical comment by Whitney (1905; new Indian ed. 1962). His article "Noun-Inflection in the Veda" discusses inflected forms of substantives, adjectives and participles contained in the Rigveda. He also tr. some selected hymns of the Rigveda for the guidance of beginners in Vedic studies. His Sanskrit Reader is the first book with which all reading of Sanskrit begins in Europe or America. He built up the Harvard School and along with one of the pupils, H.C. Warren, founded the Harvard Oriental Series.

LARIVIERE, RICHARD W. (1950-) An American Indologist, who is at present Assistant Professor of Sanskrit, Department of Oriental and African Languages and Literatures, University of Texas at Austin, U.S.A. His works are : The Divyastava of Raghunandana Bhāṭṭācārya, Orals in Classical Hindu Law (1981) and Studies in Dharmaśāstras (ed., 1984). He is at present working on : The Nārada-smṛiti, The Vyavaharamātṛikā of Jimūtavāhana and the Kāmadhenu of Yatisā. He has published a number of articles and book reviews.

LASSEN, CHRISTIAN (1800-1876). An Indologist, who was a Norwegian by birth, but he settled in Germany and became the successor to A.W. von Schlegel (q.v.) in Bonn. He was one of the first to devote himself to Prākṛit and Pāli studies. He is best known for his monumental work on Indian Antiquities, in which he combined the results of philological and antiquarian studies. On getting a scholarship to go to Paris and London, he developed friendship with the French scholar E. Burnouf and they brought out a book on the Pali language together : "Essai sur le Pali, etc." (Paris, 1826). He wrote a thesis (in German) on the Geographical and Historical Notes on the Indian Panjab (Bonn, 1826), in which is dealt the ancient geography and history of the Panjab found in Greek and Indian authors. Later, he discussed the notices found on the island of Ceylon (Bonn, 1842).

In 1830 he got a lectureship; in 1840 he was appointed full Professor in Bonn. He retired in 1868 and towards the end of his life, he was almost blind.

Together with A.W. von Schlegel, Lassen ed. the Hitopadeśu with its commentary. He also ed. 1st Act of Bhavabhūti's Mālātī-mādhava, ed. and tr. Sāṅkhyā-kārikās (Bonn, 1832), and ed. Jayadeva's Gītāgovinda, a which he called a lyrical drama. His anthology of Sanskrit texts with glossary, meant for beginners, appeared in 1838. He also deciphered the Persian cuneiform script and Kabuli legends.

Lassen's Institutiones linguae Prakriticae (The Prakrit Grammar, Bonn, 1837) was the result of ten years of study and it helped to put Prakrit studies on a firm footing.

For seven years (1842-50), he edited the "Journal of Oriental Studies", in which Lassen contributed several articles on Indian Antiquities. His historical research culminated in his Indische Alterthumskunde (Indian Antiquities; 4 vols., Bonn, 1847-61); it discusses geography, Indian history based on the Epics, the Puranas and the lawbook of Manu, from Buddha's time till the Valabhi and younger Gupta dynasty, history of trade and a cultural history of the period in question, works of Burnouf and others, who studied Buddhism, Alexander's campaigns in India, Aśoka's edicts, political history of Northern India upto the Muslim conquest and the history of Eastern and Southern India. In the 4 volumes, he collected everything known about India from many publications of different scholars and enriched it by criticism and his own research.

LAṬAKAMELAKA. See Śāṅkhadīhara Kavirāja.

LATKAR ŚĀSTRĪ, V.A. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose chief works are: Sāhu-charita (Kolhāpur, 1939; a prose biography of a recent Ruler of the Kolhāpur State) and Balidāna (1940; a rendering into Sanskrit of the Marathi novel Balidāna of N.C. Kelkar).

LATTHE, A.B. A Jaina scholar, whose chief work is An Introduction to Jainism (Bombay, 1905).

LĀṬYĀYANA-ŚRAUTA-SŪTRA. See Śrauta-sūtra.

LAUF, DETLEF INGO. A modern American Indologist, whose chief work is: Tibetan Sacred Art—The Heritage of Tantra (Berkeley, 1976).

LAUGĀKSHI BHĀSKARA (fl. 14-15th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose works are: Artha-śaṅgraha (on Mīmāṃsā philosophy) and Tarka-kaumudī (q.v.).

LAUGĀKSHI-GRIHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

LAW, BIMALA CHURN. An Indian scholar whose chief works are: The Jaina Sūtras (study of the Jaina Sūtras), Heaven and Hell in Buddhist Perspective, Women in Buddhist Literature, ed. of Buddhist Studies, History of Pali Literature (2 Vols., 1933), A Study of the Mahāvastu, Some Kshatriya Tribes of Ancient India (1924), Ancient Mid-Indian Kshatriya Tribes, Ancient Indian Tribes, (2 Vols.), Tribes in Ancient India (dealing with 148 major and minor tribes; Poona, 1943), India As Described in the early texts of Buddhism and Jainism (London, 1941), Life and Work of Buddhaghosha (1923), ed. of Charīyāpiṭaka, Aśvaghoṣa (1946), ed. and Eng. tr. of Dāṭhāvamsa, Historical Geography of Ancient India (Paris, 1954), Study of Mahāvastu, Geography of Early Buddhism, Buddhist Conception of Spirits, Geographical Essays Relating to Ancient Geography of India, Burma and Ceylon and Geographical Aspects of Kālidāsa's Works. He also undertook intensive studies of ancient capital cities, e.g., Śrāvastī, Rājagriha, Kauśāmbī, Kośala, Ahichhatra and Ujjayinī; he wrote also monographs on Mountains, Rivers and Countries and peoples of India, taking material from Epics, Purāṇas, Buddhist sources, etc.

LAXMAN SHĀSTRĪ JOSHI. See Upanishad-kāṇḍa.

LAXMAN ŚĀSTRĪ WASUDEV PANSIKAR. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Śrīmadbhagavadgītā (with several comms., 1978) and Yogavasishṭha of Vālmiki (2 vols., 1981).

LE COQ, A. VON (1860-1930). A German Indologist, who took part in three expeditions to Central Asia, which brought the fragments of the oldest Sanskrit dramas by Aśvaghoṣa as well as texts of the Manichaens, an Iranian religion. He brought out his major work in German as: "Buddhist Late Antiquity in Central Asia" (7 vols., 1922-23; reprint 1975). He was Director of the 'Royal Armoury, Berlin.

LEELĀ RĀO DAYĀL (Mrs.). A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Jayantu-kumaoniyāh (pub. in Viśvasaṃskṛitam IV.4, V. 1), deals with the Chinese aggression in India.

LEFMANN, SALOMON (1831-1912). A German Indologist, who became Associate Professor at Heidelberg, where he died. Among his works in the field of Indology is a tr. of the Lalitavistara (Berlin, 1874, critical ed., 1902-8). He contributed Geschichte des alten Indians (History of ancient India) to a World History (Berlin, 1890). He discussed the Gatha dialect (1875) and wrote on the life of Franz Bopp (1891).

LEHMANN, E. A Danish Indologist, whose chief works are: Buddha. hans Laere og hans Oaerning (The Buddha, His Life and Works; 1907), Buddhismen (1905) and Der Buddhismus als indische Sekte, als Weltreligion (1911).

LELE, B.G. A Vedic scholar, whose chief work is Some Ātharvanic Portions in the Grihyasūtras (1927).

LEONARDI, G.G. A Dutch Indologist, who has pub. tr. of Bhāṣikāvyaṃ with notes (1972).

LESLIE, CHARLES. An American scholar, whose chief work is: The Asian Medical System—A Comparative Study (ed., Berkeley, 1976).

LESNY, VINCENC (1882-1953). A Czech Indologist, whose chief work is The Stage of Development of Prakrit Dialects in Bhāṣa's Plays (in Czech; Prague, 1917; in German, 1918).

LESSING, F. See Wayman, Alex.

LESTER, ROBERT C. A modern American Indologist, who has worked on Viśiṣṭādvaita and the place of Yoga in the same. On Rāmānuja, Śrīvaishṇavism and the doctrine of Prapatti, he has a paper in the History of Religions (Vol. II, 1966); he throws doubt here on Rāmānuja's authorship of the Gadya-traya. Theravāda Buddhism in S. E. Asia (University of Michigan, 1973) reveals his wide range of interest; he has also studied the Tamil psalms of the Vaishṇava Ālvārs. His latest work is Rāmānuja on the Yoga (Adyar Library).

LEUMANN, ERNST (1859-1931). A Swiss Indologist, whose chief works are ed. of Āvassaja or Āvassaga and Uvavāi (the first Uvāṅga, with an analysis of contents), tr. of Dasavejāliya (1892), ed. of Jitakalpa or Jiyakappa of Anupapātika-sūtra (Leipzig, 1893), of Kālakāchārya-lathānaka, German tr. of Taraṅgalola, Bezeichnungen der Jaina-Literature (Leipzig, 1885) and Buddha und Mahāvīra, Zeitschrof Buddhismus, 3; his tr. of Mahāvastu II. 83 has been pub. with Watanabe Shōkō in Indo koten kenkyū (Acta Indologica, I, 1970). His Etymologische Wörterbuch der Sanskrit Sprache (1893) gives an idea how words may be studied and interpreted. Ernest Leumann's son Manu Leumann is also a Sanskrit and Pali scholar.

LÉVI, SYLVAIN (1863-1935). A celebrated French Indologist, whose work on Buddhism had a lasting influence not only in Europe, but also in India and Japan. He has not written any comprehensive work on Buddhism but his discovery in this field has not ceased to stimulate research in many directions. By his example, he has shown that Indian, Tibetan and Chinese sources are indispensable for the study of Buddhism. Fascinated by Aśvaghoṣa, he pub. text and tr. of the first canto of the Buddha charita (1892), but he abandoned his plan to ed. the text in favour of Cowell. From Nepal, Lévi obtained a copy of Asaṅga's Mahāyāna-sūtrālaṅkāra, which he ed. and tr. in 1907 and 1911; it is the first pub. of a text of the Yogācāra school. His researches on Aśvaghosha resulted in tracing 26 stories of the Divyāvadāna in the Vinaya of the Mūlasarvāstivādin. In 1922, Sylvain Lévi discovered in Nepal a manuscript of the Dharmasamuchchaya, which contains the verses of the Saddharma-smṛityupasthāna-sūtra. In 1918, Sylvain Lévi had already compared, in a famous article, the description of Jambudvīpa in this work with the digvarṇana in the Rāmāyaṇa. Sylvain Lévi's discovery in Nepal in 1922 of Vasubandhu's Viniśatikā and Triṃśikā was of great importance to the Yogācāra school and he pub. two works : Vijñaptimātratāsiddhi (Paris, 1925) and another in 1932. Some of the most important texts discovered by Sylvain Lévi were pub. by his pupils. He took also great interest in the discoveries of Sanskrit and Kuchean manuscripts in Central Asia. In 1928 Sylvain Lévi visited Bali and Java and was able to collect several stories, which were pub. in Sanskrit Texts from Bali (Baroda, 1933). When he visited the Borobudur, he recognised that the sculptors had made use of some text, a manuscript of which he could discover in Nepal during his last visit (Mahākarma-vibhaṅga et Karmavibhaṅgopadeśa, Paris, 1932). He ed. the fragments of Kharoṣṭhī Dhammapada, did research on ancient Indian geographical names and also on the works of foreign travellers. His other chief works are: Hobogirin (Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Buddhism; in collaboration) and Le Theatre Indien (Paris, 1890; tracing the origin of Indian drama in the Sūktas of Rigveda). With Jean Przyluski and Jules Bloch, he wrote Pre-Aryan and Pre-Dravidian in India (tr. into Eng. by Bagchi).

LEVIS, C.A. A modern Indologist, whose chief study is 'The Geographical Texts of the Purāṇas : A Further Critical Study'.

LEWANDOWSKI, SUSAN. An American Indologist, whose special field of study is Indian Civilization and who at present teaches in the Amherst College, U.S.A.

LIEBERT, G. A modern Swedish Indologist, who is at present Professor of Comparative Indo-European Linguistics at Gothenburg University. His chief work is Iconographic Dictionary of the Indian Religions (Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism; Leiden, 1976). He has also pub. several papers on Iconography.

LIEBICH, BRUNO (1862-1939). A German Indologist, who got his doctorate in 1885 on the thesis in German : "Indian Grammarians' Rules of Cases compared in the use of Cases in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. A Contribution to Sanskrit Syntax". He became Professor of Sanskrit in Breslau in 1892. His major work, Pāṇini, Ein Beitrag zur Indischen Literatur und Grammatic appeared in 1891, in which he defined Pāṇini's importance for Indian literature. He specialized in Indian grammar and authored works on Chandragomin's Grammar (Leipzig, 1902, 1918) as also on the four Indian Āśrams (Breslau, 1936).

LIENHARD, SIEGFRIED (1924-). A Swedish Indologist, who was born in Austria. He is Professor of Indology and Head of Department at Stockholm University, Sweden. Since 1982, he is Secretary-General of the International Association of Sanskrit Studies. His chief works are : Kokko'ta : G'lei nisse der Liebeskunst Ratirahasya. Aus dem Sanskrit Ubertragen. Geleitwort von Prof. H.V. Guenther. Schmidten bei Stuttgart (1960). Teimplusgebrauch und Aktionsartenbildung in der modernen Hindi (1961), Das sanscrito all'hindi. 11 nevari (1962), Mañichūdānoddhṛṣṭa. A Buddhist Re-birth Story in the Nevārī Language (1963), Nevārīgītīmañjarī : Religious and Secular Poetry of the Nevārs of the Kathmandu Valley (1974), Carl Cappeller : Kleine Schriften und Sanskrit-Gedichte (ed., Wiesbaden, 1977), Die Legende vom Prinzen Visvantara : Eine nepalesische Bilderrolle (1980), Songs of Nepal : An Anthology of Nevar Folksongs and Hymns (1984), A History of Classical Poetry : Sanskrit-Pali-Prakrit (A History of Indian Literature, Vol. III, 1 ; Wiesbaden), Nepalese Manuscripts : Nevārī and Sanskrit and Die Abenteuer des Kaufmannes Siṃhala : Eine nepalische Bilderrolle (the last two in publication). He has published over 30 research articles and numerous reviews. His important articles are : "Palai Poems in Sanskrit and Prakrit", "Akapporul and Sanskrit Mukṭaka Poetry", "Plot Development in Classical Indian Drama", "Summer Poems in Sanskrit and Prakrit", "Remarks on the Early History of Indian Medical Terminology", "Ghaṭakarpāra und Meghadūta", "Nepal : The Survival of Indian Buddhism in a Himalayan Kingdom", on Theratherigūthā, on a Buddhist text on Erotics, on Kāvya tradition and on the Avadāna literature of Nepal.

LĪKHANĀVALĪ. A Sanskrit work by Vidyāpati, which deals with forms of letter-writing. It was composed in 1417-18 under the patronage of Purāditya, a Jāgirdāra in North Mithilā.

LIKHITA. One of the twenty traditional writers of original Smṛiti, whose work in Sanskrit is mentioned by later writers, notably Vijnāneśvara and Aparārka; his date is uncertain.

LIKHITANON. See Rungraung.

LĪLĀDEVĪ, R. See Bālakrishṇan, V.

LĪLĀSUKA (fl. between 9th and 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poet, identified with Bilvamaṅgala, otherwise known as Kṛishṇa-līlāsuka. Son of Dāmodara and Nivṛ, his preceptor and spiritual guru being Īśānadeva and Somagiri respectively, he was the author of a devotional poem Kṛishṇa-karnāṃṛita (q.v.). Besides this work, he is supposed to be the author of Bālakṛishṇa Stotra, a Prakrit poem : Śrī-cihinham (on the rules of Prakrit grammar) and Purushakāra (a work on Sanskrit grammar). More than 25 other works are ascribed to this author, most of them of devotional poetry. The Kerala version of Kṛishṇa-karnāṃṛita contains 303 stanzas, while the Andhra version of the same contains 399 stanzas. Some scholars are of the view that he lived in Kerala. Līlāsuka has been described as 'Jayadeva of the South'.

LĪLĀVATĪ. A celebrated Sanskrit work in 13 chapters by Bhāskarāchārya (q.v.) on arithmetic and geometry. Some scholars are of the view that it was named after Bhāskarāchārya's beautiful daughter Līlāvati, while others think it a creation of Līlāvati herself. It is based on the earlier works of Brahmagupta and Śrīdhara and deals with combinations.

LĪLĀVATĪ. A Sanskrit comm. written in the 11th cent. by Śrīvatsa, alias Vallabha (q.v.) on Praśastapāda's Padārtha-dharma-saṅgraha (q.v.).

LILLEY, M.E. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is ed. of Apadāna (2 Pts., 1925, 1927).

LIMAYE, V.P. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of Mahā-bhāshya-dīpikā and of Ashṭādaśa-upanishadaḥ (1958; with Vadekar) with notes and ind x.

LĪNAṬṬHA-PAKĀSANĀ. See Sāriputta.

LĪNAṬṬHA-PPAKĀSINĪ (Līnaṭṭha-vaṇṇanā). A Pali comm., attributed to Dhammapāla (q.v.), on Aṭṭhakathās and on first four Nikāyas: Dīgha-nikāya, Majjhima-nikāya, Saṃyutta-nikāya and Aṅguttara-nikāya.

LINATTHA-PPAKĀSINĪ. A Pali comm. by Dhammapāla (q.v.) on the Jātakaṭṭha-kathā (q.v.).

LINATTHA-VANṆANĀ. A Pali comm. on Netti-pakaraṇassa-aṭṭha-saṃvaṇṇanā (q.v.), attributed to Dhammapāla (q.v.); it is also called Linatthappa-kāsinī (q.v.).

LINDENAU. An Indologist, who revised (1926) the ed. of Atharvaveda, prepared by Roth and Whitney in 1850-56.

LINDNER, B. An Indologist, who ed. and pub. the Kaushitaki-brāhmaṇa (1887) of the Rigveda with critical introduction and indices. His Altindische Nominabildung (Jena, 1877) deals mainly with the language of the Rigveda.

LINDTNER, CHRISTIAN. A modern Danish Indologist, who is devoted to the study of Buddhist philosophy, especially of Nāgārjuna and the Buddhist logicians. His investigations include the utilization of Tibetan sources. He has pub. Nāgārjuna : Studies in the Writings and Philosophy of Nāgārjuna (Copenhagen,).

LINGA-(LAIṆGA-)PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

LINGAT, R. A French Indologist, whose chief work Les Régimes matrimoniaux du sud-Est Asiatique (2 Vols., Paris, 1952, 1954), discusses the matrimonial laws of South-East Asia and their bases in Sanskrit Dharmaśāstras and Chinese books.

LIN LI-KOUANG (1902-45). A modern scholar, who studied Saddharma-smṛityupasthāna-sūtra, one of the most important texts of later Hīnayāna, in his French work, L'aide-mémoire de la vraie loi (Paris, 1949). He also prepared an ed. of the Sanskrit text of the verses which had been re-arranged in 36 chapters by Avalokitasimha as a compendium of the Buddhist doctrine : The Dharma-samuchchaya (3 Vols., 1946, 1969, 1973). According to Lin's calculation, the incomplete Sanskrit manuscript of the Dharma-samuchchaya contains 2372 verses whereas the Chinese and Tibetan versions of the Saddharma-smṛityupasthāna-sūtra contain about 2900 verses.

LITVINSKY, B.A. A modern Russian Indologist, whose article in Russian 'Buddhism and Central Asian Civilization', Indian Culture and Buddhism (1977) discusses new data about close historical and cultural ties between Ancient India and Central Asia.

LOCHANA. A Sanskrit comm. by Abhinavagupta on the Dhvanyāloka (q.v.), its full title being Kāvya-loka-lochana. The work is considered as an authority on the Dhvani theory of poetics.

LOCHANA (fl. 17th cent.). Maithili poet and musician, who was the herald of a new age which began with the installation of the House of Khandwa to power. He composed his famous Rāga Taraṅgiṇī (The River of Melodies) in Sanskrit, though it contains good portions in Maithili. The work preserves the works of about 40 poets, 45 Padas of Vidyāpati and 9 of Lochana himself. A valuable record of the widespread poetical activity of the day, it is also an evidence of the greatness of Lochana's musical scholarship. Sudhākara Jhā brought out an authentic ed. of Rāga Taraṅgiṇī; the work has been reprinted in 1981, ed. by Shashi Nāth Jha.

LOCHANA KAVI (Lochana Paṇḍita; fl. 12th cent.). Author of the Sanskrit Raga-taraṅgiṇī (q.v.).

LOHUIZEN-DE LEEUW, VAN J.E. A Dutch lady, whose chief work is Scythian Period (Leiden, 1949); she is a specialist in Greater India and has made studies on Hindu Yoga.

nese sculpture and Indonesian and Malayan art.

LOKANĀTHA SHIROMAṆI. A Sanskrit scholar, who tr. Rigveda into Bengali (1915-17).

LOKĀSENA. See Jinasena.

LOKESH CHANDRA (1927-). A celebrated scholar, who is son of Dr Raghu Vira (q.v.). His chief works are: tr. of Chinese Dictionary of Indian Geographical Names (in this work, he assisted his father), critical ed. of the entire Jaiminiya-brāhmaṇa (1954), ed. of the first Eng. tr. of Śāṅkhāyana-śrauta-sūtra (left half done by Caland), preparation of Tibetan-Sanskrit Dictionary (24 Vols., 1955-60; the first comprehensive lexicographical effort to understand Tibetan literature and culture), ed. of Tibetan historical texts (9 Vols.), a study on 19 Mongolian polymaths, Materials for a History of Tibetan Literature (3 Pts.), Sanskrit Texts from the Imperial Palace at Peking (8 Pts.) The Kālachakra-tantra and Other Texts (1 Pts.), New Tibeto-Mongol Pantheon (20 Vols.), English-Hindi Dictionary (comprising 4,00,000 words, in completion), ed. of Complete Works of Bu-ston (28 Vols., in preparation), Buddha in Chinese Woodcuts, The Esoteric Iconography of Japanese Maṇḍalas and 'Sarasvatī in Japanese Art'.

LOLIMBARĀJA (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit poet of the court of Harihara, the ruler of Vijayanagara. Son of Divākara and a descendant of Sūryapandita, his Harivilāsa (q.v.) in 5 cantos narrates the life of Kṛṣṇa, ending with the death of Kāṁsa. He was also a great physician and his work, Vaidya-jivana on medicine, composed in excellent poetry, is much admired.

LOLLAṬA. See Bhaṭṭa Lollaṭa.

LOMAN, J. A modern Belgian scholar, whose chief work is on the Chaturbhāṇī (q.v.).

LOMMEL, HERMANN (1885-1968). A German Indologist, who had originally studied Indo-European languages but was equally interested in Vedic and Avestan studies. He wrote a number of papers on the mythology of the Indo-Aryan people. Apart from his Avestan studies, his works are: "The Ancient Aryans. On the Character and Nobility of Their Gods" (Frankfurt, 1935) and "The Aryan God of War" (Frankfurt, 1939) in the Series "The Religion and Culture of the Ancient Aryan". All his works were written in German.

LORENZO, G. DE (1871-1957). An Italian Indologist, whose chief work is Italian version of Majjhima-nikāya (with K. E. Neumann).

LORINSER, F. A German Indologist, whose chief work is Die Bhagavad-gītā uebersetzt und erlautert von (Berlin, 1869); he has pointed out similarities between certain passages of the Bhagavadgītā and the New Testament and suggests that the former is the debtor to the latter. He is criticised by J. Muir, who quotes Boehling's opinion in his support.

LOSCH, H. A modern German Indologist, who has contributed an ed. of the Rāmānthyudaya in a collection of Chhāyānāṭakas by Jacobi, Jensen and himself; his thesis relates to the portions of Yājñavalkya-smṛiti found in the Agni-purāṇa. He has worked upon the Rājadharmā section of the Matsya-purāṇa as also on iconometry in the Śilpaśāstra.

LOUBERE, SIMON DE LA. Envoy of king Louis XI of France, who visited Siam in 1687-88. In 1691, he pub. a book Description du royaume de Siam, which contains a tr. of the life of Devadatta and an abstract of the Pātimokkha. He also drew attention to the similarity of the names of the days of the week in Pali and Sanskrit; according to Burnouf, the first to mention Pali was La Loubere.

LUBAC, HENRI DE. A modern scholar, whose chief work is La rencontre du bouddhisme et de l'occident (Paris, 1952).

LUBOTSKAYA (Mrs.). A modern Russian Indologist, whose study is on Nārada-smṛiti.

LUDWIG, ALFRED (1832-1912). An Austrian Indologist, who was a versatile but eccentric scholar. After studying in Berlin University, he was appointed Professor of Greek, Latin and Comparative Linguistics at the University of Prague. He wrote several papers on the Rāmāyaṇa (Prague, 1894), Mahābhārata (1884) and Pāṇini (1893). His most important contribution to Indology is his German tr. of the Rigveda (6 vols., Prague, 1875-88; the first 2 vols. containing a complete tr. of Rigveda; vol. 3, entitled Die Mantralitteratur und das Indien als Einleitung zur Uebersetzung (Mantra-literature and ancient India as an introduction to the translation) is an exhaustive introduction to his own tr.; it has also a German tr. of about 230 hymns of the Atharvaveda; vols. 4 & 5 constitute a detailed comm., while vol. 6 is an index, glossary, etc.). He also compared the hymns of the Rigveda with the Sāmaveda and came to the conclusion that the Sāmaveda was the more archaic text. From genealogical notices, he concluded that the composition of the Veda must have taken at least three and a half centuries. According to him, the main area of Aryan settlement was the Sindhu river from the ocean to the mountains. Ludwig also discussed the main tenets of Vedic religion and the development of moral and philosophical ideas. In 1893, he pub. a review of the work done in the field of Vedic literature. Ludwig wrote in a difficult style and had his own method of spelling, the principles of which were not easily understood. Nevertheless, Winternitz preferred Ludwig's difficult style to Grassman's smooth rendering of the Rigvedic hymns. Ludwig did not apply linguistic methods of interpretation, but made use of later Vedic literature, especially the Brāhmaṇas; he also took note of Śāyana's commentary.

So far as Vedic mythology, religion and philosophy are concerned, Ludwig has among other things, commented upon such concepts as Rita, Brahman, Satya, and Māyā.

An English tr. of the Rigveda, which was found among Ludwig's papers, was bought by Oxford University.

LUDWIG, J. G. (1792-1862). A German Indologist, whose chief works are translations of Nala-Damayanti story, Panchatantra, etc.

LUEDERS, ELSE. See Lueders, Heinrich.

LUEDERS, HEINRICH (1869-1943). A German Indologist, who studied Indology at Goettingen, where he got a prize for his dissertation : Vyāsa-śikshā in its relation to the Taittirīya Prāśikhya (Kiel, 1895). During his stay in England, Lueders was Librarian of the Indian Institute of Oxford University, and he studied manuscripts in the India Office at London. He tr. Max Mueller's Contributions to Comparative Mythology into German. He wrote his thesis on the Mahābhārata (1901) and from 1909-35, he held the chair of Indology at Berlin University. In his paper on the legends of Rishyaśringa (1897), he proved that this legend, which is found in the Mahābhārata, has older versions in the Pali Jātaka Gāthās. Together with Winternitz and Jacobi, Lueders submitted a "Promemoria" for the plan of critical edition of the Mahābhārata and brought out in 1908 a specimen print of the critical edition. Through his pupil, Sukthānkar (q.v.), he had a lasting influence on the critical edition of the Mahābhārata. In 1912, he brought out list of Brahmi inscriptions, excepting those of Aśoka; on Aśoka inscriptions, he wrote in 1927. He also wrote on Āryaśūra's Jātakamālā, and the frescoes of Ajanta (1902), Vidyādhara in Buddhist Art and Literature (1939) and on Bharhut sculptures (1941).

After going to Berlin in 1909, he concentrated on the fragments of Sanskrit texts brought to Germany from Central Asia. He was ably assisted by his wife, Mrs. Else Lueders, who deciphered and catalogued these manuscripts. He discovered fragments of Sanskrit dramas, among them the Śāriputra prakaraṇa of Aśvaghosha, which he published in 1911. He also identified other fragments as belonging to Buddhist dramas, which he published in 1911. These Turfan manuscripts show that as early as the 1st cent. A.D. Sanskrit drama was fully developed with all the features of later dramas. The Lueders also discovered Kaṭpanā-maṇḍitika of Kumāralāta, sometimes ascribed to Aśvaghosha. It was a Sanskrit grammar for the use of Buddhists; it differed in many parts from Pāṇini. Thirty-seven of Lueders' papers were brought out for his 70th birthday in "Philologia Indica" (Goettingen, 1940). Among these is one on Saubhikas, the shadow players.

In the last years of his life, Lueders returned to Vedic studies and worked on a monograph on the god "Varuna". The manuscript was partly damaged during the First World War, but was reconstructed and published by Alsdorf (Goettingen, 1951, 1959); the first Pt. Varuṇa as the god of waters and the second Varuṇa as guardian of Rita. He also discussed the ten names of Vasantasenā and also wrote articles on Vedic philology. Another manuscript of Lueders is on the original language of the Buddhist canon brought out by Waldschmidt (Goettingen, 1954); in this paper, he defended the view that the Pali and Sanskrit Buddhist texts show traces of the existence of a primitive canon (Urkanon) written in an Eastern dialect, called Ardhamāgadhi or Old-Ardhamāgadhi. He had prepared an ed.

of Uddānavarga, which was destroyed in the War. His edition of Brāhmī inscriptions (1912) contains 1353 inscriptions.

Mrs. Else Peipers (later Else Lueders; 1880-1945), daughter of a Professor of Philosophy, was married to Heinrich Lueders in 1900. She immensely helped her husband in deciphering the Sanskrit manuscripts from Central Asia. She continued with this task after her husband's death in 1943. In 1910, she received the honorary doctorate of Rostock University. In 1922, she published German translation of 70 Jātaka stories as "Buddhist Tales". Her husband rendered the Pali verses into German verse and wrote the preface. In 1930, she published in German "Under the Indian Sun", in which she described her experiences on her and her husband's journey to India and Ceylon. After her husband's death, she devoted her whole energy to publish his literary bequest. She died in 1945 in the streets of beleaguered Berlin, with her husband's bust under her arms, which she intended to take from the Berlin Academy of Sciences to her fiat.

LUIPĀ (fl. 9th cent.). A Vajrayāna Siddha poet, who was preceptor of the Orissa ruler, Dārikapā and his minister, Deṅgipā. The language used by him in his considerable amount of poetry is Apabhraṃśa. See Dohā. ośa.

LÜTT, JÜRGEN (1940-). A German Indologist, whose chief work is Hindu Nationalismus in Uttar Pradesh (Stuttgart, 1970).

LUVSANVANDAN, SH A modern Mongolian Indologist, who in his article 'About the Concept of Mādhyamika' makes a successful attempt to analyse Nāgārjuna's basic teaching on Mādhyamika from the viewpoint of Marxist dialectics. In another article 'Contribution to the Phonological Theory', he, applying the principles of dynamic relativism of Nāgārjuna, gives a new interpretation to the phonologic phenomena in the Mongolian language.

LYOBEEKKE, R. A German Indologist, whose chief work Über das Verhältnis der Brāhmaṇas und Śrautasūtras (1909) throws ample light on relations between the Brāhmaṇas and the Śrautasūtras.

M

MAAN SINGH (1937-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Subandhu and Daṇḍin (a literary evaluation, 1979) and Hindu Dharma (1984; Hindi tr. of Hinduism by M. Monier-Williams). He is in the Sanskrit Department of Himachal Pradesh University, Simla.

MACDONALD, ARIANE W. A French scholar, who has made good use of Tibetan sources in her study of the second chapter of the Mañjuśrīmūlakalpa : Le Maṇḍala du Mañjuśrīmūlakalpa (Paris, 1962); she has compiled also a bibliography, jointly with Marcelle Lalou, of Przyluski's writings: L'œuvre de Jean Przyluski (Paris, 1970).

MACDONELL, ARTHUR ANTONY. A celebrated English Indologist, whose chief works are: Vedic Religion (1880, new ed. 1881), Vedic Mythology (Strassburg, 1897, written on the basis of original works; also tr. into Hindi), Eng. tr. of Ushas hymns from the Rigveda, text and Eng. tr. of Bṛihaddevatā (2 Vols.), Lectures on Comparative Religion, Sanskrit-English Dictionary, A History of Sanskrit Literature (1900), Vedic Grammar (1910; an exhaustive work), A Vedic Grammar for Students, adding by way of appendix: List of verbs, Vedic Metre and Vedic Accent (1916), Vedic Index of Names and Subjects (with Keith; q.v.; 1912, new ed. 1958), Vedic Reader (prescribed in Indian Universities), India's Past (Oxford, 1927), ed. of Sarvānukraman and several articles on Development of Hindu Iconography. In his Vedic Mythology, which is a popular work, he has not only summarised the views of his predecessors on each individual deity, but has given his own comments as well. Following Max Müller's line of argument, Macdonell favours the moderate view of about 1300 B.C. as the age of the Veda.

MACKAY, E.J.H. A British scholar, who authored Further Excavations at Mohenjo-Daro an account of archaeological excavations carried out by the Government of India between 1927 and 1931 (2 vols.).

MA KENZIE, DONALD A. An English scholar, whose chief works are Buddhism in pre-Christian Britain (London, 1928) and Indian Myth and Legend.

MACNICOL, NICOL. An English Indologist, whose chief work is Indian Theism (Oxford, 1915).

MADĀLAŚĀ-CHAMPŪ. See Trivikrama Bhāṣya.

MADANA. A Sanskrit poet and author of Kṛishṇa-līlā (q.v.), composed in 1624.

MADANA BĀLASARASVATĪ (fl. c. 1213).

A Sanskrit dramatist, who was preceptor of the Paramāra king Arjunavarman. He is the author of the Vijayaśrī or Pūrijātī-mañjarī (q.v.), a Nāṭikā, of extreme beauty, of which only two Acts are now available in fragments.

MADAN MOHAṆ AGARWĀL. A modern scholar, who has ed. in 1978 with Hindi tr., introduction and notes the Bhāvaprakāśanam (q.v.) of Śāradātanaya.

MADAN MOHAN VIDYĀSĀGAR. A modern scholar of Hyderabad, whose chief work is Samiskāra-samuchchaya, on Vedic rituals.

MADANĀNTA DEVA. Author of Sanskrit medical work Rasa-chintāmaṇi (q.v.); his date is uncertain.

MADANAPĀLA (fl. latter half of 14th cent.). A king of the family of Tāka kings that ruled in Kāshthā on the Yamunā and a patron of learning, to whom the following Sanskrit works are ascribed : Madana-pārijāta, Smṛiti-kaumudī, Smṛiti-mahārṇava (ascribed to his son), Tithi-nirṇaya-sāra (all Smṛiti works), Madana-vinoda-nighaṇṭu (q.v.; a medical dictionary), Sūrya-siddhānta-viveka or Vāsanārṇava, a comm. on Sūrya-siddhānta (an astronomical work) and Ānanda-sañjīvana (on singing, dancing, musical instruments and rāgas). Some of the works ascribed to Madanapāla, are known to have been written by scholars under his patronage, e.g., Madana-pārijāta was compiled by Viśveśvara Bhaṭṭa (q.v.), an eminent authority in the Benares School of Hindu Law.

MADANA-PĀRIJĀTA. A detailed Sanskrit Smṛiti digest, attributed to Madanapāla (q.v.), but in reality, supposed to have been written by Viśveśvara Bhaṭṭa (q.v.). In a simple and lucid style, its nine chapters deal with Brahmacharya, Gṛihastha-dharma, Āhnikakṛitya, Saṁskāras, Aśauca, Dravyaśuddhi, Śrāddha, Dāyabhāga and Prāyaścitta, the chapter on Dāyabhāga closely following the Mitāksharā (q.v.).

MADANA - RATNA - PRADĪPA (Madanapradīpa). A Sanskrit Smṛiti digest, composed under the patronage of king Madana-simhadeva, who ruled over Gorakhpur-Champāran (r.c. 1425-1450), which is divided into seven sections (Uddyotas) called Samaya, Āchāra, Vyavahāra, Prāyaścitta, Dāna, Śuddhi and Śānti.

MADANA-VINODA-NIGHAṆṬU (Madanapāla-Nighaṇṭu). A Lexicon by Madanapāla (q.v.), composed in 1374, which is an extensive work comprising about 2250 verses divided into 14 Vargas. It is a comprehensive dictionary of Materia Medica containing 'the names of medical drugs, the qualities of drugs and of dishes and of the flesh of various animals'.

MĀDHAVA (fl. 7th cent.). A Sanskrit scholar, who was son of Nārāyaṇa (q.v.). His comm. on Sāmaveda seems to have been influenced in ideas and style by an earlier Ṛig-bhāṣya, which might have been jointly authored by his father Nārāyaṇa and the famous commentator Skandasvāmī. C. Kunhan Raja has ed. Mādhava's comm. and has pub. it (Adyar, 1941).

MĀDHAVA (fl. 1050-1150). A Vedic scholar, who was son of Veṅkaṭa and as such is called Veṅkaṭamādhava (q.v.).

MĀDHAVĀCHĀRYA (fl. 14th cent.). Son of Māyaṇa and Śrīmatī, elder brother of Sāyaṇa (q.v.) and a minister of king Bukka of Vijayanagar. A polymath and considered to be the greatest writer on Dharmaśāstra, he wrote several works in Sanskrit on Dharmaśāstra, of which Parāśara-mādhavīya and Kāla-nirṇaya

(q.v.) are most important. His Ekākshara-ratna-mālā is a monosyllabic dictionary, consisting of three Kāṇḍas : Svara, Vyañjana and Samyukta. Dhātu-vṛtti (based on Pāṇini), Jalminīya-nyāya-mūla-vistara (q.v.), Jīvan-mukti-viveka (q.v.), Vivaraṇa-prameya-saṅgraha and Śaṅkara-dīgviyaya are also attributed to him. He is supposed to be the part-author of Pañchadaśī (q.v.); Mādhava, the supposed author of Sarva-darśana-saṅgraha (q.v.), may or may not be identical with this Mādhava; sometimes, Mādhava is identified with Sāyaṇa. Mādhavāchārya is said to have become an ascetic in later life under the name of Vidyāraṇya (q.v.).

MĀDHAVĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit poet of the court of king Virūpāksha of Vijayanagara (r.c. 1384). The extant 9 cantos of his poem, Narakāśura-vijaya, describe the story of the conquest of Narakāśura by Kṛishṇa.

MĀDHAVĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit writer of the Sārasvata school of grammar, whose comm. on Sārasvata-vyākaraṇa (q.v.) was completed in 1534.

MĀDHAVĀCHĀRYA (fl. 14th cent.). A Vedic scholar, whose Sanskrit comm. on the Rigveda (as far as it has become available) has been ed. by K.K. Rājā; his comm. on the Sāmaveda has also been ed. by Rājā and pub. (Adyar, 1941), while that on the Taittiriya-saṁhitā of Kṛishṇa Yajurveda was pub. along with the text (1884-89) by Roer. He may or may not be identified with Mādhava, elder brother of Sāyaṇa or with Vidyāraṇya.

MĀDHAVA DESHPANDE. A modern Sanskrit writer, who tr. into Sanskrit Vāsudeva Palande's two Marathi short plays under the titles of Tudātmanam-srījāmyaham and Sam-mānakarṇikam (1967).

MĀDHAVAKARA (fl. 9th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, whose well-known Āyurveda works are : Rug-viniśchaya or Gada-viniśchaya (popularly called Nidāna, q.v.), Paryāya-ratnamālā, Chikitsā and Kūṭa-mudgara. Some scholars consider Mādhavakara, identical with Mādhava, the author of the Āyurvedic works : Āyurveda-rasaśāstra, Bhāvasvabhāva and Mugdhabodha. The identity of another Mādhava, the author of Rasa-kaumudī is not definitely established with Mādhavakara. Vṛindamādhava, author of Siddhayoga, was perhaps different from Mādhavakara.

MĀDHAVA-MAHOTSAVA. A Sanskrit poetical work in 10 cantos by Jīva Gosvāmin (q.v.), which describes Rādhā's consecration as the queen of Vṛindāvana and the festivities connected therewith.

MĀDHAVĀNALA-KĀMAKANDALĀ-KATHĀ. A Sanskrit romance by Ānanda, a pupil of Bhaṭṭa Vidyādhara, whose date is not known definitely.

It describes the love of the Brāhmaṇa Mādhavānala and the dancer Kāmakandalā who, after a long and painful separation, were at last married through king Vikramāditya. The work is composed in simple artless prose in Sanskrit interspersed with numerous verses in Sanskrit as well as in Prakrit, many of which appear in the Vetālapañcha-vimśatikā and also in anthologies.

MĀDHAVA-NIDĀNA. Same as Nidāna (q.v.).

MĀDHAVA SHĀSTRĪ. See Ratnagopāla Bhaṭṭa.

MĀDHAVA UPĀDHYĀYA (fl. 18th cent.). Author of Āyurvedic Sanskrit work : Āyurveda-prakāśa (q.v.), which he wrote at Benares.

MADHUBĀLĀ. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Saṁskṛita Vāṇmaya meṇ Nehru (1974) and Bhāshyakāra Uvaṭa (1985).

MADHUKAR M. PATKAR. A modern

Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Nārada, Brihaspati and Kātyāyana (1978) and History of Sanskrit Lexicography (1981).

MADHURATTHA-VILĀSINI (or Madhuratthapākāśini). A Pali comm. on Buddha-varṇa (q.v.), written by Buddhadatta (q.v.); there is also a comm. on it, attributed to Dhammapāla.

MADHURAVĀṆĪ (fl. early 17th cent.). A Sanskrit poetess in the court of Raghunātha Nāyak, king of Tanjore (r. 1600-1632), who at the instance of the king (who was directed in a dream to do so) composed a kāvya on Rāmāyaṇa in 14 cantos on the lines of king's own Āndhra-Rāmāyaṇa in Telugu. Besides her above Śrīrāmāyaṇa-sāra-kāvya-tilaka, she is said to have authored a few other poems corresponding to the Naishadha and the Kumāra-sambhava and also a few Champūs, none of which is extant today. The manuscript of the Rāmāyaṇa-kāvya also has not come down to us in full, as the original script has been partly destroyed. Her poetry is as lovely as the poetess's extant name.

MADHURĀ-VIJAYA (Vīra-Kamparāya-charita). A Sanskrit poem by Gangādevī (fl. 14th cent.; q.v.).

Now existing only as a fragment, it describes in melodious verses the victorious exploits of Vīra-Kamparāya, the husband of Gangādevī, to the South. Inspired by the exhortation of a goddess in his dream to drive out the Muslims and to restore the country to its ancient glory, the prince marched to Madurā, killed the Muslim chief there and commemorated his victory by munificent grants to the temples of the country. Written in epic style, the poem contains useful historical information.

MADHUSŪDANA. A Sanskrit writer and redactor of the Mahānāṭaka (q.v.); his date is uncertain.

MADHUSŪDANA BHATṬĀCHĀRYA. A Sanskrit scholar, who has brought out with a Bengali tr. and gloss a critical ed. of Raghunātha Śiromani's Padārtha-tattvānirūpaṇa (Calcutta, 1976-77).

MADHUSŪDANA KAUL. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who ed. the Laugākṣhi-grīhyasūtra with the comm. of Devapāla.

MADHUSŪDAN MISHRA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, who is translating into English the Sanskrit Worterbuch by Bochtlingk and Roth. He has also pub. a study : Metres of Kālidāsa (Delhi, 1977) and Anuprayukta Sanskrit Vyākaraṇa (1981).

MADHUSŪDANA OJHĀ (1866-1939). Same as Madhusūdana Śarmā.

MADHUSŪDANA SARASVATĪ. A Sanskrit scholar, who is said to have been highly honoured at the court of Emperor Akbar. A native of Bengal, he was son of Pramoda Purandara Āchārya and had the name Kamalaja-nayana. Having taken to asceticism early in life under his preceptor Viśveśvara Sarasvatī, he studied at Navadvīpa and settled at Benares. He is supposed to have flourished in the first half of the 16th century, according to one view and in the second half of the 17th according to another. He is the author of a number of original works on philosophy and commented on some works. Of his works, the famous are : Advaita-siddhi (written in reply to Nyāyamṛta of Vyāsarāya), Prasthāna-bheda (qq.v.), Bhagavadgītā-gūḍhārtha-dīpikā (comm. on the Gītā) and Siddhānta-bindu.

Madhusūdana's works reflect a tendency in philosophy in which an attempt is made to syncretise all the warring systems of thought; it was argued that all the orthodox philosophies have but one goal to achieve. Each of them was suited to man at a particular stage of spiritual and intellectual growth, and all together, step by step, led him to his final destination, viz., moksha or liberation.

MADHUSŪDANA ŚARMĀ (fl. 20th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Jaipur, who has produced monographs on Indra, Atri, etc. His chief works are: Atri-khyāti (1926), Chaturvarṇya-śikshā, Indra-vijaya, Yajña-sarasvatī, Brahma-vijñāna, Purāṇa-samīkshā, Yajña-vijñāna, Vedāṅga-samīkshā (1940-50) and Maharshikula-vaibhava (1956); he is said to have written 108 works.

MADHVA (1197-1276). Founder of the Dvaita School of Vedānta (unqualified dualism) which sought to demolish the Advaita doctrine of Śaṅkara (q.v.); Madhva is also known as Pūrṇaprajña and Ānandatīrtha. Born at Belḷe in South Canara district, early in life he became proficient in Vedic learning and renounced the world; his preceptor being Achyutapreksha. He went on pilgrimage to Badarikāśrama and later travelled in different parts of the country to establish his own doctrine against other schools including the followers of Śaṅkara. The Kannada country is the stronghold of Madhvas; there are eight Maṭhas of this sect, some of which were founded by Madhva himself.

He is the author in Sanskrit of comms. on seven of the important Upanishads, on Bhagavadgītā, Brahmasūtra, Bhāgavata-purāṇa and the first 40 hymns of Rigveda. He wrote also a number of independent tracts including Anuvyākhyāna and Tattva-saṅkhyāna (q.v.; Tattva-nirṇaya?), Bhārata-tātparya-nirṇaya (q.v.; epitome of the Mahābhārata) and a gloss on the Bhāgavata, which helps to elucidate his philosophy. His Gīta-tātparya, in prose and verse, gives the essence of the Gītā. Large comms. on his works were composed by his followers.

Madhva did not favour the conception of Gopāla-Krishṇa attended by Rādhā and the cowherdesses. Denying that God is the material cause of the world, he considers God as a substance entirely different from the individual souls and the inanimate world. The innumerable souls, which are distinct from one another and are characterised by defects like ignorance, go through a succession of existences. The relation between God and the individual souls is like that between the master and his servant. By serving and worshipping God, the individual souls become like God in most respects. Madhva enjoins worship of Viṣṇu as God and pleads for the prohibition of bloodshed in sacrifices. A bitter critic of Śaṅkara's theory of Māyā, his theory of creation is based on the doctrine of Sāṅkhyas.

MADHYAMA-VYĀYOGA. A Sanskrit drama in one Act by Bhāsa (q.v.), based on a scene of the Mahābhārata.

Ghaṭotkacha, the demon son of Bhīma by Hidambā, is pursuing a Brāhmaṇa, his wife and their three sons as he has the order of his mother to bring her a victim. He, however, offers to spare the remaining family, if one is willing to accompany him. The midmost (Madhyama) of the three sons, decides to go, though there is a generous rivalry among the three in self-surrender. The midmost son has time to perform a rite of purification and as he stays long, Ghaṭotkacha, in anger, not knowing his name, shouts for him as Madhyama. Bhīma responds his call as he is the Madhyama of the Pāṇḍavas. He is prepared to take the boy's place, but voluntarily. Ghaṭotkacha, not knowing his father, seeks to compel him, but failing that, accepts his offer to go willingly. On arrival, Hidambā greets Bhīma with joy; she reproaches her son and bids him express regret. She explains that her demand was made only to secure for her a visit from Bhīma, whom she had not seen for many a year. The work ends with a verse in praise of Viṣṇu.

MĀDHYAMIKA-KĀRIKĀ (Mādhyamika-sūtra). A Sanskrit work by Nāgārjuna (q.v.) on Buddhist philosophy. Consisting of 400 verses in 27 chapters, it presents in systematic manner the Śūnyavāda, which is taught in the Mahāyāna-sūtras. The author's nihilistic doctrine accepts, like the Vedānta, two truths - the higher ending in the vacuity of all conceptions owing to self-contradiction, and the lower allowing for ordinary life. The work sets forth more clearly the views expressed in the Prajña-pāramitā (q.v.).

MĀDHYANDINA-SAMHITA. See Veda (Yajurveda).

MADHYA-SIDDHĀNTA-KAUMUDĪ. A Sanskrit grammar of school standard written by Varadarāja (q.v.), which is a simplified form of the Siddhānta-kaumudī (q.v.).

MĀGHA. A Sanskrit poet, son of Dattakasavāśraya and grandson of Suprabhadēva; Suprabhadēva is said to have been the minister of a king whose name is variously read as Varmalāta, Varmalākhyā, Dharmanābha, Dharmalābha and so on. From an inscription of Varmalāta of A.D. 625, Māgha may be placed in the latter half of the 7th century. This accords with the fact that Māgha in his Śiśupāla-vadha makes a clear reference to the Kaśikā-vṛitti and the Nyāsa thereon, and he also knew the Nāgūnanda of Śrī-Harsha. The Śiśupāla-vadha (q.v.) is one of the five famous Sanskrit Mahākāvya, wherein Māgha shows great erudition and skill in various devices of poetry. Māgha's vocabulary is very rich and it is said that no new word in Sanskrit could be met with if the first nine cantos of the epic are studied. An oft-quoted stanza ascribes to Māgha all the three qualities: skill in the use of similes, depth of expression, and elegant use of words (i.e., Upamā, Artha-gaurava and Pada-lālitya), the qualities respectively ascribed to Kālidāsa, Bhāravi and Daṇḍin.

MAHĀBHĀRATA. A great Sanskrit epic, the word 'Bhārata' signifying 'battle of the Bharatas' and the word 'Mahābhārata' means 'the great narrative of the battle of the Bharatas'. It is divided into 18 Parvas or 'Books' and consists of over 1,00,000 ślokas including those of its supplement, known as Harivaṃśa (q.v.). The poem, excluding the episodes and other matter, can be reduced to the more reasonable length of 24,000 ślokas, the length actually suggested by a reference in Book I. Vyāsa, the traditional compiler of the Vedas and the author of the Purāṇas, is considered as its author.

The contents of the Mahābhārata may be divided into the leading story and the episodic matter connected or unconnected with it. The story deals with the overthrow of the Kauravas at the hands of the Pāṇḍavas who are represented as their cousins; the episodes relate to : (1) the ancient bardic poetry, (2) Brahmanical myths and legends, (3) fables, parables and moral narratives, and (4) didactic sections. Of the first type are the legends of: Śakuntalā (connected with her son Bharata, on whom the epic itself is named), Yayāti (a ruler of Lunar dynasty, whose famous son is Puru), Nala-Damayanti (to show how Nala and Yudhishthira lost all their possessions by gambling), Rāma (an abridged version of the ancient Rāma epic), Vidulā (in which Vidulā chastises her cowardly son Sañjaya and exhorts him in forceful language to take up arms and fulfil his duties as a warrior); of the second type are those of Kadrū and Vinatā, Samudra-manthana (the churning of ocean), Ruru, Chyavana (who was restored to youth by Āśvins), Indra, Agni, Manu (associated with flood legend), Vishṇu, Sāvitrī (whose story reveals the victory of love and constancy, of virtue and wisdom, over destiny and death), Rishyaśiṅga, Agastya (who is said to have drunk up the ocean at the request of gods), Nāchiketa (different from that of in the Kaṭha-upanishad), Vasishṭha (his long enmity with Viśvāmitra), Uddālaka and Āruṇi; of the third type are the fables of animals by way of illustration (in the form of advice to Yudhiṣṭhira giving examples from birds and animals); the fourth type consists of Bks. XII and XIII, as also large sections in Bks. : III (28-33; 205-16), V (33-40; 41-46), VI (25-42); XIV (16-51), XI (2-7), dealing with Nīti (worldly wisdom and polity), Dharma (systematic law and general morality), and Moksha (liberation), as the final aim of all philosophy. Of all these didactic portions, none is so popular as the Bhagavadgītā (q.v.). There are also sections on cosmologies and genealogies in the fashion of the Purāṇas as well as legends of the Śiva and Viṣṇu cults. All these additions indicate on the one hand the popularity which the epic has enjoyed at all times, and on the other, the zealous spirit of the compilers to bring together all that could be collected in an encyclopaedic form.

The introduction of the great epic reveals that Vyāsa imparted his poem first to his pupil Vaiśampāyana, who, in his turn, recited the whole of it at the time of the great Śrāka-sacrifice (Nāga-yajña) of king Janamejaya. It was then heard by the Sūta Ugraśravā, who, being entreated by the Rishis assembled at the sacrifice of Śaunaka in the Nimisha forest, narrated to them the whole poem as he learnt it on that occasion. Even, according to this tradition, the epic had passed through three recitations. Thus the Mahābhārata, as we have it today, was never the work of any one author nor was it written down at one time. In point of form, it is not a single book and it is only in a very restricted sense that we may speak of the Mahābhārata as an 'epic'; it is rather a whole literature.

The Mahābhārata has come down to us in two recensions, the Northern and Southern, which are further sub-divided into versions according to the scripts in which the text is written. The Northern recension is thus made up of the Śārādā or Kāśhmīrī, the Nepālī, the Maithilī, the Bengali and the Devanāgarī versions, while the Southern one comprises the Telugu, the Grantha and the Malayālam versions. On the whole, the Southern recension is longer than the Northern and is remarkable by its precision. Among the complete printed editions of the Mahābhārata three alone are important, viz., the Calcutta, the Bombay and the Kumbhakōṇam editions, but none of these can be taken to represent any of the two recensions referred to above. The Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona has brought out a critical ed. of the Mahābhārata, in which all important versions of the epic have been taken into consideration and all important manuscripts collected, estimated and turned to account.

It is now generally accepted that the great battle between the Kauravas and the Pāṇḍavas was a historical event. Among the Sūtra works, the Śāṅkhāyana-śrauta-sūtra is the first to refer to the Kurukshetra battle, and the Āśvalāyana-gṛhyasūtra knows both Bhārata and Mahābhārata as sacred books. So far as the grammatical works are concerned, Patañjali definitely knew a Pāṇḍu epic, and that Pāṇini explains the formation of the names of the epic personages and the word 'Mahābhārata'. All these facts establish early origin of the epic. Scholars differ about the age of the epic, some claiming it as over five thousand years old, but we may accept for all practical purposes the view expressed by Winternitz: 'The Mahābhārata cannot have received its present form earlier than the 4th cent. B.C. and later than the 4th cent. A.D.'

Here are the contents of the main story of the Mahābhārata :-

Bk. I (Adi-parva or Beginning of the Book). Starting with the genealogy of the Lunar branch of the old Indian kings, known as the Chandravamśa, it describes that in the ancient city of Hastināpura, Bharata establishes the capital of his kingdom, which is passed on to Kuru who in turn transmits it to his son, Śāntanu. Śāntanu has eight sons by the goddess Gangā, but she throws her first seven sons in the Ganges; only one lives to reach manhood, namely Bhīṣma. Bhīṣma takes a vow of celibacy and renounces his claim to the succession to permit of his father's marriage to the nymph Satyawatī; Satyawatī gives birth to Chitrāṅgada and Vichitravīrya, but both of them die prematurely, leaving two widows (Ambā and Ambālikā) but no children. By mating each of the widows with the sage Vyāsa, Dhṛitarāshṭra and Pāṇḍu are born. As the former is blind, Pāṇḍu ascends the throne and marries Kuntī and Mādri, one of whom, commits satī at his death; the other Prithā or Kuntī, survives Pāṇḍu and brings up his five children, called the Pāṇḍavas, who are really the sons of gods, whom Kuntī and Mādri had invoked. These sons are Yudhishṭhira (son of Dharma), Bhīma (son of Vāyu), Arjuna (son of Indra) and the twins Nakula and Sahadeva (sons of the Aśvins); Kuntī bears the first three. Dhṛitarāshṭra marries Gāndhārī, gets a hundred sons, called Kauravas, the eldest being Duryodhana and the third Duḥśāsana. Dhṛitarāshṭra, who has now succeeded to the throne, brings up all together and their tutor is Droṇāchārya. The Kauravas grow jealous when the Pāṇḍavas win in a series of mock contests and athletic sports. Arjuna proves beyond all competitors with his bow, save Karṇa, who is the son of virgin Kuntī. After a successful war with Drupada, king of Pañchāla, in which the Pāṇḍavas greatly distinguish themselves, and the selection of Yudhishṭhira by Dhṛitarāshṭra as Yuvarāja, the jealousy of the Kauravas bursts into a hot flame. The first exile of the Pāṇḍavas, with their mother Kuntī, is to the forest round the city of Vārāṇasī. A ghastly attempt is made by Duryodhana to burn them in the Lākshagriha (the lac house), but as they are forewarned by Vidura, they escape. In the meantime, the Pāṇḍavas, in the guise of Brāhmaṇas, reach the court of Drupada where the swayamvara of Draupadī, the daughter of the king, is being held. Arjuna is the only successful contestant and thus wins Draupadī; Draupadī, however, becomes the polyandrous wife of all the five brothers. Through the mediation of Vidura and Bhīṣma, the division of kingdom between the Pāṇḍavas and the Kauravas is effected. The Pāṇḍavas select Indraprastha as their capital, where Yudhishṭhira rules justly and piously in his kingdom.

On the advice of Nārada, it is mutually agreed among the Pāṇḍavas that if any of the brothers intrudes on the privacy of any other of the brothers with Draupadī, the former should go into banishment and lead a life of chastity for twelve years. In order to protect some cattle of a Brāhmaṇa, Arjuna has to fetch weapons from a room in which Yudhishṭhira happens to be together with Draupadī; Arjuna goes into self-banishment for twelve years. During his adventures, Arjuna marries Ulūpi (the daughter of Nāga king), Chitrāṅgadā (the daughter of Chitravāhana, king of Maṇipura), and Subhadra (the sister of Kṛishṇa). Arjuna and Kṛishṇa aid Agni in burning the Khāṇḍava forest (sparing only the demon Maya, who is a great artist) at which Agni procures for them heavenly weapons including the bow Gāṇḍīva, a discus and a club.

Bk. II (Sabhā-parva or Assembly in the Gambling Hall). In gratitude, Maya builds for Yudhishṭhira a marvellous palace with all kinds of most ingenious devices; preparations for the offer of the great sacrifice for the Rājasūya are then made. Jarāsandha, king of Magadha, is killed by Bhīma; after this, Arjuna, Bhīma, Sahadeva and Nakula go forth on victorious campaigns of conquest in the north, east, south and west respectively. Rājasūya is celebrated with great pomp and numerous kings, including the Kauravas, join it; in a quarrel, Śiśupāla, king of Chedi, is killed by Kṛishṇa. Duryodhana, who has stayed with the Pāṇḍavas for some time, when viewing the palace, mistakes a crystal surface for a lake and an artificial pond by for dry land, at which Bhīma, Arjuna and Draupadī burst out laughing. It is with the feelings of the deepest envy and hate that he takes leave of his cousins and returns to Hastināpura. Duryodhana conspires with Śakuni, who is a skilled player in dice, to win Yudhishtira's whole kingdom. With the approval of Dhṛitarāshṭra, Duryodhana sends Vidura in person to Yudhishtira to invite him to the game; in Dhṛitarāshṭra's palace, the Pāṇḍavas are greeted affably and the game of dice starts. Yudhishtira stakes and loses his pearls and gold, jewels, inlaid chariots, war elephants and slaves, the kingdom itself, and then, in desperation, his brothers, and lastly Draupadī. At the behest of Duryodhana, Duḥśāsana brings Draupadī in, dragging her by the hair of her head; not only this, Duryodhana asks Draupadī to sit on his left thigh, which he bares. Bhīma can no longer contain himself and utters a dreadful oath : 'For this foul deed will I drink the blood of Duḥśāsana and break the thigh of Duryodhana'. Dhṛitarāshṭra, however, returns Yudhishtira his kingdom and exhorts him to let bygone and be bygones. No sooner the Pāṇḍavas depart, however, than Duryodhana, Duḥśāsana and Śakuni persuade Dhṛitarāshṭra to give his consent to a second game of dice. This time, the loser is to go into banishment into the forest for twelve years, sojourn somewhere in a city in the thirteenth year incognito, and should he be recognised in the thirteenth year, he has to go into banishment for another twelve years. The Pāṇḍavas, who are still on their homeward journey, return to Hastināpura; the game begins afresh, and Yudhishtira again loses; hence the Pāṇḍavas prepare to go to the forest.

Bk. III (Vana-parva or Forest Section). The adventures of the Pāṇḍavas during the twelve years in the forest are told with great prolixity in this book. The Pāṇḍavas have been given by the Sun-god a copper cooking-pot (akshaya-pātra) which fills itself. In the Kāmyaka Vana, Bhīma slays the demons Kirmīra and Hidamba and marries Hidambā, the sister of the latter; by this marriage, Bhīma gets a son named Ghaṭotkacha. In order to obtain heavenly weapons, Arjuna wanders in the Himālayas where he meets Śiva (disguised as Kirāta), Yama, Varuṇa, Kubera and Indra, who give him irresistible weapons. In Indra's heaven, Arjuna lives for five years, learning there the art of singing and dancing; the Pāṇḍavas set out to meet Arjuna. In order to fulfil Draupadī's longing for heavenly lotus flowers, Bhīma encounters Hanumān, as also lions and elephants; he also releases Kubera from the curse of Agastya. The Pāṇḍavas meet Arjuna and live for some time with Kubera; Yudhishtira frees Nahusha from the curse of Agastya and Nahusha returns to heaven. The Pāṇḍavas return to the Kāmyaka forest where they are revisited by Kṛishna. Knowing the distress of the Pāṇḍavas, Duryodhana feels rejoiced and he sets out to visit them, so as to gloat over their distress; he, however, is captured in a fight by the Gandharva king and is liberated only with the aid of the Pāṇḍavas. During the twelfth year of their sojourn in the forest, while the Pāṇḍavas are out, Draupadī is stolen away by Jayadratha, king of the Sindhus. Immediately, he is pursued but as he is Dhṛitarāshṭra's son-in-law, Yudhishtira grants him his life. In a battle with the Kauravas, Yudhishtira fears none so greatly as Karṇa who has a natural coat-of-mail and ear-rings which make him invulnerable. Indra, father of Arjuna, disguised as a Brāhṃṇa, begs these things of Karṇa and thus releases Yudhishtira from his fear of Karṇa. Indra, however, presents Karṇa a never-failing spear which he is only to use against one enemy. The Pāṇḍavas leave Kāmyaka forest and go to Dvaitavana, where they meet an invisible spirit (yaksha) who puts some philosophical questions to Yudhishthira. Pleased with the answers, he grants the Pāṇḍavas the favour that they may remain incognito in the thirteenth year.

Bk. IV (Virāṭa-parva or The events at the court of Virāṭa). To pass the thirteenth year, the Pāṇḍavas go to the court of Virāṭa, king of the Matsyas and stay there under fictitious names in appropriate disguise. Yudhishthira takes service as an instructor in dicing, Bhīma as a cook, Arjuna, taking the feminine name Bṛhannalā, as a dancing master to the king's daughter, Uttarā, Nakula as a horse-tamer, Sahadeva as an overseer of royal cattle and Draupadī as a chambermaid to the queen. Kichaka, a brother-in-law of the king and commander of his army, falls in love with Draupadī; so pronounced at length become his unwelcome attentions that the enraged Bhīma slays him and leaves the court under the impression that Draupadī is guarded by five invisible Gandharavas who will surely avenge any insult to their charge. Kichaka has often oppressed Suśarman, the king of the Trigarta and taking advantage of his death, the Trigartas in liaison with the Kauravas organise a raid on the territory of Virāṭa, steal his cattle and take him as prisoner. They, however, are defeated with the help of the Pāṇḍavas, except Arjuna, who is engaged in an encounter with Duryodhana, Karna, Bhishma, etc. who have also stolen away Virāṭa's cattle at another point. The Pāṇḍavas, however, remain unrecognised; after the end of the thirteenth year, the Pāṇḍavas appear in their true form. Virāṭa immediately offers Arjuna his daughter as a wife; Arjuna accepts her, but for his son, Abhimanyu. The wedding of Abhimanyu and Uttarā is then celebrated and many kings, including Drupada and Kṛishṇa arrive with costly presents.

Bk. V (Udyoga-parva or Preparations for War). The allies of the Pāṇḍavas assemble in the Virāṭa court; Kṛishṇa proposes that an ambassador be sent to Duryodhana to request him to give back to the Pāṇḍavas their half kingdom. Embassies are exchanged and negotiations opened; Drupada sends a Brāhmaṇa envoy to Hastināpura; Kṛishṇa also undertakes a mission to the Kauravas as a last resort. Despite the persuasions of Kṛishṇa, Bhishma, Droṇa and Vidura, Duryodhana announces that he will not cede to the Pāṇḍavas even as much land as will cover the point of a needle. Kṛishṇa also Kuntī try to win Karṇa over to the Pāṇḍavas, but he is adamant in his resolution to fight for Duryodhana. Both sides actively prepare for war and try to win kings to their sides; both Duryodhana and Arjuna approach Kṛishṇa for help: Arjuna chooses Kṛishṇa by himself and Duryodhana prefers the army without Kṛishṇa. The Pāṇḍavas choose Dhṛishṭadyumna, son of Drupada as their commander, and the Kauravas choose Bhishma. On account of assigning a lower position to Karṇa as chariot fighter, Karṇa swears that he will not fight until Bhishma has fallen. Bhishma also declares that he will fight with all, except with Śikhaṇḍin, who has once been a woman. The two armies march to Kurukshetra.

Bk. VI (Bhishma-parva or Bhishma's Leadership). Before the beginning of the battle, certain covenants are agreed on among the combatants: only opponents of equal birth and bearing the same kind of arms can fight with each other; horsemen can fight with horsemen and footmen with footmen; no one may attack another without giving him warning; those who have surrendered as also the fugitives and the non-combatants are not to be slain, and so on. Sage Vyāsa appears and blesses Sañjaya with power to get full information about the battle so that he can make a full report to Dhṛitarāshṭra. At the break of dawn, the blow of conches and the beating of drums signal the commencement of the fight. Arjuna becomes unnerved when he sees his elders and brothers, teachers and kinsmen, who are now his opponents; he lays down his bow and desires to desist; Kṛishṇa on his chariot then propounds the great philosophical discourse, entitled the Bhagavadgītā (q.v.), calling upon Arjuna to discharge his duty disinterestedly and with a sense of dedication to the Lord; clears of his confusion and doubt, whereupon Arjuna decides to fight. Bhīṣma and Arjuna encounter each other repeatedly, and both of them fight so bravely that even gods and demons watch the fight. Duryodhana reproaches Bhīṣma for showing mercy to Arjuna while, Kṛiṣṇa blames Arjuna for showing regard to his grandfather. The next day Bhīṣma fights ferociously and Kṛiṣṇa himself rushes upon Bhīṣma to kill him, but Arjuna holds him back by force, reminding him of his oath not to fight. On the tenth day of the battle, the Pāṇḍavas think of a plan to kill Bhīṣma : Arjuna, hidden behind Śikhaṇḍī, showers arrows upon Bhīṣma and later on in a combat wounds him so much that Bhīṣma has to retire.

Bk. VII (Droṇa-parva or Leadership of Droṇa). After the fall of Bhīṣma, Droṇa is consecrated as commander-in-chief of the Kaurava army on the 11th day. On the 13th day of the battle, Droṇa draws up his forces in the form of a spider's web (Chakravyuha) ; into this the youthful Abhimanyu, son of Arjuna, drives his chariot, is separated from protectors by Jayadratha, and is untimely slain. The next day, Jayadratha is killed by Arjuna, as Arjuna had sworn to kill Jayadratha before sunset. The fight, however, is not interrupted as usual after sunset ; Karṇa is bearing hard on the Pāṇḍavas ; Ghaṭotkacha is sent out to meet him, fights manfully and inflicts heavy damage on the Kauravas until he is killed by the spear given by Indra to Karṇa and which he wanted to reserve for Arjuna. On the fifteenth day, Droṇa kills Drupada and Virāṭa, but as soon as Droṇa hears from the lips of Yudhishthira that Aśvatthāmā, the son of Droṇa (also the name of an elephant) has been killed, to fulfil his vow, he casts his weapons aside and is thus slain by Dhṛiṣṭadyumna ; thus comes the end of Droṇa.

Bk. VIII (Karṇa-parva or Leadership of Karṇa). The command now passes on to Karṇa who holds it for two days ; on the sixteenth day, Bhīma and Aśvatthāmā, Arjuna and Karṇa show many a feat of bravery but with no decisive result; the following day, Śalya consents to drive the chariot of Karṇa. Bhīma kills many a son of Dhṛitarāshṭra with his weighty club, he hurls Duḥśāsana down from his chariot, tears open his breast and drinks his warm blood, as he had previously sworn. Meanwhile, Arjuna and Karṇa are engaged in a fierce combat; suddenly, one wheel of Karṇa's chariot begins to sink into the ground; as Karṇa tries to pull the chariot out, Arjuna, at the instance of Kṛiṣṇa, kills Karṇa treacherously.

Bk. IX (Śalya-parva or Leadership of Śalya). On the eighteenth and the last day of the battle, Śalya succeeds Karṇa but at about midday he is slain by Yudhishthira. Sahadeva kills Śakuni while Duryodhana flees alone to a pond. Besides him, there were only three surviving Kaurava heroes ; Kṛitavarman, Kṛipa and Aśvatthāmā. The Pāṇḍavas seek Duryodhana; Bhīma challenges him to a club-duel, smashes his left thigh and fulfils his oath.

Bk. X (Sauptika-parva or The Nocturnal Slaughter in the camp of Pāṇḍavas). Distressed at the fall of Duryodhana, Aśvatthāmā steals into the camp of the Pāṇḍavas, kills all the sleeping heroes, including Dhṛiṣṭadyumna, Śikhaṇḍī and the five sons of Draupadī. At the bewailings of Draupadī, Bhīma pursues Aśvatthāmā and snatches the jewel which has grown on his head ; he, however, spares his life on account of his being the son of their preceptor. Aśvatthāmā also destroys the last scion of the Kuru-race, who is lying in the womb of Uttarā, the wife of Abhimanyu ; Uttarā later on gives birth to a dead child, which is, however, revived by Kṛishṇa. This is Parīkshit, the father of Janamejaya, at whose snake-sacrifice (nāga-yajña) the Mahābhārata is supposed to have been first recited.

Bk. XI (Strī-parva or The Women's Lament for the Dead). In order to perform the funeral ceremonies for the dead, Dhṛitarāshṭra, Gāndhārī and the other ladies of the court, make their way out of the city, where they were joined by the Pāṇḍavas along with Kṛishṇa. Both Gāndhārī and Draupadī have lost all their sons and it is after some difficulty that Kṛishṇa can effect some kind of reconciliation between the Pāṇḍavas and the old king and queen. Seeing the dead bodies of all her sons, Gāndhārī curses Kṛishṇa that after thirty-six years he shall cause the destruction of his own race.

Bk. XII (Śānti-parva or Book of Consolation). The five Pāṇḍavas, Kṛishṇa, Kṛipā and others proceed to Kurukshetra where Bhīshma is lying on the bed of arrows, surrounded by many sages. Yudhishtira requests his grandfather to give him advice; Bhīshma's discourse covers every subject, coming under the four ends of human endeavour, virtue (dharma), gain (artha), desire (kāma) and salvation (moksha). With high principles and illustrative stories, he deals with polity and kingly duty (Rāja-dharma), the duties of the four castes and four stages of life (Āśramas), duties in cases of distress and danger (Āpad-dharma) and those to be observed by one intent on spiritual salvation (Moksha-dharma).

Bk. XIII (Anuśāsana-parva or The Book of Precepts). Continuing his discourse, Bhīshma expatiates upon the laws and precepts upon charitable bestowal of gifts (Dāna-dharma). There are large portions which contain quotations from, or exact parallels to, well-known law-books, e.g., Manu-smṛiti. The book also contains hymns to Śiva and Viṣṇu like the famous hymn of the thousand names of Viṣṇu. With blessings on Yudhishtira for a successful rule on earth and attainment of salvation in the other world, Bhīshma concludes his discourses.

Bk. XIV (Āśvamedhika-parva or The Horse-sacrifice). Vyāsa advises Yudhishtira to offer a horse-sacrifice to purge himself of all his sins. Arjuna protects the horse in its wanderings for one year. The horse-sacrifice is performed and thenceforward Yudhishtira rules his kingdom as a pious king.

Bk. XV (Āśramavāsika-parva or Life in the Hermitage). For fifteen years, Yudhishtira rules, conducting himself with all due respect towards his aged uncle Dhṛitarāshṭra. In the fifteenth year, Dhṛitarāshṭra resolves to retire into the forest as a hermit; Vidura, Sañjaya, Gāndhārī and Kuntī accompany him. After some time, the Pāṇḍavas visit their relatives in the forest, just as the sage Vidura is dying. Two years later, a forest fire breaks out, and therein, Dhṛitarāshṭra, Gāndhārī and Kuntī cast their bodies; Sañjaya leaves for the Himālayas.

Bk. XVI (Mausala-parva or The Yādava Fratricide). In the thirty-sixth year of Yudhishtira's rule, Kṛishṇa sees that the time has come for the mutual destruction of his race, which Gāndhārī had mentioned. At a drinking bout, the chiefs of the two clans fall to quarrelling in which they are joined by others; all of them, with the exception of some heroes, perish. Kṛishṇa looks round for Baladeva, but is just in time to see his end. Kṛishṇa is mistaken by a hunter, named Jarā for an antelope, and is shot and killed. On receipt of the news, Arjuna takes all the Yādava ladies and the old heroes to Indraprastha, but they are overtaken by the thieves; Arjuna is not even able to bend his bow; Arjuna returns to the city and the surviving heroes settle at different capitals.

Bk. XVII (Mahāprasthāna-parva or The Great Departure). After the loss of their faithful friend, Kṛishṇa, the Pāṇḍavas resolve to renounce the world; Yudhishtira appoints Parīkshit as king and bids farewell to his subjects. The five Pāṇḍavas, Draupadī and a dog, cross the Himālayas and reach the Meru mountain. On the way to heaven, Draupadī first falls dead. "Why has the virtuous Draupadī fallen?", asks Bhīma and Yudhishthira replies, "Because of her partiality to Arjuna". Then Sahadeva falls, and to Bhīma's question, Yudhishthira replies that Sahadeva was boastful of his intellectual superiority; then Nakula falls; Yudhishthira says that Nakula thought that he had no equal in beauty; Arjuna then falls because of boasting of his heroism, and Bhīma too, because of his inordinate gluttony and boasting about his physical strength. Indra comes in his chariot, to fetch Yudhishthira to heaven; the latter, however, desires no heaven without his brothers; Indra says that he will see them there. But Yudhishthira also insists upon his dog entering heaven as well, and that Indra will not allow under any circumstances. The dog then reveals itself as the god-Dharma who has tested Yudhishthira in the forest as the yaksha at the pool and who has tested him again here. Thus they reach heaven, but Yudhishthira by no means wants to stay there without his brothers and Draupadī.

Bk. XVIII (Svargārohaṇa-parva or The Ascent to Heaven). A divine message takes Yudhishthira through hell where his brothers are suffering; he resolves to stay in hell with his brothers. Soon Indra comes and explains to him, that he himself has to visit hell first, owing to uttering a half-truth to Droṇa about his son's death, and in the same way his brothers and friends have to be purged of their sins in hell. After Yudhishthira has taken a bath in the heavenly Gangā, he takes a divine form and sees Kṛṣṇa, his brothers and Draupadī in heaven. Droṇa has entered Bṛihaspati, Dhṛitarāshṭra has attained the world of Kubera, the god of wealth, Pāṇdu with his queens is in Indra's world, Karna has entered the Sun, both Vidura and Yudhishthira become one with Dharma and Kṛṣṇa enters Lord Nārāyaṇa of whom he was an incarnation.

Being a great national epic, men and women, young and old, rich and poor, high and low, simple and sophisticated, all derive entertainment, inspiration and guidance from the Mahābhārata. The well-known literary works in most of the Indian languages, the popular folk-songs, the ballads sung by itinerant bards, draw their inspiration from the Mahābhārata. There is indeed no department of Indian life, private or public, which is not deeply influenced by this great epic; this is due mainly to the encyclopaedic character of the epic. It is said that in the fields of Dharma (religion and ethics), Artha (material sciences), Kāma (pleasure of life) and Moksha (spiritual emancipation), whatever is taught in this epic may be found elsewhere, but whatever is not found in it, will not be found anywhere.

MAHĀBHĀRATA-TĀTPARYA-NIRNAYA. A Sanskrit metrical work in 32 chapters by Madhva (q.v.), which is an epitome of the Mahābhārata; it is also called Bhārata-tātparya-nirṇaya.

MAHĀBHĀSHYA. 'The Great Commentary' in Sanskrit by Patañjali (q.v.) on Pāṇini's Ashṭādhyāyī (q.v.), which comments on 1228 Sūtras Pāṇini in Ashṭādhyāyī's order. The Mahābhāshya, on each Pāda of the Ashṭādhyāyī is, however, divided into several parts called Ahnikas, their number being 85.

It is a bulky work, explaining, and sometimes correcting Pāṇini's Sūtras. It supports Pāṇini where Kātyāyana finds fault with him; while on other occasions it agrees with Kātyāyana as against Pāṇini. In accordance with the changes introduced in the language by the lapse of time, it also prescribes certain supplementary rules (ishjis). The Mahābhāshya is perhaps the earliest specimen of a commentary, a mode of writing which came to be extensively employed in later days. There are proverbial expressions and references to everyday life which have made the work an interesting reading. A comm. on this work was written by Kaiyaṣa in the 12th century.

The Mahābhāṣya affords good evidence of the development of Sanskrit prose in remote antiquity.

MAHĀBHĀSHYA-PRADĪPA. Same as Pradipa (q.v.).

MAHĀBHĀSHYA-PRADĪPODDYOTA. Same as Uddyota (q.v.).

MAHĀBODHI-VAMSA. A Pali work, ascribed to Upatissa (q.v.) of Ceylon or to Kassapa (q.v.), which describes the history of the Bodhi tree. It is a prose work, there being gāthās only at the end of chapters and towards the end of the whole book. Basing itself on Mahāvamsa (q.v.) and other works of similar nature, it gives a history of Buddhist Dīpankara, a brief account of the life of Bodhisattva under previous Buddhas, life of Gotama, his enlightenment, planting of the Bo-tree of Anurādhapura, attainment of Bodhi by Ānanda, Mahāparinirvāṇa of the Buddha, the first three Councils, Mahinda's visit to Ceylon and establishment of Buddhism there, planting of the tree, and starting of ceremonies with its worship. The work, in a style more artificial and affected, shows distinct traces of the influence of Sanskrit on Pali and may be regarded as inaugurating the era of Sanskritised Pali. Geiger and Wickremasinghe place the work in the 10th cent. A.D.

MAHACHAKRI SIRINDHORN, the Princess of Thailand. A modern Indologist, who has tr. into Thai (1979) the Thāideśa-villāsani Kāvya of Satya Vrat (q.v.); in this task she had the collaboration of Prapod Assavavirulhakarna.

MAHĀCHANDA MUNI. See Dohā Pāhuḍa.

MAHĀDEVA (fl. 1283). A Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Śabdāsiddhi, a comm. of the Kātantra school, of which a manuscript is dated Śaṃvat 1340.

MAHĀDEVA (fl. 1st half of 17th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Tamil Nadu and author of Adbhuta-darpaṇa, a drama based on the Rāmāyaṇa, in which Rāma sees the happenings in Lankā through the device of a magic-mirror. It narrates the progress of Rāma's war onwards from Hanumān's return from Ceylon.

MAHADEVA GANGADHAR BAKRE. A Sanskrit scholar, who has ed. Grihya-sūtra by Pāraskar, with five commentaries of Karka Upādhyāya, Jayarāma, Harihara, Gadādhara and Viśvanātha and appendices, in 1982.

MAHĀDEVA SHĀSTRĪ, A. A Vedic scholar, who ed. Taittirīya-saṃhitā of Sāmaveda with the comm. of Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara (1894-98; in collaboration with Raṅgāchārya; the work is, however, incomplete) as also ed. the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa (Mysore, 1908-13) with the comm. of Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara and ed. Khādīra-grihya-sūtra (1913; jointly with Śrinivāsāchārya).

MAHĀDEVA UTTAMAKARA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Vyāpti-rahasya-ṭīkā, a work on Nyāya philosophy.

MAHĀDEVAN, T.M.P. A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Invitation to Indian Philosophy, The Philosophy of Advaita with Special Reference to Bharatītiṛtha-Vidyāranya, Spiritual Perspectives, Essays in Mysticism and Metaphysics, Upanishads (study) and Śaṅkarāchārya (study).

MAHĀKACHCHĀNA (fl. 6th cent. B.C.). A direct disciple of the Buddha and author of Nettipakaraṇa and Peṭakopadesa (qq.v.), two non-canonical Pali works. He is considered the best expounder of the word of his Master.

MAHĀKACHCHĀYANA. Identical with Kachchāyana (q.v.), according to Buddhist tradition.

MAHĀLINGA ŚĀSTRĪ, Y. (b. 1897). A Sanskrit writer, great-grandson of Tyāgarāja (Rāju) and 12th in descent from Appayya Dikshita. His chief works are: Bhāsa-kathā-sāra (an abridgement in prose of Bhāsa's dramas widely appreciated by the Universities), Kinkinimālā (Madras, 1934, which includes besides renderings from Shakespeare, Wordsworth, Shelley and Dr Johnson many new minor poems), Prati-rājasūyam (on the counter Rājasūya sacrifice which Duryodhana performs after sending his cousins into exile), Kaliprādurbhāva (Tiruvallangadu, 1956; dealing in seven short Acts the demoralising effect of Kali Age), Ubhaya-rūpaka (a social comedy), Udgātrīdaśānana (introducing modern ideas), Kaundinya-prahasana (Madras, 1930; a prahasana on the popular tale of a miser, who always eats at another's house), Śṛīṅgāra-nāradīya (1956; a prahasana on sex-transformation), Markaṭa-mardalikā (1951; a Bhāṇa on the monkey and the drum tale), Dravidarya-subhāshita-saptatuti (1952; Sanskrit rendering of the verses of the wise lady of Tamil Avvai) and Śambhu-charyopadeśa (1931; Sanskrit rendering of the Indo-Anglian writer K.S. Venkātaraman's 'A Day with Śambhu'). Besides the above, he is the author of several poems and short stories; his Ubhaya-rūpaka is a farce.

MAHĀMAṆGALA (fl. 14th cent.). A Buddhist Pali writer, who is identical with Maṅgala, the Pali grammarian. He is the author of Buddhaghosupatti (q.v.).

MAHĀNĀMA. A Buddhist Pali author of Saddhamma-ppakāsinī and Mahāvamsa (qq.v.). In the epilogue of the Saddhamma-ppakāsinī, the author states that he finished the work in the third year after the death of king Moggallāna, while residing in the Uttaramanthiparivena of the Mahāvihāra. Though some scholars identify this Moggallāna with Moggallāna I in the first half of the seventh century A.D., B.C. Law prefers to identify him with Moggallāna III, father and predecessor of Vijayabāhu I (A.D. 1055-1110). Malalasekara believes this Mahānāma to be the second Mahānāma appearing in Bodhgayā inscription after Upasena II and to have been later than the earlier Mahānāma by a couple of centuries.

MAHĀNANDI (ĀNANDA). A Jaina Apabhraṃśa poet, whose Ānandā-Ānanda-stotra is a didactic work of 45 verses; the poet's date is not certain.

MAHĀNĀRĀYAṆA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

MAHĀNĀṬAKA. Same as Hanumannāṭaka (q.v.).

MAHĀNAYAPRAKĀŚA. A Sanskrit work in 9 chapters, attributed to Abhinavagupta (q.v.), which deals with the Śākta system of philosophy. In about 600 Kārikās, it explains the means for the realisation of Mahāśakti, who pervades and preserves the universe.

MAHĀNAYAPRAKĀŚA. A work by Rājānaka Śitikaṇṭha, which consists of vernacular Kārikās followed by Sanskrit commentaries.

MAHĀ-NIDDESA. Same as Niddesa (q.v.).

MAHĀ-NIRUTTI-GANDHA. A Pali grammatical work, attributed to Kachchāyana (q.v.).

MAHĀNIRVĀṆA-TANTRA. A famous Śākta Sanskrit Tantra, which also teaches a philosophy closely similar to the systems of the Vedānta and Sāṅkhya, while in ethics its teachings resemble those of the Manu-smṛiti, Bhagavadgītā and the Buddhist sermons. It considers that in Kaliyuga, there are only two Āśramas, viz., that of a householder and that of an ascetic. A highly popular work, it is dated perhaps not earlier than the 18th century.

MAHĀ-NISIHA. See Chheya-sutta.

MAHĀ-NIŚITHA. See Mahā-nisiha.

MAHĀ-PACHCHAKKHĀNA. See Paṇṇa.

MAHĀPARINIVVĀṆA-SUTTANTA. Sutta No. 16 of the Dīgha-nikāya (q.v.), it is the Great Discourse on the perfect Nirvāṇa of the Buddha. Containing important biographical information about the Buddha, it is a continuous record of the later part of the Buddha's life his last speeches and sayings, and his death.

MAHĀPARITTA. See Paritta.

MAHĀ-PRATYĀKHĀYĀNA. See Mahā-pachchakkhāna.

MAHĀPURĀṆA (Tisufṭhi Mahāpurisa Guṇā-lankāra). An Apabhraṃś poem by Pushpadanta (fl. 10th cent.).

It describes the lives of 63 (Tisufṭhi) great men (Mahapurisa) and consists of 102 Sandhis divided into two parts: Ādi-purāṇa (37) and Uttara-purāṇa (65). The Uttara-purāṇa is divided into two sections, the first containing 43 and the second 22 Sandhis; the total number of Ślokas in the Mahāpurāṇa is about 13,000. Below are given the contents of the Mahāpurāṇa:

Ādi-purāṇa : It narrates the poet's hesitation in beginning the work for fear of wicked people; the encouragement he received from Bharata; Rishabha's birth in Ayodhyā, his marriage with Jasavālā and Suṇandā, birth of sons and daughters and their education, Rishabha's renunciation; conquests of Chakravartī Bharata; past lives of Rishabha's sons and his friends;

Sulochanā's selection of Jaya in Svayamvara, past lives of Jaya and Sulochanā; Bharata's getting nirvāṇa after reigning for a long time in Ayodhyā.

Uttara-purāṇa (1st section: 38-80). It treats of the lives of 20 Tirthaṅkaras, 8 Baladevas, 8 Vāsudevas, 8 Prativāsudevas and 10 Chakravartīs. Sandhis 38-68 treat of Ajita and other Tirthaṅkaras; 69-79 narrate the story of the Jaina version of the Rāmāyaṇa (the important changes introduced in the original story are: Rāma's mother is Subalā, Lakshmaṇa is son of Kaikeyī, Rāma is lotus-coloured instead of Śyāma, Sītā is daughter of Rāvaṇa and Mandodarī; Daśaratha died after Rāma's return from Lankā); Sandhi 80 describes the life of Nami. (2nd section: 81-102). Sandhis 81-92 treat of the story of Mahābhārata (past lives of the Mahābhārata characters have also been described); this section contains several scenes full of poetic charm. Sandhis 93-102 describe the lives of Pārśvanātha, Mahāvīra, Jambū Swāmī, Pritīnkara and the nirvāṇa of Mahāvīra.

The plot of the Mahā-purāṇa has been designed on a vast scale. Not only are there the biographies of 63 great men, their past lives have also been mentioned in detail. The author seeks to propagate Jainism by criticising the Brāhmaṇical religion.

MAHĀSĀMI. See Mūla-sikkhā.

MAHĀSENA (fl. c. 1000). A Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of Pradyumna-charita, written at the instance of Sindhurāja, who died about A.D. 1000. Also called Mahāsenāchārya and Pappadaguru, he was pupil of Chārūkīrti.

MAHĀSIDDHĀNTA. A Sanskrit treatise on astronomy by Āryabhaṭa (q.v.).

MAHĀTANTRA. See Dhīriddhi-tantra.

MAHĀṬIKĀ. A Pali comm. on Visuddhimagga (q.v.), attributed to Dhammapāla; - also called Paramattha-maṅgūshā.

MAHĀTYĀGI. A Sanskrit version of M.O. Aṣṭa's Malayalam poem (1976-77), which forms a reflection on the last seven words uttered by Christ from the Cross.

MAHĀVAGGA. See Vinaya-piṭaka.

MAHĀVAMSA. A Pali chronicle by Mahā-nāmā, who may be placed in the 5th cent. A.D.?

A history of Ceylon and covering the same period as the Dīpavaṃsa (q.v.) in almost the same order, it is a perfect epic, as compared to the Dīpavaṃsa which is but a feeble attempt at composing an epic. The author aims at an ornate poem and handles his material, language and metre with great dexterity; he has filled in the gaps in the Dīpavaṃsa account, and also introduced considerable new material. The work, drawing much new material from the Aṭṭhakathā, has added to the story of Vijaya and his immediate successors and has developed the story of Duṭṭhagāmaṇi into an independent epic. The work, like the Dīpavaṃsa, ends with Mahāsena (325-52); the continuation of the Mahāvamsa is called the Chūlavamsa (q.v.).

According to the Indian tradition, the Mahāvamsa is a comm. on the Dīpavaṃsa; Oldenberg considers the two chronicles as two versions of the same story. There is a similarity of material and arrangements and both have a number of common verses. The work is valuable for historical and geographical information about Ceylon and India as also for the history of Buddhism. The chronology of kings mentioned in it is fairly accurate; it also contains the names of many Pali works. See Dīpavaṃsa.

MAHĀVASTU. A Sanskrit work of the Avadāna (q.v.) class, which was probably composed in the 1st cent. A.D. Its principal subject is Vinaya, but it contains, besides the life-story of the Buddha, some narratives of the Jātaka and Avadāna types.

MAHĀVIBHAṄGA. The first part of Sutta-vibhaṅga (q.v.).

MAHĀVĪRA (fl. c. 850). A Sanskrit writer and author of the Gaṇita-sūtra-saṅgraha, a work on Mathematics. He flourished under the patronage of king Amoghavarsha.

MAHĀVĪR. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Smartha Theory of Pāṇini and Sentence Derivation (1984).

MAHĀVĪRACHARITĀ. A Sanskrit drama in 7 Acts by Bhavabhūti (q.v.), which describes the main story of the Rāmāyaṇa ending with Rāma's return from Laṅkā, but "a deliberate bid for dramatic effect is made through the whole story as the feud of Rāvaṇa, and his plot to ruin Rāma".

Act I reveals Viśvāmitra's hermitage where Rāma and Lakshmaṇa see and love Sītā and Urmilā, daughters of Janaka of Videha. Rāvaṇa, however, sends a messenger to de- and Sītā's hand in marriage, but Viśvāmitra summons Śiva's bow, which, if Rāvaṇa bends, may have Sītā. The bow is broken by Rāma and Rāvaṇa's envoy departs in rage. In Act II Rāvaṇa's minister Mālyavānt plots with Rāvaṇa's sister Śūrpanakhā how to make good the defeat sustained; a letter from Paraśurāma suggests a means; they incite him to avenge the breaking of Śiva's bow. Paraśurāma acts on the hint in his usual haughty manner he arrives at Mithilā, insults Rāma and demands a conflict. In the next Act, the exchange of insults continues; Vasishṭha, Viśvāmitra, Śātānanda, Janaka and Daśaratha in vain seek to avoid a struggle between the youth and the savage Brāhmaṇa, slayer of his own mother and exterminator of Kshatriyas, but they fail. Act IV reveals that Paraśurāma has been defeated, and he has saluted with respect the victor; Mālyavant thinks of a new device : Śūrpaṇakhā will assume the dress of Mantharā, servant of Kaikeyī, Daśaratha's favourite wife, and destroy the concord of the royal family. That family is in excellent spirits; Rāma is at Mithilā with his father-in-law when the supposed Mantharā appears, bearing an alleged letter from Kaikeyī asking him to secure Daśaratha's fulfilment of two boons he had once granted her: these are: the selection of her son Bharata as crown prince and Rāma's banishment for fourteen years. Meanwhile Bharata and his maternal uncle Yudhājit have asked Daśaratha to crown Rāma forthwith; he is only too willing, but Rama arrives, respects the demands of Kaikeyī and insists on leaving for the forest, accompanied by Sītā and Lakshmaṇa, while Bharata treats himself but as vicegerent. In Act V a dialogue between the aged vultures Jaṭāyu and Sampāti informs us of Rāmā's doings in the forest and destruction of demons; Sampāti is uneasy and bids Jaṭāyu guard Rāma well. Jaṭāyu sticks to his duty, sees Sītā stolen by Rāvaṇa, and is slain in her defence. We see Rāma and Lakshmaṇa in mourning; they wander in the forest, and receive tidings from an ascetic; Vibhīṣaṇa, brother of Rāvaṇa, exiled from Lāṅkā, wishes to meet them at Rishyamūka where also are the jewels dropped by Sītā in her despair. Vālin, however, on the instigation of Mālyavant, seeks to forbid their entry; Rāma persists and slays his foe, who bids his brother Sugrīva lend his aid to Rāma's search. In Act VI Mālyavant appears desolated by the failure of his plans; he hears of Hanumant's setting Lāṅkā on fire. Rāvaṇa appears, doting on Sītā; in vain Mandodarī warns him of the advance of the enemy, but his disbelief is rudely dispelled; Angada bears terms of surrender of Sītā and humiliation before Lakshmaṇa; Rāvaṇa refuses, and seeks to punish the envoy, who escapes. Rāvaṇa then goes out to battle, described at length by Indra and Chitraratha who, as divine, can watch it from the sky; Rāvaṇa performs feats of valour, but Hanumant revives with ambrosia Rāma and his comrades, and Rāvaṇa finally falls dead beside his gallant son, Meghanāda. In Act VII the cities of Lāṅkā and Alakā, represented by their deities, exchange condolences; it is reported that Sītā has by the fire ordeal proved her chastity. The whole of Rāma's party are now triumphant; an aerial journey carries them to the north, where they are welcomed by Rāma's brothers and Daśaratha's widows, and Viśvāmitra crowns Rāma.

"The play is wholly undramatic. The wordy duel between Rāma and Paraśurāma takes two Acts. The long speeches in the conversational style mar the effect of the play." The author, however, introduces certain innovations in order to heighten the dramatic effect. It is said that Bhavabhūti wrote upto stanza 46 in Act IV and the one Subrahmaṇya composed the remaining portion.

MAHĀVĪRACHARITA. A Prakrit Champū, composed in 1082 by Guṇachandra, who belonged to the Chandrakulinagachchha. Narrating the life of Mahāvīra on the basis of various legends upto his attaining the supreme knowledge, it describes his former births too. It employs various metres and contains about 50 Apabhramśa verses; the language of the work is grammatically chaste.

MAHĀVĪRACHARITA. A Prakrit poem by Devendra Gapin or Nemichandra, written in 1085; it deals with the story of Mahāvīra and contains Apabhramśa verses at places.

MAHĀVĪRAPRASĀDA DVIVEDI (1879-1938). A celebrated Hindi writer, whose Sanskrit work Kānyakubja-līlāmṛta in 38 verses lampoons Kanauj Brāhmaṇas.

MAHĀVĪRA-STAVA. A Jaina stotra in Prākṛit composed in 12th or 13th cent. A.D. It is written in an elaborate style in which the same words are used in thrice different meanings.

MAHĀYĀNA-ŚRADDHOTPĀDA. A Sanskrit work, generally attributed to Aśvaghoṣa (q.v.), which seeks a synthesis of the teachings of the Mādhyamika and Vijñānavāda schools of Buddhism. It is available only in two Chinese versions, one by Parmārtha (c. 553) and the other by Śikṣhānanda (c. 700).

MAHĀYĀNA-SŪTRĀLAŅKĀRA. A philosophical work in Sanskrit by Asaṅga (q.v.), representing the Vijñānavāda school of Buddhism; it is in verse followed by a comment.

MAHENDRA SŪRI. See Jambū Svāmī Rāsu.

MAHENDRA-VARMAN (fl. 600-630). A Sanskrit dramatist and author of the Mattavilāsa (q.v.), a farce. A Pallava king, he was not only a patron of music but was also the author of a work on music.

MAHENDRA-VIKRAMAVARMAN. Same as Mahendra-varman (q.v.).

MAHESARA SŪRI. Same as Maheśvara Sūri (q.v.).

MAHESH BHĀRATIYA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are : Causation in Indian Philosophy and ed. of Vedāntasāra (1978).

MAHESH CHANDRA TARKACHŪḌĀMAṆI (1841-1909). A Sanskrit scholar, who wrote essays in Sanskrit on Sanskrit language and the kind of Sanskrit education needed at present.

MAHEŚVARA (fl. 630). A Sanskrit scholar, who wrote a comm. on the Nirukta; this comm. is also ascribed to Skandasvāmī (q.v.); probably Maheśvara wrote his comm. on the Nirukta, basing his explanations on Skandasvāmī's commentary.

MAHEŚVARA (fl. early 12th cent.). A Sanskrit lexicographer, who was the son of Śrībrahma and grandson of Kṛishṇa. His Viśvaparakāśa (A.D. 1111) is a homonymous lexicon with words arranged in the alphabetical order of final consonants. The work earned fame even during the century of its composition, as is evident from quotations by Sarvānanda and Hemachandra.

MAHEŚVARĀNANDA. A modern Vedic scholar, whose chief works in Sanskrit are: Rigveda-saṁhitopanishat, Śukla-Yajurveda-saṁhitopanishat, Sāmaveda-saṁhitopanishat and Atharvaveda-saṁhitopanishat, all commentaries on the four Vedas.

MAHEŚVARA SŪRI. See Jñānapāñchami

MAHEŚVARA SŪRI (fl. early 14th cent.). A Jaina Apabhramśa poet, who was the author of Sañjama-mañjarī (q.v.; Saṁyama-mañjarī) and Kālākāchārjya Kathānaka.

MAHESHWARĀNANDA SARASVATĪ. A Sanskrit poet, who was formerly Principal of the Oriental College, Benares Hindu University, Varanasi. He has published Bhārata-śataka (Prayag, 1983), a poem in 101 verses on the greatness of India.

MAHĪDHARA (fl. 1588). A famous Vedic scholar, who was a native of Ahichhatra (Rāmnapur of Moradabad district in Uttar Pradesh). In his old age, he had settled at Varanasi. His comm. Veda-dīpa on the Mādhyandina saṁhitā of the Śukla Yajurveda gives a ritualistic interpretation. Although Mahīdhara has taken considerable help from the comms. of Uvvaṭa and Sāyana, yet he suggests original interpretation of several words and mantras. The comm., which is exhaustive, has been ed. and pub. along with the comm. of Uvvaṭa and original text by Ram Sakalamiśra (4 vols., 1912-15). At places, Mahīdhara gives obscene interpretations of Vedic mantras as has been pointed out by Dayānanda Sarasvati (q.v.) in his Rigvedādi-bhāṣya-bhūmikā.

Another work Mantramahodadhi on Tantra, is ascribed to Mahīdhara; it mentions the date of its composition as 1588. Hence most of the scholars are inclined to place him in the 16th cent., as against the view of Lakshmaṇ Sarūp, who places him in the 12th century. Mahīdhara himself wrote a comm. on it, entitled Naukā.

Mahīdhara's other works are: Charaṇavyūha Tīkā, Kātyāyana-śulva-sūtra Tīkā (1590), Mantra-Nighaṇṭu, Purush-sūkta Tīkā (all the four relating to Vedic literature), Mātrikāṇava Nighaṇṭu (a small work on Tantra) and several works on Vaiṣṇava literature, Vedānta and Jyotiṣa.

Mahīdhara died at Kāshi near Rāmeshvara Śiva.

MAHĪDHARA. A native of Ahichhatra, who settled at Vārāṇasī and was the author of Mantramahodadhi, a Tāntric treatise written in 1589.

MAHĪDHARA VENKAṬARAMA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, whose Kalyāṇa-maitrī (1965) in prose was written with a didactic purpose; his Sarajinī-saurabha (1960) is a nine-act play with contemporary setting.

MAHIMABHAṬṬA (fl. probably between 1020 and 1060). A Sanskrit writer and author of the Vyaktiviveka (q.v.), a well-known work on poetics. His chief concern appears to have been the demolition of the Dhvani theory. He describes himself as son of Śrī Dhairya and disciple of Mahāṅkavi Śyāmala and appears to have been a Kashmirian.

MAHIPA (fl. 14th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Śabda-ratnākara, a lexicon, of which the homonymous section bears the title Anekārtha-tilaka or Nānārtha-tilaka; it is dated 1374.

MAHISHAMAṅGALA NAMBŪDRI (fl. 2nd half of 19th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Mahishamaṅgala-bhāṇa; he was a Nambūdri Brāhmaṇa of Puruvana in Malabar.

MAHUMAHAVIAA. A Prakrit work attributed to Vākpatirāja, no longer extant; Ānanda-vardhana in his Dhvanyāloka (q.v.) makes a reference to it.

MĀILLA-DHAVALA. See Dhavalā.

MAINKAR, TRIMBAK GOVINDA (1915-81). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: The Theory of the Sandhis and the Sandhyāṅgas in the Nāṭya Śāstra (1960; interpreting the Theory of Bharata following a historical method of interpretation), Kālidāsa: His Art and Thought, Mysticism in the R̥gveda (1961), Some Poetical Aspects of the R̥gvedic Repetition (1966), The Vāsishṭha-rāmāyaṇa: A Study, Studies in Sanskrit Dramatic Criticism and The R̥gvedic Foundations of Classical Poetics (1977).

MAISEY, F.C. An Indologist, whose chief work is Sāñchī And Its Remains (London, 1892).

MAITRĀYAṆĪ-SAMHITĀ See Veda (Yajurveda).

MAITRĀYAṆĪYA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

MAITREYANĀTHA. A Sanskrit author of Saptadāśa-bhūmi-śāstra or Yogācāra-bhūmi-śāstra, Sūtrālaṅkāra, Madhyānta-vibhaṅga, Dharma-dharmātā-vibhaṅga, Mahāyāna-uttara-tantra-śāstra and Abhisamayālaṅkāra-kārikā are also attributed to him. His date is uncertain.

MAITREYARAKSHITA. A Buddhist Sanskrit grammarian and author of the Tantra-pradīpa, a comm. on the Nyāsa (q.v.) of Jinendrabuddhi and also of Dhātu-pradīpa, based on the Dhātupāṭha of Paṇini. The date of the author is unknown but Sarvānanda (1159), the commentator of the Amarakośa, is the earliest writer to quote him by name. As Dhātu-pradīpa refers to Tantra-pradīpa, it was composed later than that.

MAJEWSKI, WALENTY SKOROCHÓD (fl. early 19th cent.). A Polish Indologist of Warsaw, who wrote on Sanskrit grammar and literature and found many similarities between Polish and Sanskrit words. He even cast Devanāgarī letters to print some Sanskrit texts and translated them.

MAJJHIMA-NIKĀYA. See Sutta-piṭaka.

MAJUMADAR, M.R. A modern scholar, whose chief work is ed. of Chronology of Gujarat (Baroda, 1960); he has also discovered an illustrated Gujarati version of the Bhāgavata Daśama Skandha.

MAJUMDAR, N.G. See Marshall, John.

MAJUMDAR, ROMESH CHANDRA. A celebrated modern scholar, whose chief works are: the ed. of The History and Culture of the Indian People (Vols. I to XI; the entire history from the beginning to 1947, of which Vedic Age formed the 1st Vol., pub. in 1951), Ancient Indian Colonies in the Far East (Vol. I, Champā, Lahore, 1927; Vol. II, Savarṇadvīpa, Dacca, 1937-38), Hindu Colonies in the Far East (1944), Kāmbujadeśa (Madras, 1944), Inscriptions of Kāmbuja (1953), Ancient Indian Colonization in South-East Asia (1955), Greater India (1958), Life in Gupta Age, new ed. of McCrindle's Megasthenes, The Classical Accounts of India (Calcutta, 1960; accounts left by Herodotus, Megasthenes, Plutarch, Ptolemy and others) and Studies on Indo- Javanese Literature, Kālidāsa and Aśoka. Ancient India is his latest book (1977).

MAKARANDA (fl. 15th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Tithyāḍipatra, a work on astronomy.

MĀKHAN LĀL SEN. A modern scholar, who rendered into English prose Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa.

MALADHĀRI DEVAPRABHA. Same as Devaprabha Sūri (q.v.).

MALADHĀRI HEMACHANDRA SŪRI. See Hemachandra.

MALALASEKARA, G.P. A Ceylonese Indologist, whose chief works are: Pali Literature of Ceylon (1928), ed. and Eng. tr. of Haṭṭhavanaggaḷavihāra-varaṇsa, Dictionary of Pali Proper Names (Vols. I, II; 1937; Reprint 1960) and Encyclopaedia of Buddhism (7 Pts.).

MALAMOUD, CHARLES. A French Indologist, whose chief study is on Taittirīya-āranyaka (1977).

MALANDRA, W. A modern American Indologist, who teaches in the University of Minnesota. His field of specialization is ancient Indian literature and Indian philosophy.

MĀLATĪ-MĀDHAVA. A Sanskrit drama (Prakaraṇa) in 10 Acts by Bhavabhūti (q.v.).

A Bhuddhist nun, Kāmandakī, plans to unite in marriage her two favourite pupils, Mālatī (the daughter of the minister of the king of Padmāvati) and Mādhava. The king, however, presses his minister to marry Mālatī to his friend Nandana; Nandana has a beautiful sister, Madayantikā, a friend of Mālatī. Mādhava with his friend Makaranda, goes to a festival and Mālatī also is sent there by Kāmandakī. Both see each other, fall in love and are further enamoured by seeing the pictures drawn of each other by them. When the lovers are meeting in a temple of Śiva, Madayantikā is in danger of death from an escaped tiger, and is rescued by Makaranda; these two are then deeply in love. The king, however, sticks to his resolve on the marriage of Mālatī and Nandana. Mādhava, despairing of success through Kāmandakī's aid alone, decides to win the favour of the ghouls of the cemetery by an offering of fresh flesh. From the cemetery he hears cries in a Chāmuṇḍā temple nearby and he rushes just in time to save Mālatī who was about to be offered as a sacrifice to the goddess Chāmuṇḍā by the Kāpālika Aghoraghaṇṭa and his consort Kapālakunḍalā, for which purpose she was stolen from the palace. A struggle follows between Mādhava and Aghoraghaṇṭa in which the latter is slain. At this, Kapālakunḍalā swears to avenge her companion's death. Mālatī's marriage with Nandana is, however, fixed but before the ceremony, Kāmandakī takes her to the temple of love-god wherefrom Mālatī and Mādhava are sent away to a secret place, and Makaranda dressed as Mālatī goes back to the palace to marry Nandana. The drama shows how poor Nandana has been turned out by his false bride. On hearing this, Madayantikā comes to rebuke her newly-married sister-in-law. But by removing the bed-cover under which the false bride is lying down, she recognizes her own lover Makaranda in the garb of Mālatī. They are both happy and elope to the hiding place of Mālatī and Mādhava. The fugitives are succoured by Mādhava and so splendidly they rout the state enemy that the king, learning of it, gladly forgives the runaways, but in the tumult Mālatī has been stolen away by Kapālakunḍalā. Act IX shows the wild search of Mādhava for Mālatī. Saudāminī, a pupil of Kāmandakī rescues Mālatī from Kapālakunḍalā and with the good news the life of Mādhava is saved who is about to commit suicide. All become happy when Saudāminī arrives with Mālatī and Mādhava and with the news that the king approves of their marriage.

The main story, with the episode of the two pairs of lovers, ending in elopement occurs in the Kathā-saritsāgara (q.v.) and other collections of stories together with the motifs of the sacrifice of a maiden by a magician and the offering of flesh to the demons to obtain their aid. The drama treats of the love of Mālatī and Mādhava through different stages of development and is often described 'as the Romeo and Juliet of India with a happy ending.'

MĀLAVIKĀGNIMITRA. A Sanskrit drama in five Acts by Kālidāsa (q.v.).

Mālavikā, the heroine of the play and the sister of Mādhavasena, the prince of Mālwā, is to be given in marriage to Agnimitra, the king of Vidiśā; Mādhavasena starts for Vidiśā with his sister, but on the way, he is attacked by Yajñasena, his consin, who bears an ill-will towards him. Mādhavasena is captured; Mālavikā, however, manages to reach Vidiśā, where she finds refuge with Kauśikī in the harem of Dhārinī, Agnimitra's queen. The king falls in love with Mālavikā whom he happens to see in a picture painted by an artist; in a contest, Mālavikā delights all with her singing and dancing, while her beauty ravishes the king more than ever. In Act III, Mālavikā comes to make the Aśoka tree blossom; the king with the Vidūshaka watches her and overhears Mālavikā's conversation with her friend, Kauśikī. He realizes that his love is shared and he comes forth and embraces her, but Irāvati, the junior queen of Agnimitra, who is hiding herself behind a bush, springs out and insults the king. Dhārinī keeps Mālavikā confined to prevent any further intrigue but the Vidūshaka, with the aid of Kauśikī, gets her released. Another meeting between the king and Mālavikā is arranged, which again is disturbed by Irāvati. Act V reports the victory over the prince of Vidarbha; two young girls of Mādhavasena's party, who had lost their way, are brought as captives. They recognize both Kauśikī and their princess, Mālavikā among the queen's attendants, and Kauśikī explains her silence on the princess's identity by obedience to a prophecy. Further, Pushyamitra, Agnimitra's father, sends the news of victory from the north: Vasumitra, Dhāriṇi's son, has defeated the Yavanas on the bank of the Indus, while guarding the sacrificial horse. Dhāriṇi already owes Mālavikā a reward for her service in causing the Aśoka tree blossom; delighted by the news of her son's success, she gladly gives her consent to Agnimitra to marry Mālavikā. Irāvati begs her pardon and all ends in happiness.

It appears to be the first play composed by the poet as is apparent from the ways in which he has in the prologue tried to plead on behalf of the nava kāvya (new poetry). Despite several defects, the play bears the unmistakable stamp of Kalidāsa's workmanship.

MALAYASUNDARĪ-KATHĀ. A Prakrit work (end of 13th cent.) of an unknown author, which describes the love-story of a prince named Mahābala and princess Malayasundarī and also many other popular tales based on miracles and magic feats. The prince and the princess are often separated, but are reunited every time; ultimately, the prince and the princess become monk and nun respectively.

MĀLINĪVIJAYA-VĀRTTĪKA. A Sanskrit comm. by Abhinavagupta (q.v.) on Mālinīvijaya-tantra. Also called Śrīpūrva, a fragment of this comm. has been discovered.

MALINOWSKI, REV. FRANCIS. A Polish Indologist, who wrote the first Sanskrit grammar in Polish in 1872 and compared Sanskrit with the Polish language.

MALL, L.E. A modern Russian Indologist, whose contribution 'The Four Terms of the Prajñāparamita Psychology', Transactions of the Tartu State University, 1976, No. 392, analyses some conceptions of Buddhism.

MALLĀCHĀRYA. See Sākalyamalla.

MALLĀDI SŪRYANĀRĀYAṆA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern Sanskrit writer, who is the author of a history of Sanskrit poets in Sanskrit; he has pub. several poems also.

MALLANĀGA (MALANĀGA). Same as Vātsyāyana (q.v.), the author of Kāmasūtra.

MALLA-PURĀṆA. A Sanskrit treatise on Indian wrestling.

MALLĀRĪ ĀRĀDHYA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit writer, son of Sarabhaṇārādhya, who probably belonged to Kṛishṇa District in South India. His five-act allegorical drama Śivalinga-sūryodaya, establishes the superiority of Vīra-śaivism.

MALLAVADIN. See Nyāya-bindu.

MALL'K, G.N. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Philosophy of the Vaishnava Religio.

MALLIKĀ-MĀRUTA. A ten-act Sanskrit drama by Uddanḍin or Uddanḍanātha (q.v.), which is an imitation of Mūlatī-mādhava (q.v.). The main plot concerns the love of Mallikā, daughter of a Vidyadhara king, and Māruta, a Kuntala prince, but a subsidiary plot deals with the love of Māruta's friend Kalakanṭha and Mallikā's maid Ramayantikā. With its attractive language, melodious verse and speeches abounding in apt illustration, the work has its own appeal.

MALLIKĀRJUNA RAO, Y. A modern Sanskrit writer of the Andhra Women's Sanskrit

College, Rājāhmundry, who has brought out a Sanskrit prose version of the Telugu romance Kalapūṛṇodaya.

MALLINĀTHA (fl. 1350-1450). A famous Sanskrit commentator on the works of Kālidāsa, Bhāṛavi, Bhaṭṭi, Māgha, Śrīharsha and on some works of poetics (notably Taralā on the Ekāvalī of Vidyādhara), lexicography and grammar. Some scholars believe that he wrote also a comm. on the grammatical work, Śabdenduśekhara and one, entitled Nyūsoddyota on the Nyāsa (q.v.) of Jinendrabuddhi. Some original works: Udāra-kāvya, Raghuvīra-charita-kāvya, Vaidya-kalputaru and Vaidya-ratnamālā are also attributed to him. Mallinātha was perhaps a Telugu Brāhmaṇa of Kolāchala family and was father of Kumārasvāmin, an erudite scholar.

MALLINĀTHA-CHARITA. A Prakrit work by Haribhadra (author of Neminātha-chariṇi), dealing with the story of Mallinātha, the 19th Jaina Tīrthaṅkara.

MALLISHENA (fl. 13th cent.). Author of the Sanskrit Syādvāda-mañjarī (q.v.) on Jaina philosophy.

MĀMARĀJADATTA KAPILA. A modern Sanskrit author of Arvāchinam Manovijñānam (1964), a work on modern psychology.

MAMMAṬA (fl. 1050-1125). Author in Sanskrit of the whole or part of Kāvya-prakāśa (q.v.), a celebrated work on poetics. The title Rājānaka, which he earned, shows him a Kashmirian and Kashmirian Pandits regard him as the maternal uncle of Śrī-harsha, author of the Naishadhīya. He is author also of another work, entitled Śabda-vyūpāra-parichaya. Mammaṭa's contribution consists not in his originality but in the concise and orderly discussions of the main issues, the definitions, and the general treatment embracing the whole field covered by his predecessors.

MĀNAMEYODAYA. A Sanskrit work, which is an introduction to Mīmāṃsā philosophy. Its two sections are: Māna (means of knowledge) written by Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa (q.v.) and Meṇa (object of knowledge) written by Nārāyaṇa Paṇḍita (q.v.).

MĀNASĀRA. A celebrated Sanskrit work on Vāstu-vidyā, the present version of which came into being during 11th and 15th cent.; the original version was perhaps composed in the Gupta period.

MĀNASOLLĀSA. A Sanskrit encyclopaedic work by the Chālukya king Someśvara (q.v.), composed in 1129; also called Abhilūshitārtha-chintāmaṇi. Consisting of 100 chapters divided into five Vimśatis, it deals with 100 different topics connected with the royal household and royal court. The first Vimśati or Prakarāṇa deals with general and religious ethics, social service, manufacture of idols, and diseases and their remedies. The second Prakarāṇa treats of Polity (under seven heads) and private and inter-state law, while the third explains architecture, picture-drawing, and painting in all details, iconography and pleasures of domestic life. The last two sections deal with various forms of amusements and recreations and incidentally treat of arithmetic, preparation of calendars, astrology, augury, omens, palmistry, and training and medical treatment of horses and elephants. Such diverse topics as mining, alchemy, gems and precious stones, marriage and child-rearing, cookery, beverage, music (2500 verses are given to music and musical instruments and touches on new phases of music, especially prabandhas), conveyance, and scents.

MĀNASOLLĀSA. A Sanskrit paraphrase by Sureśvara of Śaṅkara's Dakṣiṇāmūrti-stotra.

MĀNATUṆGA (fl. earlier than 1000). A Digambara Jaina Sanskrit writer, who was a minister of Vairisimha of the Paramāra dynasty of Malwā. In the Prabhāvaka-charita, his life is given after that of Bappabhaṭṭi, who died in Śaṃvat 898, but at the same time it is mentioned that he was a contemporary of Mayūra and Bāṇa (q.v.) at the court of king Harsha. It is said that he composed his Bhaktūmara-stotra in honour of the Jaina saint, Rishabha, which overcame the evil effects of the sorceries of Bāṇa and Mayūra that had tormented the king. He is also identified with the author of a Prakrit poem, Bhayahara-stotra (q.v.) and also with Mātāṅga Divākara (q.v.). It is thus difficult to fix the date of this author, though he was earlier than A.D. 1000.

MĀNAVA-DHARMA-SĀRA. See Bhagwān Dās.

MĀNAVA-DHARMAŚĀSTRA. Same as Manu-smṛiti (q.v.).

MĀNAVA-GRIHYA-SŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

MĀNAVA-ŚRĀDDHA-KALPA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

MĀNAVA-ŚRAUTASŪTRA. See Vedāṅga (Kalpasūtra).

MĀNAVFDA. A Zamorin king of Calicut and author in Sanskrit of a devotional poem Kṛishṇagītī (on the model of Gīta-govinda), composed in 1652; the poem treats of the life of Kṛishna and provides an excellent theme for a dance-drama. His other works are: Māna-veda-champū-bhārata and a comm. on Champūramayaṇa.

MĀNAVIKRAMA ETTAN TAMPURĀN (fl. 17th cent.). King of Calicut, who Rājakiya-lekhana-mālā is a collection of letters in verse.

MANAVIYA-JÑĀNA VISHAYAKA-ŚĀSTRA.

A Sanskrit tr. of Locke's Essay Concerning Human Understanding, which was pub. in the Pandit (8,9,10) in the middle of the 19th century.

MANḌAN MISHRA (1929-). A Sanskrit scholar, who is at present Director, Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan, New Delhi. His chief works are : Mīmāṃsā Darśana, Viśva Sanskrit Śatābdi Grantha (as Chief Editor and Director ; a monumental work), Chief Editor of research journals : "Śodha Prabhā", "Vimarśa" and Editor of "Sanskrit Ratnākara" and "Svara Maṅgala". He has edited some 40 Sanskrit works, has written more than 30 research articles and has given about 50 talks over all India Radio. He has made a notable contribution towards the development and propagation of Sanskrit studies in India and has attended as Convenor of the Government of India Delegation to the World Sanskrit Conference at Philadelphia, America.

MANḌANA MIŚRA. Traditionally identified with Sureśvara (q.v.), he is supposed to have been a native of Bihar. A pupil of Kumārila or of Śaṅkarachārya, he is the author in Sanskrit of Mīmāṃsāmukramaṇī (q.v.), Vidhiviveka (q.v.), Bhāṣyamā-viveka and Vibhrama-viveka.

MANDARAMANJARI. See Parvatīya Viśveśvara Pūjādeya.

MANDASOR INSCRIPTION. See Vatsabhaṭṭi.

MĀṆḌŪKYOPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

MĀṆḌŪKYOPANISHAT-KĀRIKĀ. Same as Gauḍapāda-kārikā. (q.v.).

MAṆGALA. Same as Mahāmaṅgala (q.v.).

MAṆGALADEVA SHASTRI, the late (b. 1890). A Sanskrit scholar, who was born in Badaun district of Uttar Pradesh. After passing M.A. in Sanskrit from Panjab University under Woolner (q.v.), he was awarded a scholarship for research at Oxford University. He obtained a doctorate on Rikprāṭisākhya. In 1937, he was appointed Principal of Government Sanskrit College, Varanasi as also its Registrar. When the College was given the status of a Vishwavidyalaya, Shastri was its Vice-Chancellor for some time. His chief works are : ed. of Rikprāṭisākhya (3 vols., with Eng. tr. and Uvvaṭa comm. : 1939 ; also Hindi tr.), Bhāshāvijñāna (1926 ; in Hindi), Bhāratīya-saṃskṛti-kā Vikāśa—Vaidika-dhārā (in Hindi; 1956), Hindi tr. of Keith's Classical Sanskrit Literature, Rasamālā (1954), Sūkti-saptasatī (a collection of Sanskrit sayings), Jīvanjyotiḥ (1972 ; a collective edition of his reflective poems), Prakāśabhyudaya or Atmavṛttāntīyam-prakarṇam (1971 ; an autobiography) and Prabandha-prakāśaḥ (2 Pts., collections of essays) ; the last three works in Sanskrit. The first part (1930) of Prabandha-prakāśa contains some 70 descriptive, narrative and reflective essays, with apt quotations from the entire field of Sanskrit literature, while the second one (1950) includes 12 addresses by the author on Indian heritage, the importance of Sanskrit, the means for modernizing Sanskrit study, etc. It is interesting to note when he states that mutual jealousy of the Pandits is one of the causes for the decline of Sanskrit studies.

MANI, VETAM. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Purāṇic Encyclopaedia (a comprehensive dictionary with special reference to the Epic and Purāṇic Literature; 1975).

MAṆIKA (fl. 15th cent.). A Nepalese Sanskrit dramatist, son of Rājavardhana and pupil of Naṭeśvara. His Bhairavānanda is a secular drama with Bhairava and Madanavati (a celestial damsel cursed by a Rishi to become human) as hero and heroine.

MĀṆIKYACHANDRA (fl. c. 1160-1220). A

Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of Pārśvanātha-charita (in 10 cantos) and Śāntinātha-charita on the lives of Jaina Tīrthaṅkaras; he is also called Māṇikyasūri. Nalāyaṇa (on the story of Nala) is another long poem written in 100 cantos.

MĀṆIKYANANDIP (fl. 8th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit writer and author of Parīkshā-mukha-sūtra, a work on Jaina logic; it is based on Akalaṅka's Nyāya-viniśchaya.

MĀṆIKYA SŪRI (fl. 11th cent.). A Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of the Yaśodhara-charita (q.v.), a Śvetāmbara version of the epic. See Jasahara-chariṭu and Yaśastilaka-champū.

MAṆJUNĀTHA BHATṬ. A Sanskrit poet of St. Aloysius College, Mangalore, whose Virakti-vīthikā (1984) is a fine poem with devotional fervour describing an imaginary pilgrimage to the Himalayas ; 21 Anyokti verses are appended to it.

MAṆJUŚRĪ-MŪLAKALPA. A Buddhistic Sanskrit Tantric work, in which Śākyamuni gives instructions to Maṇjuśrī about magic rites with Mantras, Mudrās, Maṇḍalas, etc. Entirely in the spirit of the Mantrayāna, the work describes itself as a Mahā-vaiṣṇava-mahā-yāna-sūtra; some scholar ascribes it to 2nd cent. A.D.

MANKAD, D.R. A modern scholar, whose chief works are : ed. of Kishkindhā-kāṇḍa in the critical ed. of Rāmāyaṇa, pub. by University of Baroda, Types of Sanskrit Drama (on the different forms of Sanskrit drama and also their evolution), Purāṇic Chronology (a monumental work; 1951), ed. of the Yuga-purāṇa (1951) and several research articles on 'Yugas' and 'Manvantara'. He has pub. also the Buddhivṇodu-kāvya, a small poem of 20 verses with the comm. of one Kālidāsa.

According to Mankad, all the Yugas had at first an equal number of years, each having 1000 years at first and then 1200 years; the total of four Yugas being 4000 or 4800 years; Manvantara was used for: (a) a period from one Manu (generic dynastic title for a king) to another Manu, or (b) a period from a Manu (starter of a dynasty) to any king of his line. Manu's date has been taken to be 5976 B.C. and the date of Bhārata war as 3201 B.C.

MAÑKHA (Mankhaka or Mañkhuka). A Sanskrit lexicographer and author of the Anekārthakośa (q.v.), which is a homonymous lexicon with words arranged in the alphabetical order of final consonants. Mañkha is identified with his namesake, the author of the Śrīkaṇṭha-charita (q.v.), who lived in the reign of Jayasimha of Kashmir (1128-55). The author was a pupil of Ruyyaka, was son of Viśvāvarta and grandson of Manmatha; his brothers, Śringāra, Rhaṅga and Alaṅkāra were, like himself, scholars and were employed as State officials.

MAÑKHA-KOŚA. Same as Anekārthakośa (q.v.).

MANKOWSKI, LEON. A Polish Indologist, who lectured (1894-1909) on Sanskrit in Cracow. He studied in Germany and Austria and was interested chiefly in the Old Indian fables. His chief work is: Der Auszug aus dem Pañchatantra in Kshemendi's Bṛhatkathā-mañjarī.

MANMATH NATH DUTT. A modern scholar, who has tr. into Eng. prose the Agni-purāṇa, Vishṇu-purāṇa, Garuḍa-purāṇa, Vālmiki-rāmāyaṇa, Śrīmadbhāgavata and Dharmaśāstra.

MANORAMĀ. See Bhaṭṭojī Dikshita.

MANORAÑJANA BASU. A modern scholar, who has pub. a general study of Tantra.

MANORAÑJANA ŚĀSTRĪ. A modern

Sanskrit author of Patākāmnāya (1966), which is a philosophical and ideological exposition of the implications of the National Flag; he tr. also modern Assamese poet Raghunātha Choudhuri's Ketaki into Sanskrit (1964).

MANORATHA-PŪRAṆĪ. A Pali comm. on Anguttaranikāya (q.v.) by Buddhaghosha, which gives a useful account of Theras and Theris.

MANTRA-BRĀHMAṆA. See Brāhmaṇa.

MANTRA-MAHODADHI. See Mahidhara.

MANTRINI PRASĀD (1932-). A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is The Language of the Nirukta (1975).

MANU. Foremost among the twenty great writers of original Smṛiti, who is traditionally regarded as the author of the Sanskrit Manu-smṛiti. See Smṛiti. A Dharmasūtra by Manu or of his school is supposed by some scholars to have existed at one time; it is referred to as Mānava-dharmasūtra. Regarded as the progenitor of the human race, Manu is considered by some modern scholars to be mythical.

MA. I (fl. c. 875-900). A Sanskrit writer on Mathematics and author of Bṛīhanmānasa, which, according to Al-Bīrūnī, is based on Laghumānasa, which Mañjula composed about A.D. 932.

MANU-BHĀSHYA. The oldest Sanskrit comm. by Medhātithi (q.v.) on the Manu-smṛiti (q.v.).

MANU-SMṚITI (MĀNAVA DHARMA-ŚĀSTRĀ). See Smṛiti.

MANVARTHA-MUKTĀVALĪ. The most famous of the Sanskrit comm. on the Manu-smṛiti (q.v.), which is brief but lucid and is very popular. Written by Kullūka Bhaṭṭa (q.v.) at Kāśī, it is not an original work, but is based on the commentaries of Medhātithi and Govindarāja.

MARAṆA-SAMĀDHI. See Maraṇa-samāhī.

MARAṆA-SAMĀHĪ. See Pāiṇna.

MARETIN, Y.V. A modern Russian Indologist, whose 'Malaian and Indonesyan Researches' (1977) discusses the problems of historical and cultural connections between Ancient India and South East Asia.

MAREATLA, M. A modern scholar, whose chief work is: The Philosophy of Vallabhachārya (1967).

MARIANO, B. A modern Italian Indologist, whose chief work is a study of Daṇḍin's Kūvyādarśa.

MĀRKAṆḌEYA KAVINDRA (fl. 17th cent.). A Prakrit writer and author of Prākṛita-sarvasva (q.v.), a grammatical work.

MĀRKAṆḌEYA-PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

MAROTHY, MARGIT G. A Hungarian Indologist, who tr. Bhagavadgītā into Hungarian (Budapest, 1924; 2nd ed. 1944).

MARSHALL, SIR JOHN (1870-1958). An English Indologist, who was appointed Director-General of Archaeology in 1902. He was responsible for excavation works at Sārnāth, Brita, Harappa, Mohenjodaro, Sānchī, Taxila, etc.; his monumental work is Mohenjodaro and the Indus Civilization (3 Vols., London, 1921). Marshall has proposed the dates 3250 B.C. and 2750 B.C. as covering the period of the Indus Civilization. His other works are : Taxila (3 Vols., 1951), The Monuments of Sānchī (3 Vols., with A. Foucher and N.G. Majumdar) and A Guide to Sānchī (Delhi, 1918; 2nd ed. 1936).

MARTINS, ROBERTO DE ANDRADE (1950-). An Indologist, who is Professor at the Instituto de Fisica "Gleb Wataghin" Universidade de Campinas, Brazil. His chief works (in Portuguese) are : "Sāṅkhya-Yoga System. With a general introduction and translation of the Sāṅkhyakārikā and Pātañjalayogasūtram", "Vedic Hymns. An Anthology" and several articles on Oriental Dialectics, on the origins of Greek and Hindu Atomism, the critics of Hegel to the philosophy of India, the doctrine of rebirth and the four ashrams.

MASICA, COLIN P. An American linguist, whose chief work is Defining a Linguistic Area: South Asia (Chicago, 1976).

MASKELL, D.A.L. (d. 1956). A German Indologist, whose chief work is ed. of Kaikhā-vitarāṇī; she was the daughter of W.F. Stede (q.v.).

MASSON, JEFF N. An American Indologist, whose special study is on Abhinavagupta's aesthetics, entitled Sāntarasa and Abhinavagupta's Philosophy of Aesthetics (jointly with N.V. Patwardhan).

MASSON-OURSEL, P. A modern Indologist, whose chief work: Ancient India and Indian Civilisation (London, 1934) has been written in collaboration with others.

MATAṆGA (fl. after Bharata; q.v.). Author of Sanskrit Bṛihaddeśī (q.v.; on music), whom tradition makes the father of Dattila and Kohala (qq.v.). He mentions Bharata and quotes passages from Kohala and is referred to by such eminent writers as Abhinavagupta and Śārṅgadeva. Mataṅga differs from Bharata at several places, particularly in the introduction of 12 Svaras in Murchanā. Among Prabandhas, he is said to have introduced the form Harivilāsa and among dances a species, called Zakkinī.

MĀTAṅGA DIVĀKARA. A Sanskrit poet, whose name comes only from anthologies. He was at the court of Harshavardhana (r. 606-47) and has been identified with the Jaina writer Manatunga (q.v.), whose Bhaktāmara-stotra in honour of the Jaina saint Rishabha is brought into connexion with Bāṇa and Mayūra by another tale. Mānatunga, it is said, wrote so fine a panegyric of the Sun that he was saved from leprosy; then Bāṇa in jealousy produced the Chandīśatuka, after cutting off his hands and feet, in order that he might exhibit the power of the goddess in healing her devotee in gratitude for his eulogy. Mānatunga, then, to prove the might of the Jinās, had himself fastened with forty-two chains and cast into a house; he uttered his poem of praise and was released forthwith. Mātanga is identified perhaps also with Siddhasena Divakara, the author of the Kalyāṇamandira-stotra. See Mayura.

MĀTAṅGA-LILĪ. A Sanskrit work by Nīlakaṇṭha Bhaṭṭa (q.v.) on elephant lore which is divided into 12 chapters and consists of 263 verses. According to Keith, it was composed by one Nārāyaṇa.

MATEN, I. P. A Dutch Indologist, who has pub. tr. of Budhasvāmin's Bṛīhaṭkathā śloka-saṅgraha into Dutch (1973). He is at present working on 'A Literary Analysis of Sanskrit Narrative Literature'.

MATHANASIMHA. Author of the Sanskrit Rasa-ratna-mālikā, an Āyurvedic work, his date is uncertain.

MĀTHARA-VṚITTI. A Sanskrit philosophical work by Mātharācārya (q.v.), which is considered as the lost original of the Saṅkhya-kārikā-vṛitti, tr. into Chinese by Paramārtha (born, A.D. 499). The Gauḍapādu-bhāṣya, an abridgment of the Māthara-vṛitti is by one Gauḍapāda.

MATHURĀNĀTHA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author of Yantrarājajātana and Jyotiṣa-siddhānta-sāraḥ, both astronomical works.

MATHURĀNĀTHA (b. 1890). A Sanskrit Paṇḍita of the court of Jaipur, who was the Superintendent of Sanskrit Studies. A prolific and versatile poet and popularly known as Mañjunātha, his chief works are: Īśvara-vilāsa, Padyamuktāvalī, Gitivīthī (1929), Sāhitya-vaibhava (1930, some poems on Nature, emotions, the greatness of science including reflective pieces), Jayapura-vaibhava (1947; q.v.), imitations of Persian gazl, etc. and a Sanskrit poetical version of the Prākṛita Gāthā-saptasatī. He has tried to bring Hindī poetry into contact with Sanskrit, as in his Jayapura-vaibhava, Sāhitya-vaibhava and Gitivīthī, he used a large number of metres and song-forms from Vrajabhāṣā, Hindi and Urdu with the express aim of acquainting the Sanskrit Paṇḍitas with the beauties of regional poetry, he also tr. into Sanskrit the Satasatī of Bihārī Dāsa.

MATHURĀ PRĀSADA DĪKSHITA (fl. 1st half of 20th cent.) A Sanskrit dramatist, who wrote thirty works on the lives of Rānā Pratāpa, Prithvirāja and other historical figures. His chief dramas are: Virapratāpanāṭaka (Lahore, 1937), Bhūbhārodharanam (1955; the author puts Hindi in place of traditional Prakṛit) and Bhārata-vijayānāṭaka (1937; in this Mewārī is used in place of Prakṛit).

MATTHEI, BIMAL KRISHNA (1935-). A scholar, who is Spalding Professor of Eastern Religions and Ethics at the Oriental Institute, University of Oxford. His chief works are: The Navya-nyāya Doctrine of Negation (1968; Harvard Oriental Series, vol. 46), Epistemology, Logic and Grammar in Indian Philosophical Analysis (1971), Śaśadhara's Nyāya-Siddhānta-Dīpa (critical ed. with Introduction), Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika (A Historical Survey); contribution to A History of Indian Literature, vol. VI, Pt. 3, Fasc. 2, Wiesbaden, 1977), The Logical Illumination of Indian Mysticism (Oxford, 1978), The Central Philosophy of Jainism (Anekāntavāda; 1981), Logical and Ethical Issues in Religious Beliefs (1982), Analytical Philosophy in Comparative Perspective (an anthology ed. with J.L. Shaw; 1985), Logic, Language and Reality : Introduction to Classical Indian philosophy (1985), Perception : An Essay on Classical Indian Theory of Knowledge (Oxford; in press), Buddhist Logic and Epistemology (Holland; in press) and Sanskrit and Related Studies (An Anthology of papers presented at an International Conference at the State University of New York at New Paltz, New York in 1982; in press). He is Founder-editor of Journal of Indian Philosophy and Series Editor : Studies of Classical India. He has also written about 70 articles and reviews. Though born in West Bengal, he is now a Canadian citizen.

MĀTRICHEṬA. According to a Tibetan tradition, he is identical with Aśvaghoṣa (q.v.), though some modern scholars think that Mātricheṭa is confused with Aśvaghoṣa, because both belonged to the same school and were perhaps contemporaneous. Mātricheṭa is mentioned by I-tsing and his name figures in inscriptions.

MATSYA-(MĀTSYA-) PURĀṆA. See Purāṇa.

MATTA-VILĀSA. A Sanskrit farce in one Act, belonging to the Prahasana class, written by Mahendra-varman (q.v.), a king of the Pallava dynasty, who ruled in Kāñchī in about A.D. 620. The author shows how the adherents of Buddhism and of the religions of the Kāpālikas and Pāṣupatas were degraded in their conducts by their drinking habits.

MAURER, WALTER HÄRDING (1921-). An American Indologist, who is Professor of Sanskrit, University of Hawaii at Manoa, U.S.A. His works are : critical ed. of Sugamānavayā Vṛitti, a Late Commentary in Jaina Sanskrit on Kālidāsa's Meghadūta (2 vols., Poona, 1965) and Pinnacles of India's Past : Selections from the R̥gveda (Philadelphia, 1985). He is at present working on A Sanskrit Student's Companion to the Bhagavadgītā, Eng. tr. of Vopadeva's Mugdhabodha, a Sanskrit grammar of the 13th century, with Introduction and notes and an introductory grammar with separate volume of texts and a lexicon with detailed etymologies (3 vols.). He has pub. so far about 15 research articles and about 20 reviews of books. He has also prepared a long article on the origin and development of the Indian writing system and its dissemination throughout Southeast Asia; the article is yet to be published. Mrs. Maurer, who had worked with Dr. Maurer in the Library of Congress, is preparing a Bibliography and complete Index, including subjects of all Commemoration Volumes relating to South Asian Studies.

MAXMUELLER, FRIEDRICH (1823-1900). A celebrated German Indologist, who was son of Wilhelm Mueller (1794-1827), a Librarian, whose lyrics were well known at the time. Max Mueller studied at Leipzig and Berlin; in Berlin he studied with Bopp and S.J. Schelling. In 1845, he attended in Paris Burnouf's classes on the R̥gveda and decided to publish the R̥gveda with the comm. of Sāyaṇa. In 1846, Max Mueller went to London, where the East India Company agreed to bear the expenses of printing this work. Thus appeared ed. of the R̥gveda with Sāyaṇa's comm including word-index and with English notes (6 vols., 1849-74); the work was completed nearly in 25 years. The first edition of 500 copies was sold very quickly and the Maharaja of Vijayanagara agreed to take over the expenses of the second edition; this ed. appeared in 4 volumes. Several editions of the Rigveda in the Bombay Sanskrit Series were based on this work. Max Mueller tr. the Hymns to the Maruts or storm-gods as the first volume of the Rigveda tr.; the tr. was not continued.

In 1859, Max Mueller pub. A History of Sanskrit Literature (reprint, 1926). In the Introduction, he compared India and Greece and stressed the importance of the Rigveda as "the most ancient book of the Aryan family". He divided Vedic history into four periods; the last chap. deals with the "Sūtra period". He discusses the difference between Śruti (revelation) and Smṛiti (tradition), also the Vedāṅgas, particularly Nirukta (etymology). Then is discussed Kalpa (ritual) in which is shown the relationship between the four classes of priests and the four Vedas; then there is a list of the goṭras, the families of Brahmins. Chap. II is devoted to the "Brāhmaṇa period" to Āraṇyakas and Upanishads. In the third chapter, "The Mantra period" are discussed the older and younger hymns of the Rigveda. In "The Introduction of Writing", he was of the opinion that before the time of Pāṇini and before the spread of Buddhism in India, writing for literary purposes was absolutely unknown. In Chap. IV "The Chhandas Period", he says: "There is a monotheism that precedes the polytheism of the Veda"; there is only one Divine Being, which is addressed under different names.

Max Mueller was a brilliant speaker and his lectures have been collected in Chips from a German Work-shop (4 vols. 1867-75). He thought that the history of religion was more important than the history of language, and that the true history of mankind is the history of religion. He also studied Zend-Avesta and the Tiṭṭaka. His lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as illustrated by the religions of India and Introduction to the Science of Religion were also published in book form.

Besides the ed. of the Rigveda, the other monumental work of Max Mueller is the designing and editing the 50-volume Series: The Sacred Books of the East, which took him roughly 22 years (1879-1900). The Series involves the Eng. tr. of the sacred books of the whole East and its principal religions. Of the 49 volumes (vol. 50 is cumulative index, as also an analytical, classified and condensed presentation of the whole series, compiled by Winternitz and pub. in 1910 after Max Mueller's death), 21 volumes comprise the Vedas, Brāhmaṇas, Upanishads, Dharma-śāstras, the Gṛhya-sūtras, Dharma-sūtras, Vedānta-sūtras, while 11 comprise texts on Buddhism and Jainism. In Sanskrit, Hindu texts include the Vedas—Rigveda and Atharvaveda (3 vols.), the Upanishads (2 vols.), the Brāhmaṇas—Śatapatha (5 vols.), the Dharmaśāstras including that of Manu (5 vols.), the Gṛhya-sūtras (2 vols.), Bhagavadgītā and two other philosophical selections from the Mahābhārata (Sanat-sujātīya; V. 41-46 and Anugītā; XIV. 16-51; 1 vol.), the Vedānta-sūtras with the two Bhāṣyas of Śaṅkara and Rāmānuja (3 vols.); in the original plan, it was proposed to include the Vāyu to represent the Purāṇa but this could not be given because R.L. Mitra, who had agreed to tr. it, fell ill. The Buddhist works include Dhammapada, Sutta-nipāta, Buddhist Suttas (Mahāparinirvāṇa-Suttanta and six others) (2 vols.), Vinaya Texts (3 vols.), the Saddharma-puṇḍarīka (1 vol.) The Questions of Milinda (2 vols.) and Buddhist Mahāyāna Texts (1 vol.), while 2 vols. are devoted to Jaina Sūtras (Achāranga-sūtra, Kalpa-sūtras, Uttarādhyaṇa-sūtra and Sāmrakṣitāṅga-sūtras). In the SBE Series, Max Mueller tr. into Eng. the Upanishads (2 vols.) and the Vedic Hymns (Pt. I, Hymns to the Maruts, Rudra, Vāyu and Vāta from Rigveda), The Gṛhya-sūtras (Āpastamba's Yajña-paribhāṣa), The Dham- mapada, Buddhist Mahāyāna Texts (Sukhāvastivyūha, larger and smaller, Vajra-cchhedikā and Prajñā-pāramitā-hṛīdyā-sūtra, larger and smaller).

After 14 editions of Max Mueller's Lectures on the Science of Language had appeared from 1846 onwards, the work was pub. in two vols. under the title Science of Language (1891).

Max Mueller's famous book India—What it can teach Us is based on his lectures for candidates of the Indian Civil Service, on whom he wished to impress the importance of ancient Indian culture. He saw a break in the development of literature after the invasion of Śakas and the introduction of Buddhism and Jainism. A renaissance set with the Guptas, who favoured Brahmanical religion and encouraged Sanskrit literature. He also wrote a Sanskrit grammar for beginners and hand-books for the study of Sanskrit.

Max Mueller's other chief works are : Eng. tr. of the Bṛihaddevatā, ed. and German tr. of Hitopadeśa (Leipzig, 1844), of Megha-duta (Konigsberg, 1847), Rigveda-prāṭisūkhya (text with German tr.; Leipzig, 1859-69), Hymns of the Rigveda in Saṁhitā and Pada Texts (2 vols.), Essays on Comparative Mythology (London, 1856), A Survey of Languages (Semitic, Arian, and Turanian Families), My Autobiography (A Fragment), Rammohun to Rāmakrishṇa, Rāmakrishṇa : His Life and Sayings, Selected Essays (London, 1881), Studies on Buddhism, Three Lectures on Vedānta Philosophy (1894) and The Six Systems of Indian Philosophy (1899), a year before his death. This was the first work treating of all the philosophical systems of India. He called Vedānta "a system in which human speculation seems to have reached its very acme".

Two Japanese students, who had come to England for Sanskrit studies, helped Max Mueller to obtain ancient palm leaf manuscripts from Japan; they were published as Buddhist Texts from Japan. The Dharmasaṅgraha is a compendium of Buddhist technical terms, the pub. of which was completed by Max Mueller after the early death of his Japanese student Kasawara.

Max Mueller published : Autobiography, A Fragment in 1901, and his wife Georgia Mueller, brought out Life and Letters of Friedrich Max Mueller (2 vols., London, 1902). Max Mueller's works have been collected in four volumes.

Max Mueller was the first scholar, who roused genuine interest for the Vedas among the people in the West and his expert knowledge of the facts of the Vedas invested his writing with a kind of authority. His conception of the Vedic religion was essentially naturalistic; he believed that Vedic poets always sought to perceive the 'divine', the 'supernatural', the 'infinite', behind the 'natural' and usually, a name was given to god, which denoted the special characteristic of the nature (or form) of that god, such as Indra (from indu-drop) the rainer; Rudra, the howler; Maruts, the thrusters; and Varuṇa, the all-encompasser.

Max Mueller's special contribution to the study of Vedic religion is his theory of henotheism in Rigveda, which is neither polytheism nor monotheism; it is what he prefers to call henotheism or kathenotheism, that is to say, "a successive belief in single supreme gods". For example, in the Veda, one god after another is invoked; for the time being, all that can be said of a divine being is ascribed to him; the poet, while addressing him, seems hardly to know of any other gods. By way of tracing the further development of Vedic henotheism, Max Mueller refers to the tendency of identifying one god with another, to the formation of dual divinities, to the concept of Viśva-Devah, the All-gods in their collective capacity, and finally to the expedient of making one of the gods supreme above all the rest.

Regarding the age of the Vedas, Max

Mueller on the basis of Vedic literature, and arbitrarily assigning to each stratum a period of 200 years, arrived at 1200-1000 B.C., but admitted that he did not know how much earlier it can be further pushed back.

MAY, JACQUES. A Buddhist scholar, who has done excellent tr. of 12 chaps. of the Prasannapadā; a good survey of the history and doctrines of the Yogācāra school has also been given by May (1971). May is also engaged at Paris on Hobogirin (in French), the pub. of which had to be discontinued in 1937 (Tokyo).

MĀYĀ MĀLAVIYA. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Annual Bibliography of Indology (Part I, 1974, II, 1977).

MAYAMATA. A Sanskrit work on śilpaśāstra or architecture; its date and author are not known.

MĀYĀRĀMA MIŚRA GAUDA (fl. 18th cent.). A Sanskrit author, whose chief works on Dharmaśāstra are : Vyavahāra-nirṇaya, Vyavahāra-sāra and Mitāksharā-sāra.

MAYEDA, S. A modern Japanese scholar, whose chief work is Indian Philosophy and Literature (Tokyo, 1974).

MAYEDO, NORIKO (Mrs.). A modern Indologist, who worked on Indian folk-tales, the materials of which were originally collected by Norman Brown; their work has been pub. under the title Tawi-Tales : Folk Tales from Jammu (American Oriental Series, 57, 1974).

MAYR, AUREL (fl. 1905). A Hungarian Indologist, whose works dealing with the history of Old Indian Law and pub. in German, have preserved their scientific value up to the present day.

MAYRHOFER, M. A modern Austrian Indologist, whose chief work is A Concise Etymological Sanskrit Dictionary (1956-78); he has written also several papers on the etymology of certain words. He has pub. in German Sanskrit Grammatik (Berlin, 1953), a work on grammar. His present project is a 'Reverse Index of Old Indian', pub. under the editorship of W. Schwaz and O.L. Pfeiffer (1974 ff.).

MAYŪRA (fl. 7th cent.) A Sanskrit poet, who was a contemporary of Bhaṭṭa (fl. 630-45); tradition names him a friend and father-in-law of Bhaṭṭa. Bhaṭṭa and Mayūra were rivals in poetry in the court of king Harshavardhana of Kanauj and were equally honoured by the king. Legend tells that Mayūra described so minutely the beauties of his daughter that she cursed him in anger, and he became a leper, from which unhappy state he was rescued through the aid of the sun-god whom he celebrated in his Sūrya-śataka (q.v.), also called Mayūra-śataka. It seems that the legend is due to Mayūra's Mayureshika, eight verses, describing the charms of a woman, said by some to be Mayūra's daughter herself.

MĀYURĀJA. Same as Anaṅgaharsha Mātra-rāja.

MĀYŪRAM VIŚVANĀTHA ŚĀSTRĪ. See Bhārata-bhājana.

MAYŪRA-ŚATAKA. Same as Sūrya-śataka (q.v.).

MAYŪRAVARMA-CHARITRA. A Sanskrit work, which was written on Mayūravarma, founder of the Kadamba dynasty of Jayantipura (Banavasi); its time is not certain.

McCRINDLE, JOHN W. A British Indologist, whose chief work is Ancient India As Described in Classical Literature (1901).

MCDERMOTT, JAMES PAUL (1942-). An American Indologist, who is Professor of Religious Studies, Canisius College, Buffalo, New York. He specializes in the history of Buddhist thought and ethics, specifically Theravāda and Indian Mahayāna. His chief work is : Development in the Early Buddhist Concept of Kamma, Karma (1984). He has written a number of articles as well, all concerned with his specialized field.

McHENRY. A French Indologist, whose chief work is a history of Ancient Indian Literature (in French, 1901)

McKENZIE, JOHN. A British Indologist, whose chief work is Hindu Ethics: A Historical and Critical Essay.

McKLON, RICHARD P. An American scholar, who has, along with Professor Nikam of Mysore, brought out a tr. of Aśoka's Edicts.

MEDHAÑKARA. See Vanaratna Medhankara.

MEDHĀTITHI (fl. 825-900) A Sanskrit writer and the oldest commentator of the Manu-smṛiti whose comm. Manu-bhāṣya is available. Son of Vīrasvāmin, he was an erudite scholar and was at home not only in Dharmaśāstra but in Mimāṃsā as well. He quotes Asahāya and Kumārila (qq.v.) by name, and most probably cites the view of Śaṅkarāchārya. Vijñāneśvara looks upon him as an authority on Dharmasāstra. A Smṛiti-vivēka is supposed by P.V. Kane to have been written by Medhātithi.

MEDHĀVRATA ŚĀSTRĪ, the late. A Sanskrit poet, who was a graduate of Gurukula Vṛindāvan. His chief works are : Dayānanda-digvijaya (a poem in 27 cantos on the life of Dayānanda Sarasvatī, pub. with Hindi tr. ; 2 Pts., 1938), Kumudīnī-chandra (a novel, 1920), Kṛishṇa-prāśasti-pañchadaśī, Nirālam- badhenu (gīta), Prakṛiti-saundaryam (1934 ; on the beauties of nature), Dayānanda-laharī, Brahmarshi Virajānanda charita (on Svāmī Dayānanda's Guru), Nārāyaṇasvāmī-charita, Jñānendra-charita and Nityānanda-charita.

MEDINIKARA (Medini). A Sanskrit lexicographer, son of Prāṇakara, and author of the Anekārthasabdakośa (Medinī-kośa; q.v.) which appears to be a mere remodelling of the Uttapraśasta (q.v.). He probably flourished in the 12th cent. as the authorities cited by him are earlier than A.D. 1159.

MEDINĪ-KOŚA. A Sanskrit lexicon by Medinīkara (q.v.), whose real title is Anekārthasabdakośa. It contains the meaning and gender of words as also words having the same meaning and words conveying two senses.

MEDVEDEV, F.M. A modern Russian Indologist, whose chief work in Russian: Eng. tr. 'Essays on the Economic and Social History of India' (1973), treats also of the genesis of the feudal system in India.

MEER, W. VAN DER. A Dutch Indologist, who has pub. Hindustani Music in the 20th Century (1977)

MEGHADUTA. A Sanskrit poem by Kālidāsa (q.v.), consisting of 110 to 121 stanzas, depending upon the version, and divided into two parts: Purva-megha and Uttara-megha.

A Yaksha, employed under Kubera, the lord of Alakā, is banished from the Kailāsa mountain for a period of one year for dereliction of duty, leaving behind his consort and his home; in his ramblings, the Yaksha makes his abode in Rāmāgiri in Central India. On the approach of the rainy season, he is maddened with pangs of separation and decides to send a message of affection and solace to his beloved. He espies a cloud, bound as it were northward, and requests it to carry his message to his beloved in Alakā. He accurately describes to the cloud the path that he will have to traverse to reach his beloved on Mount Kailāsa. From Rāmagiri, the cloud is directed to seek the Daśārṇa country with its city of Vidiśā, and then must drink the waters of the Vetravati before proceeding to visit Ujjayini (which Kālidāsa describes with great affection); the shrine of Mahākālā must be visited, the Charmaṇvati crossed, and the holy Brahmāvarta after passing Daśapura, there the cloud will visit the field of Kurukshetra, the scene of Arjuna's great deeds, and drink the water of the Sarasvati. Thence it must go where the Ganges descends from the Himālaya near Mount Kanakhal and then to Kailāsa, passing through the gap of Mount Krauñcha which Paraśurāma made as a path to the south. Then the water of lake Mānasa will refresh the cloud, and on the top of the mountain is Alakā where the beloved of the Yaksha dwells. The delights of the divine city are fully depicted, and the poet then describes to the cloud the home he is to seek out. All this offers the poet a great opportunity to describe nature in a splendid manner and to give charming pictures and similes.

The poem has been variously called a lyric, an elegy or even a monody, though some scholars would insist on calling it an epic, while Vallabhadeva would call it only a Khaṇḍakāvya. This exquisite little poem has evoked the highest admiration of literary critics of all ages. It ranks highest among Kālidāsa's poems for brevity of expression, richness of content, and power to elicit sentiment. Mallinātha has written his comm. only on this among the short poems. The existence of some 50 commentaries on the work is an index to its popularity. The Meghadūta or sometimes called Meghasandēśa has inspired a number of Dūta-kāvya's not only in Sanskrit but also in other Indian languages.

MEGHANĀDA-VADHA. A Sanskrit version of the Bengali epic of the same title done by Nityāgopāla Vidyāvinoda (pub. in Saṃskṛita Sāhitya Parishat Patrika, Calcutta, 1954).

MEGHA VIJAYA GAṆĪ (fl. 1671). A Jaina Sanskrit poet, who was well-versed in grammar, astronomy and logic; his writings on these branches of learning are now appreciated. As a poet, his greatness is sufficiently proved by his Saptasandhāna-mahākāvya, in which in 9 cantos seven stories are at a time narrated, in very felicitous language all the same; the poet has applied each verse to Vṛishabhanātha, Śāntinātha, Pārśvanātha, Neminātha, Mahāvīrasvāmī, Kṛishṇa and Baladeva (known as Rāmachandra). In Devanandābhyudaya, of 7 cantos, the poet relates the life of Vijayadeva Sūri. Based on Kālidāsa's Meghadūta, is Gaṇi's Meghadūta-samasyā-lekha, being a communication from the poet to the lord of his Gachchha, Vijaya Prabha Sūri. In his Digvijaya-mahākāvya, the life of Vijaya Prabha Sūri is described in 13 cantos. His Yukti-prabodha is an allegorical drama intended to refute some rival philosophical theories. Gaṇi also composed Pañchākhyā-noddhara, which is based on several Jaina versions of the Pañchatantra.

MEHENDALE, M.A. A modern scholar, whose works are: Historical Grammar of Inscriptional Prakrits (Poona, 1948), Nirukta Notes (1965; critical discussion of some controversial topics in the Nirukta), Aśokan Inscriptions (1948), Some Aspects of Indo-Aryan Linguistics (1968), an article on a Prākṛit Vibhāṣhā. Some papers containing Lüdér's editions of the Brāhmī inscriptions from Bharnut were collected by his student Waldschmidt, who has since revised them with the help of Mehendale.

MEHLIG, JOHANNES. A German Indologist, who has pub. a study on Kālidāsa's Śakuntalā (Leipzig, 1973) and worked on the Śiva cult in the Mahābhārata.

MEHTA, B.D. A Sanskrit scholar, who has, along with K.A. Vyās, pub. an abridged version of the Bhāgavatapurāṇa (Ahmedabad, 2 vols., 1976-77) with an English translation.

MEHTA, M. A scholar, whose chief work is Outlines of Jaina Philosophy and Jaina Psychology (Bangalore, 1954-55).

MEHTA, MAHESH M. An Indian scholar, who is tenured Professor in the Department of Religious Studies, University of Windsor, Windsor, Ontario, Canada. His works are : The Mahābhārata—A Study of the Critical Edition (1976), Girvana-Bhārati : An Introduction to Sanskrit (1982) and Chārudatta (a Sanskrit play, tr. and annotated with G.H. Godbole ; 1966). He has also pub. a number of articles and book reviews.

MEIER, J. A German Indologist, whose chief work, Der Archaismus in der Sprache des Bhāgavata Purāṇa (Leipzig, 1931), treats of the grammatical archaisms in the Bhāgavata.

MEILLET, A. A French Indologist, whose Les dialectes indeuropeennes (Paris, 1908) is a grammatical work.

MEINHARD, H. A German Indologist, whose chief work, Beitrage zur Kenntnis des Śaivismus nach den Purāṇas (Berlin, 1928), deals with Śaivism in the Purāṇas.

MEISTER, MICHAEL W. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is : Encyclopaedia of Indian Temple Architecture (South India, Lower Dravīḍadeśa ; co-ordinated by M.A. Dhaky).

MELBYE, C. F. A Danish Indologist, whose chief work is Buddhareligionen (1926).

MENSCHING, G. (1901-). A German Indologist, whose chief works are Buddhist Symbo- lism (1929) and Buddhist Spiritual World (1953).

MENṬHA. A Sanskrit poet, who according to Kalhaṇa remained at the court of king Mātṛigupta of Kashmir and therefore, be assigned to the latter half of the 6th century. His Haya-griva-vadha, describing the killing of the demon Hayagrīva, is now lost but one verse is quoted by Rājasekhara and Kshemendra and one more by Rāghava in his comm. on Śakuntala. Of Menṭha, also called Bharṭṛimeṇṭha or Hastipaka, Kalhaṇa mentions that Mātṛigupta, himself a poet, found his Hayagrīva-vadha so charming that he rewarded the poet by giving him a golden dish to place below it when it was being bound, lest the flavour should escape; delighted with this sign of appreciation the poet felt the reward needless.

MERUTUṄGA. A Jaina Sanskrit poet of Anchalagachchha, who studied under Mahendraprabha Sūri and himself became a Sūri in 1370. His Meghadūta describes in four cantos the life of Neminātha, a Jaina Tirthaṅkara. The Jaina poets employed this form of poetry to serve religious purpose. He is the author also of Prabandha-chintāmaṇi (q.v.), while his Mahāpurusha-charita gives an account of some Jaina saints.

MESQUITA, R. A modern Austrian Indologist, who is preparing a critical ed. of the works of Yāmunāchārya (q.v.).

METTE, ADELHEID. A modern German Indologist, whose chief work is Indische Kulturstiftungsberichte (Wiesbaden, 1973). He also specializes in Jaina studies.

MEULENBELD, G.J. A Dutch Indologist, who has pub. The Mādhava-nidāna (1974).

MEYER. A modern Indologist, whose chief studies are Gesetzbuch und Purāṇa (Breslau, 1929), 'Tree-culture in the Agni-purāṇa' and on the archaic words and verbal forms in the Bhāgavata-purāṇa. He is of the opinion that the point of dispersal of the Indo-Iranians was the region of the Pamir.

MEYER, JOHANN JAKOB (1870-1939). A German Indologist, who was Reader in Ancient Indian Languages at Chicago University, U.S.A., but wrote his books in German. His main interest lay in the field of social life in ancient India and he studied Arthaśāstras and Dharmaśāstras extensively. He obtained the Ph.D. degree for his thesis on Daṇḍin's Daśakumāru-charita. He tr. Daśakumāru-charita (1902), Kshemendra's Samuyamātṛikā and Dāmodara Gupta's Kuṭṣānimata (1903 ; the last two novels about courtesans) into German from the original Sanskrit. He also tr. into English in 1909 Jacobi's "Selected Stories in Maharashtra" (in German) under the title Hindu Tales. He read the Rāmāyaṇa and the Mahābhārata many a time and wrote in German, later tr. into English as : Sexual Life in Ancient India. A Study in Comparative History of Ancient Indian Culture (2 vols., London, 1930). This work deals with all the aspects of woman as daughter, sister wife, mother, widow, servant and courtesan. From Chicago, he returned to Switzerland, where he was married in 1904. He tr. Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra into German (1926) and wrote a work in German as : "On the Character of Ancient Indian Law Books and their relation to each other and to Kauṭilya" (1927). Despite illness, he brought out another major work : "Trilogy of Ancient Indian Powers and Festivals of Vegetation". He treated Kāma, Bali and Indra in three monographs (1937).

MICHAEL, ALDOYSIUS. A modern scholar, whose chief work is: Rādhākṛishṇan On Hindu Moral Life and Action (1979).

MICHALSKI, STANISŁAS. A modern Polish

Indologist, who was a disciple of Leopold Schroeder. He treated mostly philosophic problems and tr. several Upanishads, the texts of Bhagavadgītā and Dhammapada into Polish.

MILHAṆA. A Sanskrit author of Chikitsā-mīta (q.v.), a work on Āyurveda, written in 1224.

MILINDA-PAṆḤA ('Questions of Milinda').

A Buddhist non-canonical work; the original work, which was probably in Sanskrit or some north-Indian Prakrit and was composed about the beginning of the Christian era in north-west India, is lost, and the present text is merely a Pali tr. of the original made at a very early date in Ceylon. It contains in the style of Suttas a dialogue between king Milinda or Menander (who ruled over the Greek territory of India in 1st cent. B.C.) and Thera Nāgasena about the most important problems of Buddhism. Milinda, who was a scholar as well as a soldier, was evidently well-disposed towards Buddhism, but whether he actually became a Buddhist, is not known. The work comprises seven books, but it originally consisted of only a small portion of the first and the whole of Books II-III. The work ends with Bk. III, which forms a fitting conclusion to it, and there is a fresh introduction to Bk. IV. Moreover, text up to Bk. III has been tr. into Chinese which may be dated between A.D. 317-420. Bks. IV-VII differ, again, from Bk. I in character. Mrs. Rhys-Davids, however, thinks that the book is of a single author.

There is a whole series of parables in Bk. I, which seeks to explain why man is responsible for his actions, though according to the Buddhist doctrines there is no permanent ego. Bks. II-III deal with the most important topics of Buddhist ethics and psychology which are of interest even to layman. As against this, there is a system of apologetics in Bk. IV, which concerns the scholars of canonical texts. Bks. IV-VII contain a number of quotations as well as frequent allusions to traditions divergent from the canonical texts and pertaining to a later period.

"The problems discussed in the Milinda-pañha find their counterpart in those that play a prominent part in the Kathāvatthu. The style of the Milinda-pañha shows an advance over the speeches of the Sutta Piṭaka, while some of the dialogues of the Milinda-pañha stand comparison with the dialogues of Plato. The language is elegant, and there are various eloquent passages,—HCIP II, 410. According to a Burmese tradition, it is one of the treatises included in the Khuddaka-nikāya (q.v.).

MILLER, BARBARA STOLER. An American Indologist, who is Chairman, Department of Oriental Studies, Barnard College, Columbia University, New York. Her works are: Bharṭṛihari : Poems (1967 ; tr. of the critical ed. of D.D. Kosambi), Phantasies of a Love-Thief : The Chaurapañchasikā Attributed to Bilhaṇa (critical ed. with Sanskrit text), A Syllabus of Indian Civilization (Columbia University, 1971 ; in Hindi and English), Love Song of the Dark Lord : Jayadeva's Gita-govinda (1984), The Hermit and the Love-Thief : Sanskrit poems of Bharṭṛihari and Bilhaṇa (1978), Theater of Memory : The Plays of Kālidāsa (ed. and tr. with Edwin Gerow and David Gitomer ; 1984), Exploring India's Sacred Art (ed. of Stella Kramrisch's Papers) and The Bhagavadgītā : Kṛishṇa's Counsel in Time of War (tr. and comm., due Spring, 1986). She has also written several scholarly articles on Rādhā, Rāmāyaṇa, Therīgāthā, Kālidāsa, Bhāsa and has contributed articles on the Rāmāyaṇa, Jayadeva and Bilhaṇa for The Dictionary of Oriental Literature (1973 ; ed. by Jaroslav Prusek). She is currently engaged on the tr. of Kumārascmbhava, "From Indian Earth : 4000 Years of Terra-cotta Art" and tr. of Buddhācharita.

MILLER, CHARLES JAMES. An Indologist, whose study is on Dance-Drama in Ceylon as also on Sanskrit Drama; he has written a paper 'Bharata and the Authorship and Age of the Nāṭya-Śāstra' (Sanskritā Raṅga Annual, VI, March, 1972).

MILLER, J. A. A British Indologist, who is known for his The Vision of Cosmic Order in the Vedas (1985).

MILTNER, VLADIMIR (1933-). A Czech Indologist, who won a universal acclaim by his brilliant tr. in Czech of Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra (1969). His other Czech publications (titles rendered into Eng.) are 'Stories from Fabulous India' (Prague, 1973), 'Nala and Damayanti' (Prague, 1977), 'India's Name is Bhārat' (a comprehensive survey of Indian cultural history; Prague 1978) and 'Āyurveda, or the science of longevity'.

MĪMĀMSĀNUKRAMAṆI. A Sanskrit mīmāṃsā work by Maṇḍana Miśra (q.v.).

MĪMĀMSĀ - NYĀYA - PRAKĀŚA. Popularly called Āpadevī, it is a Sanskrit work by Āpadeva (q.v.), giving good introduction to Purvamīmāṃsā philosophy. Summarising the essential doctrines of the whole Mīmāṃsā system, the author generally adopts the views of Parthasārathimiśra.

MĪMĀMSĀ-SŪTRA. A Sanskrit work in 12 chapters, attributed to Jaimini (q.v.), the first chapter of which discusses the sources of knowledge and the validity of the Vedas. The work describes the various sacrifices and their purposes, the theory of Apūrva as well as some philosophical propositions. The work is assigned to the 4th cent. B.C.

MĪNARĀJA-JĀTAKA (Yavanajātaka). An old Sanskrit work on horoscopy.

MINAYEFF, J.P. (1840-90). A Russian

Indologist, who was the first scholar to make good use of the manuscripts collected by M. Grimblot. He pub. Prātimoksha-sūtra: Buddijskij sluzebnik text of the Pāṭimokkha (with a tr., 1869), a Pali Grammar which was tr. into French and English (Eng. version by Ch. G. Adams, 1882), and Śāntideva's Bodhicharyāvatāra. He ed. also Anāgata-varṇa (1866), Petavatthu, Sandesukaḥa Dhūtivarṇa and Gandhavarṇa, wrote Essay on Phonetics and Morphology of Pali Language (St. Petersburg, 1872), Indian Tales and Legends (1875), Declensions and Conjugations of Sanskrit Grammar (1879) and Sketches of Important Monuments of Sanskrit Literature (1880).

MIRA ROY. A modern scholar, who has ed. and tr. into English (1976-77), the Rasārṇava (q.v.), a treatise composed in 1200.

MIRASHI, VĀSUDEV VISHṆU. A modern scholar, who has presented abridged versions of the works of Bāṇa and Subandhu (qq.v.): he has written on Kālidāsa (Kālidāsa: Date, Life and Works), Bhavabhūti, Sātavāhana and on Purāṇic studies. Credit goes to him for the discovery of the Epic Harivijaya, attributed to Sarvasena; he has ed. also Review of Indological Research in Last 75 Years (1967; jointly with P.J. Chinmulgund) and has written Literary and Historical Studies in Indology (5 Vols., collections of research articles). His works on Incriptions are Inscriptions of the Kalchuri-Chedi Era, Inscriptions of the Vākāṭakas and Inscriptions of the Śilāhāras.

MIRONOV, N.D. A Russian scholar, who was a pioneer in Russian Indology. His chief work is 'Aryan Vestings in the Near East of the 2nd Millennium B.C.' (Acta Orientalia, XI, 1933); he has also catalogued Sanskrit MSS. in the Oriental Institute and the State Library in Leningrad.

MISARŪ MIŚRA (fl. middle of 15th cent.). A celebrated Mithilā writer and author of Sanskrit Vivāda-chandra (q.v.; a Smṛiti digest of high authority in Mithilā) and Padārtha-chandrikā (on the Nyāyavaiśeṣika system of philosophy); the former work was written at the instance of Lachchhimādevī, wife of prince Chandrasimha.

MISHRA, H.R. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Theory of Rasa in Sanskrit Drama (1966).

MITĀKSHARĀ. A Sanskrit comm. by Vijñāneśvara (q.v.) on the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti (q.v.), which is a sort of Smṛiti digest as views of different writers on Smṛiti are cited and discussed. It explains away contradictions among them on the basis of mīmāṃsā rules of interpretation and effects a synthesis of apparently disconnected Smṛiti injunctions. Except in Bengal (where Dāyabhāga prevails) and in Mahārāṣṭra (where Mayākha prevails), it is an authoritative work in matters of adoption, inheritance, succession, etc. and is accepted by the law-courts throughout India. It recognises the birth-right of a son to the father's ancestral property. Of the numerous commentaries on it, the famous ones are the of Viśveśvara, Nandapaṇḍita and Bālaṃbhaṭṭa (qq.v.).

MITĀKSHARĀ. A Sanskrit comm. by Haradatta (q.v.) on the Gautama-dharmasūtra (q.v.).

MITRA, P. A modern scholar, whose chief work is: Life and Society in the Vedic Age (Calcutta, 1966).

MITRA, RĀJENDRA LĀL. See Rājendra Lāl Mitra.

MITRADATTA (fl. 16th-17th cent.). A Sanskrit poet and author of a poem Kāma- sandēśa (on the model of Meghadūta) in which the poet employs Kāmadeva, the god of love himself, as his messenger to convey his love to his wife Chandralakshmi at Tirunavaya.

MITRA MIŚRA (fl. 1st half of 17th cent.). A famous Smṛiti writer in Sanskrit, who exercised profound influence on the Benares School of Hindu Law. Son of Paraśurāma Paṇḍita and grandson of Haṁsa Paṇḍita, his works are: Vīramitrodaya (a huge celebrated Smṛiti digest) a comm. of the same name on Yājñavalkya-smṛiti (7.v.) and Ānandakanda-champū (on the story of Kṛishṇa). The first work was written at the behest of Vīrasimha, king of Orchhha (r. 1605-27) and was named after him.

MITRA, S.S. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is: A Comparative Grammar of Sanskrit, Greek and Latin (1968).

MITTAL, KEWAL KRISHAN (1931-). A scholar of Delhi University, whose chief works are: Materialism in Indian Thought (1974), Quest for Truth (1977) and A Tibetan Eye-view of Indian Philosophy (1984).

MITTAL, KUSUM. A modern scholar, who along with Schlingoff, pub. an ed. of Daśottarasūtra.

MITTERWALLNER, GRITLI VON (1925-). A German Indologist, whose chief work is Die Hindu-Kultgottheiten Goas (vol. I). His field of specialization is Indo-Portuguese art.

MIZUNO, KOGEN. A modern Japanese Buddhist scholar, whose chief works are: The Beginning of Buddhism and Buddhist Sūtras.

MOCHERLA RĀMAKRISHṆA. A modern Sanskrit poet, whose chief work Śāradāprasāda (Nellore, 1949) presents the discomfiture of one who traduces Indian culture.

MODAKA, G.K. A modern Sanskrit writer, who rendered into Sanskrit Alibābā and the Forty Thieves (Longmans, 1934).

MODE, HEINZ. A German Indologist, whose critical works on Indian Art have been pub. (1970, 1973) from Leipzig. He has also worked on the Indus culture. Under his guidance, a study group for research into Buddhism was established in the Halle University. With Johannes Mehlig and Hans-Joachim Peuke, Mode has pub. '250 Years Halle-India', '25 years of Indian Independence' (Buddhist Yearly, Supplement, 1972).

MODI, MADHUSŪDAN C. An Apabhraṁśa scholar, whose Apabhraṁśa-pāṭhāvali (Ahmedabad, 1935) is a good reader in Apabhraṁśa; he also ed. Bhāvanā-sandhi, a small Apabhraṁśa poem and Amarakīrti's Chakkammuvāesa (1972).

MOGGAI LĀNA. See Moggallāyana-vyākaraṇa.

MOGGALLĀNA. See Abhidhāna-pradīpikā.

MOGGALLĀYANA-PAÑCHIKĀ. See Moggallāyana-vyākaraṇa.

MOGGALLĀYANA-VYĀKARAṆA A Pali grammatical work by Moggallāna; also called Sadda-lakkhana. Written in the 12th cent., it establishes a new grammatical school. The author himself wrote a comm., called Moggallāyana-pañchikā on it. Composed with the help of old Pali grammars as also Chāndra-vyākaraṇa and Ashṭādhyāyī (qq.v.), it is more extensive and of a higher standard than that of the Kachchāyana-vyākaraṇa (q.v.).

MOHD. ISRAIL KHAN (1938-). A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Sarasvatī in Sanskrit Literature (1978), Brahma in the Purāṇas and Some Graphical Purāṇic Texts on Brahmā (1981). He is Reader in Sanskrit, Delhi University (South Campus).

MOHAMUDGARA. A short poetical composition in Sanskrit attributed to Śaṅkarācārya (q.v.). Lyrical in form and didactic in content, it seeks to inculcate the correct attitude to life by pointing out the common human frailties.

MOHANTY, J. A Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is Gaṅgeśa's Theory of Truth (tr.; Santiniketan, 1966).

MOHARĀJA-PARĀJAYA. A Sanskrit allegorical drama by Yaśaḥpāla (q.v.; fl. 13th cent.).

It is a play in five Acts and the title itself indicates the influence of Prabodhachandrodaya (q.v.), but it is composed chiefly in the interest of Jainism and is furnished with a few concrete historical characters, surrounded by personifications or abstract qualities. It describes the conversion of Kumārapāla into Jainism by the famous Ācārya Hemachandra, both of whom of course appear in the play, but it also utilises the erotic Nāṭikā motif of the king's marriage with Kṛpāsundarī, who is a real personage but who is figured from her name as the incarnation of Beautiful Compassion. As a pledge, Kumārapāla agrees to banish the seven sins and abolishes the practice of confiscating the property of heirless persons.

MOHA-VICHCHHEDANĪ. A Pali work by Kassapa (q.v.), which is a philosophical manual of Buddhists; it is a treatise on the Abhidhamma-piṭaka (q.v.). See Kassapa.

MÖLLER-KRISTENSEN, FREDE. A modern Danish Indologist, who is the editor of a new series of catalogues, entitled: Catalogue of Oriental Manuscripts (Copenhagen, 1966. . .).

He is Head of the Oriental Department in the Royal Library, Copenhagen.

MOLNAR, ISTVAN. A Hungarian Indologist, who has pub. in Hungarian 'Useful Teachings from the Tales of the Hitopadeśa' (Budapest, 1959).

MOLODTSOVA, E.N. A modern Russian Indologist, whose contribution: 'On the Principles of Distinction and Analysis of the Ancient Indian Philosophical Texts', Journal of its Moscow State University (Philosophy, 1972, No. 6) discusses general and specific problems of philosophical and religious doctrines.

MONIER-WILLIAMS, M. (1819-89). An English Indologist, whose chief works are: An Elementary Grammar of the Sanskrit Language (1846), Śakuntalā or Lost Ring (ed. and tr., 1856), Vikramorvaśīya (ed. and tr.), Nalopākhyāna (ed. and tr.), English-Sanskrit Dictionary (London, 1851), The Study of Sanskrit in Relation to Missionary Work in India (London, 1861), Modern India and the Indians, Sanskrit-English Dictionary (Oxford, 1872, etymologically and philologically arranged with special reference to cognate Indo-European languages, an encyclopaedic type of work, pub. earlier than Sanskrit-Wörterbuch; new ed. greatly enlarged and improved with the collaboration of Leumann and Cappeller), Sanskrit Manual for Composition (1862; ed. by A.E. Gough), A Practical Grammar of the Sanskrit Language (arranged with reference to the classical languages of Europe), Indian Wisdom or Examples of the Religious, Philosophical and Ethical Doctrines of the Hindus (1878), Hinduism (New York, 1877), Religious Thought and Life in India (London, 1883), Buddhism (London, 1889) and Brāhmaṇism and Hinduism (London, 1891); he has written also on Śaktism. In his Religious Thought and Life in India, Monier-Williams is of the view that Vaishnavism is the only real religion of the Hindu people and it alone possesses the essential elements of a genuine religion; he appreciates its many-sidedness, all comprehensiveness and tolerance.

MONTENEGRO, LILIAN PROENCA DE MENEZES (1939-). An Indologist, who is Professor of Sanskrit Language and Literature at the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil. He is Secretary for the Publications Committee of Latin-American Association of Sanskritists. His chief works (in Portuguese) are: "Dyūta", "Dharma"—Divine Duty, Warrior Glory. Linguistic and Semantic Aspects in Mahābhārata's Dyūtaparvan" (1983) and several articles mainly on the Mahābhārata: the episode of Nala, dice game and on asceticism and eroticism.

MONTGOMFRY, W. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Introduction to Mahāyāna Buddhism.

MOOKERJI, RĀDHĀ KUMUD. See Rādhā Kumud Mookerji.

MOOKERJEE, S.K. A modern scholar, who tr. into English Hemachandra's Pramāṇa-mīmāṃsā under the title A Critique of Organ of Knowledge (Calcutta, 1946) and wrote The Jaina Philosophy of Non-absolutism (1944).

MOORE, CHARLES A. A scholar of Honolulu (America), who started the journal 'Philosophy- East and West'; he is the author, along with Dr. S. Rādhākṛishṇan, of a Source Book of Indian Philosophy (Princeton University Press, 1957). He also ed. The Essentials of Buddhist Philosophy.

MOORE, J.H. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Collections of Siamese ed. of Itivuttaka (1900-01).

DE MORA, JUAN MIGUEL (1921-). A

Mexican Indologist, who is Professor-in-Chief of Sanskrit Literature of India, Faculty of Philosophy and Letters, National Autonomous University of Mexico. He is Vice-President, International Association of Sanskrit Studies since 1981. His works in Spanish are: La Filosofía en la Literatura Sanscrita (Philosophy in Sanskrit Literature; Mexico, 1968), El Rig Veda (tr. of 126 hymns and analysis thereof; Mexico, 1971; 2nd ed. 1981), La Dialéctica en el Rig Veda (Dialectic in the Rig Veda; Mexico, 1978), Uttararāma-charita (direct tr. from the Sanskrit into Spanish; with the collaboration of Marja Ludwika Jarocka; Mexico, 1984), The Principle of Opposites in Sanskrit Texts (in English; 1982) and Introduction, critical study and commentaries to La India y el Mundo (L'Inde et le Monde—India and the World by Sylvain Levy; Mexico, 1978). He is presently working on a book on Tantrism and its penetration in Spain and Mexico, to be published by the National University of Mexico. He has written some 16 articles, chief ones being: "Ludwik Sternbach", "On Bhavabhūti and the Varṇas", "Antiquity of the Sanskrit Drama", "On Sanskrit Culture", "Kālidāsa Studies in Mexico", "Swami Dayānanda—A Universal Figure", "Sanskrit Studies in Latin America", etc. He is Editor, with the collaboration of Marja Ludwika Jarocka (q.v.) of Sanskṛitasankṛitiḥ, published by the National Autonomous University, Mexico.

MORGAN, KENNETH. An American Indologist, whose chief works are a book on the Religion of the Hindus and two companion volumes on the Paths of the Buddha and of Islam. He is closely associated with the 'American Society for the Study of Religion'.

MORGENROTH, WOLFGANG. A German Indologist, whose chief works are: on Jaina Uttarādhyaṇa-sūtra (Weimar, 1979), on Śukasaptati (1968, 1975), Einführung in die mittel-indischen Literatursprachen (in Vorbereitung), Lehrbuch des Sanskrit, Grammatik, Texts, Glossar (1973, 1977) and ed. of the Proceedings of the International Sanskrit Conference held in Berlin, 1975. Morgenroth represents Sanskrit studies at the University in Berlin. He is doing research on historical Sanskrit grammar, history of the language, on epic, dramatic and fairy-tale literature as also on Jaina canon.

MORGENSTIERNE, GEORG. A modern Norwegian Indologist, whose chief work is on the study of surviving Aryan dialects in Indo-Iranian Frontier regions; he has pub. several volumes on his linguistic missions.

MOROPANTA (1729-94). A Marathi and Sanskrit poet, who is the author in Sanskrit of about 4,918 verses in praise of Rāma and other gods. His best-known work in Sanskrit is Mantra-rāmāyaṇa, comprising 3,992 verses.

MOROZZI, ELI, R. An artist of Honolulu, America, who is making a special study of Śivagītā (Journal of Oriental Research, Madras, Vols. XXXIV-XXXV).

MORRIS, R. A modern Indologist, whose chief work is Contribution to Pali Lexicography (1890-91), ed. of Āṅguttara-nikaya (with L. Hardy), ed. of Bodhivaṃsa, Puggalapaññatti and of Saddhammopāyana.

MOTILĀL SHARMA. A modern Vedic scholar, whose chief works are the ed. of the Śatapatha-brāhmaṇa with a Hindi comm. named Vijñānabhāṣya (5 Vols., Jaipur, 1933-43) and the Upanishad-vijñāna-bhāṣya-bhūmikā (3 Vols.).

MOULE, A.C. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Marco Polo—The Description of the World, I (London, 1938; written in collaboration with Paul Pelliot).

MRICHCHHAKAṬĪKA. A Sanskrit drama (Prakaraṇa) in ten Acts by Śūdraka (q.v.), which deals with the love-story of Chārudatta, a virtuous Brāhmaṇa, once very rich, but now impoverished, and Vasantasenā, a rich courtesan, enamoured of Chārudatta and his piety. The drama takes its name from a clay-cart (mṛit-śakaṭika) with which Chārudatta's son was playing.

The first four Acts of the play are a reproduction with slight changes of Bhāsa's Chārudatta but in the Mṛichchhakaṭika, the love-story is combined with a political event in which Āryaka, the friend of the hero, overthrows the ruling prince Pālaka. (For a good understanding of the story of Mṛichchhakaṭika, see Chārudatta). In the Mṛichchhakaṭika, the names are slightly changed: the king's brother-in-law is called Saṁsthānaka and the thief Śārvilaka. Act I carries the action upto the deposit of the ornaments by Vasantasenā; Act II relates Vasantasenā's generosity in releasing the shampooer from his creditors and who then turns a monk, while Act III describes Śārvilaka's success in stealing the jewels and the resolve of Chārudatta's wife to give her necklace to replace them. In Act IV Śārvilaka gives the stolen jewels to Vasantasenā, who, pleased with him, gives him permission to marry her slave girl although she is aware of his theft. At this time, he learns that his friend Āryaka, who was imprisoned by the king, as according to a prophecy the former was to get the kingship, has escaped from captivity. Thus Śārvilaka leaves his newly-made bride with Vasantasenā in order to help his friend. In the following Act, a Vidūshaka comes with the necklace of Chārudatta's wife, which Vasantasenā accepts in order to use it as a pretext to see Chārudatta once more. Vasantasenā departs from her house and the storm forces her to spend the night in Chārudatta's house. Act VI reveals her next morning offering to return the necklace of Chārudatta'swife but her gift is refused by Rohasena, Chārudatta's child, who complains that his clay toy-cart (mṛit-sakaṭika) be replaced by a golden one; Vasantasenā, moved to pity, sends her valuable jewels to replace his clay-cart. Vasantasenā is to rejoin Chārudatta in neighbouring park, the property of Saṁsthānaka, but by an error she enters the cart of Saṁsthānaka, instead that of Chārudatta. Āryaka, who has been seeking a hiding place, leaps into the cart of his friend, Chārudatta and is driven away. Two policemen stop the cart, and one recognises Āryaka and protects him from the other with whom he contrives a quarrel. In Act VII, Chārudatta sees his cart driven up, discovers Āryaka, permits him to go off in it, and he himself leaves to find Vasantasenā. In Act VIII, Saṁsthānaka in his park meets the shampooer-turned-monk washing his robe in the tank, insults him and beats him; then Vasantasenā arrives. Saṁsthānaka tries but fails to win her; he beats her apparently to death and buries her under the cover of leaves. The monk re-enters to dry his robe, finds Vasantasenā, restores her to life and takes over to the monastery to be cared for. In Act IX Saṁsthānaka as the Chief of Police accuses Chārudatta as the murderer of Vasantasenā; her mother is summoned as a witness but she defends Chārudatta. One of the two policemen, testifies to the escape of Āryaka, which implicates Chārudatta. Vidūshaka goes to return to Vasantasenā her jewels given to Chārudatta's child, visits the court but in his anger with Saṁsthānaka lets fall the jewels. The recovery of jewels along with the evidence that Vasantasenā spent the night with Chārudatta and left the next morning to meet him in the park, and the signs of struggle there deceive the judge who condemns Chārudatta to exile, but the king Pālaka at the instigation of Saṁsthānaka converts the sentence into one of death. Act X reveals the hero led to death in a procession: getting this news, the monk appears with Vasantasenā just in time to prevent Chārudatta's death. While the lovers rejoice at their re-union, the news is brought that Āryaka has slain Pālaka and succeeds to the throne; the new king grants a principality to Chārudatta and approves of his marriage with Vasantasenā. This enables Vasantasenā to free herself from her low position and to become Chārudatta's lawful wife. The crowd demands Saṁsthānaka's death but Chārudatta pardons him; the monk is rewarded by being appointed as the chief of the Buddhist monasteries in the realm and the drama ends in happiness.

The play is full of incidents of varied interests which show the nobility of Chārudatta's mind and the selfless love of Vasantasenā; diverse characters are also depicted. The Vidūshaka, for instance, is keenly interested in delicious food, but his steadfastness to his friends in times of adversity and the warmth of his heart distinguish him from his fellow-characters in the Sanskrit drama. The drama gives a faithful picture of the everyday life of the people in those days and with its plebeian atmosphere, is regarded as the most Shakespearian of all Sanskrit plays. Wilson calls it in many respects the most humane of all the Sanskrit plays. The author's style is simple and effective; his many utterances are full of wisdom.

Śūdraka's Sanskrit generally agrees with the norm fixed by Pāṇini and his followers, but the dramatist uses a good number of varieties of Prakrit, not witnessed in any other extant drama. The light thrown on the life of Śūdraka by Avantisundari-kathā-sāra helps to trace the real intent and import of the Mṛichchhakaṭika: Āryaka appears to be Śūdraka, while Chārudatta seems to be Śūdraka's friend, Bandhudatta.

MRIGĀNKALEKHĀ. See Bhagavatt Dāsa.

MRIGAVATĪ-CHARITA. A Sanskrit fairy-tale by Devaprabha Sūri (q.v.), a Jaina poet.

It contains one of the many versions of the legend of Udayana and his wives Vāsavadattā and Padmāvatī, reminiscent of Bhāsa's dramas.

MRITASANJIVINI. See Halāyudha.

MṚTİYUNJAYA SVAMIN (fl. latter half of 16th cent.). A Sanskrit writer of Tirunava in north Kerala, whose Ravivarmāstūti in prose is a eulogy of king Ravivarmā, identified with the king of Vettattunād, who lived in the latter half of the 16th century.

MUCH, E. (1880-1932). A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Buddha, der Schrift in des Heimatlosigkeit (Buddha, the step into Homelessness), Die Heimkehr des Vollendeten (The home-coming of the accomplished one), Paraphrase of verses of Dhammapada (serialised in the Buddhist World Mirror) and An Buddha's Hand Lieder Erweckung (on the Buddha's hand, song of awakening).

MUDGALĀCHĀRYA (fl. 1470-79). A commentator on the Rigveda, whose Sanskrit Bhāṣya is available, with gaps, up to the fourth Aṣṭaka. In his Bhāṣya, he has prepared a summary of Sāyaṇa's Rigveda-bhāṣya.

MUDGALA-PURĀṆA. A Purāṇa in Sanskrit, which is noteworthy for the stories of all the different forms of Gaṇeśa.

MUDRĀRĀKSHASA. A Sanskrit drama in 7 Acts by Viśakhadatta (q.v.), in which Chāṇakya, the minister of king Chandragupta of Pāṭaliputra, wins over Rākshasa, the minister of the Nandas to the side of Chandragupta.

In order to create dissension among Rākshasa and his allies, Chāṇakya secures, through one of his spies, the signet-ring (Mudra) of Rākshasa from the house of the Jeweller Chandanadāsa, with whom the wife and son of Rākshasa are staying. Chāṇakya writes a letter, has it copied by Śakaṭadāsa, a professional writer and a friend of Rākshasa, seals it with Rākshasa's signet-ring and gives both the letter and the ring with certain secret instructions to Siddhārthaka, one of his trusted spies. He then places Chandanadāsa under arrest to be executed later; Śakaṭadāsa is also arrested.

Act II shows Rākshasa's counterplot: Virādhagupta, one of the Rākshasa's spies, disguised as a snake-charmer, reports that the plot to kill Chandragupta has been foiled and instead Vairochaka, uncle of Malayaketu, has been slain. At this moment Rākshasa buys some precious jewels, little knowing that they are sent by Chāṇakya to entrap him. Under instructions of Chāṇakya, Siddhārthaka rescues Śakaṭadāsa and both of them go to Rākshasa, who takes off some ornaments from his person and gives them as reward to Siddhārthaka for rescuing his friend. Siddhārthaka seals up the ornaments in a box with Rākshasa's signet-ring but on Rākshasa's enquiry, he restores the ring to him. In Act III, Chāṇakya arranges a sham quarrel with Chandragupta, meant as a ruse to mislead Rākshasa; Chāṇakya resigns office and the king also proclaims that he will rule independently of him. In Act IV the news of the quarrel is brought to Rākshasa, who now considers easier to overthrow Chandragupta. Malayaketu, son of Parvataka, king of Mountaineers, and who wants to invade Pāṭaliputra, comes to meet Rākshasa with his secretary and friend, Bhāgurāyaṇa (really an agent of Chāṇakya). This gives Bhāgurāyaṇa an opportunity to instigate his master against Rākshasa. Malayaketu also over-hears the conversation between Rākshasa and his agent, who advises Rākshasa to lead an expedition against Pāṭaliputra at once.

In Act V, the scene shifts to the camp of Malayaketu, near Chandragupta's capital. Jivasiddhi, who was known as a friend of Rākshasa, but was in reality a spy of Chāṇakya, requests Bhāgurāyaṇa to grant him permission to leave the camp as he fears Rākshasa, for he seeks to slay him, although Rākshasa formerly used him to poison Parvataka, father of Malayaketu. Malayaketu overhears all this and is wild with rage, because he deemed his father slain by Chāṇakya. The guards bring in Sidhārthaka, whom they have caught leaving the camp without a permit. On his person are found that old letter which Chāṇakya had given him and a box of ornaments, both sealed with Rākshasa's seal. The letter is couched in such terms as to implicate Rākshasa in a conspiracy, while the ornaments are easily recognised by Malayaketu to be the same that he had formerly given to Rākshasa. So it is apparently clear that Rākshasa is in secret communication with Chandragupta. Rākshasa denies the charge in toto as being the fabrication of the enemy but the evidence is against him. Further, he happens to be wearing at that time an ornament which he had bought unsuspectingly from a person who was in reality an agent of Chāṇakya: that ornament had originally belonged to Malayaketu's deceased father and was later in the possession of Chandragupta. Malayaketu now disowns Rākshasa: he also orders the five kings under him (they were guarding Malayaketu's persons at the Rākshasa's instance) to be put to death as he fears treachery from them. Malayaketu's massacre of the kings has broken the host into fragments and as he wages a war against Chandragupta, he is defeated and is taken captive by Bhāgurāyaṇa and other rebels. Rākshasa goes to save his friend Chandanadāsa, who was about to be executed for sheltering Rākshasa's family. Rākshasa is taken before Chāṇakya; the latter explains his mission and induces Rākshasa to take up the post of Minister of Chandragupta. After some hesitation and to save the life of his friend, Chandanadāsa, he accepts the offer. Malayaketu is freed and Chandanadāsa is rewarded; and all ends happily as originally designed by Chāṇakya.

This drama is objected to on the ground of its bad moral, but it may be pertinent to quote H.H. Wilson:

"It is a historical or political drama and represents a curious state of public morals, in which fraud and assassination are the simple means by which inconvenient obligations are acquitted, and trouble-some friends or open enemies removed. It is not, however, that such acts are not held in themselves as crimes, or that their perpetrators, if instigated by vulgar vice or ferocity, are not condemned as culprits; it is only when the commission of the crime proposes a political end that it is represented as venial, and is compatible with the possession of great virtues, and even with an amiable character."

MUDRITA-KUMUDĀ-CHANDRA. See Yāśaś-chandra.

MUDUMBĀI VENKATARĀMA NARASIMHĀCHĀRYA (1842-1928) A Sanskrit polymath of Āndhra, who wrote 114 works in the fields of poetry, poetics, hymnology, etc. His chief works are: Gajendra-vyāyoga, Rajaharisiṃha-nāṭaka, Vasaviṃśatī-prakarana (all plays), Chitsūryaloka (dramatizing the story of the solar eclipse), Ramachandra-kathamāitā, Bhāgavata (both long poems), Khalavahelana, Nīti-rahasya (numerous poems), Ujjvalarūṇḍa (champū) and Kāvya-lakṣaṇa-saṃgraha, a work on poetics. He was patronised by Vijarāma Gajapati and Ānanda Gajapati, Maharajas of Vizianagaram.

MUELLER, FREIDRICH (1863-1930). A German Indologist, who was Director of the Museum for Ethnology in Berlin. His profound knowledge of the Mahāyāna Canon enabled him to identify Buddhist manuscripts in half a dozen till then unknown languages; these manuscripts began to reach his Museum from the four expeditions the Prussian Government had sent to Central Asia under A. Gruenwedel and A. von Le Coq.

MUELLER, MAX. See Max Mueller.

MUGDHABODHA. A Sanskrit grammatical primer, very popular in Bengal, written by Vopadeva (q.v.) under Mahādeva of Devagiri; it is the chief text of Vopadeva school. Based partly on Kātantra and partly on the Aṣṭādhyāyī (qq.v.), it is simple and brief. Religious element pervades this work, illustrative examples referring to Hari, Hara or Rāma. The Vedic portion of the Aṣṭādhyāyī has been omitted.

MUGHOPADEŚA. A Sanskrit poem in 66 stanzas by Jalhaṇa (fl. 13th cent.), which contains reflections on the lures and tricks of the traditional rather than real courtesan and warns that love is as impossible in a harlot as want of restlessness in a monkey. The style is erotically didactic rather than satiric. The author of this work is different from the compiler of Sūkti-muktāvalī.

MUIR, JOHN (1810-82). An English Indologist, who for 2 years (1844-45) was Principal of the Government Sanskrit College, Varanasi. His chief works are the study of original Sanskrit texts on origin and history of the people of India under the title Original Sanskrit Texts (vols. I-IV, London, 1848-63; vol V, London, 1872); his vol. V deals with the cosmogony, mythology, religious ideas, life and manners of the Indians in the Vedic Age and provides a firm basis for a deeper and more critical study of the Vedic religion and mythology. His work continues to be important from the point of view of Vedic divinities even to this day.

MUKHAMĀTTA-DĪPANI. The most renowned Pali comm. on Kachchāyana-vyākaraṇa (q.v.) by Vimalabuddhi; the comm. is called Nyāsa.

MUKHOPĀDHYĀY, S. A modern scholar, whose chief work is The Austries of India: Their Religion and Tradition (1975).

MUKTĀ-CHARITRA. A Sanskrit Clampuskāvyā by Raghunātha Dāsa (q.v.), which deals with Dāna-līlā included under Naimittika-līlā of Kṛishṇa. In this work, Kṛishṇa tells Satyabhāmā of his producing pearls on a tree at Vṛindāvana; his sports with Rādhā and other Gopīs are also mentioned. This work indicates the superiority of Kṛishṇa's free love for Rādhā over his conjugal love for Satyabhāmā.

MUKULABHAṬṬA. A Kashmirian Sanskrit writer, who fl. in the reign of king Avantivarman of Kāshmir. Mukulabhaṭṭa had Pratiharenduraja as his pupil and he was a contemporary of Rājāśekhara (q.v.). He is generally assigned to the period between the end of the 9th and the beginning of the 10th cent. A.D. In his grammatico-rhetorical work, Abhidhāvṛtti-mātrikā, he discusses in the fifteen Kārikās, with Vṛtti thereon, the two powers of words, viz., abhidhā and lakṣhaṇā.

MUKUNDAMĀLA. A Sanskrit hymn by Kulaśekhara (q.v.) in honour of Viṣṇu.

It is a very popular lyric often repeated and inculcates the merit of devotion as a means of salvation. There are commentaries on it by Venkateśa and Ānandarāghava, pupils of Kṛishṇānanda.

MŪLĀCHĀRA. A Prakrit work by Vaṭṭakera (q.v.) which seeks to inculcate the moral conduct for a pious Jaina; one manuscript is ascribed to Kundakunda (q.v.).

MŪLAMĀDHYAMAKA-KĀRIKĀ. See Mādhya-mika-kārikā.

MŪLAŚAṆKARA MĀṆIKALĀLA YAJÑIKA (b. 1886). A Sanskrit writer of Gujarāt, whose historical dramas are: Pratāpa-vijaya (in 9 Acts on the life of Rāṇā Pratāp), Chhatrapati-sāmrajya (in 10 Acts describing the reign of Shivāji) and Samyogitā-svayamvara (describing the amorous intrigues of Pithvirāja Chauhān). The introduction of songs that can be sung on the stage makes the plays very realistic.

MŪLA-SIKKHĀ. A Buddhist Pali work by Mahāsāmi, which is a short summary of the rules of Vinaya-piṭaka (q.v.); the work is mostly in verse with a few prose passages interspersed here and there; the language is simple and free from artificiality. Tradition places the work prior to the advent of Buddhaghosha; Rhys-Davids supports the tradition, but scholars held widely different opinions on this point. The Buddhist tradition makes Dhammasiri (q.v.) as the author of this work.

MŪLASŪTRA. See Mūlasutta.

MŪLASUTTA (Mūlasūtra). Jaina canonical works in Prakrit, four in number; they form part of the Siddhānta (q.v.). Mūla in Jaina discipline stands for a kind of penance and some scholars are of the view that the title is derived from it. According to Winternitz, Mūla means fundamental texts as contradistinguished from commentaries. While Charpentier calls them Mahāvīra's own words, Schubring takes them for the beginners of a spiritual career. The names of Mūlasuttas are:-

(i) Uttarajjhayaṇa or Uttarādhyāṇa-sūtra (q.v.). The first Mūlasutta, which is a religious poem and is one of the most valuable portions of the Canon.

(ii) Āvassaya or Āvassage (Āvaśyaka). The second Mūlasutta (also called Shaḍavassaya-sutta) by Indrabhūti or Gaṇadhara or Srutasthavira. Consisting of six sections, it corresponds to the six essential (āvaśyaka) daily duties of a Jaina, viz., abstinence from evil, glorification of Tirthaṅkaras, respect of teachers, confession, asceticism and renunciation of sensual pleasures. The text is accompanied by Bhadrabāhu's Nijjuttī. There are several commentaries on it.

(iii) Dasaveyāliya (Daśavaikālika). The third Mūlasutta is attributed to Sejjambhava. Containing sayings relating to monastic life, its section II, connected with the ballad of Rājimatī in the 1st Mūlasutta, consists of verses about Rājimatī's admonition to Rathanemi, intent on seducing her.

(iv) Pinḍa-nijjuttī (Pinḍa-niryuktī). It is usually mentioned the fourth Mūlasutta, though sometimes Oha-nijjuttī (Ogha-niryuktī) and occasionally Pakkhi (Pākshika-sūtras) are also given this place. The Pinḍa-nijjuttī and the Oha-nijjuttī are ascribed to Bhadrabāhu and are sometimes counted among the Chheya-sūtras. They treat of the pious life and of subjects of discipline. The Pakkhi is a liturgy in verse for the fourteen days' confession.

MŪLAṬĪKĀ. See Ānanda.

MÜLLER, E. A modern Indologist, whose chief works are: Beitrag zur Grammatik des Jain Prakrit (a Prakrit grammar), A Simplified Grammar of the Pali Language (London, 1884), A Glossary of Pali Proper Names, ed. of Atthasālinī, Dhammasaṅgaṇī, Khuddaka-sikkhā, Mūla-sikkhā and of Paramattha-dīpanī.

MÜLLER, REINHOLD F.G. A German Indologist, whose chief works are: Foundations of Ancient Indian Medicine (Halle, 1949), Medicine in the R̥gveda (Leipzig, 1930) and Principles of Ancient Indian Medicine (Copenhagen, 1951); all written in German with German titles.

MUNḌAKA-UPANISHAD. See Upanishad.

MUNICHANDRA SŪRI (d. 1120). A Jaina Prakrit writer and author of Gāthā-kośa (q.v.), a Prakrit anthology of moral sayings.

MUNI-CHARITAM. A biography in Sanskrit of Dayānanda Sarasvatī (q.v.), written by Dilīpadatta Śāstrī, a modern writer.

MUNI KANAKĀMARA. See Kanakāmara.

MUNIRATNA SŪRI (fl. c. 1194). A Jaina Sanskrit poet, who was the pupil of Samudraghosha of the Chandra Gachchha. Jivasimha, his pupil, wrote a praśasti in praise of his master. Muniratna composed his Amṛta-charita (q.v.), at the instance of Jagaddeva, son of Yaśodhavalā, treasurer of a Chālukya king of the Śrīmālakula at the city of Vārāhi. The poet had already distinguished himself at the court of king Naravarman at Dhāra. His other poem Munisuvrata-charita, of 23 cantos, describes the lives of some of the Sūris of his clan.

MUNISUNDARA SŪRI (fl. 14th cent.?). A Jaina Sanskrit poet and author of the Jina-stotra-ratna-kośa, consisting of devotional stotras.

MUÑJĀLA (fl. c. 932). A Sanskrit writer on Mathematics and author of the Laghumānasa, a work, which, according to Al-Bīrūnī, is based upon the Bṛīhanmānasa of Manu (q.v.).

MUNSHI, K.M. (1887-1971). A modern scholar, whose chief works are: Glory That Was Gurjaradesha and Early Aryans in Gujarat (Bombay, 1941); he has written also on the historical value of the Paraśurāma tradition as also on other Purāṇic subjects. It was at his initiative that the Bhāratīya Vidya Bhawan, of which he is the founder, brought out the History and Culture of the Indian People (in XI Vols.).

MUNSHI RĀM SHARMĀ. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief works are: Vaidikī and Sāhitya-śāstra.

MURĀRI. A Sanskrit dramatist and author of the Anargha-rāghava (q.v.), depicting the early life of Rāma upto his return from the forest. Son of Vardhamāna of the Maudgalya Gotra and Tantumati, he belonged to the 8th or the beginning of the 9th cent. as Ratnākara (middle of the 9th cent.) makes a clear reference to him in his Haravijaya, and the author of the Prasannarāghava also seems to have imitated him. From the reference to Māhishmatī as “agra-mahishī”, in Act VII of his play, Konow infers that Murāri was a protege of a Kalachuri prince at Māhishmatī. This suggestion, if accepted, would place his date prior to the middle of the 8th cent. when Māhishmatī ceased to be the capital of the Kalachuris. The Anargha-rāghava bears ample testimony to the linguistic abilities of its author.

MURĀRIGUPTA. An associate of Chaitanya (1485-1533) and a native of Bengal. He is the author in Sanskrit of Śrīkṛishnachaitanya-charitāmṛita or Chaitanya-charitāmṛita, a biography of Chaitanya.

MURALĪ GUPTA. A modern Sanskrit poet of Vṛindāvan, whose Śrī Kṛishnachaitanya Suprabhāta (1984) is a poem on Chaitanya Mahāprabhu.

MURĀRĪ MIŚRA (fl. 1373). A Sanskrit scholar, whose Pāraskara-mantra-bhāṣya meant to explain the meanings of the Mantras to be recited at the performance of Gṛihya rites, derives help from Gṛihya-prakāśa-bhāṣya of his father, Veda Miśra.

MURĀRI-VIJAYA. See Jīvarāma Yāgnika.

MURĀRI-VIJAYA. See Viśvarūpa Kṛishṇa-bhaṭṭa.

MURTI, T.R.V. A modern scholar, whose chief work is Central Philosophy of Buddhism (London, 1955).

MUS, PAUL. A modern French Indologist, whose chief work is Barabodur (Handi, 1935); he has written on the Sanskrit sources of the Pali Texts of Burma, e.g., Shaḍgati-kārikā and Lokaprajāpati. His brilliant interpretations have illumined the study of Indian and greater Indian art.

MŪSHIKA-VAMŚA. A Sanskrit poem in 15 cantos, composed by Atula (q.v.) in the 11th century.

It is a chronicle, which narrates the story of kings who ruled over the Mūshika kingdom of South Travancore. When Paraśurāma is slaughtering the Kshatriyas, a pregnant widow queen hides herself in a mountain cave. One day, a rat of the size of an elephant, enters the cave and when it threatens to devour the queen, fire arises from her eyes and burns the rat. The rat is no other than the Parvatarāja, who has been cursed by the sage Kuśika; the queen in the cave brings forth a male child. When Paraśurāma performs a sacrifice and wants a Kshatriya to act at a particular ritual, this boy is taken to him, who makes him the king of Mūshika coming under the name of Mūshika Rāmaghaṭa because he is consecrated with potful of water. He kills Mādhavavarman, the king of Magadha, in battle and marries his daughter Bhadrāsena. Rāmaghaṭa retires to the forest after installing his sons, Vetu the king of Haihaya and Nandana of the Chola kingdom. Then follows a long line of kings and their story, ending with Śrīkaṇṭha, Valabha and his son. It was during the time of Śrīkaṇṭha, that the poet composed his work.

MUTHURAMAN, A. A modern Sanskrit scholar, whose chief work is the ed. of Sadānanda's Vedānta-sāra.

MUTTUSWAMI, N.E. A Sanskrit scholar, who has ed. Nāgārjuna's Rasavalśeshika Sūtras (Trivandrum,).

MYLIUS, VON KLAUS. A German Indologist, whose chief works are: on Bhagavadgītā (Leipzig, 1978), on Vedic Hymns, Legends, Rituals, etc. (Leipzig 1978), Chrestomathie der Sanskrit-Literatur (Leipzig, 1978) and Worterbuch Sanskrit-Deutsch (1975).

His work is concerned particularly with the Middle Vedic literature; he is also working on a Marxist interpretation of the Vedic ritual. His Sanskrit-German dictionary is based on the St. Petersburg dictionary.

